DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. WOOD stated that Dr. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, being the Inventor was deliberately untrue, which he regretted had been sworn to. Eminent Hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 12, 1864.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1860, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Sept. 12; Agra and Madras, Sept. 10; Calcutta, Sept. 9.

THE Indian papers give some particulars of the murder done by a "Kooka," member of a new Sikh sect, on Jaishi Ram, acting Judge of the Small Cause Court at Lahore. The late judge had issued a decree against the murderer which the latter thought most oppressive. Furnishing himself with a long iron-bound stick, or lathi, he set one evening upon his victim, and had beaten him to death's door before the judge's servants came to their master's help. Jaishi Ram lingered for another day, but died at last; and his murderer was promptly tried and sentenced to death. A day or two after this outrage a Mohammedan Fakír attacked the Assistant Secretary of the Lahore Municipal Committee with a similar weapon; but that officer, albeit taken by surprise and badly wounded, turned upon his assailant to such purpose that help came before mortal harm was done. These murderous outbreaks, coupled with the previous attacks on Mohammedan butchers, have given birth to sundry dark rumours of a general conspiracy against the Government of the Punjab, and one journal writes as seriously as if the scenes of 1857 were about to be re-enacted. But for the present we fail to see any grounds for such misgivings. There is something in the air no doubt, but in all likelihood the something in the air may answer to the east wind which so often produces a crop of violent deeds in this country.

A FORTNIGHT ago we mentioned the commotion caused among the prisoners in Bareilly Jail by the mischievous attempts of the Acting Superintendent to ride rough-shod over their caste usages. A telegram of September 11 from Allahabad informs the people of Bombay that a riot had just occurred in the same jail, resulting in five persons killed and thirty wounded. It would be rash, in default of particulars, to assume a direct connection between the two events; but if Dr. Eades had not meanwhile been relieved of duties for which he seems hardly fitted, such a connection may yet be proved to have existed.

WHILE Bombay has not been favoured with its usual rainfall, many districts in the North-West Provinces and Bengal have suffered from more than the usual floods. In Eastern Bengal the floods have covered at least six thousand square miles of country, and large numbers of the people had to collect for safety in boats and on the railway embankments. The Nuddea district seems to have suffered worst; no less than five rivers, including the Ganges, having overflowed their banks. One strip of country between the Eastern Bengal Line and the Matabangha has suffered worst of all. Part of the Moorshedabad district has suffered hardly less. Heavy damage has been done to the crops in many places, and numbers of cattle have been swept away; but the loss of human life has been very small, and the temporary suffering of the people who have been driven from their homes was being everywhere relieved by the exertions of the civil officers, English and native, to keep them supplied with food. A patrol-service of boats had been organised in various places to bring rice to the hungry and carry the helpless out of danger.

WE are glad to see that General Goldsmid has brought his labours on the Khelat frontier to a successful close, and that his surveys are to form the basis of a treaty between the Indian and Persian Governments.

THE last mail brings encouraging reports of the cotton-crops in Central and Western India. The rain had returned just in time to save the young plants from withering up, and if it only kept falling a little longer, the crop in most places would be an excellent one. Even in Sindh, which had suffered most from the previous lack of rain, there was every reason to count upon a good crop.

PROGRESS is at length making with several of the new State Railways. On the Indore line tenders for sleepers were to be sent in by the 15th October, and the first steps have been taken towards setting up the needful workshops. In all likelihood Central India will have been spanned before the next monsoon. For the Rajpootana Line, which is to be done by contract, tenders were required to come in by the 30th September. Contracts for this line may embrace either the whole or any part of it. With regard to the Indus Valley line, it is believed that the line will follow the left bank of the river to Roree, and thence take the right bank down to Kotree. For the line from Carwar to Dharwar it is nearly certain that the route from the coast to Hooblee will be selected, and the first sod will probably be turned in the coming cold weather. It has at length been settled to construct the Hyderabad State Railway on the narrow guage of 39 inches. Every arrangement had been made for building it on the broad guage, when Sir Salar Jung proposed to save money by adopting the narrow guage as recommended by the English engineers. The work on this line was to begin at once, and the consequent saving is reckoned at one fourth of the whole amount. Captain Pemberton, R.E., is the Government Engineer in charge of the works.

INDIAN Princes and nobles are wont to give handsomely when they give at all. The latest instance of such princely almsdeeds is furnished by the Rao of Cutch, who has just placed a sum of Rs. 50,000 at the disposal of the East India Association. His example, we hear, will soon be followed by the chiefs and Princes of Kattiwar and Guzerat, and it is not unlikely that the Chiefs of the Dakhan will in their turn contribute freely to the same useful purpose. The Association is fast becoming an established favourite with the people in whose interests it was first embodied. Besides the present donation his Highness of Cutch not long since subscribed Rs. 25,000 to the founding of scholarships in Bombay University in memory of Prince Alfred's visit to India. He is also said to have devoted Rs. 100,000 to the Alfred High School at Mandvee, lately opened in honour of the same visitor; and he has largely increased his yearly payments to the schools in his province. Here at any rate is a prince who understands his epoch.

From the Bengal papers we learn that a meeting of civilians was tobe held 'at Calcutta on September 16, to protest apparently against Mr. Campbell's new process of promoting civil servants by selection instead of mere seniority. Many members of the Bengal Civil Service warmly resent the Lieutenant-Governor's departure from old use and wont. According to the Pioneer the Calcutta Committee infer from Mr. Campbell's proceedings that he is "not to be guided by rules which his predecessors have acted on, and which the service had every reason to believe would still be acted on." They wish therefore to "discover by what principle, if any, promotion is in future to be regulated." The old system of seniority tempered by selection has hitherto worked, they argue, very well, and they object to seeing it "depend upon the unregulated preference and favour of even Mr. George Campbell." A plea is put in for "the hard-working out-station officers, who may never have a chance of seeing his Honour, or bringing themselves prominently before his notice." This plea however will hardly carry weight with a ruler who seems determined to extend his personal researches into the smallest and most remote of out-stations. At the worst let us hope that Mr. Campbell will only apply a little more strictly that principle of tempering seniority by selection which, according to the Pioneer, has always been the rule of the Service. If our memories do not mislead us, complaints of unfair selection have been by no means rare for many years past; only the principle was never before enunciated in terms so disagreeably plain. So long at any rate as Mr. Campbell forbears from picking out his cousins and countrymen for all the best things in his gift, we may credit him with more than average capacity for choosing out the best men.

It would be no news to many of our readers to learn that very pretty pickings are often made in India by native functionaries drawing less than the pay of an English ensign. But the last mail brings a report which will perhaps surprise some of the most experienced Anglo-Indians. A Mohammedan Police Inspector in the Bombay Presidency has died worth about ten thousand pounds, in money, house, and lands. His pay averaged only about £120 a-year, and nobody had heard of money left him by his friends. Of course he was specially trusted by his superiors, who secured his aid to carry out the inquiry into the alleged frauds on the Public Works Department in Nassik and Kandeish. There seems little reason to doubt that he made good use of his time and talents in extracting fees and bribes from those countrymen who came within his reach. There is nothing to wonder at after all, except perhaps in the magnitude of his gains.

At Simla on the 1st September Lord Mayo held a Durbar, which was enlivened by the presence of some twenty-two Rajahs and Thakoors from the Cis-Sutlej Hill States. Among the names most readily recognisable are those of Sirmoor, Belaspore, Nilagurh and Keontal. In addressing his highborn visitors Lord Mayo referred to the fifty-six years of profound peace which had prevailed in all their villages—"from the snowy peaks to the plain, from the Sutlej to the Jumna"—since the days of the Ghoorka War. Through all that time, said his Lordship, "the chiefs and people of these Sub-Himalayan Hills have not heard the voice of war; safety everywhere prevails; crime is happily scarce; serious disputes are rare; the industrious cultivator takes undisturbed from the steep hill-side such produce as it can yield." If the Sub-Himalayan people have never heard the voice of war in all that time, they must have been rather deaf, seeing that the guns of Goojrat were heard at Sabáthu, and that some pretty loud echoes of the great Sepoy Revolt of 1857 rolled over the country from Loodianah to Umballa. But his Lordships' words, in the sense in which he evidently uttered them, were true enough; and history confirms the justice of Lord Mayo's expressed belief that "in no part of Hindustan are chiefs and people better affected towards British rule than in the Cis-Sutlej Hills."

Colonel Anderson, the Political Agent in Kattiwar, follows up the official announcement of the death of Mr. Kursandass Mulji, Special Assistant at Limree, with a just tribute to his official merits. In Bombay, however, Mr. Kursandass will be best remembered for the courage with which some years ago he exposed the licentious practices of the Vallabácháryas or Maharajahs of Bombay, a sect of Vishnu-worshippers who made religion a cloak for bestial profligacy. He also twice visited England, and afterwards printed an excellent account of his travels, which have since been translated from the Guzerati into the Mahratti dialect, and have gained a wide circle of readers throughout Bombay.

Madras, as Mr. Kasi Visvanada-Mudeliar observed in commenting on the third lecture delivered by Mrs. Sreerungamma Garu to a large Indian audience, no longer deserves the title of the Benighted Presidency. He pointed out that, in spite of her Bethune Institution, now twenty years old, Calcutta has not yet produced a feminine Hindu lecturer, nor has such a phenomenon been heard of in Bombay. Everything must have a beginning, and the lady's audience was apparently composed of men, a fact which some irreverent minds will fasten upon as showing that curiosity is of no sex. But it is comforting to learn that several Hindu ladies and girls of good caste sat in adjoining rooms within hearing distance of the lecturer. That lady herself, we are told, discoursed on God's Omnipotence in clear and impressive tones, her sentiments being on a level with the sublime subject, and backed by "apt illustrations and quotations" from Sanskrit, Telugu, and Tamil works. In defending herself from the remarks of unkind critics, the lecturer "suggested the propriety of persons studying their own evils and defects and the mode of remedying them, instead of indulging themselves too freely in finding fault with others." The advice is so sound that we for our part are ready to take it, so far as Mrs. Garu or any other lady genuinely inspired with a similar purpose is concerned. By all means let the ladies say their say, if they will allow us to criticise them fairly afterwards.

The Times of India asks how it is that a money-order system has not yet been established between England and India. It is nearly a year since certain difficulties to which Mr. Monsell referred have been cleared away, and yet India is still waiting for a boon which several of our colonies already enjoy. On the advantages of such a system to thousands of people who would like to send home small remittances at a time, we need not enlarge. But is not our contemporary a little too impatient? Reforms of this sort need much consideration, especially when India is concerned, and the India Office, with its hands full of the Bonus Question, of telegraph controversies, and of schemes for shelving unemployed field officers cannot be expected to mind everything at once. If the Times of India wants to put more questions, let it ask why the rates of postage to India should be so much higher than those to Australia.

It appears from the Indian papers that the Loshai Expedition will start for the Cachar frontier in November. The details of the field-force we have already given. It will advance in two columns, one commanded by General Bourchier, C.B., the other by Colonel Brownlow, C.B. It is rumoured in Sylhet that Sukpilal, the friendly or friendly-seeming Loshai Chief, is dead.

A Calcutta telegram of October 3 states that the interruption caused by the floods at the beginning of September to the traffic on the Eastern Bengal Railway still continues.

According to a Bombay telegram of October 4 the revolt at Goa has come to an end, and the troops have returned to their barracks.

Her Majesty's troopship Jumna left Bombay on the 1st of this month for England by the Suez Canal.

In furtherance of her previous efforts to bring her countrymen into closer acquaintance and deeper sympathy with that school of Indian Theists which follows the guidance of Keshab Chandar Sen, Miss Collet has just brought out—under the charge of Messrs. Strahan and Co.—a little pamphlet on "Brah-mo Marriages, their past history and present position." All who take interest in the progress of the new movement against Hindu superstitions will do well to consult the pages in which Miss Collet traces the course of events bearing on the subject of Brahmo Marriages, from the first innovations on old Hindu ritual dared in 1861 by Debendranath Tagore, down to the latest efforts of the older Brahmists to hinder the passage of a Bill legalising marriages celebrated in their own way by Brahmists of the younger school. It is evident that much of the opposition offered to the Bill by the more conservative Brahmists rests on no valid grounds, and Miss Collet does well to expose the crooked practices and false assumptions employed by the opposing party. It would also be unworthy of English statesmen to be deterred by causeless clamour from giving legal protection to all those classes of natives whom circumstances may have placed outside the pale of existing Hindu laws. But the strenuous opposition offered to the Bill seems to indicate some flaws in the drafting of it which further consideration might remove. Where there is so much smoke there must, one fancies, be some little fire. The wording of the preamble for instance—"Whereas it is expedient to legalise marriages. . . when solemnised in accordance with the provisions of this Act"—might, however unreasonably, be taken to mean that Brahmo marriages, if solemnised in any other way, would not be legal; and indeed Miss Collet herself admits the expediency of adding a clause which would clear away all doubts as to the meaning of the preamble. Something also, as the author suggests, might be done to regulate by express enactment the inheritance of Brahmo children sprung from parents of different races. It seems a pity too that the Bill, as originally framed by Sir Henry Maine to include all who claimed the benefit of its provisions, could not have been carried through without curtailment by his able successor.

The next Overland Mail by Brindisi is due in London on Friday. As the Mont Cenis Line is to be opened on the 16th we may expect the mails to arrive often enough on Friday.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, October 10, 1871.

A PLANTER'S VIEW OF THINGS INDIAN.

A good many books have been written about India by Englishmen who have spent more or less time in the country, from the traveller who hurries through it in a few months to the missionary or the public servant who has been brought for years into daily contact with native Indian life and manners. The information so gathered may be said on the whole to reflect the ignorance or the prepossessions of the writers themselves, rather than the truth as it would reveal itself to a clear and impartial eye. Very few, if any, of the writers have combined the culture and the wise tolerance of Bishop Heber with the sort of special experience needed for the delivering of sound opinions, on the many points in which Indian life and manners differ more or less widely from those of England. Our teachers indeed seldom err on the side of undue sympathy with the subject of their remarks. From the very nature of their surroundings our public servants in India have few opportunities of studying the inner life of the people they rule over. Debarred by various causes from mixing freely with natives of every class, they cannot if they would pierce through that crust of make-believe and pretension which hides native character from official English eyes. They can only, as a rule, read that character through the glasses furnished by native underlings, or their own experiences in kutcherry and cantonments. Still harder is it for English missionaries to appreciate the better traits of the people for whose deliverance from spiritual darkness they are bound to labour. Their very zeal for making converts leads them to ignore the good and exaggerate the evil side of the native character. A narrow one-sided training tempts them to denounce what they cannot understand, to put the worst construction upon the most harmless practices, and to treat the natives, in short, as unfairly as some English clergymen are apt to treat those who differ from them at home. It was Ward, the Missionary, who first set the example of calling the natives every bad name under the sun, and to him and other writers of his class India owes much of the moral disrepute which still hangs about her like a dark cloud, in spite of later efforts to clear it away. Few of our missionaries seem to have learned the lesson of enlightened tolerance which the Abbé Dubois set them many years ago in his pleasing pictures of native life in Mysore.

It is curious to contrast Messrs. Ward's and Arthur's slanderous allusions to the immorality and the bondage of Hindu women with the French Abbé's merited tribute to the "dutiful daughters, faithful wives, tender and intelligent housewives," who abound not only in Mysore, but all over India. In adjuring us to "think of the houses of thirty nations, where no common board is spread, and no fond circle twined," Mr. Arthur seems to have been ignorant of the simple fact that the women of a high-caste family allow no low-caste person to cook their food, and that in dining after the males they study their own convenience, by doing what was usually done in England a hundred and fifty years ago, and is still done here by women of the poorer classes. Both of the English missionaries denounce the morals of Indian wives and husbands as something unspeakably degraded, and cry out in holy horror at the licentious character of Indian festivals. The former charge would probably be untrue of any nation in the world, and the latter, if literally true, suggests an utterly false inference from certain mythological rites, which really imply no sort of sanction for immoral practices. Even critics of a higher stamp are apt to express unfair and misleading views of native character. According to Major Evans Bell "no native is capable of feeling gratitude," and what else can you expect from "people who don't know what gratitude means?" The same authority assures us that Asiatics are "cowardly and yet ferocious; they have no reasoning powers, but a great deal of low cunning." One is rather surprised to learn that the race which has produced some of the keenest thinkers and foremost logicians in the world has no reasoning powers. Another officer declares that a native Indian "cannot speak the truth about the simplest matter," and the late Sir W. Denison describes the Indians as abject slaves, bitter tyrants, cowards, liars from instinct, and generally rogues. As for the prevalence of bribery and corruption, and the untold evils of Indian caste, have we not been hearing all about these things from our youth up, and is it not a leading article of the popular creed that caste was a cunning invention of the Evil One for cutting off the light of true religion and modern enterprise from the hearts and minds of a hundred and fifty million Hindoos?

Such being the drift of popular opinion here, it is refreshing to light upon a new book whose author stoutly impugns the justice of the popular opinion, upon grounds which entitle him to be heard with unusual deference.* Mr. Elliot belongs to that class of Anglo-Indians which has special opportunities of studying native character at its best as well as its worst. As a coffee planter in Mysore, he lived among the natives, saw them as it were in their daily undress, shared their labours and amusements, helped them in their difficulties—became, in short, as intimate with most of his Indian neighbours as an Englishman could ever be. Living for years in the highlands of Munzerabad, with hardly an Englishman near him, and a large body of native labourers in his pay, he had the further advantage of being a sportsman—an advantage which he turned to the best account. He also found time to correct his crude notions of Indian ways by reading up the latest works on Indian subjects, and applying the knowledge so attained to the life and manners of the people amongst whom he dwelt. The recorded results of his experiences, written as they are in a racy, straightforward style, betray at once the shrewd observer and the well-furnished student of life, past and present, in a country teeming with useful lore. It is only a pity that more Englishmen of the planter class have not come forward to enlighten us on matters falling within the range of their special experiences.

A good deal, no doubt, of Mr. Elliot's pleadings on behalf of his native friends may be considered applicable only to a small section of the Indian people. In Mysore and especially in Munzerabad the bulk of the natives are not pure Aryan Hindus, but come of the old Dravidian stock, and speak a Dravidian language. What he writes therefore in defence of the Mysorean will not hold equally good of the Bengallie. Nevertheless some of his instances are greatly to the point, and his style of reasoning is thoroughly sensible. Many of his experiences would serve as well for one part of India as another. His shrewd remarks on the generally good effects of caste rules in India should be read by those worthy people who judge of caste only by the cuckoo clamour of its most unreasoning opponents, the missionaries. Some hard truths are told of these latter gentlemen, especially with regard to their indiscreet attacks on the popular religion, their weakness for good fare and English society, and their general want of insight into native ways and feelings. Everyone who has used his eyes in India knows that the bulk of native Christians are anything but an honour to their outward creed; and those who use their homebred wits at home will readily understand the grounds of Mr. Elliot's preference of caste-law on the whole to the debased Christianity which has usually succeeded in replacing it. Mr. Elliot's views on many subjects must be taken perhaps with some allowance for the warmth of an advocate, but his arguments are always worth considering, and the facts arrayed by him in their support go far to justify an advocacy which springs at any rate from close observation aided by plenty of native common-sense. His defence of the natives from the charges of ingratitude and general lying may be specially commended to the impartial reader.

FURLOUGH PAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—Could you or any of your readers give me any information on the following subject?—

In November, 1868, I entered the Staff Corps from a British Regiment stationed in India, induced thereto by the advantages held out in the Furlough Rules of 1868, which had just been published.

In October, 1870, I was sent home on medical certificate and elected, before leaving, for the Furlough Rules of 1868, on the understanding that during my two years' furlough I should be entitled to the minimum rate of pay, viz., £250 per annum, in proof of which I was duly furnished with a last pay certificate, stating my pay to be at the above rate. I had up to October, 1870, completed three years and ten months' service in India, since the date of my last return from leave. Soon after my arrival in Europe I received an amended pay certificate stating that as I was a British officer of less than three years' service in the Staff Corps, I was only entitled to British lieutenant's pay, viz., 6s. 6d. per diem, thus reducing me to £115 per annum, minus income-tax. Does such an order or rule exist? I have never seen or heard of it, and if in existence, it would only have been fair and honest to have informed me of it in Bombay instead of giving me to understand the contrary and going so far as to pay me three months' advance at £250 per annum before starting, the balance of which I have had to refund. I would naturally have preferred the chance of recovering my health in the Hills in India (where I could have got medical attendance, which I cannot afford here on my small pay) to coming home to starve on 6s. 6d. per diem, which I am reduced to now through the ignorance of the pay department at Bombay in not informing me at the time of the existence of such a rule.

What makes me the more certain that I am being unjustly treated is the fact that a short time ago I met an officer who belonged to the same British Regiment as I did, and who entered the Staff Corps from it about two months before I did, but left India on medical certificate about two months and a-half before me, thus making our service in the Staff Corps in India about equal, and though he is my junior in service by some three and a-half years, yet he draws the proper rate of furlough pay, viz., £250 per annum. He informed me that on his preparing to leave Bombay they told him he would not be entitled to the £250 per annum whilst on furlough, but on his stating that he would remain in India until he was, they showed him some order cancelling the supposed rule about a British officer of less than three years' service in the Staff Corps in India not being entitled to furlough pay under the Rules of 1868; but as he cannot recollect the date or exact wording of this order, and I am unable to get any information on the subject, I am induced to ask you to insert this letter, in hopes it may catch the eye of some one who could inform me on the subject, and tell me how to act in order to get justice.

Though they pay me as a British lieutenant in England, yet they do not even give me the extra shilling per day a British lieutenant gets after seven years' service in that rank, and to which I am entitled, my lieutenant's commission dating May, 1864, so that by entering the Staff Corps and trusting to the Rules first published I have sacrificed the prices of my commissions, and am a loser in every way.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully, PIGEON.

London, Oct. 6.

[" Pigeon " seems to have been hardly treated, but the rule, we believe, is that an officer transferred to the Staff Corps must serve three years in the corps before drawing his full furlough pay.—Ed. A. I. M.]

THE RAJPOOT CLANS.

TO THE EDITOR OF " ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—We at present fancy ourselves to be very secure in the possession of India. We congratulate each other that we have an army which could defy any force which Russia might instigate and assist to attack us in the Peshawur valley. We have been relieved of all fear that France or Prussia or any other Continental State can interfere with us in the East, and we are excellent friends with our cousins the Americans. With reference to internal peace, we argue that the Mahommedans have not forgotten the terrible lesson they received in 1858, that the Seikhs are enamoured with the wisdom of our laws and with the machinery by which we execute them, and that the Mahrattas are only anxious to develop the resources of the fertile territories which the British have left in their hands.

But we entirely overlook a fact pregnant with danger to the stability of our Empire; I allude to the discontent of the Rajpoot clans.

The Rajpoots are the backbone of our power in India. As long as we enjoyed their hearty friendship we could with facility repress the fanaticism of the Mahommedans, the turbulence of the Seikhs, and the intrigues of the Mahrattas. The Rajpoots are more chaste than the Mahommedans, more sober than the Seikhs, and more truthful than the Mahrattas, and are free from the ambition which agitates these three powerful sections of our Indian subjects. All that they ask of the British is to be allowed the peaceable enjoyment of the fruits of their ancestral lands.

With the Rajpoots on our side the peace of India would, under Divine Providence, be secure.

We could call into the field in a few weeks 500,000 warriors like those who so bravely fought Sir Edward Lugard's force at Azimgurgh in April, 1858, and Sir Hope Grant's force at Nuwabgunge Barabunkee in the following June. The soldiers of Bhojpoor and Amethei and the clansmen of the Rajkoomar, Pulwar, Bais, Bughel, and Chowhan tribes could so effectually hold the Gangetic plains as to allow the English Army to concentrate at Peshawur. Guarded by the Rajpoots our railroads and telegraphs would be safe. Well armed and disciplined they could be made the finest Militia in the world.

But our laws, on which we pride ourselves so boastfully, have often been manufactured with so little knowledge of native habits as to clash with customs which have existed for upwards of 2,000 years; they have thus estranged from our friendship the great mass of Rajpoots. While the men of the warrior caste have been crying for personal government, and recalling to our remembrance their devoted attachment to Colonel Tod, Colonel Sutherland, and other British officers, we insist on giving them harsh, unbending laws, under which they, like ignorant children, have ruined themselves. THE CIVIL ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

The Friend of India holds that if the college has the personal supervision of the Duke of Argyll, as well as of Colonel Chesney, the good that is so largely in it may be brought into operation and the evil that might possibly be made to exist in it to so important a degree may be entirely neutralised. It is important, however, to bear in mind that there is nothing in which England has a greater opportunity of doing good to India than by making native engineers. We have an utter contempt for much that is done to make B.A's. Classical education is all very well in its place, but India has plenty of that kind of commodity—speculation and dream and romance to any amount. What she needs is high-class men not above working, and as an engineer must work in some fashion the benefit conferred upon the country by the production here of such men would be real. It must be confessed that Englishmen in India have done not a little to foster the idea that there is something derogatory in work. A foreman in a workshop in England would not hesitate, if the occasion arose, to himself do the work that he superintended. But the curse of caste rests upon him when he arrives in India. He learns from the natives, and they learn from him, and before long there is a kind of understood compact between them that labour, that was given to men as a blessing in disguise, is in some way or other dishonourable. Let the native colleges in India be in some way connected with the Duke's new English College. Let the same stimulus be applied to both and the project would increase in value and character and would become in time a permanent institution of both countries. We do not say this to throw any discouragement on the scheme, which, under Colonel Chesney, could hardly fail in any case to be valuable. It is a good scheme, but to be worthy of all that has been said for it it will some day have to be very considerably extended.

THE GRANT-IN-AID SYSTEM.

The Madras Times admits that Government Schools are being abolished in some places, and other schools are taking their place; but this will not very much reduce the cost. The system is good in itself; but it is necessary that it should be very closely watched. One of the great faults is that too much money is given to those schools that could do without it. For instance, the Hindu Proprietary School receives a large grant from Government; and this is an institution for the education of the sons of native gentlemen. Surely a grant ought not to be given to a school of this kind. Gentlemen all the world over are supposed to be able to educate their children; and if the men in Madras who have established this school wish to be so called they should pay for the education of their sons. This institution is given as an instance of the misapplication of money to schools; but we could name many others. If the funds of the Doveton can carry on the working of the establishment, and we believe they can, no help ought to be sought from the exchequer. The director ought to enquire in every case whether the managers cannot carry on the school without help; if they cannot, it ought to be given; but if they can, in no case ought a rupee to be handed over to them. These grants have been given too indiscriminately in many cases, and the matter ought to be looked into at once. On the other hand many schools do not get grants when they would be a great boon. We refer chiefly to those attended by the poorer class of Europeans and East Indians, of which there are several in this place, besides a good many in the different large towns in the Mofussil. It is a struggle for schools of this description to get on at all, and because they really require help, it is denied them. Here high fees cannot be charged, for the people are too poor to pay them, and the grants that are lavished so freely on such institutions as we have mentioned never swell the slender income of these poor schools. The same may be said of vernacular education. The money appears to be dealt out very grudgingly in this case; and yet it is the most important branch of education at the present time. The grant-in-aid system may be simplified before many years are past by being restricted to vernacular schools, and the poorer kinds where English is taught.

SELECTION v. SENIORITY.

The Englishman asks, Is it best for the public that promotion by seniority should no longer be the rule of the Service? "Detur digniori" is the rule that must be most to the benefit of the public, and such will, we think, be the opinion of the public; and this rule is not compatible with promotion by seniority alone. One of the most important arguments against the rule of Detur digniori is the difficulty of deciding who is dignior; and the likelihood of the difficulty being avoided in order to serve favouritism. Nothing human is perfect, and there may be danger here; but the danger is, we believe, small in India. Governors and Lieutenant-Governors desire to be successful; and, if they are to achieve success, they must select the most able subordinates that they can find. Few men will sacrifice their own reputation to favouritism in these practical days—and, going at the rate we are now going at in India, to indulge in nepotism to the violation of the rule Detur digniori would assured involve this sacrifice. But it is said, again, that even among those who are "dignores," opportunity has much to say to success; and instances will be quoted of versatile ability fiddling itself into notice denied to more solid qualities. We can only comfort the possessors of the more solid qualities by reminding them that—

> There is a tide in the affairs of all men, and if the tide will not come to them, they must go forth and seek it. There is such a thing as creating one's opportunity, and the power of doing this is no mean ability in itself. To conclude, we think that for all parties except those who are left behind in the race it is well that seniority has ceased to be the rule of promotion.
> Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;

Something is due, no doubt, to length of service in a country like India, and we would gladly see a system of salaries inaugurated, which would equitably meet this claim by allowing every member of the service a scale of substantive pay progressively increasing with the years of his sojourning here, while to each appointment would be attached a salary wholly separate and distinct from this substantive pay, but making with it a proper remuneration for the duties of the office. In this way seniority and merit would each have what was fairly theirs—and we should be relieved of men who, having by length of days and great powers of survivorship reached high posts, will not make way for men who, except in the matter of gray hairs, are more fit than they. If ever a Royal Commission do come to India and do thoroughly examine the foundations of things, there are many to whom it will justly say :—

Lusisti satis, edisti satis, atque bibisti;

THE SUPPOSED CONSPIRACY IN THE PUNJAB.

"We did not think when proposing in last issue that Ram Singh, the arch Kooka, should be put under surveillance, that we should have to draw attention to an outrage by a Kooka in our city resulting in such a catastrophe as the death of a respected judge. There are many, however, who consider that these outrages are only the first small eruptions of a poison in the blood, bubbles on the surface of a lake of lava. The coincidences have been at least extraordinary enough to demand attention, and quite sufficient to justify us in publishing a specimen of certain anonymous letters which have been referred to in our own and other columns. They are probably the work of some frightened Baboo, and the statements are improbable and incongruous. But whatever their value or worthlessness, they are in possession of the police, who may be trusted to be on the alert. "To Mr. ————, Lahore.—Sir,—You once did me kindness—I wish to do the same to you, but do so in peral of my life. The natives will raise kill the sahibs, before many nights. All Sikhs and some Mussalmans are now Bhais for this work. They meet many nights together with Ambritsa mens in city. They say we will poison, then kill and bunn house at night. For God, Sir you will not not speak or I shall be the one killed. Burra admi committee Afghanie Sahib has give rupees poison with roti walla Jallandhur nanie walla Sudder Bazaar. Please sahib you put this in fire when you read it.—A FRIEND, Lahore, August 19, 1871." With reference to the above, it is a curious coincidence that a story has reached us in connection with the Umritsur murders to the effect that these were the premature outbreak of a plot for a general raid on the station. Some thousands were to have met at Lopoki, a village between this and Umritsur, and made a dash at Umritsur, killing all they met, leaving their own fate to Providence. Such a gathering is stated by the police to be impossible. One of those committed to the sessions, however, was a purtwari of Lopoki, and from the proceedings of the committing magistrate it appears that several meetings of the murderers were held at Lopoki. We don't believe in any general plot, but with recent instances before us we would be foolish to disbelieve in the possibility of any fanatical outbreak of the sort, and we shall not be satisfied until we see the men of Lahore in possession of some such organisation as would exactly meet such an outbreak as the one described above.—Indian Public Opinion.

THE DURBAR AT SIMLA.

On Thursday, the 31st August, at noon, his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General held a durbar at Peterhoff for the reception of the Chiefs of the Hill States between the Jumna and Sutlej. A guard of honour was drawn up in front of Government House. The Rajahs of Nalagurh, Bussahir, Belaspoor, and Sirmoor were received with the salutes due to their rank. When all the Chiefs were assembled, the Viceroy and Governor-General entered the durbar tent, accompanied by his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjaub, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the Hon. Members of Council, the Commissioner and Agent to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Cis-Sutlej States, the Secretaries to the Government of India, and officers of the personal staff. A royal salute was fired and the band played "God Save the Queen." The Rajahs, Ranas, Thakoors and their attendants were introduced one by one to his Excellency the Viceroy,—the Rajahs by the Foreign Secretary, and the remainder by the Under-Secretary. As each Rajah, Rana or Thakoor was introduced, he presented his proper offering. When the introductions were completed khillats (robes of honour) were conferred. The Viceroy and Governor-General then addressed the assembled Chiefs as follows :—

"RAJAHS, CHIEFS, AND THAKOORS,—I rejoice to see you here to-day, coming, as you do, to pay homage to the Queen in the person of her representative, and to show your friendly feelings towards the British Government.

"For a long time, under its protecting rule, the Chiefs and people of these Sub-Himalayan Hills have not heard the voice of war—safety everywhere prevails—crime is happily scarce—serious disputes are rare—the industrious cultivator takes undisturbed from the steep hill-side such produce as it can yield; and for fifty-six years profound peace has prevailed in all your villages—from the snowy peaks to the plain—from the Sutlej to the Jumna.

"Since the days of the Ghoorka war, you have ever evinced towards our Sovereign the most unwavering loyalty; on some occasions, when opportunity offered, you have given practical proof of the sentiments you entertain.

"I am happy to think that in no part of Hindostan are Chiefs and people better affected towards British rule than in the Cis-Sutlej Hills.

"I know that you will always continue in this course, and in return let me assure you that you will ever receive the constant protection of this Government; that your rights, your property, and your dignity will ever be maintained. All we ask is, that you will discountenance and absolutely forbid oppression in every form within your States, and do what lies in your power to assist, improve, educate, and enrich your dependants and your ryots—that you will discourage the evil disposed and promote and reward the good. Thus will your State flourish, your revenue increase, you and your families maintain your ancient rank and position, and command the respect of all.

"In the present Lieutenant Governor of the Punjaub and his officers, to whose peculiar care your interests are committed, you will find disinterested counsellors and true friends. Apply, then, freely to them when you are in want of assistance and advice.

"I now bid you farewell, assuring you that it will always give me the greatest gratification to hear of your health, your prosperity, and happiness."

A translation of the address in Hindoostanee was then read by the Foreign Secretary, after which uttur and pan were distributed by the Foreign Secretary to the Rajahs, by the Under Secretary to the Ranas and Thakoors, and by the Assistant Commissioner of Simla, to the Zaildars and attendants. The Viceroy and Governor-General then left the durbar under a royal salute, followed by the cortege which accompanied his Excellency on his entrance, and the assembly was dismissed.

THE FLOODS IN BENGAL.

The latest accounts from the flooded districts of Bengal show that the floods are everywhere abating. The only districts which have suffered severely are Nuddea, Murshedabad, Purneah, and a part of Monghyr and Rajshaye. There have also been floods of less severity in parts of Jessore and Bhagulpur, and at a few places in Behar. Nuddea has suffered most of all; the Matabangha, the Jellinghi, the Ganges, the Bhyrob, and the Bhagarutti, all of them overflowed their banks, and have done more or less damage. The narrow strip of country between the E.B. Railway bank and the Matabangha has come off worst. But in the Ranaghat, Meherbur, and Chuadanga sub-divisions the lower lands have been more or less under water; only about one-third of the earlier rice crop has been saved, and the greater part of the late (or the best) rice crop has utterly gone. In the Kushtea sub-division the floods have not been quite so bad; and wherever the land was a little higher than usual the crops have escaped. The villages that are built on high ground have escaped, but some have been entirely flooded, and a great many houses have fallen in or been swept away. In the small town of Chuadanga alone about two-thirds of the houses fell in; but Chuadanga, situated between the Matabangha and the railway bank, was worse off than most villages. Food is still cheap enough all over the district, though in some water-bound villages the price of rice has gone up. So far as the reports show, there has been very little loss of life, as the people had expected the floods, and been able to save themselves and their cattle. European and native officers have been all round the district in boats, and the facts of the case are said to be pretty well known. Cattle have in some instances been swept away, and there will be considerable losses among the cattle of the low-lying lands, for there has been little or no grazing land left dry, while the floods have carried away the fodder-stacks. The collector has organised a patrol service of boats, which ply over the flooded tracks, carry away water-bound people to dry land, and take rice to villagers who have no stores, and cannot go elsewhere to get food. If, as is most probable, the inundations would ensure an abundant winter crop, there will not be much distress in Nuddea, though for the next two months there will be some hardship in parts of the district. Some few of the zemindars have done what they could to help the ryots.

Next to Nuddea the Murshedabad district has come off worst; but the inundations there have happily been much more local, though heavy enough over the area to which they extended. They were caused by the bursting of the embankment of the Bhagiratti at two or more places. The river was several feet above the level of the surrounding country, when the bank gave way, so that it soon tore away an enormous gap in the embankment and rushed over the lands below. The latest bursting of the river embankment occurred close to Murshedabad itself on the 29th August; the country was inundated for some miles round, and one-third or so of the city was flooded. There was much inconvenience and loss to the poor people whose villages were flooded; but the inundations had not been extensive enough to raise the price of food, or in any way to cause widespread distress. On the occurrence of the first flood some of the Murshedabad zemindars came forward at once with liberal subscriptions and with aid of other kinds. The richer inhabitants of Murshedabad and the Mirzas of the palace took in and fed the poor of the inundated quarter of the city. The engineers and civil officers attempted to stop the breaches in the embankments, but they could do nothing while the water was so high and the stream so strong. The civil officers arranged for patrol boats to visit the water-bound villages. A meeting was called in Murshedabad, and some Rs. 2,000 subscriptions were promised; the meeting also voted that certain balances of old relief funds should be devoted to the purposes of the present relief. The last accounts show that the river and the floods are subsiding.

In Murshedabad and in Nuddea a good deal of harm has been done to roads and bridges. Some of the Nuddea bridges were saved by cutting the banks on each side. In the Murshedabah district three heavy bridges have been carried away. In Nuddea the E. B. Railway has been breached. The floods in the Monghyr and Bhagulpur districts were happily confined to a few small tracts in each district. The crops were totally lost on the low-lying lands close to the Ganges, and a good deal of harm was done on the banks of some other rivers. People had to be carried away in boats and put on dry land; but they had hardly been brought away, when the floods began to subside, and the people wanted to be carried back to their villages. The has been some loss of cattle; but scarcely any loss of human life. There is no distress, and it is said that none is likely to occur.

In Purneah and Rajshaye the floods were not earlier than in the other districts, and at first there was some anxiety about Purneah. But the Europeans and their zemindars helped the people to get away from flooded villages; and food was taken by the civil officers to villages surrounded by water. The people seem to have got over the floods pretty well; and they are apparently accustomed to be inundated more or less every year. There has been some harm done to the roads in Rajshaye.

On the whole, it seems that the Nuddea district and a small part of the Murshedabad district are the only tracts which have suffered or will suffer largely and keenly from the floods of last month. By way of giving some relief to Nuddea, the zemindars will, we learn, be granted a month or six weeks' grace for paying their September instalment of land revenue; and the introduction of the Road Cess Act into Nuddea may probably be put off for another year or six months. So far as can be yet seen, there seems to be no need for relief or demand for public charity or Government money on any large scale. The difficulty is generally to get the poor inundated people out of their present straits by carrying them to dry land or by taking food to them; and this the local officers are doing most energetically and carefully. Nuddea ryots and Nuddea folks generally are happily very well-to-do and very independent; they had a capital harvest last year, and it is reasonable to suppose that the inundations will secure for them a bumper winter crop.—Englishman, Sept. 9.

STATION TALK.

Lahore, Aug. 31.—I send you a few lines out of my usual weekly routine to inform you of a dreadful attack made by a Kooka, one of the new sect of Seikhs, on Jaishee Ram, Rai Bahadoor, officiating judge of the Lahore Court of Small Causes, and who was acting for Mr. Parker on leave. It appears that this Seikh was defendant in a case before the judge some few days since for the paltry sum of Rs. 28. The dispute was referred to three assessors, or arbitrators, who gave in a decision adverse to the Kooka, and Jaishee Ram, agreeing with them, entered a decree against the man. The Seikh looked upon the order as a most oppressive one. Apparently he had no one to advise him how to proceed for a review of judgment, and he determined to sacrifice the life of the judge at the cost of his own. His residence was under the printing-office of Indian Abuses, and having called upon the printer, he stated that as he printed a paper in which such cases as his were published he desired that some notice of it be taken. Last evening, however, he awaited the return of the judge from the Small Cause Court to his residence in the city. Having got out of his buggy, the Kooka with an iron-bound lattee struck the judge several heavy blows about the head, but before he could actually kill him Jaishee Ram's servants seized and took him into custody and made him over to the police. Jaishee Ram was removed to his rooms in an insensible state, in which condition he has remained ever since. The civil surgeon and native doctors have been in constant attendance upon him, but up to five o'clock this evening there has been no change for the better, and his life is now despaired of. The magistrate attended upon him to take the unfortunate gentleman's dying deposition, but, of course, he was not in a fit state to give it.—In the midst of the excitement which this event has occasioned amongst our community another murderous attack this morning on the assistant secretary of the Lahore Municipal Committee became rumoured abroad. This increased the public apprehension, which had already become greatly excited. With regard to this case, the facts are simply these. The Assistant Secretary went over his works as usual, and having proceeded to the Shalmee gate of the city of Lahore with his darogah and subordinates to measure up some kunkur, he noticed that the angle of a road was a little too sharp to admit of a free sweep for conveyances proceeding in that direction. Whilst marking out with a small cane he had in his hand, in a stooping position, the alterations that should be made in the road, he felt himself suddenly dazed by a powerful blow that had been levelled at his head. This was inflicted by a Mussulman fakeer with an iron bound stick. The skull was fractured through his hat, and but for the latter he would not now be a living man. Staggering back a little, he saw the fanatic making towards him again to strike another blow at him. This he did, but rushing in to close with his assailant, the force of the second blow only raised a bump on one side of the skull. A third blow was warded off, the force of it rather, by the cane the Assistant Secretary held in his hand. The cane was broken, and by this time his men came to his rescue, seized the fakeer, and made him over to the police. The wounded gentleman was taken to the native hospital for treatment. I am happy to say that he is now out of all danger. It is strange that this fanatic should have selected this European for his attack, and watched his opportunity to take his life alone, out of the hundreds who were passing and repassing through that part of the city. On being asked at the havalat what had caused him to make so murderous an assault on one who had never offended him, or done him any injury, his reply was that he had been deputed by God to effect the deed, and that it was the want of this, holding a bit of a chuppatie in his hand he was eating at the time that also urged him to act as he did. A document was found upon the man, purporting to have been given to him by the fakeer of some holy shrine in the Dera Ghazee Khan district. The paper effected to be a credential to Mussulmans in certain parts of the Punjab to render all the assistance in their power to the bearer of the same, but it is suspected that the paper was really a passport to the man to deliver certain treasonable messages to certain parties whose names he was entrusted with.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

The Alfred Park.—The total subscriptions on account of the Alfred Park at Allahabad have reached Rs. 20,121. The Maharajahs of Vizianagram and Jeypore gave Rs. 2,000 each.

Death Rate in the N.W.P.—The total number of deaths registered in the North-Western Provinces during July numbered 38,070, or 1·28 per thousand. Of this number 23,546 were returned under the head of fever, and 642 as "caused by snake bite or wild animals."

The Volunteers.—The Calcutta Volunteer Rifle Corps is fast becoming as formidable in point of numbers as of efficiency. The present season has added no less than one hundred and sixty recruits to the regiment, which now musters on paper five hundred and sixty men.

The Murder of a Lahore Judge.—We learn by telegraph that Kooka Bishen Singh, the murderer of Jaishie Ram, has been committed for trial. His only reason for the perpetration of the crime was, that several cases had been decided against him by the deceased, who was greatly respected.—Englishman.

A New Harbour.—A piece of land 2,530 acres in extent, bounded on the north by the Boroni Mohan river, on the west by the Kamchakoll creek, on the south by the river Jumbu, and on the east by the sea, is to be taken up by Government for a station for the port and harbour establishment at False Point.

Military.—Under the authority of the Government of India it is notified that the rank of brevet lieutenant-colonel, granted under Lord Cranborne's despatch, referred to in paragraph 60 of G.O.G I., No. 808, of Sept. 26, 1866, does not reckon towards the twelve years' service for colonels' allowances in the case of officers of the local service, but applies only to officers of the staff corps, or who entered it under that order.—Orders have been received for D battery 16th brigade R.A. to march from Allahabad on Nov. 3. The women and children, with the heavy baggage, are to go on before to Rawul Piudi, the battery being told off to form a portion of the force at the Camp of Exercise. Four companies of the 1-14th Regiment are under orders to proceed to Allahabad on Nov. 5 to take over the garrison duties, two companies going to the fort, the remainder to the new barracks.

Calcutta Trade.—During the month of August last the Calcutta Commercial Guide shows that, as compared with August 1870, thre was a decrease in the value of merchandise imported amounting to Rs. 10,40,536, and of bullion and specie imported of Rs. 15,07,920. The items which show the principal decrease are cotton twist, piece-goods, and woollens. There was a large increase in the value of patent and wrought metals. In exports there was an increase in merchandise of Rs. 55,93,725, and of specie and bullion of Rs. 65,816. The increase is entirely due to tea, opium, cotton, and jute, as rice, linseed, mustard, poppy and other seeds show a decrease. The net decrease in the actual collections at the Custom-house was Rs. 5,69,011, the greater part due to the falling off in salt duty. In import tonnage there was a decrease of two ships but an increase of 5,231 tons, and in export tonnage a decrease of three ships, but an increase of 2,031 tons.—Englishman.

Cattle Plague.—Cattle-plague has broken out in the Meerut, Agra, and Ghazipur divisions of the N.W. Provinces.

Rainfall in Burmah.—The amount of rain that has fallen at Moulmein since the beginning of the monsoon is given at 176 inches, as compared with 121 inches in 1870.

The Kareemee Country.—The Moulmein Advertiser has received intelligence that affairs in Kareemee are in a very unsatisfactory condition, and that nearly all the chiefs are up in arms.

The Drainage at Calcutta.—The heavy rain which fell on Monday afternoon proves that the drainage scheme, however well designed for ordinary purposes, it is by no means calculated to meet such a heavy downpour. Many of the principal streets in the southern division of the town, and all the bye-lanes, were more or less flooded, and the water did not run off from them till several hours after the rain had ceased. In the northern division of the town, where no drainage exists, matters were certainly much worse, and the damage done to property must be considerable, as the ground floors of nearly all the houses were filled with water, and large quantities of grain, together with some articles of furniture, were to be seen floating along the streets. We hear that several houses have fallen down. One case of death from lightning is reported, that of a mistry, who was at work on the roof of a house in Chitpore.—Englishman.

The Court-Martial on Colonel Low.—The general court-martial on Lieutenant-Colonel J. R. A. S. Low, Bengal Staff Corps, Assistant Commissary General, is at length in orders for assembly at Murree on the 8th instant. The court is composed as follows:—Colonel C. G. Arbuthnot, R.A., president. Members:—Colonel S. Henning, 38th Regiment; Colonel R. H. Currie, 39th Regiment; Lieutenant-Colonel G. N. Cave, 24th N.I.; Lieutenant-Colonel G. F. Stephens, late Bengal European Cavalry; Lieutenant-Colonel H. C. Campbell, 9th B.C.; Lieutenant-Colonel F. F. Hunter, 36th Regiment; Colonel W. C. Hamilton, 28th N.I.; Lieutenant-Colonel G. R. Brown, R.A.; Major F. W. Stubbs, R.A.; Major A. H. Murray, R.H.A. Lieutenant-Colonel W. E. Boileau, Deputy-Judge-Advocate, will be also in attendance. Mr. Plowden, Government pleader, watches the case for the prosecution. Mr. Reynolds, barrister-at-law, is retained for the defence. The trial is expected to last well into the cold weather.

A Wise Suggestion.—If we venture on a suggestion in connection with the Camp of Exercise it will be excusable, as being in fact the revival of an order issued many years ago by Lord Napier himself. When the China expedition was being organised in 1860, as each regiment arrived in Calcutta an officer was ordered to be sent on board ship from each corps to acquire a knowledge of the accommodation, and to see that the stores were placed in such places as they could be conveniently got at. In a similar way we think an officer might be sent from each regiment in advance to the camp to work up the topographical features, and act as an officer of intelligence to his corps on arrival. In this way the whole camp would very soon learn where every regiment was situated, where the general places of rendezvous were appointed, the departmental camps and offices, and the head-quarters of brigades and divisions. If accompanied by a few intelligent private soldiers, they would soon inform their comrades where to go to, and in this way a good deal of time would be saved, and many fruitless expeditions prevented.

A Native Notion.—The iron pillar near the Kutub Minar, Delhi, was recently dug up by a savant, examined, and restored to its original position. Such an act has astonished the natives, who believe that the pillar goes right through the earth, and that any person who removes it or tries to remove it will come to grief. The following from a native paper, the Punjabi Akhbar, is an account of the digging up:—"The place is dug two or three yards at a time, after which the Englishman smells the earth turned up, and then orders the operation to be continued. A window has already appeared, which some suppose to be the door of a subterraneous apartment, while others have a different opinion. A few stone idols have also been discovered, which appeared to have belonged to the temple of Rai Bithowra, and to have been destroyed and buried by Mussulmans. It is said that the cause of digging the place is, that an Englishman took an impression of the letters engraved on the pillar, and had them printed and read by a person in China, by whom he was told that a treasure of twenty-two crores is buried beneath the pillar."—Englishman.

IMPORTS.—Calcutta, Sept. 9.—Business during the past week has continued rather quiet, and we have no particular feature of interest to notice, unless we except a slight movement in the Twist Market, there being a better feeling for 40's, and higher prices obtainable. Prices of goods are generally unchanged, but there is a very limited business doing. Imports during the week have been heavy, but importers are very firm, and there is no weakness evident on their part, and no pressure to sell.

EXPORTS.—Calcutta, Sept. 9.—Jute: The supplies are almost exhausted, and prices have risen accordingly. We now quote Serajgunge, good to fine, Rs. 4-12 to 5-10; Naraingunge, Rs. 4-4 to 4-12; and Dowrah, Rs. 3-12 to 4. Saltpetre: There has been a fall all round in prices this week, there being little or no demand. Rice: The business in good white for England has been but small. Linseed: The market has shown more activity during the last few days, and for good bold there has been an advance of from one to two annas. Rapeseed continues in demand, and prices have an upward tendency. Raw Silk: Hardly any business doing, and but little arriving from the Mofussil. The sales of the week have consisted of about 90 bales. Corahs are in rather better demand, owing to stocks being light up-country; but no advance in price has taken place.

Defence of Burman Frontiers.—It is stated that measures are about to be set on foot for the defence of the Burman Frontiers.

Commercial.—A memorial has been addressed to the Viceroy by the merchants of Rangoon, complaining of the want of a standard measure for grain throughout the province.

A Hard Voyage.—Sixteen Maldive islanders have been driven ashore near Rangoon, after having been driven about in the Bay of Bengal for three months in an open boat, living on the cocoa nuts with which the boat was laden.

The Van Ingen Affair.—Mr. E. Van Ingen, junior, has been committed for trial at the Madras High Court for attempt to commit culpable homicide on Messrs. Frere and Lambart, and these two gentlemen, with the two sergeants who accompanied them to Mr. Van Ingen's house on the night of the assault, are to be prosecuted for criminal trespass.

Death of Captain D. McDonald.—The Pioneer reports the sudden death, from disease of the heart, of Captain Donald McDonald, of the 79th Highlanders, stationed at Kamptee, on the 28th ult. The deceased, who was only thirty-four years of age, was the second son of the late General Sir John McDonald, K.C.B., of the family of the McDonalds of Dalchosnie and Dun Alastair, in Perthshire, and joined the Cameron Highlanders seventeen years ago, serving with them through the Crimean War and the Mutiny. For some months past his health had been failing, and on Monday last, while at gun drill, he fell down beside his gun and expired almost immediately.

The Coming Eclipse of the Sun.—The Government have sanctioned an advance of Rs. 2,000, being part of the expenditure on account of the Assistant Government Astronomer, who is to proceed to England, in order to undergo the necessary training in celestial photography. He is to return to Madras in December next, in time for the total eclipse of the sun, which is to take place on the 12th of that month, and be prepared to take photographs of the different phases of the phenomenon.—Madras Mail.

State Railways.—The field work of the survey for the State Railway from Bangalore to Mysore is now completed, and it is expected that the plans and estimates will be ready for transmission to the Government of India in a few weeks. Work, it is reported, cannot be commenced until the sanction of the Secretary of State is received to the project, and there will, therefore, in all probability be some delay before operations actually begin. The survey staff is now being broken up.

The Indian Sugar Trade.—The Coconada Advertiser calls attention to the great decline of the Indian sugar trade, and (if its statistics be true) not without reason. In 1850 51, nearly 80,000 tons of sugar were exported from British India, and the import practically speaking nil. In 1860-61 India had imported sugar to the value of £220,000, and in 1869-70 the import we find has risen to £715,000, while the amount exported has dwindled down to less than 16,000 tons. And yet there was a rumour not long ago that the Cossipore supply was too great for the demand.—Pioneer.

The Convicts in Madras Penitentiary.—In order to prevent the convicts in the penitentiary from skulking, during the hours at which they are supposed to be at work, the Acting Commissioner of Police has provided colo ured caps for use. The convicts who work in the punishment yard are to wear red caps ; those who work within the penitentiary walls, and who are not in the punishment yard, are to wear blue caps, and the convicts who are sent to work outside are to have on white caps. If a convict is not in his proper place, it is believed that he will be easily found out by his cap.—Madras Times.

The Chief Justice of Madras.—We (Madras Mail) learn by special telegram that her Majesty has been pleased to accept the resignation by Sir Colley Scotland of the Chief Justiceship of Madras, and to appoint Sir Walter Morgan, the Chief Justice of the High Court, North-West Provinces, to the Madras Justiceship. Sir Walter, who is married, was nominated to the Bench of the High Court, North-West Provinces, on the constitution of that Court in the middle of 1866. He will draw the same pay in Madras, viz., Rs. 5,000 per mensem, as he is now drawing in the North-West. The puisne judges of his present court are the Hon. Messrs. A. Ross, J. B. Pearson, C. A. Turner, R. Spankie, and C. D. Turnbull.

Claims for Maintenance by Wives.—The High Court would appear to have little regard to the claims of ill-used wives against their "lords and masters" for maintenance ; for they have just, by a circular letter of the 29th ultimo, ruled that proceedings under section 316 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Chapter XXL) were not intended to find any place in the New Criminal Quarterly Returns, and that therefore all cases of maintenance should be excluded from such returns. Such information must afford valuable data to ascertain the state of conjugal felicity in India, and, a fortiori, the advisability of legislation to check the growing evils in connubial life.—Madras Times.

A Valuable Estate Seized by the King of Burmah.—Eighteen months ago Mr. G. P. Calogreedy was killed by a wild elephant in the forest of Moo. His estate, valued at Rs. 2,50,000, was seized by the King of Burmah under the pretext of recovering a sum of money due to him by the deceased under a mortgage. The sum claimed was Rs. 20,000, but hitherto not a fraction of the balance —two lakhs or thereabouts—has found its way out of his Majesty's keeping. Meanwhile a widow and child—not to mention other creditors—are cheated of their rights. "Major Sladen's return, it is hoped," so writes a Mandalay correspondent of the Rangoon Gazette, "will be the signal for a searching inquiry into the matter, and a consequent disgorging of the value of the property taken by his Majesty.—Pioneer.

The Next Census.—The Government has sanctioned the employment of Mr. C. E. Gover to tabulate the results of the census in this presidency for eight months on a salary of Rs. 1,000 a month. As an inducement to be expeditious, it is intimated that if Mr. Gover can get through the work in less time than eight months, Government will still pay eight months' salary ; but what is to happen if the work should take twelve months the order sayeth not. We hear that the preliminary enumeration of houses has disclosed the fact that there are 52,000 houses in the town of Madras, which, at the estimated average of eight persons to a house, gives a population of over 400,000. The enumerators found great difficulty in getting to know anything about the babies. They can only account for one infant under twelve months old to about seven families, which is an allowance altogether inconsistent with the other known facts respecting the population. Your native of the lower class believes that the man is blessed who hath his quiver full of them ; but he certainly does not take them out to meet his enemy—the enumerator—at the gate. He rather denies the blessings of Heaven, lest he should be thought boastful, and receive no more.—Madras Times.

Coal in the Godavery Valley.—A report has been forwarded to the Madras Government on the progress and results of borings for coal in the Godavery Valley near Dumagudiem and Bhadrachalam. Mr. W. T. Blandford, Deputy Superintendent, Geological Survey of India, under whose directions all these borings have been carried out, says that the occurrence of fragments of shaly coal in the bed of the Godavery close to the spot where the Tal River joins it from the north, about twelve miles above Dumagudiem, has been known for several years. An examination was recently made, and it resulted in the discovery of coal in four places, all lower down the river than the mouth of the Tal ; so that the bed from which the fragments first found were derived has not yet been detected. Of the seams found, two, neither of them exceeding two feet in thickness, were discovered close to the left bank of the river, opposite the village of Lingala. The quality of the coal was rather inferior, and both seams were found to thin out and disappear within a few yards.

PROSPECTS OF THE COTTON CROPS IN CENTRAL INDIA AND THE BERARS.

From Harry Rivett-Carnac, Esq., Cotton Commissioner, to the Secretary to the Chamber of Commerce, Bombay ; dated Camp Bombay, 11th September, 1871.

Sir,—The accompanying telegrams regarding the crops in Central India will, I hope, reach you in time for the mail.

As all immediate anxiety regarding the cotton crop has now been removed by the return of the rain, these telegrams will be discontinued, but copies of the usual detailed reports from the assistants will be duly communicated to your Chamber.

"West Berar.—Sheagaum.—From Assistant to Cotton Commissioner, dated Monday, 11th September 1871, 7 A.M.—Wet weather continues. Fall here since 6th instant 1 inch 30 cents, and other parts have had about the same. Standing crops are now safe, but more rain is required for autumn sowings and to fill the wells.

"Nagpore.—From Mr. G. J. Noble, Assistant to Cotton Commissioner, dated Monday, 11th September, 1871, 10.15.—Past week 4.29 inches. Prospects good.

"East Berar.—Oomrawuttee.—From the Superintendent of Cotton Experiments, dated Monday, 11th September 1871, 8-30 A.M.—Cotton and all other crops improving. Showery weather continues. Rainfall this month 4·23 inches."

The Circular of the Mofussil Company, of date Sept. 11, contains the following information regarding the weather and the crops :—

"Wurdah (Hinganghaut), Sept. 9.—During the last few days we have had several nice showers. I learn that rain has fallen throughout the district, the weather continues cloudy ; the cotton crops throughout our district are in excellent condition.

"Oomrawuttee, Sept. 9.—We have had abundant rain during the week, and all the crops are flourishing; many fields are already in flower.

Broach, Sept. 9.—The hopes entertained of a further continuous fall of rain have not been realised, and during the week the weather has been bright and warm. The cotton crop in the Surat and Broach collectorates is still in good condition, especially that portion of it which is sown with rice. Jowaree and bajree, &c., are, however, beginning to suffer, notwithstanding the copious dews that have lately prevailed, and unless a portion of the deficiency in the rainfall is speedily made up, injury is sure to ensue. In the Ahmedabad collectorate and in Kattiawar generally the fall of rain is quite sufficient for all kinds of crop, and the tanks, &c., are full.

"Khamgaum, Sept. 10, 7.35 P.M.—(By telegram.) Three inches rain since last report. Crops thriving.

"Khamgaum, Sept. 10.—During the past week the weather was very wet, and promises to continue the same. Last three nights we had very heavy downpours. Three inches of rain has been registered during the week, making over total fall 8¾ inches. The cotton plants are progressing very favourably, and the reports from the districts are also encouraging.

"Sheagaum, Sept. 10.—During the week there has been quite a change in the weather here. Showers of rain have fallen at intervals almost every day, some of them lasting several hours. Our total rainfall has now reached about 10 inches, and there are no signs of a break yet. The crops are looking quite strong and healthy now, but rather backward on account of the previous drought."

Miscellaneous.

THE FAMINE IN PERSIA.—The Bombay committee for ameliorating the condition of the poor Zoroastrians of Persia have received from their agent in Persia, Mr. Manockjee Limjee Antaria, two letters, dated 5th and 17th July last, giving an account of the measures adopted for a proper distribution of the moneys received from Bombay for the purpose of alleviating distress. Of the Rs. 5,000, for which an order was first received through Colonel Pelly, Political Agent, Muscat, on the 28th May last, Rs. 3,500 were apportioned for Yezd, Rs. 750 for Keirman, and Rs. 750 for those who had fled to and taken refuge in Teheran. Out of another contribution of Rs. 6,600, Rs. 1,000 were sent to Keirman for the purchase and distribution of corn or for being used in other ways, and Rs. 3,900 were sent to Yezd for a similar object. In Teheran itself relief was afforded to 188 poor Zoroastrians; and messengers with sufficient funds were sent into thirty-three different villages over which poor Zoroastrians were scattered. Of the further contribution of Rs. 12,000, Rs. 11,000 have been placed as a deposit with the British Consul, while the balance of Rs. 1,000 had been kept by the agent for miscellaneous expenditure. It was not deemed expedient to distribute large sums at once, as the recipients would doubtless have been subjected to extortion by the Government servants. On June 4 last, in the premises occupied by the Zoroastrian boarding-school at Teheran, 160 persons were entertained at a grand religious festival, and ready money was distributed among them. A separate account had been opened for the disbursement of Rs. 5,000 contributed by Mr. Ardasir Hormusjee Wadia. Towards the end of May last Mr. Antaria obtained special permission to import a large quantity of wheat into Yezd, which was placed in the bazaar for sale at very low rates. The immediate result was that the prices of wheat fell considerably in the city, and the prices of other articles also went down. The agent's letter shows that, unless the fall of rain and snow in October next is much larger than in the five preceding years, the consequences must be awful, and the subject causes universal apprehension in the country.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Sept. 12.—The business done in Piece Goods during the week has again been very limited, but the market for Grey Goods particularly is very strong, and, although the demand is good, first holders are very firm and unwilling to sell except at an advance upon present quotations. In Grey Yarns also a small business has been done, and the market is weaker at the close. In other descriptions of imports no material change has taken place. Turkey Red Goods continue dull.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Sept. 12.—Cotton: The cotton market has throughout been very firm, at a rise of Rs. 5 to 7 per candy, and more business has been done than in the previous week, although the amount is still very small. The purchases for export in the week amount to about 7,800 bales. The market closes steady. From the official reports received from the various cotton districts it is now certain that the new Indian cotton crop will be equal to the average of the last two or three years. Below we append our quotations, viz.:—Dholleras and Bhownuggar, Rs. 220 to 222 per candy; Dhurwar Sawginned, Rs. 230 to 232; Oomrawuttee, Rs. 212 to 215; Broach, Rs. 205 to 210.

MONEY MARKET.—BOMBAY, Sept. 12.—EXCHANGE: The tone of the market has undergone some slight changes during the week, but the rates at the close are again firmer. On China, 60 days' sight, house bills, stand at Rs. 220 per 100 dollars.

OFFICERS IN COMMAND OF NATIVE REGIMENTS.—In view to remove misapprehension, it is explained with reference to clause 1st of para. 3 of G.G.O. No. 825, of Dec. 13, 1870, that the officers in command of native regiments therein referred to are those officers only who were holding such commands prior to the publication of G.G.O. No. 552, of Nov. 4, 1863, those falling into commands of native regiments since that date will come fully under the ruling in para. 2 of G.G.O. No. 825. It is further explained that the regimental colonels in command of brigades who specially draw the old rate of allowances alluded to in the same clause are those only referred to in G.G.O. No. 749 of Nov. 18, 1868, viz., substantive colonels of Royal Artillery or Engineers, or of the late Indian Army.

LOCAL RATES COMMITTEES.—The undermentioned gentlemen to be members of the committee for the supervision of expenditure raised by local rates and taxes in the Azimgurh district:—Official Members: Mr. J. R. Reid, settlement officer; Mr. H. M. Rogers, assistant settlement officer; with the same number of native gentlemen. The non-official members are composed of native gentlemen and the subjoined Europeans:—Rev. W. G. Mallett, secretary, Local Education Committee; Mr. J. L. Forbes, agent for Mr. H. P. Dunne, landholder of the Talooka Shamsabad; Mr. A. E. Goutiere, of Dohree Ghat. The undermentioned gentlemen to be members of the committee for the supervision of expenditure raised by local rates and taxes in the Mirzapore district. Four officials, all native gentlemen. Non-Officials: Mr. R. Nicholson, Sir J. Wemyss, Bart.; Rev. Dr. Mather, together with twenty native gentlemen.

INDIAN OFFICERS.

The following letter appeared in the Times of Saturday last :—

"Sir,—A gross injustice has been committed in India, vide the last Times of India under date Sept. 5.

"Sixty Bengal and sixteen Bombay officers have been ordered to undergo the operation of compulsory retirement ; this in the face of the Act of Parliament which secured their promotion and other rights on the amalgamation of the Royal and Indian Services. A chief right was the privilege of remaining on for rank and enhanced rate of pension.

"There are 590 unemployed officers in India, and this idleness of able, and in many cases young, soldiers is to be attributed to the insane policy of Sir Charles Wood in having abolished a glorious and able old service. These men are not idle by reason of their own acts, but by the rules which reduced the number of European officers in native regiments.

"Many entered the Staff Corps from loyal motives in order to heal the unhealthy disputes then existing between Government and the Indian officers. The Secretary of State for India promised the officers in Parliament ease and safety in their positions if they would join and thus close a thorny subject. Now, without fault, many Indian officers are directed to submit to a compulsory retirement.

"How are captains and majors to pay off their purchase fund debts and to support their families if forced on first or second pensions—viz., £198 and £240 per annum ? Many men are still paying on account of purchase loans, the benefit of which is lost to them, as purchase was declared illegal in the Indian Army some years ago. If now forced to accept a wretched pension personal insolvency and national disgrace must follow for, as Indian officers seldom have private means, there is no fund for them to fall back upon. Where an officer has a large family education will have to be given up, and the supply of necessaries will be difficult.

"Is there no honour left in high quarters ? An Act of Parliament secured officers in their rank and emoluments if they would only join this corps. Shall a legislative decision be reversed by the India Office ? Mr. Grant Duff the other day told Parliament, when answering Colonel North, that no orders had been sent to India directing the employment of a certain class of officers who had entered the Staff on the promise of employment. This, too, was an error, for I have just read the order, and can state that it was sent to India. Shall an Act of Parliament be broken ; shall an Under-Secretary of State through ignorance state that which is opposed to truth ; shall ruin fall on men who deserve well of England ! "ARGUS."

THE DELHI AND LONDON BANK (LIMITED).

The ordinary half-yearly meeting was held on October 4, at the offices, 76, King William-street, E.C. ; Colonel J. G. Smith in the chair.

The report, with the statements of accounts annexed, was taken as read. The audited accounts for the half-year ending the 30th June last showed a net profit for that period of £7,242. 7s. 8d., which, added to £1,969. 9s. brought from the previous account, made the total credit of profit and loss £9,211. 16s. 8d. ; and after writing off some old losses, there remained £6,011. 1s. 2d. ; out of which the directors recommended the payment of a dividend for the half-year at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, which would absorb £5,908. 8s. 9d., and leave £102. 12s. 5d. to be carried to the next profit and loss account.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report and accounts, observed that no important or startling event had occurred during the six months under review. The affairs of the bank were gradually and steadily improving, and by the unremitting patience and exertions of their officers a healthier tone had been infused into all the accounts. The directors were, however, not able to declare so large a dividend as they could wish, owing to misfortunes which no similar institution had been able to avoid. But it could be truthfully said that what dividend they did recommend has been honestly and fairly earned, while every succeeding month had brought with it an improvement in the state of their affairs. (Hear, hear). At the last meeting he congratulated the shareholders upon the accomplishment of an object they all had at heart, viz., the reduction of their nominal capital. They had now done with the Court of Chancery, but the winding-up of the various accounts, and the issuing of the new shares, together with a number of other items, had diminished the profits of the past two half-years by about £1,200. It was satisfactory, however, to find that, contrary to expectation, the removal of the unlimited liability from the shares had served to increase, rather than reduce, the amount of their deposits ; for on June 30 last they were eight per cent. more than in the previous six months. (Hear, hear.) The "lock-ups," he was glad to say, though slightly, were steadily being reduced. Lock-ups meant the imprisonment of a certain portion of their capital, thereby rendering it to a certain extent unproductive, and any withdrawal from that inactive state must be a decided gain. The attention of the board had been and would be constantly directed to improving the character of these accounts, and with a little more patience he had no doubt all the transactions of the bank would be brought to a state of permanent prosperity. The expenses of management had also been reduced, but, while congratulating the shareholders upon that head, he must say he did not think it desirable to make any great efforts in that direction, because their object should always be to select first-rate agents, and paying them well for their services, to take care that they were kept thoroughly up to their work. (Hear, hear.) He had only further to remark that with regard to the accounts generally, the auditors had voluntarily expressed themselves perfectly satisfied, and probably, if deemed necessary, would confirm all he had said. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. D. H. Smale seconded the motion, and, after a few congratulatory observations from Colonel R. A. Ramsay, it was carried unanimously.

The dividend recommended in the report was then declared, payable on and after the 16th instant, and the proceedings closed with votes of thanks to the chairman, directors, Mr. J. W. H. Ilber, the London manager, and the other officials of the bank.

Bills on India.—Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 4th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £326,600, to Bombay, £70,000, and to Madras, £3,400. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10¼d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11⅛d. will receive about 66 per cent., and on Bombay at that price in full. These terms show an increased demand for remittances.

Retirements, R.A.—(Woolwich, Oct. 6.)—The following officers of the Royal Artillery are amongst those who have taken advantage of the recent Royal warrant regulating retirements in the regiment, in order to accelerate promotion: Captains W. J. Grimston, C. Carpenter, F. Carey, Hon. P. P. Phelips, J. D. G. Higgon, C. J. Shakerly, C. L'Estrange, H. A. D. de Vismes, C. Orde Browne, Wallace Gilmour, C. Fyshe Roberts, G. Erskine Callander, F. Howlett, and a large number of subalterns. These retirements and the appointments above will induce a very healthy promotion, for which the Royal Regiment has long languished.

Bankruptcy of an East Indian Merchant.—At the Bankruptcy Court, on Oct. 4, Mr. Linklater applied, under the extensive failure of William Harbord, an East Indian merchant, whose unsecured debts amount to £150,000, that the bankrupt might pass his public examination. The application was opposed by the solicitor to the trustees, on the ground that the accounts and information furnished by the bankrupt were defective. Mr. Registrar Roche said that it would be extremely inconvenient to the bar if during the vacation the practice obtained of holding sittings for public examination, especially in opposed cases, and he therefore directed an adjournment until Nov. 10.

Persian Famine.—On Friday a deputation, headed by the Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, M.P., waited upon the Lord Mayor with a petition numerously signed by the leading bankers, merchants, and others of the City of London, praying him to preside over a meeting at the Mansion-house, for the purpose of calling public attention to the wide-spread famine and disease which are devastating Persia, and which have been caused by the failure of the usual snow and rainfall for three successive seasons. Various telegrams and reports from gentlemen in official positions were read confirmatory of the disastrous nature of the famine; and the Lord Mayor, after having examined the papers, expressed his warm approval of the object, and named Wednesday, the 25th inst., at two P.M., for the meeting to take place.

Export of Bullion.—The following recent bullion exports have occurred by the steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company:—From Southampton, per Mangolia, Sept. 23:—Alexandria, gold, £73,450; Bombay, £600. Per Poonah, Sept. 30, gold, Alexandria, £47,000; Bombay, £100; Ceylon, £350; Madras, £11,038. The price of silver is quoted as bar, 5s. 0⅜d. per oz. standard; dollars, old, 5s. 0¼d. to 5s. 0⅜d. per oz.; new, 4s. 11½d. per oz. nominal; 5 francs, 4s. 11½d. per oz.

The New Secretary to Mr. Cardwell.—Lieutenant Colonel Robert Biddulph, Deputy-Assistant Quartermaster-General, Royal Artillery, has been appointed secretary to the Right Hon. Edward Cardwell, Secretary of State for War, with orders to take up his appointment forthwith. Colonel Biddulph joined the Royal Artillery from the Royal Military Academy in 1853, and has since that date been almost constantly filling important Staff appointments on active service. In the Crimea he earned the medal and three clasps, with the Turkish medal and the order of the Medjidie; he was in the campaign in India during 1857 and 1858, actively employed, being Deputy Assistant-Quartermaster General, Royal Artillery, at the siege and capture of Lucknow; and was subsequently in China, at various engagements, ending in the capture of Pekin, being many times honourably mentioned. Though only second captain in the regiment he was made Brevet-Major in 1861 for his services in China; and in 1864 he was breveted Lieutenant-Colonel in recognition of his skill and bravery in India. He has occupied his present post at Woolwich since April, 1868, and has been constantly employed in improving the organisation of the corps and advancing the efficiency of the army, his latest special service being upon the Staff during the autumn manœuvres. Colonel Biddulph's new honour appears to have been quite unexpected, and his successor at Woolwich has not yet been named.

The Indian Church in Danger.—The Rock, in a leading article on the last days of the session, remarks:—"A little incident, which occurred on Saturday last, is highly instructive. A notice of motion stood on the paper of that day to the following effect:—'Mr. Miall—East India (Ecclesiastical expenditure)—Address for return showing the expenditure annually incurred in India for ecclesiastical officers.' Mr. Miall was not present when the speaker called out his name on Saturday. Whereupon the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, Mr. Winterbotham, moved the address for the return in Mr. Miall's stead, and immediately, as appears by the 'Votes,' presented a return in answer to the address which he himself had moved. Mr. Winterbotham's sympathy with the politico-religious views of Mr. Miall is well known; but it is not generally known that he used his influence, as a member of the Government, to undermine the Established Church, with all the freedom of a private member. The great missionary societies, which are interested in the propagation of the Gospel in British India, must be on the alert, or the Indian Church will be stript of her endowments by the Gladstone Government during the recess. Instructions may even now, have been issued to the Governor-General of India by the Duke of Argyle to enter on this odious task. The Secretary of State for India, himself a member of the Free Church of Scotland, is not likely to have many qualms of conscience touching the Indian Episcopate and clergy—'ecclesiastical officers,' as Mr. Miall terms them in his address."

RECALL OF CAPTAIN BURTON.

The Civil Service Gazette observes that apart from his special fitness for the Damascus Consulate, Captain Burton commands our respectful admiration for his varied accomplishments, and for the achievements which have made his name famous. Distinguished as a scholar, and renowned as a traveller, he would appear to be the very man for the difficult post which he has lately filled, for we should imagine that he would often require the aid of both his scholarship and his experience. To form some idea of what Captain Burton has achieved, we may merely note that he made a most difficult journey into the Somali country; he penetrated into Equatorial Africa and discovered Lake Tanganyika, of which we have lately heard so much in connection with the whereabouts of Dr. Livingstone (for this discovery he received the gold medal of the Royal Geographical Society); he made a pilgrimage, disguised as an Arab, to Mecca and Medina; he visited Dahomy, and has told us more about that country, its king, people, and customs, than all other writers put together; and has carried out other explorations and performed other feats of daring which would have been sufficient to render his name famous. It is quite clear that a man who has done all this and much besides must possess natural qualities of a very high order, and such qualities, too, as are peculiarly requisite in the service of the Foreign Office. Perception, resolution, tact, discretion, conciliation, must have been possessed and exercised to an extraordinary extent during his many wanderings as an explorer and a pilgrim, and these are qualifications which it is absolutely essential that a Consul should possess. We do not want to assume that Captain Burton possesses these qualifications; he has proved a hundred times over that he possesses them. At Damascus, we should suppose, his perfect acquaintance with Arabic would also have rendered him additionally eligible for the Consulate. With this union of necessary qualifications, such as we should find in few other men, Captain Burton has been recalled from the post he was specially fitted to adorn. Why has he been recalled? Mr. Palmer says that the "fanatical aversion of the Mohammedans" to the Consul is the ostensible pretext for his recall; but it seems that these very Mohammedans "have been holding mass meetings, and even praying publicly in the mosques that God will send him back to them. Letters are flowing in every day from village sheiks and Bedouin chiefs, asking that he may return to Damascus, as there is no one else to whom they can appeal for help or succour." We believe, as a matter of fact, that the "fanatical aversion" in question was felt by the Turkish authorities, against whose extortions Captain Burton offered a perpetual and often successful protest, and that he was complained of in order to get him out of the way, so that their nefarious practices might not be resisted or exposed. He has been sacrificed for having nobly done his duty, and this, we presume, is pour encourager les autres.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Sept. 19; Agra and Madras, Sept. 17; Calcutta, Sept. 16.

THE Indian papers announce the capture of a Mohammedan Moolvi, Liakat Ali, who in 1857 became for a moment Governor of Allahabad during the brief ascendency of a rebel King at Delhi. For a week or so of that year, before Neil's appearance, Allahabad was given over to the rule of rapine and violence under the new Governor, a native weaver of Mahgaon, in the Chail district. His reign however was cut short by Neil's daring movements, and he fled betimes with a few followers from his camp in the Khoosroo Bagh. Ever since that fatal 17th June the Moolvie appears to have wandered about the country in one disguise or another, preaching sedition but escaping all detection, until April or May last, when he was recognised at Bombay as the Moolvie who a year before had disappeared from the native State of Sucheen, to escape seizure at the hands of the Nawab as a plotter and preacher of disaffection. On the 5th of July he was arrested by the Deputy Commissioner of Police in the act of starting for Central India. His papers were seized, and he himself with one of his followers carried off to Surat, but it was not till some weeks afterwards that Mr. Hope, the agent there, finally discovered the identity of the Moolvie Abdul Kurreem with the rebel Liakat Ali of Allahabad. After his flight from Sucheen he had been hiding in perfect safety at Baroda and elsewhere, until the fame of his sanctity drew him to Bombay where he had been engaged to pray for the birth of a son to the Ranee of Baroda. Besides spending five years in Sucheen he seems to have lived two years in Bombay with a Mussulman gentleman, son-in-law to the late Nawab of Surat. The true story of his life during the last fourteen years would be worth hearing, if his captors could only succeed in making it out.

AFTER a shooting-trip in the heart of the Hills, Lord Mayo has resumed the business of law-making at Simla. At the meeting of his Council on the 29th August Mr. F. Stephen put off his motion to consider the Report on the Criminal Tribes Bill; Mr. Strachey presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill for making public works with the help of Local and Municipal Funds; Mr. Cockerell discharged the same duty to his Bill for amending the Railway Act; and he also obtained a Select Committee for his Bill declaring the "local extent" of certain Acts passed at various times for special places or ill-defined purposes. Besides the eighty-eight Acts thus referred to there are five making up the Codes of Civil and Criminal Procedure, which are now to be consolidated and applied to all British India. This Bill, said Mr. Stephen, "formed part of the general scheme for simplifying the law with which the Council had of late been so much occupied." After pointing out the immense difficulty of ascertaining the law in different parts of the country, he declared that nothing would by this Bill be added to the bulk of the existing law, and that, after the passing of this and one more measure like it, the whole subject of Indian law "would be reduced to absolute simplicity."

THE Legislative Council met again on the 5th September, when Mr. Stephen introduced the Punjab Land Revenue Bill in a very effective speech. His Bill, which aims at simplifying the present law on the subject, has found a hearty supporter in Mr. Davies, the Lieutenant Governor. The Committee was to report upon it in four weeks. With regard to his amended Bill on Weights and Measures Mr. Strachey denied that the Home Government had differed from the Indian as to the need of a uniform system, and he disavowed all thought of introducing the metric system into India. The new Bill had been introduced because the Secretary of State declined for the present to compel the adoption of the proposed standards of weight and measure.

THE Mohammedan Fakir who assaulted Mr. Bull at Lahore has been sentenced by the Commissioner to ten years' penal servitude. Mr. Bull himself has nearly recovered from his wounds.

OWING to the uneasiness caused in the Punjab by the recent outrages on Mr. Buel and Jaishi Ram, the Deputy Commissioner of Lahore has written a letter to assure the public that nothing has transpired which could give the local authorities "the slightest reasonable ground for apprehension." As said authorities are declared to have special sources of information about all such matters, we must hope that timid people will be reassured accordingly. The Deputy Commissioner makes no sort of reference to a statement published in the local journal, that some days back the artillery in the fort had been strengthened and the police ordered to keep their firearms ready loaded. Whether there was any truth in such a story we cannot say; perhaps the precaution was prompted by the previous outbreak against the Mussulman butchers. But it appears at any rate certain that the uneasy public has already returned to a calmer mood of mind, and is laughing, not too soon, we trust, at its former fears.

BISHEN SINGH, the Kooka who murdered the Judge Jaishi Ram at Lahore, was hanged in the garden of the Central Jail of Lahore on the 11th September, in the presence of a good many European residents and officials. Another account makes him undergo his doom in the presence of seven thousand spectators, but either this is a pure mistake, or else the seven thousand tried to get a glimpse of him from outside the prison walls. So far as we can learn his only motive for the murder was a blind resentment of what seemed to him an injustice. One of the few remarks he was heard to utter during his imprisonment was a wish that "so it should fare with all unjust judges." In prison he seems to have carefully read his Granth, the Sikh Bible. After his death his body was burned inside the jail, but the ashes were delivered to his sons, who committed them in due form to the Ravi.

Another attack by an aggrieved suitor on a native Indian magistrate is reported from Bassin, on the Bombay side. The assailant, a Mohammedan policeman, had been cast as defendant in a suit for a few rupees by Mr. Ramas Govind, Extra Assistant Commissioner of Bassin. In vain he besought the judge to absolve him, on the plea of extreme poverty. The only answer he got is said to have been a rough one. Mad with rage he rushed off to his post in the Court "compound," snatched up his sword, loaded his gun, and took aim at the Commissioner as he left the Court-house. The bullet only passed through the Commissioner's arm. His assailant then rushed at him with his sword, and wounded two or three bystanders in the way before he could be prevented from doing further harm.

We are glad to see that the coming campaign against the Loshais will be allowed to further the purposes of science. Colonel Brownlow's column will be accompanied on its march past Chittagong by a surveying party under Captain Tanner, who is to extend the Great Trigonometrical Survey in that direction as far as may be practicable.

According to the Mofussilite, the long-pending scheme for separating the judicial from the revenue service in the Punjab has at length been sanctioned by the Supreme Government, and will be carried into effect from the 1st November. If this news be true, Bengal and the North-West will soon be the only provinces in which collectors will continue to wield full magisterial powers.

One curious if hardly agreeable result of the recent floods in Bengal, if we may believe the correspondent of a leading Calcutta newspaper, is the prevalence of alligators in very unusual places. Not only do they infest the suburbs of Calcutta, but they have even been seen disporting about the Maidan, the great plain between the city and the river, where society is wont in the cool hours to ride and drive for the benefit of its health.

The last mail brings some particulars of the outbreak briefly mentioned in our last issue. On the night of September 6 some of the life-prisoners in Bareilly Jail broke open their barrack, in which seventy men were confined. All of them made a rush for the outer wall, and some of the most daring got safely over before the police received the order to fire. How effectually they obeyed the order may be guessed from the fact that four of the prisoners were shot dead, three others mortally wounded, besides thirty more or less badly hurt. Whether all this bloodshedding was unavoidable we cannot say; nor has anything transpired to prove a connection between this outbreak and Dr. Eades's previous ill-treatment of the Brahman convicts, except that Dr. Eades has been suspended during the progress of an inquiry into the whole matter. We are told that the prisoners themselves disavow all connection between the two incidents, and had no motive for breaking out of jail except their natural dislike to staying in it against their will. Of the five life-prisoners who got away three have since been recaptured.

Lord Napier of Magdala has just given one more instance of his thoughtfulness for the soldier's welfare. In order to prevent the suffering so often endured by soldiers sent home overland in the cold weather and landed in England at the coldest time of the year, he has decreed the assembling of a medical board in each circle, whose duty it will be to ascertain how many men in the regiments ordered home during the next cold season are unfit to encounter the sudden change from an Indian to an English climate. The men thus selected will be sent home round the Cape. No one acquainted with the health-restoring virtues of the long-sea voyage, and the genial influence of an English spring on frames enfeebled by the heats and miasma of a tropical climate, will quarrel with this virtual return to a good old practice. It would be well however to take care that the sea voyage should not be made too long by the use of sailing ships in preference to steamers, which could reserve their steam power for making head against contrary winds. There is room also for improvement in the process of despatching troops from England to India. Regiments which land at Bombay in the month of April, with a march inland or up-country still before them, cannot be said to have a fair chance of weathering the Indian climate. If some of them were sent out by long sea in July or August, so as to reach Bombay or Calcutta in the cold season, they would, besides the benefit of a sea voyage, have time to grow accustomed to the new climate before its worst side began to show itself; and the Indian treasury would save some thousands a-year now spent in curing or replacing its sick and weakly soldiers.

To judge from a quaint description given by a native Indian journal of a recent boat-race on the Hooghly, Young Bengal has begun to carry its emulation of Young England into the field of athletic sports. According to the Indian Mirror several hundred gentlemen gathered about a certain "Ghaut," or quay, at Burranagore, on the 10th September, to witness a boat-race rowed by native gentlemen, while some forty boats, mostly rowed by gentlemen also, were seen "plying on the pleasant expanse of the Hooghly." The two rival boats were the Paradise and the Osprey, but we are left to guess at the strength of their respective crews. They started, it seems, at 6h. 15m. 13s. P.M. precisely. Paradise, we are told, gained "nearly four feet at the first stroke," but was "overtaken by Osprey on the fourth." The former however looked like winning at one part of the race; but in steering straight for "the flag of victory" its coxswain—Indice manjhi—ran foul of a large cargo-boat, and so got beaten by "nearly six chains." It was rather a short race according to English ideas, for the crew of the Osprey "rushed on the shore at 6h. 17m. 55s., and took up the flag of victory," which, we are further told, "belonged to the opposite party." The next time we read of a rowing-match between native gentlemen we hope the reporter will go a little more clearly into detail, so that his readers may learn something about such trifling matters as the length of the course and the exact number of each crew. But no doubt both he and the native oarsmen whose feats he celebrated are equally new to their work, and will cover more ground on the next occasion. When the crew of the beaten boat next try their luck again, they should manage to secure a coxswain "vested," in the reporter's words, "with the knowledge of evading obstacles." For the present let us congratulate young Bengal on its liking for an amusement manlier than driving buggies and more wholesome than drinking bad champagne.

The Indian papers explain the meaning of the telegram which, some weeks ago, made a puzzling announcement touching a new statistical department "for the purpose of ascertaining and conserving the internal resources of India." From a Resolution published by the Indian Government, we now learn all about its reasons for forming the new department, and the kind of work cut out for it under its first Director, Mr. W. Hunter. The new provincial Gazetteers having "reached a stage which imperatively demands some uniform system and some guiding authority;" the Government of India proposes to meet the demand by the appointment of Mr. W. Hunter to carry out his own suggestions of "a central guiding authority," which the compilers of the local Gazetteers must within certain limits obey. In admitting the need for "a large amount of individual freedom" for each of the local governments, it still resolves to take all care that "each of the provincial Gazetteers should contain the materials requisite for the comparative statistics of the Empire." In the interests therefore of economy and uniformity, Mr. Hunter is appointed to supervise and control the entire machinery employed for that end, and also to consolidate the provincial accounts into the Imperial Gazetteer.

We understand that Colonel Jervois, C.B., of the Royal Engineers, who has had a good deal to do of late years with the planning of fortifications in this country, will start for India this week to advise the Indian Government with regard to the defences of Aden, Bombay, and other places in the East.

We believe that the English Post-office has lately been treating with the French Government about the carriage of our Indian mails through the Mont Cenis Tunnel. The Germans of course are anxious to retain our custom for the present line by the Brenner Pass, and from the political point of view we might be justified in yielding to their desire. But the Mont Cenis line would shorten the journey by about two days, and that from the commercial standpoint is a paramount recommendation. If the merchants of England are alive to their own interests, they will do their best, when the new route is finally adopted, to get the outward mails despatched a day or two after the arrival of the homeward mails. At present a letter from India arrives as a rule on Saturday, and no answer can be despatched until the same day of the following week. If the mail by Mont Cenis should come in regularly on Thursdays, most people would have time to post their answers by Friday evening.

A RETIRED Anglo-Indian of some mark in his day died in London on the 7th of this month, at the age of 63. Sir Henry Harington, K.C.S.I., began his Indian career as a military cadet in 1824 and played his part as an ensign of Sepoy foot at the siege and capture of Bhurtpore in the beginning of 1826. In the following year however he obtained a writership to Bengal, and thenceforth worked his way up the Bengal Civil Service, until in 1852 he became one of the Sudder Judges at Agra, about the time when his contemporary Sir R. Montgomery was high up in the Punjab Commission under Sir John Lawrence. As a Sudder Judge he did much to raise the character of his Court, and in the same capacity he shared the perils and anxieties of those who were shut up in the Fort of Agra during the earlier months of the great Mutiny. In 1858 he took his seat in Lord Canning's Legislative Council, and helped to pass some of the most useful measures, including the Rent Act of 1859, which marked the last years of that institution. On its suppression in 1862 he entered the new Legislative Council as a member of the Viceregal Cabinet, and in the following year was offered the post of Lieutenant Governor of the North-West Provinces in succession to Sir G. Edmonstone. Ill health however forced him to decline the tempting offer, and in 1865 he retired from India, after an honourable service in all of forty years. In 1866 he obtained the well-earned honour of a Knighthood of the Star of India.

THE next mail from India will not be due in London before next Sunday, so that no letters will be delivered till Monday morning.

DRILL AND INSTRUCTION EQUIPMENTS.—The Government of India have authorised the issue to every infantry regiment, British and native, of fifty picks and fifty shovels, for instruction, in accordance with part 5 of the Field Exercise and Evolutions of Infantry. The tools will be issued by the Ordnance Department, and will be considered ordnance stores; petty repairs will, however, be executed under regimental arrangements, and contingent bills for the cost submitted to the Ordnance Department. The Commander-in-Chief desires that officers commanding stations will pay personal attention to the performance of this exercise, and ascertain that every company in succession is duly instructed. General officers in command will also direct their special attention to this subject at their annual inspections, and in the general observations of their confidential reports will note fully the manner in which it is performed in their presence, men being selected indiscriminately from the different companies, and fresh ground chosen for this purpose.

THE EUPHRATES VALLEY RAILWAY.

So far as the Select Committee on the Euphrates Valley Railway have carried their labours, Mr. W. P. Andrew may congratulate himself on the result. Nearly all the witnesses hitherto examined agree in recommending a railway from Scanderoon, Suedia, or some other point on the Mediterranean to some point at the head of the Persian Gulf. General Chesney, who explored the whole line of country several times, pronounces decidedly in favour of the Euphrates route, with a preference for Suedia as the starting-point. Mr. Ainsworth, who travelled with him, declares that a line from the Bay of Antioch to the Euphrates and down the Euphrates is "at once the most feasible and the most economical;" but his starting-point he fixes at the foot of Mount Casius, a little to the south-west of the mouth of the Orontes. Sir John Macneill, who surveyed the Euphrates route about fifteen years ago, is "quite prepared to say" that the projected line over the Beilan Pass to the Euphrates "can be executed with perfect ease and perfect certainty, for a certain specific sum." His son, Mr. Talford Macneill, would start from Scanderoon—the ancient Alexandretta—which is "a natural harbour, safe at all times, and of great extent," equal in short to any in the world. Carrying his line by easy gradients over the Beilan Pass, he would leave Antioch about twenty miles off, and passing through Aleppo would cross the Euphrates at Belis, following the left bank of the river to a place called Grain on the Persian Gulf. Such a line with the sea at either end of it would, in his opinion, tend more to England's advantage than any other, and would be cheaper and easier to make than any of the projected lines from Constantinople. Not less decided is Captain Charlewood, who served as naval Lieutenant in General Chesney's expedition. He prefers indeed for his starting-point the south-east end of the Bay of Antioch, but admits that Scanderoon might be made as healthy as it is roomy. He would take his line along the Valley of Suedia and up the Orontes to Antioch. From thence to Belis, Bagdad, and Mohammara, on the left bank of the Tigris, there is an almost perfect plain the whole way. His line goes further than that proposed by Mr. Andrew, because Mohammara would be better suited than Basrah for large vessels, and because by-and-by the line might be continued thence through Persia to India. Practically however it is the Euphrates Valley line for which he pleads. It is the shortest of any, is far more practicable than the Trebizond route, and in time of war would remain much more under our control than any line by the Black Sea.

Mr. W. J. Maxwell, who has lately returned from exploring the neighbourhood of the Beilan Pass, prefers starting from Scanderoon, and makes light of any difficulties connected with a Pass only 2,000 feet above the sea, and never obstructed by the snow. He too can think of no other line so convenient for all purposes as the line from Scanderoon to the Persian Gulf. From the former point to Aleppo and Jaibal it would be easy enough to get sufficient labour, and from Jaibal to the Euphrates very little labour would be needed. The line once made, a local traffic would be sure, in Mr. Maxwell's opinion, to spring up even in the regions now tenanted by wandering Arab tribes. He speaks confidently to the fertile character of the country through which the line would pass, and predicts a growing trade in wool and cotton. Another telling witness in favour of this line is Sir George Jenkinson, a member of the Committee for which he himself had moved so successfully. The strength of his evidence rests of course on borrowed information and diplomatic confidences, but in these directions nothing could have been more to the purpose. Sir George read to the Committee a letter from Musurus Pasha, the Turkish Ambassador, announcing the entire assent of the Turkish Government to all the conditions contained in Sir George's letter to himself. These conditions included a joint guarantee from England and Turkey of the interest on an Ottoman Loan, to be applied by a mixed committee of Turks and English to the making of a railway from Scanderoon to Basrah. The guarantee was to be covered by "an absolute mortgage upon the railway, and land, and works." Turkey was also to guarantee England the right of carrying troops at the lowest possible rates between this country and any of our Eastern possessions, and of forwarding mails to the East passage-free. In a subsequent conversation with Sir G. Jenkinson, the Turkish Minister proposed to cover any shortcomings in the guaranteed interest by an assignment on the revenues of the provinces through which the railway would pass. His Excellency, we are told, regards the Euphrates Line as an important step towards the completion of a railway from Constantinople to the Persian Gulf, and he looks with little favour upon any of the rival schemes for connecting Asiatic Turkey or Persia with Europe by the Black Sea. The Sultan also appears to be strongly of the same opinion, for reasons obvious enough; and even the Persian Minister, in default of a line through Persia, is inclined to see in the Euphrates route a safer channel for Persian trade with Europe, than a line which would leave it subject to the "control and hindrances of Russia."

Of the witnesses hitherto examined two only, Sir H. Rawlinson and Mr. Lynch, appear to have a decided preference for one of the longer lines through Turkey and Persia, over the line from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf. The former thinks lightly of such a line with a long sea voyage at either end in comparison with a railway right through by Constantinople, Teheran, and Kandahar. The latter lays much stress on the difficulty of making a line from Bagdad to Basrah, through country which at certain seasons becomes "one vast sea of water," changing a little later into a wide unhealthy marsh, to say nothing of the "intolerable flies that sting worse than musquitoes in midsummer." Mr. Lynch however owns that waterworks would go far to prevent the floods, fears no harm from the Bedawee Arabs along the line, and foresees no difficulty in procuring labourers wherever they may be wanted. The country bordering the Euphrates "cannot well be called a desert," he says, for it was once populous and cultivated, and its soil still consists of a red loam. From Suedia to the Euphrates there is no hindrance to the making of a railway, and the fast growing trade of Bagdad must be worth, he thinks, about a million a-year. Even the road over the Beilan Pass would offer, he admits, very few difficulties indeed.

With regard to the cost of a railway from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf there is very little difference of opinion among its friends. Mr. Telford Macneill reckons it at £10,000 a mile from the sea to Aleppo, at £6,500 from Aleppo to Belis, and from Aleppo to Grain at an average of £8,000 a mile; or, with allowance for harbour-works at either end, about £8,210,000 for the whole distance of 990 miles. He would fix the guage at 4 feet 8½ inches—the ordinary width of the Continental lines, and he allows five or six years for completing the works. He admits that a narrow guage of 3 feet 3 inches would effect a saving of £2,000 a mile, but such a saving would not make up for the loss of time and other drawbacks involved in the use of a very narrow guage. Sir J. Macneill, who recommends the narrower guage, estimates from it a saving of a million and a-half on the whole distance to Grain, which is about 80 miles beyond Mohammara. In other words he would make the railway and pay interest during its construction for six millions and a-half. Mr. W. Maxwell prefers the Indian guage of 5 feet 6 inches, which would add only a quarter of a million to Mr. T. Macneill's estimate for the whole line. The amount of time saved by the Euphrates Valley route will of course depend largely on the guage adopted and the actual length of the land journey. Mr. Macneill reckoning on an average speed of 40 miles an hour by rail gives a total of ten days fourteen hours for the whole journey from England to Kurrachee, while Mr. T. Macneill would allow eleven days and four hours for his route, at an average speed of twenty-five miles an hour by land and fifteen by water. This seems like asking rather too much of the steamers and too little of the railway trains. According to Sir J. Macneill an average speed of forty or forty-five miles an hour might safely be attained on a railway of 4ft. 8in. guage. With a 3ft. 3in. guage he would fix the average at twenty-three miles an hour.

Touching the commercial bearings of the proposed line most of the witnesses can speak encouragingly. General Chesney reckons the Arab tribes on the line of the Euphrates at about 2,400,000, who "come in summer and go away again." These Arabs he considers "decidedly friendly," and attests their readiness to aid in any railway undertaking. The soil in the Euphrates Valley he pronounces very fertile, "favourable to the growth of everything which is produced in India." Mr. Maxwell and Captain Charlewood bear witness to the same effect. All three and Mr. Macneill agree in predicting a considerable traffic along the line from their knowledge of the traffic which already exists in spite of many drawbacks. There is some evidence also furnished by General Chesney in favour of the climate of the Euphrates Valley as compared with that of the Red Sea. Probably at the best there is not much to choose between them, but the General has tried both, and decidedly prefers the former. Taking one month with another all the year round, he regards the Euphrates line as the healthier for British troops. Thus far at any rate we have found a strong chain of evidence on the side of Mr. Andrew's long projected route. Judged by the earliest results of the Committee's labours, the friends of that route have not overstated the case in their favour. Of all the proposed routes the Euphrates line is the shortest, the easiest to make and the cheapest to work; it runs past or near several important cities, through a country mostly fertile or capable of cultivation, not too thinly peopled, nor too unhealthy for the construction of a railway under European management. It would ensure to England a much quicker channel for the despatch of mails, troops, and light goods to India; it would be virtually guaranteed by the Turkish Government; and its ultimate extension at either end to Constantinople and Kurrachee would be merely a question of time and money.

THE RAJPOOT CLANS.—II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In continuation of my letter of the 6th inst. regarding the present condition of the Rajpoot clans, I wish at present to invite your attention to the operation of the laws regarding the alienation of landed property. The laws of Menu most strongly denounce the alienation of ancestral real property; but many Englishmen in India, who have studied Political Economy, insist upon free trade in land, and exult in the fact that, by removing restrictions on the transfer of land, the latter has become more valuable in a pecuniary point of view.

What has been the consequence of free trade in land in India? A boy Talookhdar in Oudh, on reaching the age of eighteen, is allowed to make ducks and drakes of his ancestral property. He is allowed to sell it and to squander the proceeds on harlots, and on the crowd of harpies who surround the youthful baron. If Englishmen be not permitted to squander their property before the age of twenty-one years, Rajpoot Talookhdars should not be entrusted with theirs before the age of forty-two. So evident has this become, that Government has encouraged the management by the Court of Wards of estates, the owners of which have long ago attained their majority; and yet all who know how the Court of Wards is mismanaged must deprecate this official interference. The collectors and deputy commissioners never have sufficient leisure to control the proceedings of their native subordinates, of whose corruption and mal-administration a valuable history might be written.

The Rajpoots, as a race, are children in mind. Generous to a fault, they are very prone to incur debt; what soldiers are not? Usurers crowd round them, and press money upon them, which offers are irresistible. The borrowers are only asked to sign their names to pieces of paper. These pieces of paper are exchanged now and then for fresh bonds, in which the debt has been swollen by compound interest at from 30 to 60 per cent. The business is soon ripe for the Civil Court. The warrior finds himself ruined, and sees his land transferred to a timid usurer, who assumes the awkward position of Neelamdar, or auction purchaser. Some of these Neelamdars have never been looked to by the people as rightful proprietors, and most of them will be summarily kicked out of their possessions on the occurrence of a rebellion. The dispossessed Rajpoots feel sure that the usurers have cheated them, and look upon the British Courts as accomplices in the perpetration of injustice.

I enclose two extracts from a valuable memoir by the magistrate on the state of the Ghazeepore district, completed by that officer on the 22nd of November last, and since printed by order of Government.

Writing of auction sales in execution of decrees of the Civil Courts, he remarks in p. 42:—

"The existence of this great class of dispossessed proprietors forms one of the chief difficulties of our administration, and nine-tenths of the litigation in our Revenue Courts is due to it. The political danger arising from this cause has a tendency ever to assume more formidable dimensions, as the number of the ejected landowners is yearly swelled by the sales of land in execution of decrees; and the privileges and means of subsistence of the former landholders are yearly diminished by the action of the Revenue Courts on the suits of the auction purchasers."

And again:—

"The system of landed property is consequently in what may be described as a state of unstable equilibrium, and must, owing to the wonderful tenacity of the Hindoos in cherishing their claims to land, continue so for hundreds of years.

"The first time for the next few centuries in which the people are quite convinced that the Government cannot send troops to the district, they are likely, if not certain, to rise and eject the auction purchasers."

This state of things exists not in one district only, but in upwards of forty districts, inhabited by more than forty millions of souls, people the most easily governed on the face of the earth, but among whom, under the operation of foolish laws, a feeling of chronic disaffection is gradually but surely extending.—Your obedient servant, T.

NATIVE OFFICERS.

The Fyzabad Advertiser comments on the Friend of India's proposal that a career should be opened out for the sons of the native nobility and the gentry; and there should be inlets for the flow of that chivalry and valour which no doubt innately they possessed. It is one of the happy signs of the times that the idea is now being worked up, and ere long we may hope to see the final consummation. Two things are considered now as being essentially required to enable a native to obtain a commission in the Sepoy army. He must, in the first place, belong to the class of the Indian nobility, and in the second place, he must be an educated man. Both these conditions are proper. A commissioned native officer at present, rising from his position as a private; and without any elevating force, such as that of education, has rooted in his mind all the traditions, the reminiscences of his past life without the least talent or force of intellectual discipline to bring them to advantage, and rise superior to them. He, therefore, very often presents the sad spectacle of one set in authority over the men whom he never can control, and who in their turn are not made to feel the least respect for him. Bickerings and quarrels often ensue, and a want of due sense of responsibility is manifested when the grey-haired Subahdar Sahib goes to his British superior officer to complain of the men not obeying his orders, and of his being bearded by them. What, therefore, can be expected from such men on occasions of emergency! Surely nothing. In our humble opinion, let there be held examinations, in which very high class natives should only be allowed to compete. Let those who pass get commissions. Let them serve for a couple of years as recruits, and then let them be entrusted with the ordinary regimental duties. As for the examination itself, we would not be very strict at present. No doubt, a commissioned officer must possess a very high liberal education, must have in addition a good knowledge of military engineering, and of the sciences appertaining thereto, and last though not least, must be a thorough-bred gentleman. We are afraid our Tewari or Shaikh would feel aghast at such a catalogue, and so, for the present, we would circumscribe the limit. We would insist upon an aspirant for military fame having a thorough knowledge of his vernacular, supplemented by a very respectable knowledge of Sanscrit in the case of a Hindu, and of Arabic in that of a Mussulman; and then, in addition, he must have a knowledge (elementary it may be at present) of geography, physical and political, of the history of India, and of elementary mathematics, as far as plain trigonometry, added to surveying and drawing, practically. Lord Mayo and Lord Napier of Magdala are capital men to work out the desired reforms. In the meantime, we hope public opinion will lend its all powerful voice, and hasten the day when the now anomalous native army, instead of being considered a course of danger, as it often is, will be regarded as a bulwark of strength and safety of the Empire working side by side with the glorious army of Britain—an army which knows no defeat—and winning equal renown and fame.

OUTRAM.

The Friend of India observes that it is the lot of men like Outram to be utilised after death by the country that in life they served so well. The use of honours to Sir James Outram was finished when he died. The bar was put across the door and no sound of honour could ever again reach him. Henceforth his name became the property of his country, and the honour that has been lately paid to his memory reflects itself back to every soldier in India who has the same principles, with the same pure aim, that Outram had. It is almost like lost labour to write of such a man. It almost seems like a work of supererogation to tell any portion, however small, of the story of his life. To the Army of India his whole career is as familiar as a household word; and it would seem almost an insult to re-tell here what has been so usefully and properly retold at home. All that one need care to say is that British rule will remain in India if British persons in India can act upon the principles of Sir James Outram. If they can see the broad principles of justice, higher than chicanery, higher than mere self-interest, and deal with other races under the consciousness that there is a responsibility attaching to the acts. It is a great thing to say that the names that have come out brightest in the history of England in India have been the names of just, as well as able, men. This is far from a common thing in the history of armies. There have been great soldiers that even the countries they served cared very little about, and that no moralist would ever point to as examples. The reverse of this has been the case in India, as a rule, and it is extraordinary, for the temptations to oppression are, perhaps, as great in this country as in any in the world. Many a young man who left England high-hearted and light-hearted has become grave and serious before he has been very long in India. Perhaps it has been the long dreary lock-out, before he could expect to return home. Perhaps it has been the hot sun; perhaps the associations and surroundings, the life that sometimes seems so sad and dreary, hopeless and objectless, in the case of the poor in this country. Perhaps it may be one of a host of things that one might enumerate, but we only care to indicate the one leading fact that many a light young heart has been saddened and sobered before it had been even a year in India—saddened, sobered, and impelled to duty as the one great pleasure of life. Be the cause what it may, be the debt of India to England what it may, England owes to India an unperishable galaxy of heroes fit to match with any the world ever produced. In almost every one of the peaceful parish churches of England one finds tablets erected to the memory of some young soldier, whose bones are lying here; perhaps the squire's son; perhaps the vicar's. In either case probably with a career that might have been carried out to the end without crossing the Indian Ocean. In many an old church, too, there are the old tattered colours that distinguished regiments had borne in wars of deathless renown. If we lost India to-morrow we never would lose these traditions so dear to a great nation; these grand mementoes of days when, with the very groundwork of empire shaking beneath their feet men stood with unblanched cheeks and did their duty to England. And when fathers and mothers point to the tablets in their parish churches their highest praise to their own hero—hero to them if to nobody else—is to say that he followed some such man as Outram, and left as pure an escutcheon behind. This is the use and value of the statue that points from the banks of the Thames to those of the Ganges, and tells of deeds the fame of which will never die.

THE FLOODS IN BENGAL.

The Englishman declares that never since the year 1823 has such a flood been known. But the loss and suffering occasioned by the present inundation will, we fear, be far greater than the loss caused by the inundation of 1823. In that year the floods subsided within a week; while the present inundation, according to our latest accounts, has as yet shown little or no signs of abatement. This long continuance of the flood is no doubt owing to the altered state of the country since 1823. In that year the water had a level plain, upon which it could expend its force without let or hindrance; now it meets with obstructions everywhere. In 1823 there were no roads, no railways; in 1871 we have not only a railway intersecting the district, but embanked roads jutting out in every direction, and constructed with a reckless disregard to the natural drainage of the country. Roads and railways have alike been made through the beds of ancient water channels, for the short-sighted reason that it is cheaper to make an embankment than to build a bridge; and so it happens that when the rivers overflow their banks, the country is at once submerged by the pent-up floods; and the unfortunate husbandman has to contemplate in patience the desolation of his fields and home, until the accumulated force of the water undermines the opposing embankment, and clears a passage for itself to some outlet beyond. In a district like Nuddea, which is so exposed to these inundations, it is of the greatest importance that the natural water channels of the country should be unobstructed and free; and it would be well if the Government took care that no road should in future be constructed which did not provide a sufficient water-way for the floods. Apart from the obvious folly of constructing roads in such a manner as to cause inundations, it will be far cheaper in the long run to incur a little expense in a few extra bridges than to meet the loss which breached roads and suspended traffic invariably occasion. The Eastern Bengal Railway, it is said, are now losing a lakh of rupees a week from the suspension of the goods traffic, and it is impossible at present to say how much more will be required to repair the breaches of the line. But the chief sufferers from the inundation will be the unfortunate inhabitants. They have lost their crops; in many villages their houses have been destroyed by the water; and they have little or no means of feeding their cattle, even where they have been fortunate enough to remove them to high ground. To preserve the cattle is always the great difficulty in these visitations. If they survive the floods, they become so emaciated and weak that they are sure to be carried off by disease. In the last inundation it was roughly calculated that half the cattle in the inundated tracts had perished. The marvel is how men, in the position of indigent ryots, are able to make head against so great a calamity. They seem, however, to become accustomed to these sudden vicissitudes. The mahajun, to whom they are already in debt, knows that he must help them, or lose all that he has previously advanced, and it is only when the mahajuns are bankrupt that we need have any great fear for the ryots. It is, therefore, of the first importance for Government to ascertain how far the zemindars and mahajuns are able or willing to assist the ryots. The ryots will be more or less dependent until the cold weather crop is reaped; and it is for the Government to see that the zemindars and mahajuns are in a position to support them, if necessary, till the winter harvest. A suspension of all revenue demands until March, and advances to those zemindars who require funds to help their ryots, would, we feel sure, go a long way to give hope to the people and alleviate the present distress.

The Camp of Exercise.—We hear that Staff Veterinary Surgeon Archibald Turnbull, of the Local Service, has been appointed to superintend the Veterinary Department at the Camp of Exercise near Delhi, and that the executive duties will be performed by the following Veterinary Medical Officers:—1st Class Veterinary Surgeon H. Sewell, 4th (Queen's Own) Hussars, from Meerut; Veterinary Surgeon C. Percival, 11th Hussars, from Muttra; Veterinary Surgeon Bray, 20th Hussars, from Umballa; Veterinary Surgeon R. Poyser, R.H.A., from Meerut; Veterinary Surgeon W. Boyd, R.H.A., from Umballa; Veterinary E. Ewing, R.A., from Allahabad; Veterinary Surgeon A. Pitchef, R.A., from Agra. It is anticipated that these officers will march with their respective batteries or regiments to the Camp, and will return with them to the stations they have left or with the batteries proceeding on relief. One camp will be at the old cantonment; another between Seeta Ramka Serai and Bussie on the Rhotuck road, about five miles from Delhi and the same distance from the old cantonment. The third camp will probably be at a place called Bagh Mochie on the Goorgaon-road, seven miles from Delhi, and about the same distance from the last-named camp and about due south from it. But the only water procurable here will be from wells, and possibly another position may be chosen.

THE PUNJAB COMMISSION.

We are in receipt of reliable information that the long contemplated arrangement for separating the executive and judicial functions of the officers of the Punjab Commission have received the final assent of the Supreme Government, and will positively come into force on the 1st of November next. The delay has been occasioned by the difficulty of finding the necessary funds, under existing financial arrangements, for the increased expenditure, involved by the new scheme, amounting to little more than two lacs of rupees per annum. This difficulty has been removed, and the scheme is now being prepared in detail, and will shortly appear in the Gazette.

We believe that the following is as nearly as possible the scheme proposed. This Commissioners of the Frontier Divisions of Peshawur and Derajat will remain as at present. The remaining eight Commissioners will be reduced to four in number. The duties of the Commissioner will be purely executive, and the pay of the officer will be raised to Rs. 3,500 per mensem, assimilating in this respect to the pay of similar officers in the North-West Provinces. To each existing division there will be appointed a Sessions Judge, on a salary of Rs. 2,300 per mensem. He will hear civil and criminal appeals from officers of all grades, subordinate to him, but will possess no executive authority. To each district will be appointed a Collector and Sub-Judges, in substitution of the present designation of Deputy Commissioner. The pay of this class of officers will remain as at present. The Collector and Sub-Judge will be the chief executive officer of his district, and will take a share of criminal work, retaining his powers under section 445 A. and B.

Assistant and Extra Assistant Commissioners will remain as at present. Small Cause Courts will be multiplied. The office of Naib Tehseeldar will be abolished, and a Moonsiff will be appointed to each tehseel for the decision of civil cases. Appeals from the decisions of these Moonsiffs will be heard by the Sessions Judge.

Such is the brief outline of a carefully matured scheme which promises to be productive of much good. The Punjab has long ceased to be a non-regulation province except in name, and the promotion in the various grades which the scheme will ensure is but the justly earned reward of hard work.

Some heart-burnings will be occasioned by the determination at which the Government has arrived to appoint men to the more responsible posts by selection, and not, as hitherto has been the rule, by seniority. We fear that much sympathy willl not be shown to the men who are passed over. There is a general and growing feeling that the system of promotion by seniority has not worked well. Under the present arrangements of the Punjab we are satisfied that no injustice will be done. The Government which proposed the new scheme, as well as the scheme itself, will be on its trial, and the Government must have plenary power to appoint to the higher posts those officers who will best carry out its wishes, and who are in its opinion the best fitted for the posts.—Mofussilite.

Miscellaneous.

Crops in Bengal.—The district reports from all parts of Bengal up to the 9th September state that in no less than seventeen districts the crops have been more or less injured by inundations and too much rain. Sarun, Nuddea, and Jessore appear to have suffered the most. The first says that "the crops are hopelessly destroyed by inundation, and local distress is apprehended;" the second, that "most of the crops are damaged very much," and that "the present inundation is said to be the severest ever experienced, except, perhaps, that of 1823." In the third the report says, "Great loss to Ous and Amun by inundation, which has submerged almost the whole district. Suffering from loss of houses, crops, and cattle is great, and sickness is apprehended." From most of the other districts the accounts are good, though in Pooree the prospects are reported as gloomy for want of rain, the weather being hot and unhealthy, and the rice crop is suffering at Darjeeling from the same cause.

The Trade of Chittagong.—There appears to have been a large falling off in the trade of Chittagong during the year 1870-71 as compared with the previous year. The port dues and miscellaneous receipts have fallen from Rs. 19,596 and Rs. 1,504 to Rs. 17,039 and Rs. 203, principally owing to there having been a decrease of thirteen ships carrying 8,522 tons in the European trade. In the number of native craft there has been a decrease of 104 vessels, which is attributed to many of those formerly employed in the trade being declared unseaworthy, and the loss of six vessels during the south-west monsoon. The improvements of the port have till lately been progressing but slowly, owing to the want of funds, and the difficulty in procuring labourers for work at the jetty, but the river has been re-buoyed throughout. The Commissioner recommends the construction of a floating jetty, and additions to the present jetty, and this has been referred to the Public Works Department.—Englishman, Sept. 14.

RAINFALL IN THE PUNJAB.—Although this year an unusual amount of rain has fallen in the Punjab, Lahore has not had a proportionate share. During the last month showers fell occasionally in the neighbourhood, but scarcely a drop in Lahore itself. In some parts of the district the newly-sown crops are almost destroyed for want of rain.

THE "DELHI GAZETTE."—The Delhi Gazette, which has been published every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, was to appear from Oct. 1 as a daily newspaper. Our contemporary has now been in existence for forty years. In its own words:—"We began with a weekly sheet not larger than a sheet of letter paper. By-and-by the sheet was enlarged to the present size. Then we published a sheet and a half—then two sheets—then two and a half—then three—then three and a half—and at last, four; the issues becoming as we advanced, first bi-weekly, and, now for sixteen years, tri-weekly. The scale on which, for a quarter of a century, our operations have been carried on, may be inferred from the facts that at the time of the Mutiny we survived a loss of something like £30,000 sterling, and that within the past few months we have wiped away bad debts to the amount of £12,500, notwithstanding which we continue to enjoy a degree of prosperity given to very few similar undertakings. This is mentioned here in no boastful spirit, but with a sincere feeling of thankfulness."

OPIUM IN ASSAM.—The Englishman says—"If we may trust the account of a correspondent who is generally well informed, there was very little ground for the satisfaction lately expressed by Government at the diminished consumption of opium in Assam. Most of the hill tribes beyond the frontier cultivate the drug, and as the character of the country is eminently favourable to smuggling, it need scarcely be wondered at if a large quantity of opium is consumed in the provinces which has never paid a pice to the Abkari Department. This cultivation is, we understand, largely on the increase, and the most natural explanation of its extension is increased smuggling, so that it seems not improbable that Government opium may be ousted from Assam long before it is driven out of China by native competition. As it is, there is but too much reason to fear that the diminished consumption of the drug is delusive. Indeed, a free supply of smuggled opium, which is much cheaper than the taxed article, would tend to produce an opposite result."

EUROPEAN BRITISH SUBJECTS' BILL.—There seems a strong feeling among Englishmen in India in opposition to the European British Subjects' Bill, and in disapproval of the course taken in the passing of it. The Committee of the Landholders and Commercial Association at Calcutta tried hard to prevent the sanction of the Act by the Secretary of State, but the Duke replied that the measure had his full approval. The committee stated that they viewed with grave alarm the introduction into the Act of a section which as far as they could understand might at any time be so construed as to seriously affect the liberty of all European British subjects in this country. The committee certainly had much to complain of with respect to the manner in which the Bill was passed. It is a great pity that Mr. Stephen did not take the same course with respect to it that he took in the case of the Bankruptcy Bill. There is an anomaly certainly in a measure like this being discussed and passed at Simla, in the absence of the non-official members of the Council, who may be said to be the sole representatives of the general European public. The Duke of Argyll's reply has just been communicated to the Association.—Friend of India.

MR. G. CAMPBELL.—His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is expected in Calcutta in the first week of October, and it is, the Englishman thinks, not unlikely he will bring with him a box full of new projects. It is supposed in some quarters that the time is not far off when the Board of Revenue will be broken up, and its fragments apportioned to other departments. All its work connected with sea customs will be transferred to the Custom-house, in charge of the collector, who will then be raised to the position and rank of Commissioner of Customs. The revenue branch will be removed to the Bengal-office, and placed under the direct supervision of the Revenue Secretary. A similar disposition will be made of salt and opium, though eventually the last-named, if only for the sake of consistency, will have to be made over to the Agriculture Department. The secretaries will be easily disposed of under the operation of Mr. Campbell's official principle of natural selection; but what is to be done with the members of the Board? It has been whispered that his Honour has hit upon an ingenious method of solving this problem too. On the abolition of the Board the two members will be transformed into councillors of the Government of Bengal, and thenceforward we will read in the resolutions and minutes of the Lieutenant-Governor the decisions, opinions, and orders of "his Honour in Council."

MILITARY.—The Peshawur Mountain Battery, which has been borrowed from the Punjab Government for active service against the Lushais, is the most efficient one in India for hill work, and its commandant, Lieutenant-Colonel J. Hills, V.C., R.A., is well known to the service as a dashing and experienced officer. The Peshawur Mountain Battery is under orders to leave Abbottabad on Sept. 15, and all sepoys now on leave have been directed to return immediately. The removal of the Punjab Mountain Battery from Hazara, our Allahabad contemporary considers, argues well for the present peaceful state of that part of the N. W. Frontier. "It is to be hoped that Atta Mahomed Khan is now the undisputed ruler at Oghee, and that the occasional little raids and village-burnings which, somehow, do still take place, are but expressions of good feeling on the part of the Black Mountaineers—exhibited, perhaps, in their own peculiar way. Brigadier-General Keyes, C.B., now at Simla, must have been consulted about this temporary reduction of the frontier force, and doubtless considers that such reductions will not interfere with the efficient guarding of the piece of border under his immediate control."—We learn from our Allahabad contemporary that the appeal of the Commander-in-Chief to the Indian Army, in behalf of the sick and wounded at the close of the late war, has been responded to by the subscription of Rs. 37,000. Of this sum the R.H.A. subscribed Rs. 1,683; the Hussar regiments, Rs. 1,577; the Royal Artillery, Rs. 2,611; the British Infantry, Rs. 11,971; the European Invalid Battalion, Rs. 11; the Bengal Cavalry, Rs. 2,315; the Punjab Cavalry, Rs. 148; the Native Infantry, Rs. 4,801; the Sappers and Miners, Rs. 32; the Ghoorkhas, Rs. 528; the Madras Cavalry, Rs. 75; the Bhopal Battalion, Rs. 45. Station subscriptions amounted to Rs. 7,666; those at the depots to Rs. 695; while miscellaneous and anonymous brought in Rs. 2,200.

THE OUTBREAK IN BAREILLY JAIL.—The explanation of the outbreak is, we think, easily found. Not long ago Dr. Eades passed a most injudicious order, depriving the Brahmins in jail of their janaos, and the result was—sulkiness. One man was whipped for not eating his dinner, and the disturbance ceased, the city being in no way influenced by the ill-feeling which existed within the jail. There this first matter—the preface of the story—virtually ended. Dr. Eades had passed a singularly indiscreet order, and the prisoners contented themselves with looking sulky. But Dr. Eades was not to escape so easily. There was in the jail a life-prisoner, by name Janooa, a scoundrel imprisoned for active participation in the late Mohurrum riots, and who richly deserved to have been hung a month ago. He, ever since his incarceration, has been looking forward to last Wednesday night, and — like the clever rascal he is—seized the opportunity afforded him, by the ill-temper which was still hanging about the jail in consequence of Dr. Eades' insane order, to provoke an outbreak. It will, of course, be as fairly debited against the late officiating superintendent of the jail as the first. "Had his order," it will be argued, "about the threads not been given, there would have been no ill-feeling to the jail (beyond the ill-feeling that exists in every jail), and the convict Janooa would have had no material to work upon in his villainous conspiracy." Now, this we consider is a point for the inquiry to decide, but we would here say that in our opinion this view is erroneous, for we do not think that the order of the threads was the actual cause of, although it was undoubtedly made the immediate and ostensible pretext for, this outbreak. The actual cause, as far as it is possible as yet to know anything, was simply the desire of the prisoners to escape. There was nothing either religious or political in the matter, for it was merely from first to last an attempt of certain convicts to get out of confinement. The time chosen, it is true, gives the emeute another colouring; but nevertheless we are of opinion that neither sacred threads nor creed differences had the remotest connection with it. Some of the prisoners were in a state of stifled insubordination, and another was actively plotting, and when they came together the result was sudden combustion—the natural result of the contact of fire and smouldering flax all the world over. The prisoners themselves allow that the outbreak was in no way connected with the janaos, but as it is only natural that, following so close together, the second unpleasantness should be set down to the same motives as the first, we again, at the risk of being tedious, would say that the order of the threads, beyond giving Janooa discontented, instead of contented, convicts to tamper with (and the very small quantity of content ever to be found among life convicts makes the difference trifling) was not the cause of the outbreak. It was a fine clever plant—the hour, the day, the time, being all well chosen, with, as results, an inquiry which cannot but be disagreeable to Dr. Eades, and gunshot wounds to forty-one out of seventy convicts.—Pioneer.

EXPORTS.—Calcutta, Sept. 15.—Jute: Owing to the floods in Eastern Bengal, the supply of Jute has been stopped, and prices have risen accordingly—Serajgunge, good to fine, Rs. 4-14 to 5-13; Naraingunge, Rs. 4-5 to 4-13. Saltpetre: There has been a good demand, and prices have again advanced, as the wet weather still continues. We quote refined 5 per cent. refraction, Rs. 7-10 to 7-11. Rice: But little business doing, holders asking for higher rates in consequence of the destruction of the crops in many parts of Bengal. Linseed continues in good demand at slightly increased rates. Rapeseed: An active demand has caused prices to harden, but the supply of really good grain is somewhat limited. Raw Silk: Hardly any business doing, and prices falling; arrivals small, and principal silk-growing districts inundated.

MONEY AND SHARE MARKETS.—Calcutta, Sept. 15.—The Bank of Bengal rates of interest and discount continue without change. Money is in good supply. In Government Paper a fair business has been done at a slight advance on Four per Cents., and at rather easier rates for other descriptions.

Madras.

Tuticorin.—Plans for a light-house at Tuticorin are being prepared, and it is expected the work will be commenced in a few weeks.

Colfon in Burmah.—During July the quantity of cotton exported from British Burmah amounted to 5,864 maunds, of the value of 86,419 rupees.

Judicial.—We learn that Mr. Justice Holloway retires from the scene of his labours at the same time with Lord Napier in March next, and that Mr. Pelly, the Civil Judge of Tranquebar, and not Mr. Sharpe, will have Mr. Justice Holloway's appointment.

Cinchona in the Neilgherries.—The Madras Standard says that the owner of a private cinchona plantation on the Neilgherry Hills has obtained a sufficient supply to enable him to forward it to England for sale.

The Van Ingen Affair.—Mr. E. Van Ingen has been committed for trial at the High Court on three charges. The first is under section 511 of the Penal Code for attempting to commit an offence, and the second under Section 308 for an attempt to commit culpable homicide, and the third under Section 335 for causing grievous hurt on provocation.

The New Vice-Consul for France.—Mr. Henri Martine has been recognised by the Viceroy as Vice-Consul for France at Madras.

The Governor of Madras.—It is reported that Lord Napier will leave Ootacamund early next week, and will arrive at Bangalore on the 26th inst., and remain there until the end of the month, when he returns to Madras. On the 5th prox. he will start for Tanjore, via Erode, Madura, &c., and will probably not return to Madras sooner than Nov. 1.—Madras Times, Sept. 17.

The First Brahmic Marriage at Madras.—The Secretary of the Southern India Brahma Samajam has received an application from a Brahmist, requesting to arrange for the solemnisation of his marriage according to the Brahmic rites between six and eight P.M., on the 17th instant, in the town, and stating that the intended bride and her guardian have given their consent to that effect.—Madras Mail, Sept. 14.

Accident at Rangoon.—A bad accident has recently occurred at Rangoon. A young lady, Miss Harris, was thrown from her horse during a paper hunt, and severely injured. At first it was feared that the injury would prove permanent, and the accident threw a gloom over Rangoon society, but according to the latest news she was progressing favourably. A correspondent alludes to her as one of the most dashing riders in Rangoon.

The Chief Commissioner for British Burmah.—When the mail left Rangoon Mr. Eden had not returned from his trip up the river Irrawaddy. All accounts received from his party were favourable, and indeed the rainy season in Burmah appears to be peculiarly enjoyable; it is in fact the cold season in the Malacca Peninsula. On his return to Myanoung he visited Bassein, which has no telegraph communication with Rangoon.

Literary.—The King of Burmah has informed Professor Max Muller, through his Prime Minister, the Pakhan Mangyee, that he is printing a complete edition of the "Three Beedaghats" (the Tripitaka—or the Holy Scriptures of the Buddhists) in Pali, the sacred language of Buddhism, with a view to having it afterwards translated into Burmese and English, "so as to spread the knowledge of the Buddhist religion both in Europe and America, and that the English people may become acquainted with the principles of the Buddhist faith, and thus cause this kingdom to become famous in the world's history." A small compendium of the Buddhist religion, forming part of the Tripitaka, has lately been translated from Pali into English by Professor Max Muller.

The Paumben Channel.—The Ceylon Observer says:—"The viceregal party and Mr. Townshend had by no means holiday work during their stay at Manaar and Paumben. The present Paumben channel was inspected, and then the Serendib passed on to the proposed site of Sir James Elphinstone's cutting, and an examination was also made of three other sites of proposed cuttings. Mr. Townshend walked across Ramisseram island, making himself personally acquainted with its position and contour and the nature of its formation. Hard work the engineer had of it, says our correspondent, under a burning sun, but he has now made himself thoroughly acquainted with everything connected with the proposed channel. Mr. Townshend expressed astonishment that a ship canal had not long ago been cut through Paumben, when its vital importance to commercial interests was considered. So we have now merely to wait for the engineer's decision on the exact site to be chosen for the cutting. His Excellency also made himself acquainted with the sites of the various proposed cuttings."

Major Sladen.—"We cannot help urging upon the British authorities the advisability of hastening Major Sladen's return to Mandalay, and of sending with him there a guard sufficiently strong to protect his person from violence and to uphold the dignity of the nation." Reviewing the tactics of successive political agents, our contemporary continues:—"General Fytche and Major Sladen read the King's character aright, and would have curbed him had they not been interfered with by the then Governor-General of India. A change from the stern rule of Major Sladen was tried, and Major MacMahon, an able officer in many respects, but a man wholly unsuited to the position, was sent to Mandalay, and the effect has been more deplorable than even the greatest prophets of evil ever dared to predict. What a fearful picture the letters before us give of Upper Burmah—the trade of the country ruined by a fool, religion demoralised by a knave, and the people oppressed by a despot. This cannot last, and if we do not step forward now to stay the hand of the destroyer, there will be revolution and anarchy—the King will be hurled from his throne by an exasperated people."—Rangoon Gazette.

Cinchona in South Canara.—The acting collector of South Canara has published a report on the experimental cultivation of cinchona in that district. In December, 1869, fifty-three plants of the Cinchona Succerubra were obtained from the Government plantations at Ootacamund, and planted at Nagodi on a plot of land about 1¾ acres in extent. Only thirty-eight of the plants survived transplantation, and are now, the collector says, in a thriving condition. The height and girth of the thirty-six plants are as follow:—

Height.	No. of plants.	Height.	No. of plants.
6 feet	1	4 feet	15
5 do.	20
		Total	36

Girth.	No. of plants.	Girth.	No. of plants.

3¾ do. ...	... 3	2½ do. ...	... 2
3½ do. ...	... 10
3¼ do. ...	... 2	Total	... 36

Besides the plants received from Ootacamund, four were obtained from Mercara and planted at Nagodi in July, 1870. Of these plants three have survived transplantation, and are doing well, two of them being three feet high and one two feet. The girth of one is one inch and three quarters, and that of the other two about two inches. Several Tea plants were also planted and are promising well. The height of Nagodi (about 2,500 feet) is, however, not sufficient for the successful cultivation of tea. The experiment up to the end of the last official year had cost Rs. 227-3-5.

THE COTTON CROP.

Dharwar, Sept. 15.—The telegrams received since our last report have advised the Liverpool cotton market as firm, with prices daily advancing, the latest quotes Dhollera to arrive at 7¾d. per lb.

There have been very few purchases made in these districts since we last wrote, as, owing to the rise in prices at home, dealers here have daily raised their quotations, until Sawginned touched Rs. 237 and Compta Rs. 207, f.o.b. Carwar; within the last two days, however, our market is rather weaker, and we quote to-day Sawginned Rs. 233 and Compta Rs. 207, f.o.b. Carwar, 15th December.

The Bombay native firms have lately been selling in Bombay, for future delivery, the cotton which their agents bought here during the past three months, making very good profits by doing so; they, however, appear to have rather oversold, as they are now in the market as purchasers at higher rates than are quoted as current in Bombay.

The late rain has done much good to the grain crops, and they promise to give a much better out-turn than they did a short time ago. Cotton sowing is in progress throughout the districts, but it is too early in the season to give an estimate as to the extent of land which will be sown with cotton.

A few hundred carts have already been despatched with cotton to Compta; but as the road to Carwar is at present under repair, no carts have yet left for that port.

The Circular of the Mofussil Company, Limited, of yesterday's date, contains the following information regarding the weather and the crops, received from the cotton districts:—

Surat, Sept. 17.—Subsequently to addressing you from Ahmedabad last week, two or three showers fell in the Broach districts, and on my return I telegraphed to you, "one inch rain since report, crops progressing fairly." The effect of the recent rain is most marked, and from Baroda to Surat the crops appear to be in quite as good a condition as can be desired. A further fall is reported from the districts, but up to yesterday the weather remained fine in Broach. As before noted, however, the monsoon has been most irregular this year, more rain having fallen in some places than in others, while in Broach itself there is a discrepancy of two inches between the two registers kept, the one showing 16·74 inches to date, and the other nearly nineteen inches. The fall at Surat is noted at about twenty-two inches. From the above it may be gathered that the present state of the crops is satisfactory, but more rain is required in order that sufficient moisture may be stored up, to carry the plants to maturity through the dry months, now about to commence.

From Ahmedabad the reports are most encouraging; up to the end of last week 31·75 inches had been registered, since when there had been a few showers. As yet it is too early to hazard an estimate of the breadth of land under cotton this season, but, as previously stated, it may be taken as about equal to that of last year; although from the Kunbees' accounts it is likely that there may be a slight increase in the Surat collectorate.

Hingunghat, Sept. 15.—Since my last report we have had light drizzling rain every night; the cotton crops, most of which are in flower, are in splendid condition. The weather continues cloudy, with occasional showers during the night.

Khamgaum, Sept. 16.—Since my last report we have had more rain, but for the last day or two the weather has been fine. The crops look well and healthy, but are very backward. We still require rain, and heavy rain, to fill the wells, which are still quite dry. Herewith the rain taken in different guages in this town:—9·33 in., 3·80 in., and 8·93 in., up to same date last year 21·57 in.

Sheagaum, Sept. 17.—No rain has fallen since since the beginning of the week, but the weather has been quite favourable for the growing crops, which have sprung up nicely since the late rains. An early fall would be beneficial, but there are no indications of it at present. The weather has become clear and fine again.

Oomrawuttee, Sept. 17.—Weather continues favourable, and all the crops are flourishing.

STATION TALK.

Hydrabad, Sind, Sept. 7.—For some time past there has been a rumour in camp that Hydrabad is to become a civil station, and that the appointments of Commandant and Staff officer held by Colonel Pirie and Captain Mignon, respectively, are to be abolished, and that only one native regiment is to be stationed at Hydrabad for the future to protect the arsenal. It is not my province, perhaps, to condemn such an unwise arrangement, if such an arrangement is really contemplated by the authorities, but Hydrabad being, I may say, near the frontier, the strength of the garrison should, in my opinion, be increased, instead of being reduced by removing the European troops. The arsenal in the fort at Hydrabad feeds, so to speak, the whole province of Sind with arms, ammunition, and other military stores, and if I am not mistaken send munitions of war to the Bombay grand arsenal occasionally. Should such an arsenal be left with only natives to guard it? The Beloochees are good soldiers, no doubt, but it is an insane policy to leave all our military stores to the protection of sepoys. Hydrabad is no doubt a very trying climate to European troops during seven, I may say eight months in the year, though, strange to say, it is liked by some, but the care that is taken of the British soldier at this station is proved by the hospital exhibiting daily nearly a clean bill of health. The men of the detachment 66th Regiment at present stationed here are, I am informed, far more healthy than the men of the same regiment stationed at Kurrachee, and it is said the reason of this is simply because they are not unnecessarily harassed, and that the rations issued to the soldier at Hydrabad are far superior to the rations generally issued to European troops. The interest our executive commissariat officer takes in the welfare of the British soldier is well known, and I think I state the opinion of both military and civil authorities in these parts when I say the methodical manner in which the working of the commissariat department at Hydrabad has been conducted under Major Douglas Bolton has given universal satisfaction. We very much regret Major Bolton has been obliged to leave Hydrabad, owing to severe indisposition. He has therefore resigned a post he has so ably and satisfactorily filled for nearly two years. He takes with him the good wishes of us all and sincere hope that a change to Europe will soon restore him to health.

Mhow, Sept. 11.—We have lately had a plentiful fall of rain ; and a couple of evenings ago fearful thunder and lightning. The lightning struck two bungalows, one in the officers' lines of the 59th, Captain Clarke's, and played some curious pranks amongst the furniture, smashing the looking-glass, melting a silver goblet, splitting the leg of a table, and passed through a box of cartridge cases, beneath which was a box of cartridges, and above a box containing a quantity of powder. The other bungalow is in the lines of the 15th Hussars, at the opposite side of the camp, and is occupied by the band-master ; at the time he had a sheet of music in his hand, which was burnt up, and he himself was rendered senseless for some time ; no serious effects, however, have followed. An unfortunate dhobie has been swept away by a "bore" coming suddenly down the river, and some people are in consequence minus their kupra. Another unfortunate incident has befel a man of the 15th Hussars—being a somnambulist, he got up in the night and walked over a little parapet of the upper verandah, and having fallen twenty feet or so, he was seriously injured ; no one expected that he would live, as he lay insensible for some days, but by great attention and skilful treatment he is happily recovering, and will soon be fit for duty. I have to chronicle the death of Sub-Conductor Behan, Bazaar overseer. He died on the 7th inst. from a severe attack of fever. He was much liked by all classes, as evidenced by most of the inhabitants here being present at his funeral. The 59th found the usual firing and carrying party, and the fine band of the regiment, and nearly all the non-commissioned officers were in attendance, as was also the band of the 3rd Native Infantry ; a large number of officers also attended. His widow is left with four young children, and she will have to try to live on the little trifle of pension allowed for herself only. It is strange that no provision is made by Government for the children of Warrant officers when left fatherless ; that they should be worse off in this respect than the children of a private soldier appears strange. I am glad to hear that a subscription is about to be commenced for Mrs. Behan, and that some benevolent Parsees of Mhow intend to take the initiative. I had almost forgotten to say that all the shopkeepers and respectable people of the bazaar turned out to pay their last tribute of respect to the remains of poor Behan as the funeral passed, and a great number followed the procession to the grave. This manifestation was a pleasant testimony to the worth of the good old man. We are having lots of rain ; the tanks are full to overflowing.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

Death of Captain Doig.—A gloom has been thrown over the community of Bolarum in the melancholy death, on the 12th inst., of Captain R. F. Doig, 2nd Regiment, Infantry, Hyderabad Contingent, from the effects of wounds received from a tiger on Friday, the 8th inst. On the Monday previous he succeeded in killing a fine male tiger about six miles from cantonment, and at the same time found there was another at the same place. On Friday last, about mid-day, news of its having killed a bullock that morning was brought him, and he at once rode out to the spot unaccompanied except by his own shikarees. He soon found, and had rather a long shot, and was under the impression he had hit the beast in the head ; but it was the opinion of himself and those with him that the tiger had got off and left the place. He at once commenced to organise another beat in a different part of the jungle, and whilst doing this was suddenly and without warning of any kind sprung upon, and very severely bitten by the infuriated beast. So sudden and unexpected was it that poor Captain Doig, although an experienced and cautious sportsman, said he never even saw the beast until he was on the ground and being bitten, or, as he expressed it, "calmly eaten." After the accident he rode back to cantonment, but he never recovered the severe shock, and lingered only until Tuesday morning, when he quietly passed away, remaining sensible almost to the last. Thus has been lost to us a gallant soldier, and one of the keenest and best sportsmen in the country. He was buried at Bolarum on Wednesday, and followed to the grave by a large concourse. The officers of the 2-24th sent their band ; the whole of the men of his corps turned out to pay a last token of respect to one they had ever looked up to and admired, and in whom they had lost an officer who never spared himself to do justice to them and the Government he served.—Times of India, Sept. 19.

Arrest of another Mutineer of 1857.—We have to announce the capture in the Bombay Presidency of Moulvie Liakat Ali, the Allahabad mutineer of 1857. Since that year he has been wandering up and down the country, preaching hostility to the British Government. This ruffian is a native of Mahgaon, the most disaffected village of Chail, the most disaffected pergunnah of the district. He is a weaver by caste, and in 1857 was by trade a schoolmaster. The excessive sanctity of this bigot had gained for him the respect of his village, so that on the first outbreak of the rebellion the Mahomedan zemindars of Chail, only too ready to follow any leader, placed Liakat Ali at their head, and marching into Allahabad proclaimed him the Governor of the district in the name of the King of Delhi. His head-quarters were fixed in the Khoosroo Bagh, and there the rebel court was held. Two nine-pounder guns, which had been sent by Colonel Simson the day before with a party of the 6th Native Infantry to Daragunge, were dragged by the rebels to the gardens and put up inside the gate. For a week the Moulvie was in power. Fires, murders, and rapine filled even the natives with horror ; but there was no system in the outbreak, no concert between the mutineers. The Moulvie headed the Mahomedans, while the Pragwal Brahmins carried with them the Hindu population. The troops fought on their own account. On the 11th of June Colonel Neil arrived in Allahabad and assumed the command of the Fort. On the 15th of June a grand attack was made by a party of Fusiliers, Sikhs, and Irregulars on Kydgunge and Mooteegunge, supported by a steamer moving up the Jumna with a howitzer and some riflemen on board. The rebels were beaten at every point, and our troops followed them up closely. The terror of approaching punishment soon broke up the Moulvie's camp in the Khoosroo Bagh ; and on the night of the 16th Liakat Ali and all his followers fled, leaving behind them the two guns and a number of prisoners, among them the brave young Cheek, who died the same evening, his body covered with wounds and sores, and his mind wandering. Conductor Coleman was also among the Moulvie's prisoners, and died soon after his release, from the wounds he had received in his capture. Meanwhile the Moulvie had escaped ; from the 17th of June, 1857, up to Saturday last he has been wandering about the country to stir up the people to bring back the old days, when the hold of the British on India was being loosened, and he (Laikat Ali) was reigning in the Khoosroo Bagh at Allahabad.—Pioneer.

IMPORTS.—Bombay, Sept. 19.—The business done in Piece Goods by first holders during the week has been extremely limited, but prices remain steady, and in a few descriptions a slight advance has taken place. But in the bazaar considerable sales, amounting to about 2,000 packages, were made by the dealers to the buyers for the interior. In Grey Yarns a limited business has been done, but holders appear to be less firm, and a decline of ½ to ¾ anna in several descriptions has taken place. No sales of any importance have been reported in other kinds of Imports. In Coloured Yarns and Turkey Red no change has taken place, but in the latter a fair business has been done. Metals remain unaltered, except in Iron. Iron—British Bar, Rs. 30-12 ; Iron Hoops, Rs. 5-15 ; Iron Sheet, Rs. 5-14.

EXPORTS.—Bombay, Sept. 19.—Cotton : The firmness of the Liverpool market had little effect upon this market, for although quotations may be taken at Rs. 2 to 3 per candy above those of last week, the business done has been very small. The purchases for export amount to about 3,000 bales only, and the following were the principal, viz. :—1,300 bales of Dharwar Sawginned, at Rs. 230 to 232 per candy ; 600 bales of Barsey and Fuizpore, at Rs. 208 to 216, ready ; 500 bales of Sholapore, at Rs. 200, ready ; and 300 bales of Dhollera and Bhownuggur, at Rs. 220 to 225 ; principally deliverable in forty-five days. The market closes strong.

MONEY MARKET.—Bombay, Sept. 19.—The Money Market is in the same easy state, and loans for short periods on Government Securities are still obtainable at or below 4 per cent. A new element has entered into the Indian Exchanges, which will affect them in the future—the large business now being done in the new French Loan.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES.

Under instructions from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, the Right Hon. the Governor general in Council is pleased to notify that an officer entitled to furlough who has taken it on medical certificate may, on being declared fit for duty, take out on private affairs any balance due to him, provided that, on being declared fit for duty, he is not in excess of the established proportion of absentees.

An officer who, on his return to India, reports himself in ordinary course at the port of debarkation as having returned from furlough, will be considered to have returned to duty.

There is no restriction as to the country in which this leave may be taken, but an officer desiring to change from the place to which his leave on medical certificate was originally granted must obtain permission to do so from the Government of his presidency in India, or from the Secretary of State for India in England, as the case may be.

On landing on such leave in England or in India he must report his arrival accordingly to the India Office, or to the military department of his own presidency, forwarding with his report a copy of the permission granted him to change his destination.

This order is of general application.

PAY—PENSION.

With reference to paragraph 2 Section XXV. of the Bengal Pay and Audit Regulations of 1849, the Right Hon. the Governor general in Council is pleased to notify that the brevet pay of Rs. 25 per mensem attaching to the rank of subadar-major shall in future be considered staff pay, and, as such, be made available for any subadar officiating in the appointment on the death or absence on leave of the permanent incumbent.

2. This ruling does not in any way affect the rights of existing incumbents to receive the full amount of the allowance, whether present with their corps or absent on leave. In such case, no allowance will be passed to any other officer of the corps, notwithstanding that he may be acting in the appointment during the absence of the existing incumbent.

3. The rules under which subadar majors are eligible for pensionary advantages, as such, are unaffected by this change.

NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS' ACCOUTREMENTS.

No. 582.—The following general order by the Government of India, dated Aug. 17, 1871, No. 701, is published :—

No. 701.—The following clause of Army Circular, dated War Office, January 1, 1871, is declared applicable to the three Presidencies, and published for general information :—

Staff sergeants' arms and accoutrements, issued as a special Army Circular, Dec. 7, 1870.

Clause 12.—1. The following non-commissioned officers of the garrison and coast brigades, Royal Artillery, are alone entitled to receive staff sergeants' arms and accoutrements as laid down at page 118 of the Equipment Regulations, 1870 :—Sergeant major, quartermaster sergeant, trumpet major, assistant gunnery instructor.

2. In some brigades the 2nd assistant gunnery instructors wear staff sergeants' appointments, but they will not be continued to their successor.

3. In regiments of infantry the non-commissioned officers who are entitled (under the Equipment Regulations, 1870, pages 120-122) to staff sergeants' arms and accoutrements are as follows :—Sergeant major, quartermaster sergeant, sergeant instructor of musketry, bandmaster, paymaster sergeant, hospital sergeant, orderly-room clerk, band sergeant, drum or bugle major, sergeant armourer, sergeant cook, master tailor.

4. The arms and accoutrements of the master tailor as a sergeant will be appropriated to the lance sergeant doing his duty. One set of arms and accoutrements for rank and file is therefore to be deducted from the general total for the set so appropriated.

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE RULES.

The Governor general in Council is pleased, with reference to financial resolution No. 2,997, dated Dec. 13, 1869, to direct that if an uncovenanted servant who has obtained pension or gratuity on the submission of a medical certificate of incapacity for further work, regains his health and is re-employed in the public service, the rules as to refunding gratuity, drawing pension, and counting service, shall be the same as in the case of re-employment after receiving pension or gratuity in consequence of discharge on abolition of office.

It is provided in paragraph 4 of the Uncovenanted Service Pension Rules of April 13, 1864, that applicants for a superannuation allowance, if serving at the presidency, must be examined by the Inspector general of the Medical Department, or, if serving elsewhere within a moderate distance of a station at which a military invaliding committee is periodically assembled, by the said committee; in other cases, if it is optional with the local Government to accept the certificate of a single medical officer. The Governor general in Council is now pleased to rule that if the pension applied for exceeds Rs. 100 per mensem, a certificate by a single medical officer should not be accepted as sufficient, if it is possible, without inconvenience, to convene an invaliding committee, or to cause the applicant to appear before a medical board.

With reference to the orders of this department, No. 2,233, dated April 25, 1867, ruling that service of subordinates in the revenue survey department temporarily lent to municipalities for duty which, though paid for by them, also promotes Imperial interests, shall count for pension under the Uncovenanted Service Rules, the Governor general in Council directs that in future the sanction of the Government of India must be given to such arrangements.

With reference to the rule prescribed in financial resolution No. 564, dated June 6, 1867, that the service under native States of Government officers transferred to those States for a purpose in which the Government is interested, shall count for pension under the Uncovenanted Service Rules, the Governor general in Council directs that such transfers in future must have the sanction of the Government of India.

THE INVALIDING ORDER.

Head Quarters, Simla, Sept. 7.—The general officers in command of divisions and districts in which any men of the corps specified below are now serving, will, in communication with the administrative medical officers, British Forces, of the Circles concerned, at once assemble medical boards to ascertain what men of regiments, under orders to embark this cold season from Bombay for England, would be unable to bear the rapid change to the winter climate of England, and should therefore be sent by the Cape route :—

22nd Brigade R.A.—Head quarters, Meean Meer; A battery, Jutogh; No. 2 battery, Khyragully; No. 3 battery, Fort William; No. 4 battery, Govindghur; No. 5 battery, Ferozepore; No. 6 battery, Saugor; No. 7 battery, Agra; and twenty-four men of the above brigade at convalescent depots.

1-19th Foot.—Saugor, Jubbulpore, Nynee Tal.

38th Foot.—Rawul Pindee, Murree and Kalabagh, Chungla Gully.

104th Foot.—Allahabad, Kussowlie.

2. Such men will be dealt with under the instructions issued from the Quartermaster-general's Department.

3. All other men present with their regiments and able to embark, suffering from disease or disability which would necessitate their being invalided if their regiments were not going to England, will accompany their corps and be brought before invaliding boards at home.

4. The boards assembled under para. 1 will prepare approximate returns of the men proceeding home with the regiments, excluding the class alluded to in para. 1, who, on arrival there, will probably require to be discharged from the service. These returns will be furnished to the Inspector-general, British Medical Service in India, and the Adjutant general.

5. Complete invalid and discharge documents will be made out in India for all men whose discharge on arrival at home is contemplated; those of men left behind—that is, who will not accompany the regiments to England, being transmitted to the officer commanding the depot or station where the men may be quartered.

The documents to be prepared for men left behind, whose discharge on arrival at home is not contemplated, will be those for an ordinary transfer to the depot company, with a copy of the Detailed Medical History and W.O. form 821.

6. A nominal roll of all men not embarked with their regiments will be transmitted by commanding officers to the Adjutant-General, Simla, shortly before sailing, the cause of detention being specified in each case. It will further be stated whether all necessary documents in the case of each man shown in the roll have been transmitted to the proper authorities.

7. H.E. the C. in C. of the Bombay Presidency is requested to cause any men of these regiments, whose fitness for the Suez route may have become doubtful after departure from their stations, to appear before medical boards at Bombay, in view to their being detained till late in the season, when the period for arrival at home will be more suitable for men in a weakly state of health.

In the case of all such men left behind by the regiment the instructions given in para. 5 will be observed.

Medical boards will communicate to regiments their decisions in the several cases brought before them for examination.

THE FIVE PER CENT. LOAN.

Simla, Sept. 16.—1. H.E. the Right Hon. the Viceroy and Governor General in Council has resolved to pay off the Five per Cent. Loan of Feb. 28, 1857, raised by the Government of India in pursuance of advertisement in the Calcutta Gazette of Jan. 16, 1857, to which additions or transfers have been made under subsequent notifications; the Loan being commonly known as the New Five Per Cent. Loan of 1856-57.

2. It is intended to discharge the Loan at the expiration of the term guaranteed in the original notification, viz., on Jan. 16, 1872, and formal notice of this intention will be published on Oct. 16 next.

2. In anticipation of such notice, H.E. has determined to offer to the holders of this Loan the option of transferring the amount of their holdings to the extent of one hundred and thirty-five millions of rupees into a new Loan (which may be called the Transfer Loan, 1872) to be opened upon the following terms:—

(a) Promissory Notes will be issued for sums of Rs. 500, and for sums above that amount, in even hundreds of rupees; the notes will be payable to order, and interest thereon will be paid half-yearly on Jan. 16 and July 16 in each year.

(b) Interest will be paid on this loan at the rate of four and a-half per cent. per annum during the first seven years of currency and thenceforward, viz., from the 16th January, 1879, inclusive, at the rate of four per cent. per annum.

(c) The notes will be issued in a form similar to that employed for the notes of the Four per Cent. Loan of 1st May, 1865.

(d) No part of the Loan now announced will be paid off before the 16th January, 1882, nor without a previous notice of three months to be issued at any time after the 15th October, 1881.

(e) Applications in writing from persons who may desire to make such transfer should be made to the secretary and treasurer of any of the banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, or to the officer in charge of any Government Treasury at which the interest on the present loan is payable. Such application must be accompanied by the notes which it is desired to transfer receipted as follows:—"Received the contents by transfer into the Transfer Loan 1872, advertised in the Gazette of India Extraordinary, dated Simla, the 16th September, 1871."

(f) His Grace the Secretary of State for India has been requested to receive tenders for the transfer, under this notification, of any notes of the Five per Cent. Loan of 1856-57 held in England.

(g) Interest at 5 per cent. to the date of advertised discharge will be paid to proprietors in anticipation on the surrender of their notes for transfer into the new Loan.

(h) No application for transfer will be received after Nov. 15 next.

(i) The new Transfer Loan will be allotted to applicants in the order in which the notes tendered for transfer are received, whether in India or in England; the difference of time between England and India being reckoned to be six hours. In case several applications are received simultaneously, which cannot all be complied with, the available amount will be issued rateably in proportion to the amounts of the applications.

4. It being deemed expedient to increase the investment of the Paper Currency reserve, Promissory Notes will be issued to the Currency Department in exchange for coin amounting to not more than twenty-seven millions of rupees, and not more than the excess of the amount of the loan of Feb. 28, 1867, now outstanding, over 135 millions of rupees.

5. The notes issued to the Currency Department will be in all respects the same, and subject to the same conditions as the existing notes of the Four Per Cent. Loan dated Feb. 1, 1843, commonly known as the Fifth Four Per Cent. Loan of 1842-43, of which Loan they will form a part. The price to be paid by the Currency Department will be the market price of notes of the said Loan on Jan. 16, 1872.—By order, &c.,

The preceding notification will be published simultaneously in the principal local Government Gazettes in India, and a similar notification will be published simultaneously by his Grace the Secretary of State in London.

With reference to condition (i) in the 3rd paragraph, Treasury officers must record on each note tendered for transfer, in due form, the date and hour on which it is received.—By order, &c.,

Official Papers.

EXAMINATION OF COVENANTED CIVIL SERVANTS.

The following minute, recorded by the Lieutenant governor of Bengal, under date of August 17, 1871, has been published for general information:—

While I have lately noticed, for the purpose of amending it, the system under which uncovenanted officers have been employed without any test of qualifications, on the other hand, it seems to me that covenanted officers, who have already passed many examinations, are necessarily subjected to all the same tests as uncovenanted officers now are after their appointment. Considering how much the covenanted officers appointed by competition have gone through, it does seem to be a great object to relieve them from the "worry" of many further examinations, and to get them to substantial work as soon as possible. I entered the service at eighteen; and while I passed in "college" but the slightest examination in languages, I was never called on to pass in laws and regulations at all. It would have been much better for me and for some of her Majesty's subjects if I had been obliged to pass, and no doubt the examination system afterwards introduced was a great improvement. But it is materially different now that men come out at twenty-two or twenty-three, after having passed strict examinations in Indian law and other subjects.

2. After a perusal of the correspondence which passed on this subject in 1869, and the opinions of the members of the Board of Examiners, to whom it was referred, I am satisfied that a change is desirable.

3. I will not now touch on the language examination—a knowledge of the language is indispensable, and there can be but question of the details and of the mode of examination. I will only say that in the case of covenanted civilians I think it unnecessary to subject them to any restrictions in respect of the order of passing the different language tests. I would give them papers which will suffice for either test, and would let them pass by either the lower or the higher standard in one or both languages whenever they can.

4. In regard to other subjects, I think that covenanted civilians may properly be excused the present judicial examination, the English examinations being sufficient to test their theoretical knowledge of the most important of the Indian laws. I would reduce their examinations in law and revenue to a single test "in local laws, regulations, and rules;" and in this, as in the languages, I think it would be better that covenanted civilians should be allowed to pass the higher standard at once if they can.

5. In this, as in all other examinations, I also think it would be better so to arrange matters as to make the passing less a mere exercise of memory than I understand it to be at present. It is truly said by some officers in the correspondence before me, that as actual work is done with the assistance of books, and not without books, an examination with books is a better test of practical efficiency. I should like that at least one paper should consist of questions to be answered with the aid of books. It will be understood, of course, that in that case the questions must not be such as can be answered by copying a passage from a book. On the contrary, they must be such as shall thoroughly test the intelligent knowledge of the examinees in understanding the bearing of facts, and knowing where to look for the law and how to apply it. In my view, the papers to be answered with books would consist almost entirely of stating certain facts of probable occurrence in real practice, and requiring the examiner to find and apply the law applicable to the facts. The examinees should have all the acts, regulations, and circulars, but the questions should be confined as much as possible to cases commonly arising in the ordinary routine of a magistrate and collector, or a police superintendent's office.

6. Upon the whole, the best mode of attaining the objects in view which suggests itself to me is the following:—

Rules for Covenanted Assistants.

They may pass by the lower or the higher standard in either or both the languages whenever they can.

They are exempted from the lower standard examination in all other subjects, and from the judicial examination altogether; but they are required to pass an examination in "local laws, regulations, and rules," by the higher standard. They will be required to possess a competent knowledge of the above as entered in the accompanying list as it stands, and as it may be revised from time to time. They will be tested both in their knowledge of the actual law and in the application of the law to facts.

7. I should be prepared to invest a covenanted assistant with the powers of a subordinate magistrate of the first class on the certificate of the magistrate and collector and of the commissioner that he is capable of understanding ordinary witnesses and doing ordinary business; and when he has both passed in the language of his district—in the lower standard at least—and obtained powers under this certificate, he would be entitled to draw the extra allowance which accompanies the powers.

8. Whether officers who have passed by the higher standard in both languages and in local laws, &c., will ordinarily be invested with the full powers of a magistrate, is a matter now under consideration; but whether they are or are not, I hope that the Government of India will allow them to draw the usual allowance for full powers as soon as they have passed the higher standard, and their superiors can certify in a clear and satisfactory manner that they have shown by their exercise of the subordinate powers of the first class that they are competent officers, and fit for the charge of a sub-division or other important duty.

When the rules for the admission of uncovenanted officers have been passed, and have come into operation, it will be necessary to alter the subsequent examination rules in their case also, so that they may not be re-examined in the subject in which they have already qualified; but meantime the rules in regard to this class of officers will remain as before; except that to adapt the system to the method prescribed above for uncovenanted officers the papers, instead of being divided as now into judicial and revenue, will be divided into judicial (confined to the Criminal Codes) and local laws, &c., which will include revenue. The present system is that each paper is separately and solely applicable to one standard, and is compulsory for that standard. It will probably be necessary that in the subject of local laws, &c., there should be two papers; one which should be compulsory for both standards and the other for the higher standard only; and the latter would be given only to those who are entitled to go up in the higher standard.

It must also be understood, as regards uncovenanted servants, that they will not be invested with powers, as a matter of course, on passing each standard; but that the Government reserves entire discretion, and will be guided by the reports of their practical efficiency, and by various considerations which may make it desirable that they should or should not exercise large powers.

A copy of this minute will be sent to the Central Examination Committee, with the request that they will be good enough to give effect to the views contained in it, and an intimation that I shall gladly receive their suggestions for any further reform.

A copy will also be sent to the Government of India with reference to paragraph 8, with the expression of a hope that the course there indicated will be approved.

And a copy will be published in the Gazette for general information.

Retrospective Advantages of Officers.—The following paras. (3 and 4) of a letter from the Secretary to the Government of India, No. 348, dated Simla, Aug. 14, 1871, are published for general information:—"3. To avoid any misapprehension in the future, I am to state that it is to be understood henceforward, as an absolute rule, that no advantage granted by the Government will be retrospective, under any circumstances, unless specially made so at the time of the original grant of such advantages, and further that, notwithstanding any existing difference between English rules and those actually in force in India, the Indian regulations must be implicitly followed in admitting or rejecting all claims. 4. The Government of India, on cause shown, will from time to time make such alterations as may be necessary, but such changes will not be held to have any application to cases falling within the date prior to the changes, unless specially authorised at the time."

THE INDIAN ARTILLERY.

The following from "R. E." appears in the Army and Navy Gazette :—"Were Parliament now sitting I would not trouble you with asking the following question, for I should have it asked in the House. To whom are the officers of the late Indian Artillery to look and to appeal to for assistance, in order that their promotion might be accelerated? Formerly there was the Court of Directors established by the Honourable East India Company, but now who have they? The English Government guaranteed to the officers of the late Indian Artillery the pensions and the funds to which they subscribed, but it never led them to suppose when they volunteered to serve the English Government wherever they might be called upon to do so, that it did not intend to consider their state and condition equally with that of the officers of what is called the old Royal Artillery, with whom they were amalgamated. The promotion in the Royal Artillery has become so bad that the English Government have considered it expedient to do something for them. It has issued a Royal Warrant offering a scale of pensions to induce certain officers to retire, but the officers who belonged to the late Indian Artillery are told that they must not avail themselves of this Warrant, yet their promotion—I allude more especially to the Bengal List of the Royal Artillery—is much worse than the old Royal Artillery. If the English Government ignore them, to whom then are they to look for assistance? The wording of the Royal Warrant is as follows :—'It is also our will and pleasure that a limited number of officers of the rank of captain, second captain, or lieutenant in our Royal Artillery shall be permitted, until our further pleasure in this matter shall be made known, to retire permanently upon annuities in accordance with the following scales,' &c. 'Given at our Court at Balmoral, this 31st day of May, 1871, in the 34th year of our reign. By her Majesty's command, EDWARD CARDWELL.' This is her Majesty's command! By whom, then, may I ask, has it been ruled that that portion of the Royal Artillery, which was once the late Indian Artillery, are not to partake of the benefits conveyed in her Royal Warrant; for there is nothing that I can read in the Warrant to exclude them; for it states, 'Victoria R. Whereas we deem it expedient, with a view of facilitating promotion in our Royal Artillery,' &c., 'and further as a temporary measure,' &c. It is evident that this Royal Warrant has been issued because it was deemed expedient in consequence of the promotion in our Royal Artillery requiring some steps to be taken to faciliate promotion. If so, surely, then, it must be expedient for that portion of the same corps, our Royal Artillery, whose promotion is much worse, for though in the grade of lieutenant there is some slight supersession of the old Royal by the late Bengal Artillery, this supersession in a very short time will not exist, and farther supersession in the lowest grade is not of so much consequence as in the more senior ranks; while in the more senior ranks the supersession of the late Bengal Artillery by the old Royal Artillery is most striking, and, what is worse, it is certain of getting more so. The senior captain of the late Bengal Artillery is superseded by more than thirty officers, and the senior second captain by more than twenty officers of the old Royal Artillery. It is to provide for the retirement of captains, second captains, as well as lieutenants of our Royal Artillery that this Royal Warrant has been issued; surely, then, officers who belong to one and the same corps should be treated alike. If the late Indian Artillery is to be amalgamated with the old Royal Artillery, amalgamation ought to be carried out in its entirety, and there should be no difference in the treatment of officers who belong now to one and the same corps, viz., 'our Royal Artillery.'"

FIELD-MARSHAL SIR JOHN BURGOYNE.

We regret to have to record the death of this veteran officer, the "Father of the British Army," which took place on October 7. Sir John, who was in his ninetieth year, had never wholly recovered the shock of the loss of his only son, Captain Hugh Burgoyne, on Board the Captain, last year; but he had rallied from a recent attack, and until lately had spent several hours downstairs. Four days ago he was again confined to his bed, and on the day above named he passed away as peacefully as a child. John Fox Burgoyne was born in 1782, and entered the corps of Royal Engineers in 1798. The active military career of the future field-marshal commenced with the blockade of Malta, and the surrender of Valetta in the first year of the present century. In 1806 we find him serving with the army in Sicily, and in the following year he went on to Egypt under Sir R. Abercromby; and was present at the capture of Alexandria and the attack on Rosetta. Shortly afterwards he accompanied the expedition from Sicily destined for Portugal, under Sir John Moore, and returned with it to England. He afterwards accompanied Sir John Moore's army to Sweden, and thence again to Portugal, and took part in the retreat to Corunna. In 1809 he joined the army of the Peninsula under Sir Arthur Wellesley, and remained with it till the conclusion of the war in 1814, taking an active part in nearly all the sieges, and being present also at most of the actions. As Commanding Royal Engineer he conducted the siege of Burgos; and at San Sebastian the command of the siege devolved upon him on the death of Sir R. Fletcher, who was killed in the trenches before its walls. He was twice wounded in the Peninsula campaign, and received the gold cross and one clasp for Badajoz, Salamanca, Vittoria, San Sebastian, and Nive; the silver war medal, with three clasps, for Busaco, Ciudad Rodrigo, and Nivelle; and he had conferred upon him the Portugese Order of the Tower and Sword, at the recommendation of the Duke of Wellington, who highly esteemed him for his bravery and professional skill. Throughout the Peninsula campaign Burgoyne had been attached to the Third (or Fighting) Division, at the express request of the gallant Sir Thomas Picton. Burgoyne, though not present at Waterloo, joined the Army of Occupation at Paris in July, and remained with it until its return to England. He had already distinguished himself as commanding engineer at the siege of New Orleans, under General Pakenham, and for his conduct on that occasion his name had been highly praised in the home despatches. In 1826 he accompanied the army sent to Portugal, under Sir William H. Clinton, as Commanding Engineer. He returned with it to England at the close of the expedition; and in 1837, shortly after having attained the rank of a field officer, was invested with the Order of the Bath. For fifteen years, namely, from 1830 to 1845, he was employed in a civil capacity as Chairman of the Board of Public Works in Ireland. In 1845 he was appointed to the important post of Inspector-General of Fortifications. This office, which brought Sir John Burgoyne into constant confidential communication with the Ministers of the Crown, enabled him to place before them the defenceless state of our country at that time, and his representations on that subject drew from the Duke of Wellington his celebrated letter which first roused the attention of the public to the condition of our armaments. The brevet of 1851 promoted Sir John Burgoyne to the rank of lieutenant-general, and shortly afterwards he had conferred on him the highest military decoration, the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath. In February, 1854, when it became evident that war with Russia was imminent, Sir John Burgoyne was sent out by the Government to Turkey, to report on the best means of fortifying Constantinople. He returned to England in April; and as soon as the expedition against Sebastopol was resolved upon, he was appointed Lieutenant General on the Staff of the Army of the East, it being considered that his great military talents and engineering experience would prove of essential use in all those operations of which the Crimea was destined to become the scene. It was he who first suggested the flank march to Balaklava, who pointed out the Malakoff as the key of Sebastopol, and who conducted the siege operations before Sebastopol during the whole of the trying and fatal winter of 1854-55. He returned to England in the spring of the latter year, leaving the work which he had originated to be carried on by his successor, the late Sir Harry D. Jones. At the close of the Russian war honours were thickly, but not undeservedly, showered upon Sir John Burgoyne. He was created a baronet, and made a Grand Officer of the Legion of Honour, and received from the Sultan of Turkey the Order of the Medjidie of the First Class. He was also elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, created an Honorary Doctor of Civil Law at Oxford, and made Colonel-Commandant of the Royal Engineers. More recently, in 1868, he was made Constable of the Tower of London, and presented with the baton of a field-marshal, and with the freedom of the City of London. Sir John Burgoyne married, in 1821, Charlotte, daughter of the late Colonel Hugh Rose, of Holme, Nairnshire, by whom he had a family of several daughters, and also a son, Hugh Talbot, captain in the navy, who was born in Dublin in 1833. He was in command of the Captain when she foundered last year, and perished with her.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE FIELD-MARSHAL SIR J. BURGOYNE.

The following order has been issued from the Horse Guards :—

"H.R.H. The Duke of Cambridge regrets to announce to the Corps of Royal Engineers the death of Field-Marshal Sir John Burgoyne.

"H.R.H. feels sure that the officers of the corps will wear mourning for the late Field Marshal for a fortnight."

The remains of the late Field-Marshal Sir J. Burgoyne will be interred in the Tower on Tuesday, the 17th inst. (this day). Officers wishing to attend the funeral are requested to assemble in the Tower at 12 o'clock noon. Uniform to be worn.

Miscellaneous.

DOVER COLLEGE.—On the 4th inst. Earl Granville delivered the inaugural address at the Dover College, established by a limited liability company, and intended to provide, at a very moderate cost, a first class English and classical education. Lord Granville, in the course of an elaborate speech on Education, said he was able to congratulate Dover on having selected for the inspiring mind of its College a master who has already given proof of his abilities.

A Mistake Corrected.—Some of our contemporaries have spoken of Sir John Burgoyne as the "senior officer of the British Army." This was not the case, for Sir William Gomm, Sir John Fitzgerald, Sir George Pollock, Lieutenant-General During, and some others we can name, obtained their commissions before the lamented Field-Marshal. Sir John Fitzgerald has been the senior officer since the death of the fine old soldier who name for so many years appeared at the head of the Royal Irish Dragoon Guards, General Richard Pigott.—Army and Navy Gazette.

Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China.—The report of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China for the six months ending the 30th of June last has been issued. It states that the net profits earned in that period have amounted to £27,012. 9s. 2d.; and the deficiency, stated on the 31st December to be £59,022. 9s. 11d., is thus reduced to £32,010. 0s. 9d. After a strict revaluation the provision made for bad and doubtful debts at the close of 1870 is found to be ample, and no bad debt has been since incurred.

Will of General T. M. Taylor.—The will of General Thomas Matthew Taylor, of her Majesty's Indian army, colonel of the 5th Bengal Light Cavalry, was proved in the London Court on the 23rd Sept., under £25,000 personalty in England. The gallant general, who had spent most of his military career in India, attained the great age of eighty, and died on Sept. 2 at Ramsgate. Amongst his bequests are the following:—To the Refuges for Houseless and Destitute Children of London, £100, in equal proportions between the Chichester Training Ship and the Boys' Refuge, Great Queen-street; to the Ragged-school Union and Middlesex Hospital £50 each, all free of duty.

Artillery Missiles.—The Rev. F. Bashworth, B.D., Professor of Applied Mathematics to the Advanced Class, Royal Artillery, has prepared and presented to the Regimental Institution a series of tables showing the velocity, time of flight, and energy of various projectiles, calculated from the results of experiments made with the Bashforth chronograph. The most recent publications of the Royal Artillery Institution include a lecture by Captain C. Ord Browne on the development of artillery missiles during 1870, a lecture by Capt J. P. Morgan on the explosive force of gunpowder, an article by Colonel H. H. Maxwell on breaching by direct fire, and a translation by Lieut. Douglas F. Jones of Major Kodolitch's report on the Abyssinian campaign.

The late Captain Turner.—Captain Henry Turner, of the 2nd Somerset Militia, and formerly Captain of the 58th Foot, who died last week at Bath, aged 35, served with the 64th Regiment in the Persian campaign of 1856-57, and was present at the storm and capture of Reshire, the surrender of Bushire, and the night attack and capture of Kooshab, for his conduct at which he received a medal and clasp. He was likewise engaged in Bengal and the North-West Provinces from 1857 to 1859 in suppressing the mutiny. Commanded a detachment at the affair of Khoodund Puttee, under Major Eyre; and was present in the actions of Mungarwar and Alumbagh, was with Havelock's column at the relief of Lucknow; he also took part in two sorties from the Residency, the defence of Cawnpore, and the defeat of the Gwalior mutineers, and in the actions of Kalle Nuddee and Kerkonlie. He was orderly officer to Brigadier Stisted at the capture of Bareilly, and was in the actions of Bermah and Mohundee. He obtained a medal, with clasp, and a year's service for Lucknow. He joined the Militia in March, 1871.

Mitrailleurs for India.—We are usually so slow in introducing into our home army improvements and inventions which Continental experience has stamped with its approval, that we suppose India ought not to grumble at being neglected in this respect. But India has the bad taste to think otherwise, and its press is constantly remarking on the want of one of the most potent and modern military inventions (we allude, of course, to the mitrailleur), in an army to which the annihilating power of that murderous instrument may any day become all but indispensable, and of which, in any case, the moral effect among the native population would be enormous. The Gatling, the only arm of the kind which the War-office here seem at all inclined to patronise, is, however, adapted for the Martini-Henry ammunition, while even the best armed troops in India have, as yet, only Sniders, and years must elapse ere they all possess the later weapon. Surely it is not too much to expect that, during the interim, a few Gatlings, fitted to the present ammunition of the troops, should be supplied? A dozen, ay, half a hundred, would repay their cost a thousandfold were we ever called on to resist an invasion in force of the country. We hear, indeed, that the Government of India have urgently asked for a supply of suitable mitrailleurs, and trust that their request may be complied with. Its refusal would involve an "economy" as reprehensible as anything that can be laid to the charge of the present Government.—Broad Arrow.

Royal Polytechnic Institution.—Lecture on Gun-Cotton.—Professor Pepper has come forward with a lecture on gun-cotton, which the late terrible Stowmarket explosion has suggested. The lecture is intended to accompany a series of new dissolving views of the scene of the catastrophe, Messrs. Prentice's factories at Stowmarket. The factories are represented in these interesting, and, indeed, affecting pictures, as they stood before the accident, and in their present state of ruins. Professor Pepper relates the progress of the recent improvements in gunpowder and its modern substitutes of the dynamite or nitro-glycerine order. The most recent improvements in gunpowder are those of Abel, Horsley, and Schultze. Professor Abel has invented an improved large grain powder for shells, Messrs. Horsley and Schultze have otherwise invented means of increasing the explosive power of gunpowder and nitro-glycerine. A portion of the lecture is devoted to explanations and pictorial illustrations of the application of nitro-glycerine explosives to submarine mining or torpedoes. Some interesting experiments are made to show the extent of combustibility of a variety of nitro-glycerine compounds, and the terrific force that can be imparted to them by their combination with fulminate of mercury. The information, generally, contained in this lecture must be new to the public, while to military men, engineers, &c., it is instructive as indicating the changes in artillery and small arm ammunition the services are likely to witness in the future. Meantime, however, the nitro-glycerine explosives may be said to be hardly more than on their trial, progress in their utilisation having been retarded by several accidents betraying their internal elements of danger; while a recent measure of the Legislature caused by certain railway accidents, viz., the "Nitro-Glycerine Act," has had the effect of interfering considerably with the manufacture of nytro-glycerine as an article of commerce. Professor Pepper's experiments with the newer explosive compounds proved that several could be subjected to chemicals neutralising their dangerous elements without destroying or injuring the material itself. Of these protected explosives "litho-fracteur," the invention of Dr. Engels, of Cologne, appeared to be the safest. Litho-fracteur is used in mining operations, and could be utilised for artillery, torpedoes, and ammunition generally.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

INDIAN MOHAMMEDANS.

The Times remarks that it is the opinion of competent authorities that we have gone far towards furnishing our Mohammedan subjects with lawful warrant—according to their views—for overt insurrection, inasmuch as we have deprived them, or allowed them to be deprived, of certain securities for their faith and practices. Of course we tolerate their religion, nor has there, perhaps, been any deliberate design to place it under disabilities, but our Courts of Law do not sufficiently recognise their festivals, and they were left for some time without those duly appointed judges on whom the performance of their ceremonies depends. Those facts, with others of a similar character, might, it is thought, have been so pressed as to establish a case for resistance according to the precepts of the law, while a multitude of social grievances were inspiring the whole community with chronic discontent. Perhaps we shall have said enough to show both that something should be done and that it may be very difficult to do it. To a considerable extent the grievances of our Indian Mussulmans are clearly irremovable. They can no longer be the ruling race, nor can they be indulged with invidious privileges in consideration of their ancient rank. If we owe a duty to them, we owe another to the Hindoos, and it may, indeed, be doubted, as a point of policy, how far we ought to go in satisfying requirements which are based at bottom on religious intolerance and political pretension. These Mussulmans might go to school if they would, and take their chance, if they would, in competitive examinations. If they are excluded from administrative offices, that is because in the inevitable course of things we superseded them; nor, indeed, was their practice in such places of a character to merit support. If, again, they are shut out from the liberal professions, that is either their own doing or the result of their inferior aptitudes. Nevertheless, it cannot but be felt, after all, that so large and respectable a section of the population which has just given such evidence of its good intentions should, if possible, be raised from a position of cheerless decay.

Literary.—We learn from the Guzerat Mitra that the Director of Public Instruction has entrusted the Rev. Messrs. Montgomery and Dixon, Mr. Ambalal Takerlal Desai, M.A., and Mr. Manidhurparsad Tapipursad, with the task of compiling an English-Guzerati Dictionary. The compilers will receive Rs. 13,000 for their labours, and the right of ownership in the work will be secured to Government. The book is to be finished within two years, and the price of each copy will be Rs. 7.

A Parsee Festival.—A correspondent of the Times of India sends us the following account of the festival now being celebrated by Parsees:—"The Parsees are now celebrating the concluding ten days of their calendar year; these are the days of Ferverdegan—i.e., the Ferohurs, or the spirits of the departed pure, return to this earth to enjoy communion with their friends and relations on these days. The last five days of the year are intercalated after twelve months of thirty days each have terminated, and are called the Gathas. It so happens that the last Gambahar of the year also falls on these Gatha days, hence the great sanctity in which these days are held by the Parsees. Mr. K. R. Cama is making attempts to instil a correct notion of these intercalary days in the minds of his co-religionists, and with that object has already lectured at the Framjee Cowasjee Institute as well as at Manockjee Sett's Waddee. To-day (Sept. 18) he goes to Khetwaddy, and it is his intention to repeat his lectures in other localities where the Parsee population is large."

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Briudisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

THE OPTOSCOPE.
The practical utility of the OPTOSCOPE is now fully determined. In many cases has its merits been displayed in a manner so satisfactory, that in no instance has it afforded less satisfaction to the intelligent inquirer than to the inventor himself. It has long been a matter of considerable importance to those suffering from defective vision to learn the exact state of the refractive humours of the eye, and the proper convexity or concavity of the glass is required to render the vision as perfect as the state of the organs will admit of. Mr. BEAUMONT'S OPTOSCOPE is all that can be desired for this purpose, and those desirous of benefiting by his discovery may be suited with the most perfect-fitting glasses at moderate cost.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.
STOMACHIC AILMENTS.—At this season these Pills will be found most efficacious in strengthening debilitated constitutions and removing all taints from the system before its exposure to the many terrible trials of winter. A fair trial should be given to this admirable medicine by persons of a nervous habit, who usually suffer much from a disordered digestion, and by all afflicted with bilious complaints, squeamish stomach, or torpid kidneys. Holloway's Pills are also wonderfully efficacious in coughs, colds, asthma, shortness of breath, and palpitation of the heart, all of which they immediately relieve, and, when properly taken, generally cure. The remedial power of these Pills is not superficial or temporary, but complete and permanent. They possess the inestimable merit of never doing harm to the feeblest frame.

PROSPECTUS.

The advantages of Co-operation are now so generally understood as to render unnecessary any lengthened statement in introducing the above Society to public notice.

The Co-operative Societies established by members of the Civil Service have met with great success, and their business has assumed vast proportions. These Societies are, however, to a certain extent exclusive; one of them has discontinued receiving new subscribers not belonging to the Civil Service, and in the other the Army and Navy are not admitted on the same terms as Civilians. For these reasons many officers of the Army and Navy have thought it very desirable, with the assistance of persons having a practical knowledge of the various branches of trade, to form a Society on similar principles for the benefit of the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry. As an illustration of the extent to which the benefits derived from Co-operation have been appreciated, it may be mentioned that the Registrar of Friendly Societies in the last return giving full statistics, dated 5th August, 1869, stated that he had received returns from 670 Co-operative Societies in England and Wales, showing that their united capital amounted to £2,027,776, that in the preceding year they sold goods to the value of £8,113,072, and that they realised a net disposable profit of £425,452, or nearly 29 per cent. on the capital invested.

The ARMY AND NAVY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LIMITED, has for its object the supply of articles of domestic consumption and general use to its Members at the lowest remunerative rates.

The Members will consist of two classes, viz.—SHAREHOLDERS and ANNUAL SUBSCRIBERS.

The first class, Shareholders, will be limited to officers, non-commissioned officers, and petty officers serving, or who have served in the Army, Navy, Militia, or Yeomanry, the widows of officers, the Secretaries or other recognised officers of the Military and Naval Clubs, and representatives of Regimental and Naval Messes and Canteens.

The Shares will be of the value of £1 each, and holders of one or more Shares will be entitled to participate in the profits, to deal at the stores, and with the tradesmen connected with the Society, without any further payment whatever, and to have their purchases from the Stores, when of the value of £1 and upwards, delivered free of charge for carriage within the London District, including railway stations in London only.

The second class, Annual Subscribers, who pay 5s. the first year, and 2s. 6d. each subsequent year, will consist of persons eligible to become Shareholders, but who do not wish to take Shares, and a limited number of friends introduced by Shareholders or persons eligible to become Shareholders, subject to the approval of the Committee of Management. They will enjoy all the privileges possessed by Shareholders, except participation in the profits and management of the Society, or the special advantage as to carriage of parcels.

So soon as a requisite number of Shares shall have been taken up, a Store will be Opened in a convenient position at the West-end of London for the Sale of Groceries, Wines, Spirits, Stationery, Perfumery, Drugs, and Fancy Goods, and it is intended that Departments for Hosiery, Drapery, and Tailoring, be added as soon as possible.

Arrangements are in progress with a number of Retail Tradesmen of the highest class for the Sale of the Goods to Members at Reduced Prices.

When the Society meets with sufficient support, it is proposed that Branch Stores be Opened at the Principal Military and Naval Stations Special attention will also be given to the supply of Goods to Officers on Foreign Stations.

Presidents of Officers' and Sergeants' Messes and Canteens, and the several Messes on board H.M.'s Ships of War will find great advantage in obtaining their supplies through the medium of the Society, as they will not only secure Low Prices, but will be enabled to depend upon the purity of every article.

Persons desirous of taking Shares are requested to make application to the Secretary, or to the Bankers of the Association, in one of the annexed Forms.

Persons desirous of becoming Annual Subscribers are requested to apply to the Secretary. Their Subscriptions will date from the Opening of the Store.

The Articles of Association may be seen, and any further information afforded, on application to the Secretary, at the Office of the Society.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Sept. 30; Agra and Madras, Sept. 28; Calcutta, Sept. 27.

THE Indian papers contain full particulars of the murderous attack on Mr. Justice Norman, and of the events therewith connected down to date. After receiving the fatal wound, Mr. Norman ran backwards and kept off his assailant with stones and bricks which he picked up on the way, until help came to him from a native, who knocked the murderer down with a bamboo, while another native pluckily caught hold of the man's dagger, and wrested it from him in spite of having his own hands cut in the process. The murderer, a Punjâbi named Abdullah, still struggled violently for some time before he was quite overpowered and carried off to prison. His violence was no doubt due in part to the bhang with which he had drugged himself before the murder. Poor Mr. Norman was removed in great pain to Messrs. Thacker's shop, which was near at hand, and there tended by his wife and two or three doctors until death about midnight closed his sufferings. The shock everywhere caused by such a tragedy befalling one so widely respected was very great. People of all classes joined in showing their regret for his violent and untimely end. On Thursday, September 21, the day of his funeral, a stop was put to all business, both public and private, and an immense crowd of all classes and creeds followed his body to the grave, into which the coffin was lowered by twelve English sailors, after the Archdeacon of Calcutta had duly read over it the burial service of his Church.

ON the motive for the crime no real light has yet been thrown. The murderer was seen to drop a petition as he struck the fatal blow, but no one had actually seen him present it first to his victim. It has been stated on the other hand that another native of the murderer's class disappeared from the portico as soon as Abdullah had rushed upon Mr. Norman; but the story remains a story, and nothing more. Referring to the murderer's alleged connection with Wahabi plotters, Mr. Justice Phear made the following sensible remarks:—

"It would be unbecoming in me now to speculate on what may be the result of the police investigations; but I may venture to say that I shall not readily bring myself to believe that the wretched criminal is a mere tool in the hands of other designing men; because every intelligent person must have been able to foresee that, as a means towards effecting any political purpose, the act would be as vain of result as it was dastardly and cruel. Our lamented Chief-Justice has nobly fallen in the path of duty, and who in this country can doubt that his example and fate will only nerve those who follow him to keep that path with, if possible, the greater constancy and firmness?"

He had just before described his colleague's death as a public calamity, "because a more upright, honest Judge than Mr. Justice Norman never sat in any Court—a more generous noble-minded gentleman never lived to elevate, to exalt, by the active exercise of his wide sympathy and lofty principles, the society in which he moved." Whatever the motive for the cruel deed, he felt sure that it "would be execrated universally, by men of all classes, colours, and creeds," wherever the name of Norman was known—in other words, "throughout the length and breadth of Bengal."

MR. HOGG, the Police Commissioner, made a descent upon the masjid in the Chitpore-road, where the prisoner had been living for some time past. His search resulted in the seizure of a good many papers which may or may not throw some light on the murderer's motives and antecedents. That something of a clue may have since been found is inferrible from the Times' Calcutta telegram of October 20, which merely announces the postponement of the prisoner's execution.

AN unseemingly quarrel took place in Court on September 23 between Mr. Roberts, the magistrate before whom Abdullah was brought, and Mr. Hogg, Commissioner of Police, who in the name of the Government demanded that the prisoner's trial should be transferred to the Criminal Sessions. Nothing, as the Englishman remarks, could be "more calculated to damage native respect for English institutions than the scene that occurred in the Police Court" on this occasion. Mr. Hogg having made his demand, Mr. Roberts declined to have "any but the most absolutely official communication" with a person who had first gone to his house with a threat, and then written him a threatening letter. Mr. Hogg, on renewing his demand, was reminded that only the Government Solicitor had any right to appear before Mr. Roberts in the present matter on the part of the Crown. The Police Commissioner, smarting under the publicity he seems to have provoked, then began denouncing the Magistrate's procedure as "absolutely informal, absolutely illegal, and calculated to override the executive authority." That, retorted Mr. Roberts, was the very same remark which Mr. Hogg had made before the Coroner, when the police failed disgracefully in inquiring into the murder of the woman Brown. After a few more such exchanges Mr. Hogg withdrew with a parting menace, and Mr. Roberts was left to deal with the prisoner undisturbed. Where the blame chiefly lies, we cannot certainly say, but Mr. Hogg appears at any rate to have provoked his rebuff by his rather aggressive way of asserting a perhaps unwarrantable claim.

THAT a great deal of strong and deep resentment has been aroused in India by the attempt of the Government to get rid of a number of unemployed or obnoxious officers, the Indian papers make clearer every week. Rightly or wrongly the Indian officers declare that such a measure is at once unjust in itself and a gross violation of their guaranteed rights. Rightly or wrongly, they recal the usage of the East India Company, and contest the right of their present masters under the terms of the Transfer Act to dispense with their services for no cause formally stated or proven. Whether the Indian Government has kept within the law on this matter, we cannot say; but law and expediency are different things, and most officers will confirm our assertion that in India before the Mutiny there was an universal belief in the immunity of all officers from virtual dismissal save after trial by court-martial. It is certain at any rate that Indian officers are combining to take such steps as may still be open to them against the new attack on their prescriptive or imagined rights. They are subscribing eagerly towards a Defence Fund, of which Messrs. Grindlay and Co. are announced as treasurers in each of the Presidency capitals. If the burning words which have been vented through the papers mean anything, the threatened officers will not be driven out of their present career without a struggle which sound policy might still betimes avert.

According to the Pioneer it has been decided that no commander-in-chief shall be appointed to the Loshai field-force. The two columns forming it are to act on separate lines of march, albeit in general concert, and Brigadier-General Bourchier, as senior officer, will virtually command the whole expedition.

There has been a military revolt in the little Portuguese State of Goa. On the night of the 21st September the soldiers of the 3rd Battalion led the way, and their example was followed by the other regiments outside the town. Only about 300 troops in the Fort remained loyal. Why the troops rose, nobody seems to know,—probably for more pay or something of the kind. No bloodshed has been reported. The proclamation of the Portuguese Viceroy, issued on the 25th, expresses wonder at the mutiny, utter ignorance of its apparent purpose, and a firm resolve to await the issue with the "half-dozen heroes of the two small corps of the capital." It reminds one of Bombastes Furioso with his "Begone, brave army, and don't kick up a row;" only the Portuguese Viceroy requests his army to come back. The little row, as our readers may remember, ended quietly on the 4th of October.

While people are discussing the probable extent and dangers of Mohammedan disaffection in India, it might perhaps be not less advisable to consider the signs of mischief brewing among the turbulent people who once formed the ruling class in the Punjab. We have so long been accustomed to look upon the Sikhs as our very good friends, that we have well nigh forgotten what thorns in his side they were even to Ranjit Singh, and how greatly their turbulence under his successors helped to provoke the conquest of the Punjab. It seems pretty certain that the recent murders of Mohammedan butchers in various parts of that province were instigated and carried out by a new sect of Sikh fanatics, the Kookas, to whom hanging is a mere trifle compared with the glory and bliss of dying for their new version of an old Hindu creed. One of the murderers, who had turned Queen's evidence, confessed that an order to take part in the murder for which he was tried had been delivered direct from Ram Singh, the Kooka Guru or High Priest. Two other witnesses deposed to having received from Ram Singh himself direct orders to his friends at Amritsur to lose no time in executing their murderous designs. Soon after the Amritsur outrages there was discovered, in a room overlooking the sacred Tank, a proclamation which warned all officers against allowing the continuance of kine-slaying at Amritsur, and threatened the approach of a bad time for all concerned if that offensive practice were not speedily put down. Good Sikhs, it added, would readily lay down their lives in such a cause, but the British officers were assured that no harm would happen to them if they would only pay due heed to the warning thus given. Similar notices have been conveyed through anonymous letters, and it has even been widely asserted that Ram Singh's followers number three hundred thousand men, ready to avenge the deaths of their comrades or die themselves. With much allowance for vapouring on one side and exaggerations on the other, we cannot help seeing some cause for watchfulness, if nothing more, in the present temper of the Sikh mind. A Lahore paper indeed hints at some connection between the Sikh and the Mohammedan outbreaks; but why then should the Kookas have hitherto vented their fury, with one exception, upon Mohammadans alone?

Humanity to convicts may sometimes be carried too far, but it is certain that Henry Best was not killed by over-humanity in Bellary Jail. That person, an East Indian, as the papers call him, was sentenced last January to two months' rigorous confinement in the jail aforesaid. From the first he seems to have pleaded illness, but the jail-surgeon came to the conclusion that he was shamming, in order to shirk the hard labour which formed part of his sentence. On the 23rd January he was flogged for spoiling his clothes, and was afterwards sent with a working-party outside the jail. About five days after the flogging he was dead. His body was examined, but no inquest held upon it; an omission justified by the Inspector-General of Jails on the plea of general usage. Captain Highmoor however, the Superintendent of Police, saw reason to report the matter to Mr. Irvine, the Civil and Sessions Judge, who, as jail visitor, at once held an inquiry on his own account, unaided by the medical officers of the jail. The results were forwarded to the Government of Madras. Lord Napier's comments virtually justified the course taken by Mr. Irvine in apparent breach of official etiquette. He declared that the Jail Superintendent had acted erroneously in sending Best out to work, and in not holding an inquest upon his body afterwards. Captain Highmoor is officially blamed for his high-minded interference, but censure of that sort will not weigh heavily with an officer who has done a public service. Mr. Irvine also gets a mild rebuke for holding the inquest without giving notice to the medical officers concerned. No question of form however can do away with the evident meaning of the facts discovered by him. These we have already stated, and they speak for themselves. If medical experience cannot always detect the difference between feigned and real illness, let us hope at any rate that Best's fate will teach jail officers a little more caution in punishing convicts without cause. There seems of late to have been too ready a resort to flogging in Indian jails, and the "error of judgment" in this sad case may perhaps serve to lessen the sufferings of future convicts who should add to their other crimes the offence of falling ill. Convicts, no doubt, are a troublesome race to manage, but is it absolutely necessary to kill them in the course of two months' imprisonment with hard labour?

In his answer to Messrs. Low and Thomas's letter concerning a new railway line direct to India, Mr. Gladstone, like a cautious statesman, insists upon the "consent and concurrence" of capitalists and engineers in any such scheme for quickening the overland journey eastward, "before diplomatic or other public action can be entertained." In view of the rival lines already proposed, and the various guages advocated by different sets of engineers and capitalists, we can hardly quarrel with so safe a proviso. It would be unreasonable to expect the English Government to pledge the public credit of this country to any particular line, before the Select Committee have finished their own inquiries into the whole question. Messrs. Low and Thomas will doubtless bring their scheme before a body which has already taken evidence regarding half-a-dozen others of the same kind. So far as appears at present, none of the rival projects has so many witnesses in its favour as Mr. Andrew's line by the Euphrates Valley, and this virtually forms a part of Messrs. Low and Thomas's more ambitious scheme. The former, we think, offers the most attractions to English politicians and investors; but Messrs. Low and Thomas show much earnestness in their appeals to public support. In reply to Mr. Gladstone they announce that they are already "making arrangements for preparing" a sample section between Trieste and Aleppo, the most difficult portion of the entire route. Besides the support already promised them, they count upon receiving as much more as they can desire from the "friends to civilisation and progress." The guage they prefer is the same as that of all the chief Continental and nearly all the English lines. On this point they are at one with most of the witnesses examined by the Select Committee. Even Sir J. Macneill, who leans to the narrow Indian guage of 3 ft. 3 in., admits that the ordinary guage of 4 ft. 8½ in. "can be run safely at fifty-six miles an hour," or twenty miles quicker than the "metre guage." Mr. W. Maxwell for his part recommends the broad Indian guage of 5 ft. 6 in. with an average of 40 miles an hour.

The stoutest advocate of the metre guage appears to be Mr. Fairlie, inventor of the "double-bogie" engine. In a letter to Sir S. Northcote he offers to build the Euphrates Valley line of 850 miles for five millions sterling, on this guage, guaranteeing a mean speed of thirty miles an hour, and working eight trains daily each way, four of which shall carry 1,000 tons of merchandise, and the rest 4,000 troops with all their equipment. So thoroughly does he believe in his own nostrum, that in a letter to the Times he predicts the final adoption of the metre guage all over Europe. If speed however be of prime importance for a direct line to India, it seems hard to believe that the new narrow guage will satisfy all reasonable demands in that direction. Nothing less than a mean speed of thirty-five or forty miles an hour would tend materially to shorten the travelling distance between England and India. A mere money saving of £2,000 a-mile on the metre guage would count for little, if it were purchased by a sensible loss of speed.

In the course of some well-reasoned remarks on the hard case of Colonel Mowbray Thomson, the Broad Arrow seems to have overlooked the fact of a reprieve having been granted to that officer pending the consideration of his memorial to the Secretary of State. According to recent news from India he has not yet been placed on the retired list, and we hope that he may still be allowed to serve his country for many years to come, if so it pleases him. Our contemporary has thrown some useful light on the nature of Colonel Thomson's defence. It appears that an officer under his command had crowned a course of violence and insubordination by openly threatening to shoot the first man who dared to arrest him. Colonel Thomson tried to bring him into a more obedient frame of mind without forcing him to stand a court-martial. He had reason to fear that Captain Jones might leave the station at any moment by the next steamer. Accordingly he issued an order directing Capt. Jones to "hold himself in readiness for special duty to-morrow" (the 7th July), and not to leave cantonments without proper authority. An officer from the 42nd Light Infantry was also to be detailed for similar duty, and the same regiment was to furnish a guard of a certain strength, half of it furnished with muskets and balled ammunition. These orders, says Colonel Thomson, were meant to convey to the troops an impression that a guard might be needed to aid the civil power in protecting certain villages from a threatened raid of hill-men. He never dreamed of using force against Captain Jones; but if that officer chose to take a quiet hint, written as it were between the lines of the actual order, so much the better for all concerned. Captain Jones did take the hint, and the orders were annulled. If this statement be substantially true, and we are aware of no good reason for doubting it, we trust that the ruling powers will reconsider their former sentence. It would be intolerable to think that so deserving an officer as Colonel Thomson was to receive so cruel a punishment for an act inspired by the most humane and delicate motives towards a refractory brother-officer.

The next mail will be due here on Saturday.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

OUR INDIAN MOHAMMEDANS.

The murder of an eminent English Judge in Calcutta by a Pathan Mohammedan has given birth in this country to much speculation, wild or sober, touching the present state of feeling among the Mohammedans at large in India towards the British rule. Mr. W. Hunter's well-written essay on a somewhat sensational text had already sounded the note of alarm in this direction when the news of Mr. Norman's murder reached England; and a writer in the Cornhill for October has thrown Mr. Hunter's essay into a yet more popular, if rather less disquieting shape. In the daily press of this country several writers have lately carried on an eager controversy as to the amount and meaning of Mohammedan disaffection in India. It is much like the question which troubled the minds of our forefathers in the days of Queen Elizabeth and James I. "Were the English Catholics bound in conscience to plot against their Protestant sovereign?" The practical answer to this question was given, as we know, in different ways both by Catholics and Protestants. There were some good Catholics who deemed it a sacred duty to own no allegiance to a heretic prince and a hostile parliament, and many good Protestants spoke and acted as if all their religious opponents were necessarily tarred with the same brush. Some Catholics again contended that the great bulk of their fellow-worshippers were thoroughly loyal at heart to the British Throne, and the wiser Protestants refused to let the popular distrust of Rome blind them to the loyal attitude of many classes among their Catholic countrymen, and to the many good reasons there were for mistrusting only the reckless or the bigoted few.

In arguing the same question, as applied to "Our Indian Mussulmans," we find the same tendency to extreme statements on both sides, relieved by a like moderation here and here. On the one hand we are bidden to look on all Indian Moslems as our hereditary and implacable foes, who keep up a chronic plot against our rule, and support with money or good wishes every preacher of a jihâd or "crescentade" against the hated Feringhi. The bulk of the Mohammedans are confounded with the Wahâbis, the Puritans of Islam, and these in their turn are all judged by the treasonable doings of a few among their number. The Mohammedans themselves and their partisans on the contrary entreat us to believe in the unshaken loyalty of all but the lowest and least reputable of their countrymen, "the veriest dregs of society, with no position whatever except among their own set." In the face of Ameer Khan's formal conviction, of the steady stream of men and money from Patna to the North-West frontier, and of the troublesome little wars provoked by Wahabi emigrants from India, we are invited to believe in the almost universal goodwill of some thirty millions of people, whose forefathers for six centuries were absolute masters of Hindustan, and whose religion tends to the kind of tolerance practised by Rome against the Albigenses, or by the early Puritans against all who differed from their own rendering of Christianity. Between these extremes stand the more moderate observers who, neither ignoring facts nor making too much of possibilities, give the average Mussulman credit for worldly wisdom, and would seek to remove the causes he might have for reasonable discontent.

Among these more temperate critics Colonel Nassau Lees, late Principal of the Calcutta Mohammedan College, may fairly be placed. His recent letters to the Times attest his real friendliness towards that large section of the Indian community among which for so many years his professional work was carried on. He owns that the "discontent, dissatisfaction, hostility, or whatever you please," shown by a certain proportion of the Mohammedans to our rule, is a constant source of anxiety, and to that feeling he ascribes a large share both in the Mutiny of 1857-8, and in the chronic warfare on our North-Western frontier. But he readily acquits the bulk of Indian Mussulmans of any real desire to upset the British rule, and dwells with much force on the tendency even of Mohammedan jurists to interpret the Koran by the light of accomplished facts and present expediencies. This is clearly the common-sense view of the whole question, so far as doctrine is concerned. "A Mussulman of Agra," in a letter to the Times, reminds us that many even of the reviled Wahabis took no part against us in 1857, because their spiritual guides had assured them that rebellion was no part of their duty. A like assurance, based in each case on very different grounds, has lately been issued by the law-doctors of Mecca and of Northern India. The Mecca oracle implies the absence of any grounds for a jihad, because India is still Dar-ul-Islam, or a Land of the Faithful. The Indian doctors, on the other hand, proclaim the unlawfulness of a jihad in a country where protection is afforded to Mohammedans, even though it be a Dar-ul-Harb, or Land of the Enemy. Both opinions are fortified by a common reference to the folly of waging war without a fair likelihood of success. We may therefore take it for granted that the Mohammedans of India on the whole can satisfy their consciences on this point by obeying the dictates of worldly wisdom, and have no idea of sacrificing their present advantages to the letter of an old text suited to the conditions of a bygone age.

That the Mohammedans however appear to have some tangible grievances against us, Colonel Lees does not for a moment deny. They complain, he says, of the wrong done by the Inam Commission in depriving some of them of lands assigned them by former sovereigns. They resent the attack upon Mohammedan law involved in the Act securing to Christian converts from Islam their forfeit rights of inheritance. They murmur at the refusal of the Government any longer to appoint their Kazis, a body of law-officers who performed many useful offices of registry and law-expounding without pay. They complain that charitable funds and religious bequests have been misapplied by the Government, that the Hindus have elbowed them out of nearly all public appointments, and that learning has disappeared from among them because no place under Government is open to Mohammedans learned in their own sciences, laws, literature, and languages. That all these grievances are equally well founded or remediable, Colonel Lees does not venture to affirm. It seems strange at first sight that the Mussulmans of Bengal should grumble at being left free to choose their own Kazis; but the truth is that the part formerly played by Government in this matter enabled their Mohammedan subjects to speak and think of India as still a Dar-ul-Islam. The mere pretence of union between Church and State had once saved their credit in the eyes of distant fellow-worshippers. Nor is there any doubt that certain Mohammedan charities have been diverted to other than Mohammedan uses. In censuring the misappropriation of the trust funds bequeathed by Mohammed Mohsin to the Hooghly Madrassah, Colonel Lees evidently shares the soreness of those Moslems who speak of that measure as a State robbery. It is probable also that some injustice was done to Mussulman freeholders by the extent to which their lands were resumed under the Inam Commission.

With regard to the teaching given in the Government schools and the decreasing number of Mohammedan placeholders, it is easier to understand than to sympathise with the soreness felt by the same classes. It is very unpleasant for the children of India's late masters to find themselves beaten in the fight for official advancement by the once down-trodden Hindus; but that is rather their business than ours. As the Cornhill writer very properly observes, "in a fair competition more public servants will be chosen out of 150 millions of men than out of thirty millions." It is not many years since the pick of the subordinate offices in the North-West was mainly at the command of Mohammedan candidates. If their Hindu rivals have since shot ahead of them, the result is owing partly to their own backwardness in meeting the new conditions of service, partly to the wider field for selection from the members of a more numerous, and perhaps a more intelligent race. The Mohammedan objections to the course of studies prescribed for Government schools and colleges point to a grievance as real perhaps, but as hard to remedy, as that involved in the demand of English and Irish Catholics for an exclusive system of sectarian teaching in State-supported schools. The complainants in fact call upon the Government to exchange a system suited to the general interests of the Empire at large for one framed in special accordance with their own religious and social prepossessions. Whatever can fairly be done to lessen this particular grievance without favouring the few at the expense of the many, the Indian Government will do well to encourage; and indeed the Viceroy has already gone as far as prudence could permit him, by suggesting that more attention should be paid in Madras to the teaching of Arabic and Persian in schools frequented by Mohammedans. It must still be a question how far such a suggestion can be carried out so as to do no violence to the grand principle of secular instruction through State-paid officers for the benefit of the people at large. This however is only one of the many problems with which India's present rulers have to grapple in dealing with a country filled with so many diverse races, each marked off from the rest by a number of social usages and religious rules.

For the Mussulmans of Bengal however, according to Colonel Lees and the writer in the Cornhill, all other grievances are slight and partial beside the general discontent caused by the consequences of the Permanent Settlement, which "made landlords out of Hindu collectors of revenue," and has since necessitated the income-tax and other unwise or unpopular measures of direct taxation. Here again we are met by the difficulty of repairing former oversights or mistakes without inflicting greater injustice than that of which so many people complain. Even if it be true that the Permanent Settlement has involved appreciable harm to certain classes of our subjects, we should have thought that the Rent Act of 1859 had gone far to remove the most prominent sources of discontent. As for the new taxes imposed to make up for the defects of the Bengal land settlement, that is surely a grievance affecting others than the Mohammedans alone.

AUSTRALIAN MUTTON.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—Can you inform the readers of your Paper whether the Indian Government has resolved on serving out Australian mutton to the European soldiers?

Your military friends can tell us whether the Commissariat is now able to issue mutton rations oftener than once a week.

A few years ago a Commissariat officer informed me that considerable anxiety was felt regarding the means of obtaining a sufficient supply. I believe that English rams are found to be too large for the native ewes. During the Mutiny the number of sheep throughout India decreased to a very alarming extent.

With reference to the quality of the flesh, the gram-fed is excellent mutton—the grass-fed is inferior. The grass-fed sheep are not like those similarly fed in England. We have no fat pastures in India like those we see around us in this country; nor have we pasture lands equal to the Welsh hills. The proprietors of sheep are usually poor men, afraid that their property may be seized by the police or by army contractors. They refuse to incur expense in breeding; they expect their sheep to find a miserable subsistence on scorching plains, and neglect to give them even salt. The sheep eat ordure to supply the want.

Soon after I commenced office work in India, in 1843, I learnt what grass-fed mutton meant. Seized with a desire of entertaining some of the heroes who had served under General Nott in Afghanistan, I invited them to dinner, and gave what I considered to be ample orders to my khansaman, or butler. One of the dishes contained a joint of mutton, and one of my guests inquired whence I had obtained it, as I had not at that time become a member of a mutton club. The butler explained that he had bought it in the bazaar, and I then learnt that bazaar mutton in the Upper Provinces was to be avoided. Since the Mutiny a few enterprising men at large stations have educated sheep with gram, chopped straw, and salt, and obtain for them (they are of small size) from 14s. to 24s. each; the prices of the grass-fed sheep may be said to average 3s. each, though I have heard of sales at one-half of that price. The objections which English rustics sometimes raise to tinned Australian mutton would find no echo in the breast of the European soldier in India, who longs for a little good meat. In England the poor like to see the meat before they buy it; they believe that they can judge of the quality better when they see it in a raw state than when it is cooked; they fear that possibly some of the tins may contain diseased meat.

But the soldier in India is glad to be spared the trouble of cooking; and, as he knows that his officers eat quantities of tinned salmon and game, he expects to find good food under a tin cover. He would prefer it both to the mutton and to the beef now supplied to him. The Commissariat Department succeeds in supplying excellent bread, tea, and rum, but the rations of flesh are of inferior quality.

I need hardly point out that in time of war tinned meat has an immense advantage over herds and flocks, which must be fed, and are often quickly destroyed by contagious diseases. Dry firewood for cooking is often difficult to obtain or convey in large quantities whilst our men are surrounded by hostile multitudes.—Your obedient servant, T.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE LATE MURDER AT LAHORE.

The Hindoo Patriot believes that few nations are more easily given to panic than the English, and we are not therefore surprised to observe that these outrages have already been associated, as we are told, "in men's minds with the rumours of a secret Sikh and Mussulman combination, of intended bread poisoning and plunder and burning, of plotting in Lahore and Amritsur and Jullundur and Peshawur, of secret meetings in small villages, of Kooka schemes, and the thousand-and-one-stories that have been floating about of late." The local print is so much excited that it has not hesitated to deliver itself of the following:—"It is dangerous to have Fakirs going about with political notions in their heads and heavy latties in their hands. We cannot take away the notions, but we can take away the latties, and imprison these dirty loafing scoundrels as vagrants or lunatics. We give our white loafers no mercy, but defer to these hideous fanatics on religious grounds, while any day the outrages above recorded may be the fate of any one of us." This is the old Pandy fever back. The Sepoy Mutiny had caused in those days so much alarm among Englishmen in India that even in dreams they saw Pandies come and cut their throats. Even sedate professors and strong-nerved doctors were heard to say that they saw "Pandy-looking" men pass in the streets, and that no European's life was worth purchase for sixpence. It seems a similar panic has seized Englishmen in the Punjab. But they need not fear. They have already a very sharp law on their side—we mean Mr. Maine's Murderous Outrages Act. We observe that under the swift course of that Act the murderer of Jaishee Ram has been tried, convicted, and sentenced to death within a week! and we beseech them not to call for sharper vengeance, and thus goad people to unpleasant imaginings, which have now no place in their minds.

THE BRAHMO MARRIAGE BILL.

The Hindoo Reformer remarks that the Marriage Bill has hitherto been opposed not only by the orthodox and bigoted Hindoos, but also by the Adi Brahmos, who vaguely asserted that the existing law was quite sufficient for all the legitimate purposes of Brahmoism, and that their so-called progressive brethren were causelessly if not factiously forcing on a law which was repulsive to the people. This brought the question to issue as to what the two parties of the Brahmos really want, and the answer to this question renders it clear that the terms Adi, or conservative and progressive, as applied to the Bengal Brahmos, indicate well-marked sections of the body. The progressive Brahmos, on the other hand, wish to carry into practice the social results of their religious principles, the chief of which is the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Intermarriages therefore are with them an essential change, and, we believe, several have taken place. It is to legalise them that they want a law as much as to excuse the omission of idolatrous forms in their celebration. This distinction is the bone of contention which can only be settled by an authoritative declaration regarding the validity or otherwise of Hindoo intermarriages.

CONVERSION OF THE FIVE PER CENT. LOAN.

The Bombay Gazette believes that the notification issued from Simlah will be generally accepted as satisfactory. The Government of India fairly deserves in this instance the credit of having conciliated the interests of its creditors with those of the public for which it is trustee. But it seems to us a pity that the term of five years was not adopted instead of seven; but it would be mere presumption to insist on trifling difference of opinion when the main principles on which the transfer is based are sound. By the latest return available for reference we find that the amount of the loan at the beginning of 1871 was Rs. 16,21,07,000, on which the interest at five per cent. is Rs. 81,05,350 a-year. The new Transfer Loan of Rs. 13,50,00,000 will cost India in interest for seven years Rs. 60,75,000, and thereafter Rs. 54,00,000 a year, so that the immediate annual saving by the whole operation will be Rs. 20,30,350, and the eventual saving Rs. 27,05,350. If it be urged that the investment of Rs. 2,70,00,000 on account of the Currency Reserve is a measure that ought to have been adopted independently, and that it should not be reckoned as an essential part of the present financial operation, still, apart from this, there is a good profit from the transfer, namely, about Rs. 9,50,000 immediate annual saving, and Rs. 16,20,000 at the end of the seven years. Besides which, it may be hoped that the combination of the two operations will be economical and effective in more ways than one. The cash balances have lately been maintained at a very high figure so as to strengthen the hands of the Government in dealing with its creditors; but, once this transfer is effected, the amount of the balances will be speedily reduced, as the possession of so many millions of ready cash, coupled with the new investment from the Currency Reserve, will spare the Government the necessity of borrowing any more money for some time to come. Another way in which the currency reserve part of the operation will come into play with great advantage to the Government is in bringing a pressure to bear on the holders of fives to send their scrip in at once for transfer. As nearly one-sixth of the whole amount of the Loan will be paid off, and applications for renewal will only be entertained for the remaining five-sixths, "in the order in which the notes tendered for transfer are received, whether in India or in England," we may anticipate that there will be no unnecessary delay on the part of holders in sending in their applications. It was a happy idea on the part of the Finance Minister to employ such means of effecting the speedy conversion of the Stock—for in all financial operations, especially in India, where we know not what a day may bring forth, time is of the greatest importance—and we hope to hear on November 15th that the transfer of the whole 135 crores has been successfully completed.

The Times of India criticises the policy followed in this instance by the Finance Minister. In the first place, there is nothing in the present arrangement which might not better have been announced fully three months since. That is, provided the Simlah Cabinet had then made up its mind on the subject; and so far as we can judge of its "mind" and the circumstances to be dealt with, there is no reason why the decision should not have been adopted as soon as the Budget was disposed of in May. Next, as to the rate of interest now offered, Sir Richard Temple may have had some sentimental tenderness for the public creditor, which he will seek to justify next Budget day; but for our part, we can see no justification whatever in the present state of the money market and commerce for offering 4½ per cent. We regard the offer of that rate as an improvident disposal of public resources, and as clearly such—though on a very much larger scale—than the renewal of the 26½ lakhs of debentures which fell due in July. Of course the public loss is not to the full extent of the seven times half per cent. thus needlessly given; for we presume the Finance Minister will take such advantage in premium as may arise from competition amongst the holders of the present five per cent.

paper; but this is not likely to be nearly so much as the difference between the present price of the Four-and-a-Half Loan of 1870, which is 107, and the Fours, which are about 99. It is obvious that the concession of one-eighth more in interest will not nearly enhance the rate of capital subscribed to the same extent. The large increase in the investments of the paper currency reserve is in accordance with the new regulations to that effect made last year; but information is much needed as to the results on the internal economy of the paper currency system of the ill-advised measure by which currency notes have been made subservient to banking purposes without any corresponding advantage to the State; but that is a separate question; as also when the long-promised five-rupee notes are to be ready? What we have to consider is—that of 6½ millions sterling of coin and bullion retained by the department nearly two-fifths will now be liberated for use in trade. The present reserve of Government securities is about 3¾ millions; the transfer now announced will make it up to nearly six millions by January next.

THE EAST AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE.

The Bombay Gazette holds that the simple plan which Sir Leopold Heath had the frankness to recommend as the best which he could think of for securing the abolition of the East African Slave Trade—that England should take possession of the island of Zanzibar—is far too ambitious for the tastes of English statesmen of the present day, whom nothing alarms so much as the possibility of extending the boundaries of the English Empire. The Select Committee of the House of Commons, however, being thoroughly sincere in its desire to put an end to the slave trade, has been convinced of the folly of attempting to stop the traffic while the Sultan of Zanzibar is allowed to maintain slavery as a domestic institution within the limits of his dominions. The report of the committee, therefore, goes a good deal beyond that of the Abyssinian Commission in its recommendations as to the measures that should be taken to attain the desired end. The Government is advised at once to give notice to the Sultan, that, "as the existing treaty provisions have been systematically evaded," England will make a new treaty with Zanzibar providing for the entire abolition of the slave trade, and will agree to settle a proportion of adult negroes in the island, whose labour shall be at the Sultan's disposal, provided his Majesty agrees to "such measures for their protection and safety as might be deemed necessary." There is no doubt that the only effectual way of getting rid of the traffic will be for the English squadron to take the whole control of it into its own hands instead of having its operations limited to certain parts of the coast; and we are convinced, also, that ultimately the trade of Zanzibar would become more prosperous with the help of free, than of slave, labour; but, if the Sultan demands compensation, it is better to pay him a few thousand pounds a year than by an unwise parsimony to run the risk of letting slavery continue to flourish for years in its last home.

THE RELIGIOUS QUESTION.—The Benares Akhbar says that great disaffection has been caused by the magistrate prohibiting the Hindoos from crying out "Ram nam, satya hay" at the time of carrying their dead through the city. The ceremony, it is added, is a religious one, and has been practised from time immemorial, and the order for its discontinuance is therefore regarded as an encroachment on an old observance and a time-honoured custom.

THE CAPTURED REBEL LIAKUT ALI.—The Moulvie arrived at Allahabad in charge of Superintendent Bailey (of the city police, Bombay), Inspector Dajee, (a native constable from Bombay), and Inspector Grange, of Allahabad. At the railway station he was taken in charge by Inspector Bassett, and according to instructions escorted to a hackney carriage in waiting for him by two mounted constables and three constables with loaded carbines. From the station he was conveyed to the Hawalat. Liakut Ali, since his arrival, has been lodged in the Hawalat of the Allahabad cutcherry, where he is at present strictly guarded. At first a selected guard of Sikhs was placed over him, but he is now in the custody of Europeans—a sergeant's guard of the 104th Regiment holding the Hawalat, while ingress or egress to the premises is provided against by a cordon of native (Hindu) sentries. He is confined in a solitary cell, never being permitted to see or speak to any Mahommedan, his nights as well as his days being professedly passed in prayer. On Monday he sat with evident pleasure for his photograph, when some capital likenesses of him were taken by Mr. Newman. In appearance the Moulvie is a handsome fellow, apparently about fifty years of age, with regular features, a tall and commanding aspect, and short cut grey beard, whiskers, and moustache. Shortly after his arrival his property was inventoried. A bag was found containing over Rs. 100; and there was also a peculiar-looking bamboo stick, with a brass ferule at one end, and at the other a glass or crystal knob. This was at first suspected to be a weapon, but in course of examination the crystal head came unscrewed, and it was found that running the entire length of the stick were small ingots of gold aggregating in value some Rs.2,000. The prisoner, we are told, does not now attempt to deny his identity, though he gave a false name when first examined. An advertisement in the Pioneer asks for information as to the whereabouts of the family of Conductor Coleman, who was murdered in 1857, and whose family, if surviving, may be able to give valuable evidence in the present case.—Pioneer.

THE KUKA PANIC.

A few issues back we remarked that unless the old women and young Babus of Lahore had stronger nerves than those of Allahabad it was probable that our Lahore contemporary would succeed in exciting considerable alarm. But we confess that we had no idea that he would have been able to throw so many of his readers into the abject state of terror to which they seem to have been reduced. Not content with their own panics, they appear to have formed themselves into clubs for disseminating false rumours in small stations. We have before us a series of the letters sent by some of the members of these clubs, which we are almost ashamed to publish for fear that some native historian may hereafter refer to them as a specimen of the courage of Europeans. One of them, however, is too good to be lost, and we may justify the publication on the ground that the author is not quite a European, and that it is expedient that such people should be held up to the utter scorn they deserve. The despatch runs thus:—"The latest news is that Major ——, Deputy Commissioner of ——, has been most brutally massacred, cause not known; but the report is true. . . . A few Kukas attacked the house of one Mr. —— last night, were repulsed, and now a guard has been allowed him. This morning (the 7th) a Kuka was taken up to the Magistrate for running about the city and crying out—'We will now take possession of India.' Colonel ——, of the Police, is making every preparation. Railway officials to volunteer, and their attendance to be regular and imperative. Lahore volunteers increasing daily; to-day a police constable was seen handcuffed going up for trial—his offence not known. Major — 's case seems to have excited the whole station. Every native, almost of both castes, that can read English are now seen everywhere with newspapers, and I often see my native assistants in office reading newspapers very intently. I might as well mention here that a letter received from Hindostan declares that the people seem to know something of the Kuka plot, but have not yet decided what side to take—of course we know, and that will be for the Kukas. Now, on the other hand, the Russians are thinking of marching into India; and for all we know, it may be the Russians that are encouraging the Kukas to quarrel with us, and while we are engaged, they may quietly take possession of our rights."

The next day the latest news is:—"Two missionaries cut down at Ludiana. Ram Singh, Chief of the Kukas, in custody."

To comment on this tissue of absurdities would be a waste of time; we merely print it as a most ludicrous instance of an insignificant coward pretending that he is not afraid, but that, whilst reviewing in a calm and statesmanlike manner a desperate situation, he is prepared for the worst, even though the worst be a wound in the rear, caused by the accidental discharge of a comrade's ramrod. But ludicrous and contemptible as this stuff is, it caused considerable consternation amongst the small community to which it was addressed, especially as the Deputy Commissioner was not on the spot to deal with the authors of these rumours as they deserved. Fortunately the valour of the police officer greatly allayed the excitement. The precautions taken by him were admirable. He placed a guard round his own house; he sent spies in every direction, and provided them with conspicuous disguises, that all men might at once recognise them, and take comfort accordingly. In addition to this he succeeded in finding an artisan, warranted not dangerous, who was said to be a Kuka. On the arrival of every new report, this desperate conspirator was led up and minutely examined as to its truth, in order to prove that the police were on the alert.

All this is intensely comic, but at the same time it is not quite harmless. Some of these idiots possess fire-arms, and it is quite possible that they may muster up courage to discharge them at inoffensive people. We need not expatiate on the mischief that would arise from their doing so; it is, therefore, with great satisfaction that we learn that the authorities have reminded these people of the existence of Section 505, Indian Penal Code. We publish their letters in the hope that they will be satisfied with having covered themselves with ridicule, and not insist on being declared mischievous fools by a Court of Justice.

THE MURDER OF CHIEF JUSTICE NORMAN.

The Calcutta papers received by the Bombay mail contain long accounts of the murder of Chief Justice Norman in Calcutta on Sept. 20. It seems that he was proceeding to assume his usual judicial functions in the Court-house when the atrocious deed was committed. After leaving his carriage, he ascended the steps in front of the Town Hall, and had scarcely put his foot within the vestibule when a man rushed towards him and stabbed him in the abdomen. Mr. Norman started back and ran down the steps, followed by the assassin, who stabbed him again, this time in the back. Mr. Norman cried out that he was stabbed, and then ran towards one of the pillars, to which he seemed to cling for support. He was still followed by the assassin. He then picked up some pieces of brick that happened to be lying about, and flung them at his assailant to keep him off. The assassin made another lunge at him, but the knife fell short, and before the blow could be repeated a peon valiantly seized the man and threw him down, and other people coming on the scene, the knife was wrested from his hands, and he was secured and made a prisoner. Mr. Norman limped away, holding his hand on the wound in his abdomen, evidently in great pain. An inspector of police wished him to get into his carriage, but he answered, "Get me a palkee that I may lie down; I shall not live." He was then removed to the establishment of Messrs. Thacker and Spink, near at hand. Mrs. Norman was with her wounded husband almost as soon as the sad tidings could have reached her. In a little time Government-place, in front of Thacker, Spink, and Co.'s, became crowded, and it was found necessary to bolt the entrance to the premises. Carriages and conveyances of members of all sections of the community were to be seen there, and the expression of sorrowful regret was universal. Mr. Norman lingered till after midnight, and then died.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against the prisoner, and a telegram from Calcutta to the Bombay papers announces that he was tried on the 28th, found guilty, and sentenced to death. No fresh evidence has come to light with regard to his identity. The trial lasted two hours, the court being densely crowded.

The prisoner is described by the Calcutta Englishman as a small-made, but wiry man, seemingly about thirty-five years of age. "The shape of his head (it adds) partakes considerably of that of an ape's—he has a low straight forehead, short black hair coming over the temples, and quick restless eyes. He was exceedingly calm—almost insolent, talking to the witnesses and police in a very cool manner, twisting the end of his moustachios and staring around him at the people in court."

The Indian Daily News thus refers to the sorrow caused in Calcutta by the mournful event:—"The stillnes of death crept over the whole city on Thursday, as soon as it was realised that that was the only way in which Calcutta could express its heartfelt sorrow for the recent calamity, and its heartfelt sympathy with the family whom that calamity has bereaved. It scarcely needed the hint which we had casually thrown out in the morning to induce the city to rest from its labours and be still. At a comparatively early hour on Thursday evidences were apparent on all sides that a great gloom had fastened upon Calcutta, and men talked in subdued voices of the great sorrow which fell upon many as a personal loss. Business was entirely suspended, and all the public offices were closed. If anything could carry consolation to the one family which is at the present moment the object of profound commiseration, wherever the name of Chief Justice Norman is known, and the story of his cruel death has reached, it would surely be found in these unmistakable proofs of the affectionate respect in which his memory is held. It is not often that the very heart of Anglo-Indian society is moved, as it was stirred on Thursday in Calcutta, and we are confident that we merely give expression to the sentiment of every man among us, when we say that the feeling which on Thursday cast a gloom over Calcutta will gradually settle over the whole country."

The Daily Examiner, of Sept. 22, gives the following account of the funeral:—"The funeral ceremony of the late Chief Justice was the most imposing Calcutta has witnessed for many a year. From four in the afternoon till five a continuous stream of mourners attended at his lordship's house, No. 12, Russell-street. Members of every nationality and creed congregated to testify to the sincere respect and esteem in which his Lordship had been held. The body was laid out in a westerly room on the ground floor, and numbers of gentlemen sadly and solemnly entered in to take a last look of the genial countenance of him, whom living, they had loved. His Lordship's face alone was uncovered; no traces of the agony he suffered were observable on his countenance; all was calm and peaceful as if he had but just fallen asleep. Precisely at 5 P.M., a salute of seventeen minute guns were fired from the ramparts of Fort William, and the funeral cortege left the house. The hearse was followed by the empty coach of his Lordship. Next in succession came four mourning coaches bearing the judges and some of the senior members of the bar. Then followed several hundreds of gentlemen who walked in procession from the house to the Circular-road Cemetery. The roads on both sides were lined with crowds of natives, and at every street numbers turned in to join in the train. The body of the deceased was borne to the grave by eight seamen. At the cemetery the funeral party was met by the Very Rev. the Archdeacon, who conducted the burial service."

The Indian Daily News says:—"The impression that has got abroad in certain quarters that the atrocious act of violence by which the Chief Justice met his death might in some way be explained in the light of the recent Wahabee trials, seems now to be far from improbable. At least, certain facts and circumstances have oozed out, which, it is believed, will indicate in which direction the wind blows. The murderer's very first statement was certainly suspicions. He was, he averred, a native of Constantinople, whereas, as a matter of fact, he is an up-country Mussulman; and in this, we fancy, we trace an intention of throwing dust in the eyes of the authorities. At the time he was arrested, he was still labouring under the effects of bhang, with which drug, doubtless he had been freely plied by the miscreants of whom it must be concluded he is merely the hireling. As long as the influence of the drug lasted, he studiously avoided giving the police satisfactory replies to their queries. The rhapsodical nonsense about the elephant and the dog eating the wall, in which some people fancied they saw prophecies of great significance to the ruling power, was, it is fair to suppose, either an attempt to feign madness, or a following up of the determination to reveal nothing. When the man, however, in the course of Wednesday evening came to his senses, he manifested no reluctance to point out his place of residence, and accompanied the police to the spot, a musjid on the Chitpore road. The men there recognised him, and told the police that he had been living there for the past two years, a statement which is not altogether correct. It is not improbable that he may have been a camel driver at one time, but that he has been an active disciple of the ruffians who have been preaching the jehad up-country there can be no doubt, since the police have come into possession of a number of letters, and, it is believed, seditious papers. These documents, when translated, will doubtless remove a good deal of the mystery in which the event is at present shrouded, and may lead to the discovery of a foul conspiracy. With a promptitude and tact that cannot be too highly commended, the Commissioner of Police, Mr. Hogg, with his deputy, Captain Giles, Mr. Superintendent Youman, Inspector Duke, and a strong force of European and native constables, went over to the mosque in question last evening only; and, after surrounding the place, searched and found a great number of documents. These were taken possession of, and any men who were found leaving the mosque were searched, and the letters found on their persons secured. The machinations which culminated in the terrible tragedy of Wednesday last have, doubtless, been conducted with profound secrecy, but it is thought that a clue has now been obtained."

STATION TALK.

Simla, Sept. 16.—Colonel Wright arrived here on Wednesday last, and joined the office of the Adjutant-general on the following day. There are to be some changes in that office. Major Scott leaves in a few days: Major Thompson is coming in his room. Till the latter officer joins, Captain Hewett, who has lately been appointed Brigade Major of Ferozepore, will officiate in Major Scott's room. The arrival of Colonel Wright necessitates the return of Colonel Holmes to his own grade of Deputy Adjutant-general. The sun's rays are now so overpowering in the middle of the day that even those accustomed to exposure to the heat have, during the last week, noticed the circumstance; and yesterday information was brought into the station of Captain Kelsey, who was out at Mahassoo on an excursion, having been prostrated by a coup de soleil. A jampan was immediately sent to bring him in.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Azimghur, Sept. 21.—The floods are still rising, though the stream has increased in rapidity to-day, which looks as if the obstruction at the mouth of the Tons is decreasing. The Munsiff's kutcherry has just succumbed. Mr. Alone's house fell in with a crash early this morning. Mr. Whiteway's house showed signs of caving in early in the day, and was abandoned for safer quarters. There are but three habitable bungalows left in the loop, and of these only one has its compound free of water; that belongs to Mr. Rogers, who nevertheless has taken up his quarters in the Kotwalee, to be nearer the scene of action. The Jail, but for Mr. Wood's earthworks, ought to be two feet under water, but it is dry, and the spot selected by the Inspector-general of Prisons for an addition to the Jail is now five to six feet under water. The Racket Court is a duck puddle, and the gallery makes a good dry quackery. Mr. Sandford's house is a mile from the city, and well above the water; his visits too and from are performed in a canoe. The Judge's house is similarly favourably situated; that is occupied by ladies, and they are well out of the mess that we are enjoying. The city holds out still on the north and west; the south is utterly and irretrievably lost. It is a melancholy sight as one rows through these deserted rows of ruins in a dongah. The water is now too deep for wading through, and that part of the town is entirely deserted, and looks like the City of the Dead. The five pukka serais built by Mr. Thomason in 1835 have gone, both internally and externally. The Pioneer of the 20th tells of heavy rain in Oudh, which fully accounts for the unusual accumulation of water.

Jounpur, Sept. 19.—The River Gumti still continues to rise, and is spreading into the interior. Since Saturday, the 17th, it has risen ten feet. Thousands of pits of grain, which were kept in reserve for sowing, have been destroyed by the inundation. Boats are plying over the old stone bridge across the river. This morning I observed a breach in it through a telescope from the fort. The Charitable Dispensary has come down. Books to the value of Rs. 2,000, and the furniture belonging to the Church Mission School, have been destroyed by the house falling in. Our magistrate and joint magistrate are seen morning and evening in the city, exerting themselves in relieving the poor. The magistrate gave money on Sunday to purchase grain and distribute. Three little urchins took it into their heads to go boating, got into a dingy, let go the rope it was fastened to, and the dingy was swept away by the current.

Sept. 21.—We for ourselves, and God for us all, the Devil take the hindmost, is the case here. People are bolting away from the city as quickly as they can towards Sheogunge, some twenty-four miles from this, for safety. Officials have got boats secured close to their compounds for an emergency. The water has got into the Jail, and arrangements are being made for the removal of the prisoners immediately. The Mahommedans are going about the street with flags flying, and beating tomtoms; Hindoos making poojahs and giving alms in a small way. The Mahajuns still hold their purse-strings tight. It is advisable that one of the officials should remain in the city to place confidence in the people, as they are panic-struck, and there is not the least doubt of their becoming disorderly in a few hours. Surely the Superintendent of Police has little or nothing to do, and therefore can easily be spared. A man arrived from Azimgurh yesterday evening, and says the place has been flooded, and all the bungalows have come down. Whilst writing a letter has arrived confirming the statement. The River Gumti still continues to rise; it rose seventeen inches since yesterday, causing further destruction to house and property. Several persons have met with a watery grave. Whilst closing I am told that the water has got into the bungalows of the officers.

Sept. 22.—The river has risen so much that about two-thirds of the city have been swept away, and the desolation and destruction does not end here. The river has hemmed us in all around: only some high grounds stand safe for a time. There was only one road open, in the northern direction, towards which crowds of people were making their way with children and property, but now it is almost stopped by the rivers opening a new course in that direction. Now we have no way to go for our lives, should the river continue rising. The current, a very strong current, flows considerably over the bridge, covering the whole of it with water, except the minarets. But mark the strength of the bridge. None made within this century could for a moment have borne so much weight and pressure of water. The public offices have been shut from the 16th inst. The European officers have kept boats alongside their bungalows; the public records are in danger. You will bear more if any one is saved from this deluge to tell the tale.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

Miss Muir.—Sir William Muir's daughter, whose dangerous illness prevented his Honour from being present at Roorkee on the prize-day, is now, happily, rapidly recovering.

Indigo in the N.W.P.—The prospects of the indigo crop in the N.W.P. are, we regret to hear, most deplorable. Drought, hail, locusts, says the Allahabad paper, have successively attacked the plant, and this year excessive rain has so completely washed the colour out of it as to leave it scarcely worth manufacturing.

European Troops in India.—The average number of European troops employed in India during the nine years, 1861-1869, was 67,363. The total number of men who died or were invalided during the same period was 34,916, or rather more than half. The deaths were—from cholera, 3,473, and from ordinary causes, 9,853. —Englishman, Sept. 26.

Goorgaon.—It is reported that a raid into the Goorgaon district has been made by a party from the Ulwar State, and about eighty cattle carried off from the village of Mewalla in British territory. In retaliation, the villagers are reported to have gone over the border and set fire to the village of Adulpore in the Ulwar State. These Ulwar men are very troublesome, and in the mutiny in 1857 amused themselves in a manner similar to the above at our expense. Captain Cadell is after the marauders.

The late Floods.—The flood at Moorshedabad, which laid the whole country under water for miles and miles around, is considered undoubtedly to have been the work of interested parties. Repeated unsuccessful attempts have been made to breach the bund—it is presumed by persons from districts which benefit greatly by the fall of water. The perpetrators of the act must, we should think, have been not a little startled by the result of their little perforation, for as soon as the news reached the Executive Engineer he started for the spot, and found a gap of 600 feet wide, a river rushing through it with tremendous velocity, and the country, as far as the eye could reach, a level sheet of water.

The Floods in the North.—We hear from Jounpur that the Gumti has risen so high that many of the streets are more like rivers than roads. The water is over the fine old bridge; the parapet wall acting as a break-water, though in one place the river, on Sunday evening, was flowing even over the parapet. The road from the Civil Station to the city, as also that to the Kotwalee, were then impassable except by boat or elephant; the water from the Lucknow road rushing in a torrent past the Dispensary. The Post-office has been nearly demolished, and its contents have been removed. Beyond the bridge the water for a considerable distance is waist deep. Hundreds of houses have fallen in, and the authorities are taking active measures for the relief of the destitute, many of the houseless being lodged in the Atali Musjid or in temporary huts. From the Fort the view is of a vast lake dotted about with little islands and peninsulas—the bridge appearing like a bridge of boats.—Pioneer, Sept. 21.

Mr. G. Campbell in Assam.—The Lieutenant Governor has, the Englishman learns, displayed, during his Assam tour, a special interest in the various hill tribes, having specimens of the different races brought for his inspection wherever possible. On his way from Gowhatty to Shillong he is said to have been attended for a considerable distance by an extensive following of aborigines in every variety of dress and undress, and was entertained with a grand display of dancing, singing, and music.

The Dancing Mania.—A native paper notices the taste for dancing which is springing up among Native Chiefs and Princes in imitation of Europeans. In former times the nobles and grandees used to procure dancers for their amusement, and thought it beneath their dignity to dance; but now having caught the contagion from Europeans, they have begun to think dancing an admirable accomplishment rather than a vice. The Maharajah of Jeypore is blamed for setting the example, then the Maharajah of Baroda. The Nawab Nazim of Bengal and his two sons are also censured for having danced at a grand assembly in London, in which her Majesty the Queen was also present. The editor remarks that until Hindoostanees imitate the English in their knowledge, greatness, wisdom, bravery, &c., they will do well not to take a fancy to dancing lest they share the fate of Sardanapular, the King of Babylon.—Delhi Gazette, Sept. 10.

Health of the 8th Foot.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, writing from Nusseerabad on the 16th instant, gives the following melancholy account of the health of the 8th (King's) Regiment:—"I regret to state that the mortality amongst the European troops stationed here is nearly equal to that of the corresponding month last year, the 8th, the King's Regiment, alone having lost five men and two women within the past fortnight; the prevailing disease being enteric fever, engendered by the malaria of this unhealthy climate. Out of a total strength of 578 men at head-quarters, I regret to state that there are about seventy men actually in hospital, about forty attending hospital as convalescents, and thirty-five men at Tarraghur sanitarium, so that this gallant old regiment will have little cause to regret their approaching departure from Nusseerabad, and I sincerely trust that their sanguine expectation as to Allahabad may be realised, and that they may be more fortunate in their next station than the present."

Trackers.—H.H. the Lieutenant Governor has just published a Gazette Extraordinary summarising the story of the recent murders at Umritsar and Rajkote. He is trenchant on the police who bungled the Umritsar case. All others, Sirdahs, Rajahs, Inspectors and Commissioners are praised and rewarded without stint. There are two men not mentioned whom we should like to see included in the praise and rewards. After the murders at Rajkote, two men, in the midst of a blinding storm of wind and sand, started on the murderer's tracks, and with blood-hound fidelity followed the trail from tree to tree, from well to well, from village to village, until they fairly hunted down their prey. These two men, before the magistrate's eyes, were shown tracks of feet, and at once identified each murderer's footstep without hesitation. The evidence of these two men was that which finally convicted the criminals. We cannot gazette them, but we can record their names, Bhunga Singh and Bhoopa, trackers. They belong to a profession which above all should be encouraged, but which is dying out in the Punjab. His Honour should not overlook their services, but should rather make this remarkable case a notable example of his wish to encourage this most useful profession.—Indian Public Opinion.

E.I. Railway Reductions.—The Bengalee states that the decrease in the traffic receipts of the East Indian Railway is as much as three-fourths. Though we are glad to believe that the decrease is not so large as this, we know that it has been heavy enough to compel a most ruthless economy. More than one honest fellow has come to us for relief—"I have been dismissed, Sir, as the Company could not afford to keep me on"—but it is not a question of one or two, for we are assured the dismissals have been very numerous, and the increase of destitute Europeans is most deplorable. Our sympathy for the poor men, who with their families are cast helpless upon the charity of the public, is increased by the knowledge that the Company are not altogether blameless for the wretched state of their finances. But it is not only their guards and firemen who are being dismissed, for the railway police are also being reduced; and here we think the Company really culpable. Why were they so anxious to get a share of the police management into their hands if they could not afford to maintain them? The police were never too numerous at the best of times; there is now a danger of their becoming too few. If imitation be flattery, the Company are most decidedly flattering Government. By injudicious management of their finances they bring themselves to a deficit, and then by injudicious retrenchment bring their servants to poverty.

IMPORTS.—Calcutta, Sept. 27.—During the interval since last mail the market has gradually assumed a quieter tone, and there now seems no prospect of improvement on this side of the holidays. Grey Shirtings: A moderate business has been transacted in 39-inch goods, and the market closes with a downward tendency. Grey Jaconets: Supplies have been on a larger scale, and sales have been forced off at lower rates. Madapollams have been sold to a moderate extent, without change in rates. T-Cloths continue in fair inquiry, but higher prices are not yet obtainable. Mulls, 44-inch, have been freely saleable at rather better prices, but other widths are unchanged. Bleached Goods generally continue quiet. Grey Twists: The downward tendency of prices continued after our last; but there is again a better feeling, and prices tend upwards. Coloured Twist has been very quiet since our last, prices having a weakening tendency.

EXPORTS.—Calcutta, Sept. 27.—Jute: Considerable quantities have come in, and all descriptions except the very best, which are scarce, have fallen in price. Saltpetre: There has been a fair average amount of business done, principally in the finer sorts, the stock of which is rather short, and prices have an upward tendency. Refined may be quoted from Rs. 7-10 to 7-12. Rice: The market has been unsettled, owing to the uncertainty as to the amount of damage caused to the crop by the late floods in Bengal. At present the stocks are ample, and prices remain about the same, though with little business doing. Linseed: Though the arrivals from up-country have been considerable, prices have decidedly hardened, holders expecting still higher rates after the holidays. The rise has been most marked in medium and small or Liverpool qualities. Rapeseed has experienced a rise of fully four annas. There has been an active demand, but the crop has been a failure this season, and the mould stocks do not exceed 1,000 tons. Raw Silk has again been dull, and experienced a decline of 8 annas.

MONEY AND SHARE MARKETS.—Calcutta, Sept. 27.—Exchanges: After a slight advance the banks reduced their selling rates to pretty much as they stood at the commencement of business.

Bombay Harbour.—What a change has come over Bombay! On Wednesday last there were only three ships in harbour loading for Liverpool, and none for London.—Catholic Examiner, Sept. 23.

Madras.

The Camp of Exercise.—Among the officers recommended by the Commander-in Chief, Madras, for attendance at the Camp of Exercise at Delhi, are Colonel Grant, R.H.A.; Major Wilkinson, 16th Lancers; Major Douglas Scott; Captain Stewart, Assistant Adjutant-General; and Captain Bovill, 21st Fusiliers.

The Governor of Madras.—His Excellency left Ootacamund on Monday, Sept. 25, for Bangalore, to be present at the rifle meeting. His Lordship would be in Madras about the 1st October, and proceed afterwards to the Annimullies, in company with Colonel Napier Campbell and Captain Cecil Hubbard. From the Annimullies he would proceed to Tanjore, arriving there about the 12th. Lady Napier, attended by Captain Gore, A.D.C., was to leave Ooty for Tanjore so as to meet his Excellency at that place about the 12th.

Bread or Sweetmeats.—A Bengali has found out the cause of the evils that oppress his countrymen; and not only that, but he has also found out the remedy. According to this gentleman, the native sweetmeats do the mischief. The remedy is for the people to eat bread, and then he thinks there would soon be a millennium. Two good things among many others will be, that the people will become better looking, and the doctors' fees will not have to be paid so often! The latter may prove true; but we doubt about the first. We know people who eschew sweetmeats, and take a fair quantity of bread, but who are not at all remarkable for their beauty.—Madras Times.

Lieutenant Frere.—The Madras Mail regrets to hear that the state of health of Lieutenant Frere, 21st Fusiliers, is exciting some apprehension at Bangalore. The surprise is that he recovered as rapidly as he appeared to do from the severe wound that he received in the Van Ingen affray.—"Nothing further," says the Bangalore Herald, "has been done towards the prosecution of Messrs. Lambart and Frere, and Sergeants McInnes and Noakes, for criminal trespass in the Van Ingen case. As the two officers are still under arrest, pending action to be taken against them by the civil authorities, we think no necessary delay should be allowed."

A Survivor from the "Fanny."—We have much pleasure in notifying that the commander of the ship Fanny, of Rangoon, which foundered in a cyclone off Cape Comorin in June last, is not lost, as was generally supposed. Yesterday forenoon a telegram was received by the owner, announcing his safe arrival in Nagerkoil, along with the missing portion of the crew. For three months all of them had been detained on the Island of Minicoy, having been unable during that time to communicate with the mainland. It seems strange that in these days a ship's crew should have to remain on an island so close to the Indian coast and in the way of coasting vessels without being heard of.—Rangoon Times, Sept. 9.

Tin in Tenasserim.—Mr. Mark Fryar, Mining Engineer to the Government, has been deputed to Tenasserim to examine the tin-mines in that province. These tin-mines have never been worked since Tenasserim became a British province; but across the border in foreign territory the same identical lodes had been worked by Chinese miners for years past. Mr. Fryar was till recently in charge of the coal explorations and coal mining undertakings in the Chanda district of Central India. The new department is no doubt wise to direct its attention to the tin of Tenasserim; but we hope Mr. Fryar's withdrawal from Chanda does not mean that Government is going to give up the Chanda coal-mines and the Chanda coal-railway.

Mysore.—It is not often one has to record a death amongst the planters of Mysore, but we all regret to notice the demise of Captain Fitzgebben, who owned a property in the northern part of the district. Being a married man, and residing always during the monsoon in Bangalore, where he possessed considerable property, he was not very intimately known by many of his brother planters, but he was one of us all the same, and leaves a certain gap in our ranks. He was especially interested in the education of the natives of these parts, and behaved liberally in erecting a school and supporting it on his estate. The natives who lived near him, and were many of them under obligations to him, will be likely to feel his loss greatly.—Madras Mail, Sept. 12.

Accident.—We regret to report that Mr. James Barrie, chief engineer of the S.S. Mula, in Kurrachee harbour, whilst sleeping on the bridge of the vessel, fell overboard and was drowned at 4.15 P.M. on the 13th inst. Every effort was made to save him, by diving and other means, but without effect. The Mula lost her captain also at Bushire on the 9th ult.; he died of heat apoplexy.—Sindian, Sept. 16.

Railway Fares.—We are glad to learn that the Bombay Chamber of Commerce has at last succeeded in obtaining a concession—or rather the promise of a concession—with respect to the high rates charged for goods traffic on the G.I.P. Railway. The terms are not yet, we understand, definitely fixed, but we have reason to believe that the same rates will be charged for the carriage of goods from Bombay to Allahabad as are now obtaining on the East India line from Calcutta to Jubbulpore.—Times of India.

Mr. W. Pension.—We are sorry to hear that Mr. W. C. Pension, Assistant General Traffic Manager of the G.I.P. Railway, is obliged to proceed to England on account of ill-health. He has been presented with a purse of about two hundred guineas by a number of railway employes who appreciate his hearty service in connection with the G.I.P. Railway. Mr. Phillips, who acted for Mr. Middleton during his absence in England, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Pension.—Deccan Herald, Sept. 18.

Dockyard Accounts.—The committee which recently sat at the dockyard to investigate certain complicated and disputed accounts have given in their report. It is understood that the accountant and all other officials in the Bombay Marine are exonerated from blame touching the matters in question. Now that the Accountant-General has got thus far, we trust he will take courage to push the matter home in more senses than one. If one or two of these Westminster bungles, blunders, or jobs had been exposed and stamped upon a few years back, we might have been saved this astounding job of the Hydraulic Lift Dock.—Times of India.

Sind Railway.—At last there is hope for Sind once more. We are told that the State railway department has now thawed so far as to direct the commencement of the railway by the common-sense method from Kotree upwards. If it rests within Sir W. Merewether's power to push on this invaluable public work, we feel sure he will do his utmost to "turn the sods." We are glad to see Major Bonus mentioned as the officer to whom charge of the work is committed. His memorandum in favour of the right bank line—written, if we remember aright, in the days when Mr. Havelock was Commissioner—showed that he had a clear conception of the conditions under which railways have to be carried out in India. Thus the mention of Major Bonus's name in connection with the line from Kotree inspires one with confidence in the plans yet undivulged by the mysterious State Railway department, but we should like to have some more positive assurance that the fiat to commence has gone forth.—Times of India.

Bombay Harbour.—We are not about to compare the natural harbours of Sydney and Bombay, but will just glance at the actual condition of each as available for shipping, for this only is of any consequence to commerce. As to Sydney, it is sufficient to quote this succinct description of its harbour facilities—"Ships come close up to the wharves and stores of the town, their cargoes being hoisted from the ship's hold into the warehouses." But the visitor to this island finds at once that in this year of grace 1871 the port of Bombay, in spite of its great natural advantages, is still in the same category as that in which Cook too hastily classed Port Jackson—"a harbour for boats." Nothing is stronger than its weakest part, and the most important link of a chain cable is the last. So with Bombay Harbour; as regards the proper conditions of a modern port, its score or so square miles of sheltered anchorage are of no account until seagoing vessels can be "brought alongside" to discharge or receive their cargoes. There is harbour room and foreshore space to spare for three times the shipping trade we have at present; but there is yet a very wide gap between ships' hatchways and the shore. This has to be bridged over by the cumbrous method of lighterage. Every bale and every cargo has to be lifted twice instead of once, and pass through a double set of hands. Thus, again we say, the magnificent estuary between Bombay and the mainland is still, so far as mercantile operations are concerned, what Cook a hundred years pronounced Port Jackson to be—"a harbour for boats."—Times of India.

The late Colonel Willoughby.—It is in connection with the Ordnance Department that he is best remembered now. He was appointed Principal Commissary of Ordnance in 1853, and in a couple of years he had so altered the appearance of the Grand Arsenal that it was considered one of the best arranged establishments in India—as a good many may remember who went there to see the remains of the late Lord Frederick FitzClarence laid out in state in the armoury. His influence at headquarters was immense, and he had only to propose an improvement to be sure that it would be sanctioned. Some of the fine large buildings in the Arsenal bear his name on their foundation stone, and it was at his suggestion that the narrow wharf on which a sort of tread mill was used before his time to hoist heavy articles in and out of boats gave way to a wider wharf, with English cranes and proper appliances for heavy ordnance work. But it is in the improvement made in the status of the personnel of the Ordnance Department that the memory of Colonel Willoughby will be treasured for ages. It was under his directions that the well-appointed library of the Grand Arsenal superseded the collection of old books which the East India Company sent out with each batch of recruits. The hole and corner way in which the men ate their dinners had to give way to a clean and respectable looking mess-table—improvements that in a very short time gave the men a good and healthy tone. So that, when preparations had to be made for sending an ordnance establishment with the field force to the Persian Gulf, Willoughby found no difficulty in getting his men to work from sunrise till dark; and in the end his stores were got ready and shipped away so as to leave Bombay with the first portion of the expedition. Everything had, in fact, been so well packed that the minutest implement could be found without a moment's loss of time, day or night. His subordinates were also sure of being rewarded when they did their duty. Warrant officers who had done good and faithful service years before in the Southern Mahratta campaign had vainly tried to get the reward for which they were recommended; but it was not till Colonel Willoughby took up their case—and he always took up such matters in so earnest a spirit that his efforts were invariably crowned with success—that they obtained their long-sought-for reward. Colonel Willoughby's career in India closed with his short tenure of the office of Inspector-general of Ordnance and Magazines, and this post he held during the thickest portion of the Mutiny. It is a matter of history now that no army was ever better provided with the requirements of war than were the columns sent into Central India and Rajpootana from this Presidency; and this reflects the greater credit on the head of the Ordnance Department, "when it is borne in mind that this happened at the very time that the Enfield rifle superseded Old Bess"—when every regiment coming out to India was armed with a new weapon, for which every cartridge had to be manufactured on the spot. Major-general Willoughby was held in the highest estimation by his brother officers for his excellent qualities as a gentleman. As an artillery officer the old Company could not boast of many more like him.—Times of India.

IMPORTS.—Bombay, Sept. 30.—More business has been done in Piece Goods during the period under review than we have had to report in similar periods for some time back, but the demand is still very limited, and a decline of ¼ to 1 anna has taken place in some descriptions of Grey Goods. The demand, however, on account of the interior is gradually improving, but first holders have, on account of the dull and declining state of Manchester, shown more willingness to part with their goods. In Yarns a fair business has been done, but, with the exception of the higher counts of Mule, a slight decline is observable in some descriptions of Grey Yarns. In Coloured and Turkey Red Yarns there has been no change. Metals: There has been no change except in Yellow Metal, in which a decline of about 8 annas per cent. has taken place.

EXPORTS.—Bombay, Sept. 30.—Cotton: Following the course of Liverpool, the market here has declined Rs. 3 to 5 per candy, and the business done has again been most limited. The purchases made in Bombay for export aggregate about 3,400 candies, and the following were the principal, viz., about 1,400 candies of Dharwar Sawginned, deliverable in 90 days, at Rs. 235 to 230; about 600 candies of Dholleras and Bhownuggur, deliverable in 30 days, at Rs. 225 to 216; and about 550 candies of Cutch, at prices varying, according to quality, from Rs. 200 to 217½. LOCAL TAXATION.—RESOLUTION.

Aug. 22.—In introducing the new system of local taxation under the Road Cess Act, the Lieutenant governor desires to act with the utmost liberality towards local interests. For many years past all the local road and ferry toll collections have been brought into one central road fund, and distributed at the pleasure of Government. The Lieutenant governor has determined that this system shall now cease, and that all the sums collected from local roads and canals, and from all ferries except those on roads maintained from the general revenues, shall be made over to the districts and municipalities in whose limit the lines of communication lie. The main lines of arterial communication, both roads and canals, will be maintained from provincial funds, and the collections from them will be credited to the Provincial Treasury; all others will be made over to the district fund, receipts and expenditure together. The annexed statement cannot be taken as exact till it is finally determined what roads and canals are to be maintained as provincial, and what are to be treated as local, and till the exact situation of all the ferries has been ascertained, and arrangements made for dividing the proceeds of those which lie between different districts. Meantime the Lieutenant governor directs the publication of the statement as approximate, in order to show roughly what local funds will thus become available for the local purposes of the several districts, and also what sums they have hitherto received from the central fund and other sources. Anything that can be spared from provincial needs will rather be given in aid of poor districts, which have suffered from peculiar difficulties of communication. It may possibly be that in such a district as Tirhoot, where there are large local collections, if the inhabitants prefer the existing system of many and heavy tolls to a road cess, the latter impost may be deferred. But it is clear that the rich districts in the neighbourhood of the Presidency, which collect little and spend much, must now resort to the Road Cess.

WASTE LAND RULES IN BENGAL.

Dated Yacht Rhotas, Debrooghur, Aug. 23, 1871.

With reference to instructions received from the Government of India for the revision of the rules for the grant of waste lands, and to the orders of this Government appointing a committee to report on the whole subject, it is resolved that, pending the revision of the waste land rules, which is now under the consideration of the Lieutenant governor, it is desirable to make ad interim supplemental rules to prevent the evils which have occurred in practice. His Honour, therefore, lays down the rules given below. These rules do not affect the intact force of all the other rules as published by the Board of Revenue, except in so far as the latter are modified by the rules now promulgated: and the directions regarding survey demarcations, &c., must of course be strictly observed. Commissioners will issue supplemental instructions according to the circumstances of each district, and take care that doubtful questions are reported for the orders of the Board of Revenue and of Government:—

RULES.

1. It shall be in the discretion of the Collector to reserve from sale any land which in his opinion for special reasons ought not to be sold, and to refuse any applications, provided that such reserve or refusal shall be reported for the orders of the Commissioner of the division. The Collector will reserve all land suited for the ordinary crops of the country which is in the neighbourhood of cultivated land, and which, in his opinion, is likely to be taken up under the ordinary settlement rules of the district within a reasonable period. He will also reserve all land bearing valuable timber, and all land known to contain valuable minerals. He will sell no land which may be claimed by wild tribes on the borders of the district, or over which they may claim any privilege, without special report and orders. Similarly, the Collector will not allow the occupation of waste land under any title derived from border chiefs or tribes, whose exclusive right to the land has not been expressly acknowledged by Government.

2. The minimum upset price is fixed at Rs. 5 per acre, instead of Rs. 2-8 as hitherto, except in the case of lands for which regular applications have been already received.

3. Before proceeding to sell any lot the Collector must satisfy himself by local inquiry that the land is proper to be sold, and that there exist no rights or reasonable claims to it on the part of people settled on, or otherwise occupying or using the land or any part of it. He will be held strictly responsible that no rights of the people in actual occupation are overlooked, because they do not understand our laws, and do not appear in Courts, as has heretofore been the case in several instances. Should there be any right or reasonable semblance of right he will refuse to sell, and will report the matter for the orders of the Commissioner. In no case is any cultivated or inhabited land to be sold as waste, nor shall any land which appears to have been cultivated within twenty years be so sold without special report to the Commissioner. In all doubtful cases the Commissioner will report for the orders of the Board of Revenue.

4. Opposing Claims.—Sections 3 and 4 of the Board of Revenue's rules under this head are cancelled, and the following rule is substituted:—

If the Collector shall consider that any claim or objection is established, he will stop the sale as directed by Section 4 of Act XXIV. of 1863. If any claim to occupancy or user be established, or found to exist, the land must not be sold, and a special report must be made.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF SAWUNT WAREE.

Bombay Castle, August 21, 1871.

The Political Superintendent, Sawunt Waree, No. 292, dated April 22, 1871, submits his Administration Reports, as below, for the past year:—

1. General, for the official year 1870-71.
2. Financial, for the official year 1870-71.
3. Civil, for the calendar year 1870.
4. Criminal and police, for the calendar year 1870.
5. Political.

The Acting Political Superintendent, Sawunt Waree, No. 357, dated May 30, 1871, Refers, in reply to Government Resolution No. 566, dated Feb. 10, 1871, to Colonel Schneider's remarks in the last paragraph of his Civil Administration Report No. 289 of April 22, 1871, which will, he trusts, satisfy Government that the Nyayadish was more industrious last year, and that there are good grounds for expecting a larger out-turn of work from him during the current year, now that a separate staff of vakeels has been appointed to plead in his court.

Resolution.—Aided by an abundant harvest and healthy season, the general tendency of the affairs of Sawunt Waree during the past year appears progressive. The conduct of Ramchundra Sawunt Bhosle, though it has undergone some change for the better, is not yet such as to command the full approbation of Government or to reflect sufficient credit upon himself. It is to be hoped that, in future, by a more careful attention to the duties of his department, and a more hearty co-operation with the constituted authorities, he may actively advance the cause of order and good government.

2. The apparent falling off in the amount of revenue realised is purely nominal, and due to a change in the system of accounts. The change in the payment of instalments of land revenue from eight to four is in itself a testimony of the increasing wealth of the agricultural population. The refund of Rs. 82 referred to in paragraph 11 is sanctioned.

3. A still more important measure is the introduction of a detailed survey and assessment which, after a consultation with Colonel Francis, has been determined upon. Rs. 20,000 have been provided in the Budget of the current year, and the work will be commenced after the monsoon. The execution of the scheme will determine both the financial capabilities of the State and establish a valuable record of proprietary titles.

4. Government observe with interest the progress that is being made in developing the wealth of the forest resources of Sawunt Waree. The receipts in the department during the past year are nearly equal to the realisations of the two previous years combined.

5. The general commercial activity of the people is further evidenced by the large increase in the transactions of the Money Order Office. The value of the orders paid during the year of report is nearly three times as great as that of 1869-70.

6. In the Civil administration the return of business done in the Nyayadish's Court shows a marked improvement. The measures taken by the Political Superintendent to obviate the delays caused by the bad arrangements of the vakeels will tend still more to facilitate the judicial business of the Court. The Moonsiff's returns are less satisfactory; but the inefficiency, being the result of ill-health, may be considered as accidental and purely temporary.

7. The statistics of crime show no increase upon last year, except under the heading of offences against justice. Compared with other States the returns may be considered satisfactory.

8. Notwithstanding the re-organisation of the English school last year and the increased cost of the establishment, the numbers have fallen considerably. The result is certainly disappointing, and Colonel Schneider should report whether the failure is due to any incompetency on the part of the revised establishment, or to the increased fees charged to the pupils. The vernacular and girls' schools show a steady improvement.

9. His Excellency in Council is glad to hear that the education of the minor Chief is progressing, and the measures proposed by the political agent for giving him the benefit of a residence away from Waree, for a part of the year, are approved.

INCOME-TAX REPORT FOR 1869-70.

I am aware that as this report is so late, and that for the following year is due, and will be the occasion for a review of the system, it has not been thought desirable to go very fully into the subject till the report for 1870-71 is made; but I should like to note one or two points which strike me in running over the figures for 1869-70, and to ask for any explanations that can be given.

2. Para. 13.—Classification by Professions and Trades.—Professions—Assessments in the higher classes.

These seem to lead to a singular inversion of our preconceived ideas. There are no incomes in the highest class; so lawyers appear not to make the enormous income sometimes supposed. But in the next highest class, as incomes of Rs.10,000 to Rs.100,000, we have the following startling results of the column showing number of persons assessed:—

Ministers of religion	58
Legal practitioners	17
Medical practitioners	0

This would make it appear that religion is much more lucrative than law after all. Even the greater rigidity of conscience in making returns, which may be assumed in the former case, does not sufficiently account for the difference. Medicine, as a lucrative profession, is nowhere. Not a single medical man in Calcutta or anywhere else seems to make by practice so much as Rs.10,000 per annum. I should like to know whether the Board can throw any light on these singular results.

3. Again, I find that the most numerous class of income-tax payers are cultivators. As distinguished from 25,483 "proprietors and sub-proprietors," and 13,463 "tenants," it appears that so many as 34,375 mere "cultivators" have been assessed to a tax on incomes of not less than Rs. 500 per annum, thus beating the traders ("traders" do not include "bankers" or merchants"], who number 33,308.

I gather that these assessments on cultivators are made by estimating the profits of the land at so much per beegah. I have seen, I think, an allusion in the public prints to a circular of the Board, in which the rates are stated to have been taken at from Rs. 5 to Rs. 20 per beegah; and, at any rate, I have learned from the member in charge that very high rates have been ordinarily assumed. Nothing is more difficult than to get at the profits of the man who actually farms the land. In England it is found to be impossible to do so; and the income-tax of the farmer is, by law, roughly taken at half the rent. If the rent be taken to average £1 to £2 per acre, the farmers of England pay on an assumed income of ten to twenty shillings, say Rs. 5 to Rs. 10 per acre. It is strange, indeed, if an Indian farmer makes more by the land than an English farmer, the merits of small culture notwithstanding. In very small holdings it may be assumed that a man who cultivates himself must make the wages of his labour, and that may be taken as part of his income; so that from a holding of six or seven acres an income of Rs. 40, or 50, or 60 may be possible enough; but this kind of holding does not approach the lower limits of the income-tax. I cannot suppose that any ordinary ryot who holds ten or twenty acres can approach an income of Rs. 500 per annum. If we come to larger holdings of forty, fifty, or even a hundred acres (and of such I take it there are very few), a man cannot cultivate so much with his own hands. He must employ labour; the wages of the labourers must be deducted from his profit; and I cannot imagine that many such cultivators really make, one year with another, a profit liable to income-tax. It is certain that if the profits bear any such relations to rent, as is supposed in England, it could not be so.

4. I should then have expected that in this country of very small holdings cultivators would have been almost entirely free of income-tax, instead of being the most numerous class assessed. The impression left on my mind is that they are over-assessed as compared to other classes. I am therefore not suprised to find that in the Board's report of July 18, 1870 (No. 116A), it is stated that the income-tax falls with the greatest severity on the class of ryots and agriculturists; that it is among this class that the greatest discontent is felt in connection with this mode of taxation; that among them, more than others, a strong and bitter feeling has been excited by the tax; and that instances have been brought to the notice of a member of the Board in which cultivators threaten to migrate to Nepal, where there is no income-tax.

5. The exclusion of incomes under Rs. 750 will, it may be supposed, this year relieve a large proportion of the cultivators, and I understand that the Board's recent circular, alluded to in the newspapers, is intended to caution the assessors against excessive estimates of the profits of farming; but I am inclined to think that it may be necessary to go further, and to make some radical change in the mode of assessing this particular class. I shall be glad to have Mr. Money's views on the subject.

6. There seems to be a singular disparity and variation in the assessment of some districts. The yield is not largest in the districts around Calcutta, which have had the greatest advantages in the way of roads, railways, commerce, education, and all that is known as civilisation. The yield of the obscure and inacessible non-regulation district of Maunbhoom, which under the former income-tax was but a fraction of that of Hooghly, Burdwan, Jessore, and Nuddea, is now ahead of any of them. Of all the districts in Bengal, that which has been for a long series of years most favoured in the way of roads, sub-divisions, colleges and schools, and administration of every sort (making it par excellence the model district of Bengal), is Nuddea; yet it is assessed to income-tax at just about half of the Maunbhoom assessment. I should like to know whether these variations can be in any way accounted for. It strikes me that the name of the officer who seems to have misadministered the tax in Maunbhoom is that of one of two native officers lately reported by the Board of Examiners as distinguished by ignorance of the laws which they are supposed to administer. It should be ascertained if this is the same man.

The district most prolific of large incomes of both the two highest classes appears to be Gya; and of good incomes of the two next classes Purneah gives the largest numbers. I should like to know what classes are most conspicuous among the large tax-payers in these districts, and to what circumstances their apparently superior wealth is due. It will no doubt be fully explained in the next report how it happens that the tax-payers of 1869-70 are upwards of 50 per cent. more numerous than those of 1870-71, though no change was made in the classes of income assessable under the law. But as the member in charge intimates that very many persons were unjustly assessed in the particular year 1869-70 (when the numbers much exceeded both previous years and the subsequent year), I should like to know under what circumstances, and why, the increased numbers of that one year occurred.

8. I will leave it to the member in charge either to answer the questions now put separately, or to include in the report for 1870-71 the points to which I have drawn his attention. At any rate, I should like these same points, among others, to be specially noticed as regards 1870-71. I hope it may turn out that the cultivators do not now bear so large a share of the burden. At a time when the owners and occupiers of land are (justly as I think) subjected to a special local taxation for certain local purposes, I should be sorry that there should be any ground for supposing that the income-tax is assessed in such a way as to fall with disproportionate severity on them. I should be sorry to think that because their sources of income are visible, and it is almost impossible to disprove an estimate of the profits of cultivation, they are made to pay more than traders and others, whose sources of income are not visible, and who can prove or disprove anything by their books. I observe that even in the many-assessed year 1869-70, of 61,407 objections, 36,489, or fully three-fourths, were allowed, while Mr. Money thinks that many more ought to have been allowed. I should be glad if it could be shown, for any year, in what proportion the objections of traders, and in what proportion the objections of cultivators, were allowed.

On Board the Rhotas, Aug. 8, 1871. G. Campbell.

ROYAL UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION.

Major-General Whittingham, C.B., delivered a lecture before the above-named Society on Friday afternoon, Lieut.-General Sir J. Y. Scarlett in the chair, on "Our Military System and Recruiting Service," in which he brought forward certain views regarding army reform, which, while they assumed that our military system was full of imperfections and shortcomings, conveyed an assurance that the defects, radical as they were, were capable of being removed, and the army placed upon a footing worthy of the country. He spoke from the experience derived from a long and intimate acquaintance with the British army, both abroad and at home, and from a military education received in the best school of scientific military knowledge—viz, Prussia. He had also served abroad, and had written much on army reform in the Times. In the letters, and pamphlets, and books he had published he had drawn comparisons between the Prussian and British military systems. The results were as follows: First: The Prussian officers are proud of their profession and proud of their uniform; the same could not generally be said of English officers, who too often vote their duty a bore, and rarely wear their uniform a moment longer than they possibly can avoid. To be sure, the army is at the top of the social and official tree in Prussia and in most Continental countries; whereas in our country it occupies a very inferior position, comparatively, in public respect and estimation. Secondly: As a general rule the Prussian officers, on entering the army, have adopted a permanent profession, whereas permanency is rather the exception than the rule with us. Thirdly: The Prussian officers in general dedicate their time and their talents almost entirely to their duties, or to the studies and exercises necessary to make them perfect commanders of soldiers; whereas British officers, at least the vast majority of them, give their chief time and abilities to sports and pastimes.

The general views taken by the lecturer with regard to army reform start from the leading principles—that there should be better pay for the soldier, and a higher scientific and more practical education for the officer. He advised that throughout the British army the soldiery should be arranged in two classes; a first and second-class soldier, with gradations of pay increasing periodically, according to the capacity, devotedness to the service, stricter performance of duty and the moral conduct of the men. The ranks should be filled with a self-respecting, well-conducted class, encouraged to maintain their respectability by the liberality of the State. It was a Cromwellian class of soldier in fact that was required to improve the army.

But, comparing the Prussian with the English ranks, we find the former composed of every class of the nation, and thus of course sympathised with and respected by all classes; whereas in England we find few respectable persons, but very many of the lowest class of the country, enlist into our ranks. These opinions were shared in by many of his (the lecturer's) brother officers, some of whom held high rank in the service; they were opinions that had been advanced also by several leading members of Parliament.

As regards the remedies proposed for the imperfections of the army, he was not satisfied with the one or two that had been adopted. Every sort of remedy proposed had been rejected, except abolishing bounty, and increasing a trifle the pay of all privates indiscriminately, instead of increasing their pay considerably, which was his remedy. To reward good soldiers before active service, he said, let their pay be periodically increased; to reward them after active service, reserve for good non-commissioned officers and privates those numerous small posts at the disposal of every Government.

To show the little zeal manifested in the support of our army, General Whittingham quoted a remark of one of his correspondents that "nearly the only books which have no value at all in the country are military works, and almost all authors lose money in bringing them out. There is actually no public for such reading. The officers read nothing and buy no books, and it is a dead loss to publish any military works." In conclusion, the lecturer said: "As regards the officers, I think if we are not too suddenly involved in war and self defence there is every prospect that under an improved system they will become all that could be desired;" but as regarded the rank and file question it still awaited that "satisfactory solution" which military publicists have been searching after. It was not merely material and practical, but also moral and social considerations which rendered this so difficult a problem in our country.

The present paper having been prepared before the Autumn Manœuvres were carried out, it did not criticise them, but the author anticipated that a good step in advance for reform had been made through the experiment. But the autumn reviews, instead of introducing reforms and corrections, had so far only demonstrated that soldiers enlisted under the voluntary system were far from being up to their work, especially the militia. That we should be able to do entirely without compulsory service, at least in the militia, was doubtful.

The lecturer concluded his paper in the midst of applause, and the Chairman, Lieutenant-General Sir J. Yorke Scarlett, in moving a vote of thanks to his gallant friend, Major General Whittingham, said that he had undoubtedly told them some unpleasant truths, which, however, were necessary to be told, as publicity always led to inquiry. The Government, however, was perfectly alive to the necessity for the improvement of their military system; and reforms would proceed as practical considerations permitted. Nothing would be left undone to render the army as complete as the character of the nation and the position of the country would allow of. The lecturer had been severe upon all branches of the service; but he (the Chairman) did not agree with him, except to recognise that he was correct in pointing out several deficiencies that might be remedied. Whatever its shortcomings, the British Army had never failed to do good work when put to the trial. He himself had not much faith in the voluntary principle. It was the duty of every British subject, whatever his rank, to serve his country, if not by person then by purse. Whether the Prussian system could be adapted to our requirements was now a subject of deliberation with the War Office. We could never have a large army, but we might have an efficiently organised one, and its efficiency we were endeavouring to improve by every means in our power. He did not perceive the force of the remedial suggestions put forward in the paper; but, nevertheless, they might be very well deserving the consideration of the Government; and at all events, he thought the meeting had heard a very informative paper on military reform. (Loud cheers.)

Miscellaneous.

Bills on India.—Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 18th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £300,000, and to Bombay, £100,000. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11¼d. will receive about 41 per cent., and on Bombay at that price in full.

New Submarine Telegraph.—There is every probability that Brindisi will soon be connected with Egypt by a direct line of submarine telegraph, a concession for twenty-one years having been granted by the Italian Government to English capitalists for that purpose, and the arrangements will shortly be announced. The cable is intended to act as a feeder to the associated Mediterranean and Indian Submarine Companies. The details of the projected line between Odessa and Constantinople, bringing Russia into direct submarine communication with Turkey, the Levant, and Egypt, are understood to be finally settled.

Recruiting in India.—H.R.H. the Field Marshal Commander-in-Chief has authorised the enlistment of sons of soldiers for the British Army in India. The boys are to be recruited from the Lawrence and different military asylums or schools, the recruits not to exceed three per cent. in each regiment. They must be of pure European parentage, or their fathers and maternal grandfathers, or mothers and paternal grandfathers, must have been of pure European descent. They must further be examined by a medical officer unconnected with the asylum, who will certify that they are constitutionally fit for service in any climate.

Export of Bullion.—De Quetteville's Indian Circular gives the following resume of Bullion Exports from September 2nd to October 19th:—By the Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. Oriental Bank Corporation.—A general meeting of the shareholders was held on Oct 19, at the office of the Corporation, in Threadneedle-street, for the purpose of declaring an interim dividend. The chair was occupied by Mr. James Blyth. The notice calling the meeting was read by Mr. C. J. F. Stuart, the chief manager. This being an interim meeting, no report was submitted, but the chief manager read a statement of the financial position of the company. The chairman said he should trouble the shareholders with very few remarks on the present occasion, as this was an interim meeting for the declaration of a dividend; but he thought he might fairly congratulate the shareholders on the fact that the directors were able to declare a dividend of 6 per cent. for the half-year, being at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum. The shareholders were aware that the affairs of India, China, and Australia had not been very favourable for financial operations, and therefore, as he said before, he thought he might congratulate the shareholders on being able to declare so good a dividend. He should be happy to answer any questions. No questions were put, and the meeting broke up. We may mention that the dividend will be payable on and after the 1st of November.

New Company just Registered.—The British, Indian, and Colonial Agency and Co-operative Society (Limited). Capital, £100,000, in 100,000 shares of £1.—This is a supply association for India and the colonies, as well as the United Kingdom.

The New Rules of Promotion.—We warn all officers who may conceive that long or meritorious services, or pecuniary investments, or regimental connections will give them the least certainty of succession to the command of the regiments in which they are serving, or of promotion in them, in consequence of vacancies created in any way, that they must banish at once all illusions of the kind. The authorities are, if we are not much misled, prepared "to make examples," and to lead off in a way which will leave no misconception respecting their intention to carry out their new system with vigour. Already the alarm is sounded, and officers have, we hear, sent in their papers by hundreds and hundreds. In one cavalry regiment we hear of one major and six captains and several subalterns seeking to retire. The Dublin Brigade Office is reported to have had 400 applications to retire, and we are afraid to mention the number reported to have been received at headquarters. There is, indeed, "an ugly rush" to get out of the army; let us hope there will be "a handsome rush" to get into it.—Army and Navy Gazette.

Athletic Sports.—Success of the Civil Service in General, and the India Office in Particular.—The Autumn meeting of the London Athletic Club was held at Lillie-bridge, West Brompton, on the 21st inst., in the presence of a good number of spectators, who sought refuge under the wooden sheds from the soaking rain which is as invariable an accompaniment of the gatherings of this Club as it is of the Eton commemoration, or the second day of Henley Regatta. Mr. G. R. Johnston, of the India Office, who won the 300 yards handicap at the Civil Service Sports this year, proved himself, in the trial heat for the 100 yards challenge cup such a flyer that the holder of the trophy, the renowned W. Collett, had not the temerity to oppose him in the final. The Civil Service are indeed fortunate in obtaining in Mr. Johnston such a worthy successor to their last sprint wonder, Mr. A. J. Eames. The other officials who distinguished themselves at this meeting were Mr. J. Bentley, who was not challenged, and was therefore indulged in a walk over for the Seven Mile Walking Challenge Cup, of which he is the holder. Mr. Sydenham Dixon had little difficulty in disposing of his two opponents, and thus retaining possession of the Half-Mile Challenge Cup, whilst his cousin, Mr. Lynes Dixon, was an easy winner of the 600 yards handicap.

Colonel MacMahon.—Brigadier-General P. W. MacMahon, C.B., commanding a Brigade of the Bengal Army, died at Brighton on the 13th inst. General MacMahon obtained his ensigncy by purchase in the 81st Regiment November 6, 1835; was transferred to the 44th Regiment April 1, 1836; became lieutenant in 1840; captain in 1845; major in 1854; brevet lieutenant-colonel in 1855; lieutenant-colonel in 1857; and colonel in 1861. He brought the 44th home from India in 1866, and soon afterwards exchanging to the 36th, left England early in 1867 for Bengal, to assume his command. In April, 1870, he was selected for the charge of a Bengal Brigade, and carried out the duties of the command until the spring of this year, when, in consequence of the failing state of his health, he was granted leave to Europe. He served throughout the Eastern campaign of 1854-55, including the battles of Alma and Inkerman, siege and fall of Sebastopol, and attack and occupation of the Cemetery and suburbs on the 18th June. He commanded the 44th in the campaign of 1860 in North China, including the action of Sinho, capture of Tungku, assault and capture of the Tanku Forts in command of stormers. For his services in the Crimea he obtained the Crimean medal with three clasps, the Sardinian and Turkish medals, and the 5th Class of the Order of Medjidie, and was made a Knight of the Legion of Honour.

Chartered Bank of India, London, and China.—The ordinary half-yearly meeting of the Chartered Bank of India, London, and China was held on Oct. 17, at the Banking-house, 65, Old Broadstreet; Mr. G. G. Nicol in the chair. The Directors' Report announcing a dividend of 3 per cent. for the half-year, free of income-tax, and carrying forward a balance of £20,547. 2s. 7d., has been published. The chairman explained that, that being the interim meeting only, he had no resolution to propose. The hopes expressed at the last meeting had been to some extent realised, and in consequence the present report was more satisfactory than the last. The improvement, however, was not so great as they could desire, owing to the very unfavourable state of the exchanges. There were many speculations as to the causes of that, but he believed it was mainly due to the excess of exports to the East, consequent on the low value of money in this country. We were now, he believed on the eve of dearer money, and an improvement in the exchanges, might be expected in proportion as the exports to the East fell off. That improvement was already going on, and there was reason to suppose that the current half-year would show better than the last. He was happy to be enabled to assure them that the bank was in a very sound position. No bad debts had been made during the half-year, and there was nothing in the books to justify any apprehension of losses in the current year. Mr. Richardson expressed his satisfaction at the report. A cordial vote of thanks to the chairman and directors concluded the proceedings.

British Officers and Burman Women.—The following letter was addressed to the Secretary of the Society for the Protection of Women and Children:—"Sir,—I write to ask whether your society extends its protection to women and children in foreign parts, and especially to the Indian subjects of her Majesty. If it does, or can, will you consider the facts I have to lay before you? In Burmah it has been for years a common practice for British officers to take Burmese women to live with them as their wives according to Burmese customs and views. These officers only remain a short time in the country, and, when they go, leave their women and children behind them, as a rule utterly unprovided for. I have a list now of thirteen deserted children and eleven women. Could not your society take up the cause of these women and children, and obtain either an Affiliation Law, to which all British subjects in the world should be subject, or some alteration in the marriage law, whereby women married according to their laws or customs could be recognised as the lawful wives of those who marry them, so that these men could not desert them without having something to pay towards their support? There is now in this place, which is one of the smallest military stations, a girl of eighteen, daughter of a Colonel in her Majesty's Service, who has never been recognised by her father. She is unbaptised, dresses in Burmese costume, and has lived with an English officer, and has a child. She is deserted, as her mother was. I need not say what a painful thing it is to see these poor children so abandoned by their parents, who must be well able to support them. – I have the honour to be, your obedient servant, John Clough, chaplain of Tonghoo, British Burmah — Tonghoo, Aug. 9."

The Albert Assurance Company.—Lord Cairns, as the arbitrator in the affairs of the Albert Assurance Company, has recently given his decision in a representative case in which an entirely novel point was raised. It was on a summons which stood for hearing before Vice-Chancellor Malins, and which was taken out by Mr. Lee, a director of the Family Endowment Society, in order that his name might be removed from the list of the contributories of that society. His application was grounded on the fact that although in 1861 he was a shareholder to the amount of 200 shares, having paid £4 per share, yet on the 5th February of that year an agreement for the amalgamation of the society was entered into with the Albert under the condition that the Albert paid to each of the shareholders by way of satisfaction, and in extinction of their shares, the sum of £4 for every share, together with interest at five per cent. per annum, and on the 16th September, 1861, Mr. Lee and all the other shareholders, with one exception, received the £4 and interest in respect of each share held by them. It was contended on his behalf before Lord Cairns that he had by this contract altogether retired from the society, and that he had no claim or interest therein, and could not say that he was entitled to attend a meeting of the Albert Assurance Company. If any further benefit accrued to the society he could not claim interest in it, and the society ought to be in the same position with regard to him. The Albert would certainly have to indemnify him, and they ought to be primarily liable; and it ought to be ascertained that they were unable to pay before he was proceeded against. Lord Cairns, in delivering judgment, said that the case was too clear to allow of any doubt, and Mr. Lee must remain on the list of contributories. His case might be looked at in two ways. He first claimed exemption on the ground that there had been a complete extinction of his shares; that could only be by a fulfilment of the conditions of the settlement; but those provisions contemplated an extinction of the shares on the hypothesis that a provision had been made for all claims that might be made on the society, and until that was done the time for the extinction of the shares and the dissolution of the society had not arrived. With regard to the second point, that in equity the shares have become the property of the Albert and ceased to be his, that could only be till the completion of the documents by the Albert and the substitution of another name for his; until that was done he would, by the section of the Companies' Act referred to, and the provisions of the Family Endowment, remain the person answerable for those shares. As this was a representative case, Mr. Lee's costs would be part of the winding-up.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE PAY OF ARMY OFFICERS.

The Standard observes that officers in future, if not less well born than hitherto, will most probably be much poorer than their predecessors. It will therefore be absolutely necessary either to raise their pay or reduce their expenses. At present the state of affairs is utterly artificial; it grew up with the purchase system, and with the latter it must die. If the army is to be an earnest, hard-working profession, requiring intellectual qualifications of no mean order, it will, at all events, be necessary to so arrange matters that even the youngest officer shall be able to live on his pay. Now, there are two ways of securing this result: one is to raise the pay itself, another to reduce the cost of living. As regards the former, any increase to our Army Estimates would no doubt meet with a violent opposition; as regards the latter, something may be done, it is true, but that something is, after all, but little. It will probably be found desirable to attempt a combination of two expedients—i.e., to slightly raise the pay and to reduce the expenses.

The Naval and Military Gazette holds that in the first place, subalterns are already much better paid than the junior members of the learned professions ; and, in the second, that to increase their pay would be prejudicial to the best interests of the army, by attracting a crowd of candidates aspiring to don the garb of an officer "that they might eat a piece of bread." An ensign who gets his commission at seventeen or eighteen years of age is receiving an income of practically £100 a-year for five, six, or seven years before his brothers, the parson and the barrister, or his cousin the doctor, even enter upon the practice of their professions and get a chance of making sixpence, which perhaps they do not do for several more years. When the ensign got his commission they were just going to the University to enter on a course of, say, from three to six years' study, costing at the very least £200 a-year. Take, say, five years as certainly not a high estimate for the excess in age of the junior members of the learned professions, when they begin to earn money over that of newly-joined subalterns ; then the account stands simply thus : The civilian is, at least, £100 out of pocket, while the army man has received in the same interval between £500 and £600, as before the end of the term he would have got his lieutenancy. Ten years later, however—that is to say, after the soldier has been fifteen years in the service and the civilians have been ten years in their professions—matters are altogether changed. The soldier is probably still only a captain with some £200 a-year, while the civilians are getting £600, £800, £1,000 or more. Whether the pay of senior army officers ought or ought not to be increased, and if so, in what way, is a matter which we cannot discuss at present—for influencing promotion as it does this is a very large question—but of one thing we are quite certain, that subalterns' pay ought not to be raised.

Railway Progress.—Mr. Crawford Campbell, accompanied by Mr. Alexander, C.E., was to leave Mhow on the 18th Sept. for Simla, taking the surveys and plans of the intended line from Burwai to Indore, for the final sanction of Government. The plans and drawings of the other half of the line from Kundwah to Burwai have already been submitted to Government. Mr. Campbell hopes to return with orders to commence work from November 1. Mr. Cregan, C.E., has already proceeded to Simla, and it is expected Mr. Bell will join Mr. Campbell at Khundwah, so that the whole of the staff of the Indore State Railway will be at Simla for the next month. The line is to be constructed not departmentally, but by contract.

Cashmere.—The Cashmere season, which is now drawing to its close, seems to have been in some respects a less brilliant one than usual, and than might have been expected from the unusually large number of visitors. This comparative dullness is attributed in part to the obstinate absence of the Maharajah from Srinuggur, which involved the loss to the gaiety-loving community of the great fetes which his Highness was wont to give at the Palace. The dislike of the Maharajar to Srinuggur is, we fear, due to the scant ceremony with which he is too often treated by his European guests. We know that the Maharajah himself complained last year to a distinguished officer that many of his guests never did him the honour to acknowledge him when they met, although from his boat, retinue, &c., he could not but be recognised. But if gaiety in the avowable and decorous sense has this year been below the wont of Cashmere, it has, we fear, been more rife than usual in its rowdy and disreputable forms. In fact, the license and ostentation now assumed by immorality seems to call for the more active interference of our Government. It is the growing opinion that nothing but the appointment, each season, of a military officer of rank to Srinuggur, with positive instructions to report all flagrant improprieties, and peremptorily to remand offenders to their regiments, will suffice to repress what now amounts to a national scandal.—Pioneer, Sept. 25.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.
As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

THE OPTOSCOPE.

The practical utility of the OPTOSCOPE is now fully determined. In numerous cases has its merits been displayed in a manner so satisfactory, that in no instance has it afforded less satisfaction to the intelligent inquirer than to the inventor himself. It has long been a matter of considerable importance to those suffering from defective vision to learn the exact state of the refractive humours of the eye, and the proper convexity or concavity of the glasses required to render the vision as perfect as the state of the organs will admit of.

is all that can be desired for this purpose, and those desirous of benefiting by his discovery may be suited with the most perfect-fitting glasses at moderate cost.

PROSPECTUS.

The advantages of Co-operation are now so generally understood as to render unnecessary any lengthened statement in introducing the above Society to public notice.

The Co-operative Societies established by members of the Civil Service have met with great success, and their business has assumed vast proportions. These Societies are, however, to a certain extent exclusive; one of them has discontinued receiving new subscribers not belonging to the Civil Service, and in the other the Army and Navy are not admitted on the same terms as Civilians. For these reasons many officers of the Army and Navy have thought it very desirable, with the assistance of persons having a practical knowledge of the various branches of trade, to form a Society on similar principles for the benefit of the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry. As an illustration of the extent to which the benefits derived from Co-operation have been appreciated, it may be mentioned that the Registrar of Friendly Societies in the last return giving full statistics, dated 5th August, 1869, stated that he had received returns from 670 Co-operative Societies in England and Wales, showing that their united capital amounted to £2,027,776, that in the preceding year they sold goods to the value of £8,113,072, and that they realised a net disposable profit of £425,452, or nearly 29 per cent. on the capital invested.

The ARMY AND NAVY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LIMITED, has for its object the supply of articles of domestic consumption and general use to its Members at the lowest remunerative rates.

The Members will consist of two classes, viz.—SHAREHOLDERS and ANNUAL SUBSCRIBERS.

The first class, Shareholders, will be limited to officers, non-commissioned officers, and petty officers serving, or who have served in the Army, Navy, Militia, or Yeomanry, the widows of officers, the Secretaries or other recognised officers of the Military and Naval Clubs, and representatives of Regimental and Naval Messes and Canteens.

The Shares will be of the value of £1 each, and holders of one or more Shares will be entitled to participate in the profits, to deal at the stores, and with the tradesmen connected with the Society, without any further payment whatever, and to have their purchases from the Stores, when of the value of £1 and upwards, delivered free of charge for carriage within the London District, including railway stations in London only.

The second class, Annual Subscribers, who pay 5s. the first year, and 2s. 6d. each subsequent year, will consist of persons eligible to become Shareholders, but who do not wish to take Shares, and a limited number of friends introduced by Shareholders or persons eligible to become Shareholders, subject to the approval of the Committee of Management. They will enjoy all the privileges possessed by Shareholders, except participation in the profits and management of the Society, or the special advantage as to carriage of parcels.

So soon as a requisite number of Shares shall have been taken up, a Store will be Opened in a convenient position at the West-end of London for the Sale of Groceries, Wines, Spirits, Stationery, Perfumery, Drugs, and Fancy Goods, and it is intended that Departments for Hosiery, Drapery, and Tailoring, be added as soon as possible.

Arrangements are in progress with a number of Retail Tradesmen of the highest class for the Sale of the Goods to Members at Reduced Prices.

When the Society meets with sufficient support, it is proposed that Branch Stores be Opened at the Principal Military and Naval Stations. Special attention will also be given to the supply of Goods to Officers on Foreign Stations.

Presidents of Officers' and Sergeants' Messes and Canteens, and the several Messes on board H.M.'s Ships of War will find great advantage in obtaining their supplies through the medium of the Society, as they will not only secure Low Prices, but will be enabled to depend upon the purity of every article.

Persons desirous of taking Shares are requested to make application to the Secretary, or to the Bankers of the Association, in one of the annexed Forms.

Persons desirous of becoming Annual Subscribers are requested to apply to the Secretary. Their Subscriptions will date from the Opening of the Store.

The Articles of Association may be seen, and any further information afforded, on application to the Secretary, at the Office of the Society.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Oct. 7; Agra and Madras, Oct. 5; Calcutta, Oct. 4.

THE papers received by this mail give long reports of the trial of the man who murdered Mr. Justice Norman. Nothing new came out in the way of evidence, nor did the prisoner himself make any sort of confession. He appears to have maintained the utmost calmness throughout, cross-questioning the witnesses with the coolness of one who had no particular interest in the matter. An immense crowd, composed chiefly of Englishmen and Hindus, surrounded the Town-hall, and struggled noisily for places inside the building. The verdict of the jury was greeted with universal cheering. When the prisoner was called upon for his defence, he repeated his old story, that he came meaning only to present a petition, that the judge refused to take it, and after that "I had not my senses about me." In passing sentence on him, Mr. Justice Paul spoke, as if regretfully, of the bar which "modern civilisation and a generous sympathy for the noblest of God's works" placed on the use of those more savage processes by which "ruffianly and hardened criminals" were formerly put to death, and which the prisoner might perhaps have undergone in the country which "gave him birth and nurtured him in his wickedness." He even seemed to take it as a special grievance that the prisoner had remained "resolutely mute," in "unbroken and remorseless silence," after an opportunity had been given him for showing "some sign of repentance, some symptom of contrition," for so foul a murder. The prisoner's silence, he complained, would fail to afford those who survive him "any exact knowledge of the impulses that operate on a wicked mind, and of the workings of a depraved heart," and so on; as if no such murder had ever been committed before, and as if it was really the prisoner's duty to offer himself as a psychological study for the sake of our "modern civilisation." It is a pity that the judge himself could not have taken a lesson of calmness from the man he thus pelted with words of probably unintelligible abuse. Having let his anger carry him so far, Mr. Justice Paul went on to express a hope that "some strong measures will be adopted by Government to cleanse our beautiful city of such vermin as you are"—what words of "generous sympathy!"—and to drive out of Calcutta all people who, with no ostensible means of livelihood, took refuge in holy places "under the garb of some pretended grievance."

WHEN the mail left India no clue whatever had been obtained either to the murderer's motives or his accomplices, if any he had. The papers seized in the Chitpore Mosque reveal, we are told, "absolutely nothing." The murderer himself is described as talking freely with all who are allowed to see him, and to all he tells the same story, about the sudden madness which came upon him at Mr. Norman's refusing to read his petition. That document itself has little importance for English eyes. It merely begged the Chief Justice to compel repayment of 300 rupees from a man at Benares who owed him that sum. Thirty pounds however would seem no trifle to a man of Abdullah's class and race, and the sudden frenzy caused by his repulse might possibly have had its [illegible] and [illegible] of murderous revenge.

WHATEVER was the real motive for Abdulla's crime, the leading Mohammedans of Calcutta have lost no time in declaring their abhorrence of such an act and their heart-felt grief at the murder of "one of the most upright and conscientious judges that ever sat on the bench of the Calcutta High Court." Such was the language used at a meeting held by a number of Mohammedans on the 1st of October at the house of Munshi Amir Ali. The late acting Chief Justice was further described by one of the speakers as "a most amiable, polite, generous, and learned gentleman." At the suggestion of the Munshi himself, it was unanimously agreed to raise a fund towards preserving the memory of the murdered Judge, and also to reward the courage of Shaik Faku who attacked the murderer at the risk of his own life. Like feelings of horror and regret have been expressed by several Mohammedans in letters to the newspapers. One of them, "Z. D. HASSAN," dwelling on Mr. Norman's many claims on the kindly remembrance of all classes, especially of the Mohammedans whose welfare he had "laboured hard to promote," refuses to give the name of Mohammedan to the "Punjabi Beast" whose knife had sent its victim out of the world while his good work was yet but half done. No one, argues the writer, can be a true Mohammedan "who deprives the Mohammedans of their benefactor." Such an one "is the worst enemy of the whole community, and Mohammedan law would at once order him to be impaled without much ceremony." On the other hand the Englishman talks mysteriously of the anonymous letters which have been going round the Calcutta Press, breathing dark threats against the Judges, the Police Commissioner, and other officials. It suggests that most of these may be practical jokes; a likelihood almost more disagreeable than the notion of their having been written in earnest.

GREAT dissatisfaction has been expressed in some quarters at the slow and seemingly futile action of the Calcutta police, and even at the smallness of the reward—Rs. 3,000—offered for the discovery of a sure clue to the recent murder. According to the Indian Daily News, the helplessness of the police had become a byword. No attempt was made to search the Chitpore Mosque till thirty hours after the outrage; no watch was kept at the railway stations on the night of the murder; nor was any reward offered for a whole week. Strictures of this sort may not be worth much in the present instance; even policemen cannot be omniscient; but people on the spot remember how often of late years the Calcutta police have failed in tracking great crimes, and the quarrel which broke out between Mr. Hogg and the magistrate who committed Abdullah may possibly have hampered the movements of the police.

Preparations for the Loshai campaign are going briskly forward. Major Moore, Captain Anderson, and Captain Hidayat Ali are to go with the Coolie Corps of the Cachar column. Major G. A. Brown, Captain Croham, and Captain Branson will accompany the Chittagong column. Captain Hidayat Ali has been hard at work enlisting Ghoorkhas in Darjeeling, whose knives will be equally useful in clearing jungle and dealing with obnoxious Kúkis. Major Brown was to start with stores and coolies on the 2nd, and Captain Croham about the middle of October. The last batch of coolies was to leave for the frontier about the beginning of November. Two thousand in all are to accompany each column. Of the Commissariat officers, Capt. Marriott had already left for Cachar, and Captain Case for Chittagong. The former will soon be followed by Colonel Davidson, and the latter by Colonel Mackenzie. The Mountain Train guns will be carried on elephants, a hundred of which will also carry the baggage of each column. The 22nd N.I. from Barrackpore, with one company of Sappers, were to embark from Calcutta in October, and move by Dacca and Chattak to Cachar. Both columns will probably be ready to take the field by the 20th November. Five months' provisions, we hear, will accompany the troops. The baggage and camp followers will be cut down as closely as possible, each officer being limited to twenty seers—about 40 lb.—one coolie, and one other servant, while a syce and a grass-cutter will be shared between every two. Tents, we presume, will be carried for the officers at the public cost. For staff officers the allowance of baggage will be doubled, and trebled in the case of commanding officers.

The little Sepoy Mutiny at Goa appears to have been suployalty of a few hundred soldiers, without any bloodshed or any direct concession to the mutineers. It seems to have arisen from the sympathy of the troops with certain of their sergeants who had been imprisoned on the charge of sowing disaffection for their own purposes. No sooner however has a peaceful settlement been reported from India, than a telegram from Lisbon of Friday last announces the threatened outbreak of a new revolt. The Governor is said to be quite prepared for it, but asks for help from home.

The mysterious telegram about the surrender of "Mohammed Keyes" with his women and property, has been cleared up in the way we suggested by the latest news from India. It referred of course to the Mohammed Kheyl Waziris, a body of whom last year fell upon one of our relief-parties on its way from Bunnoo to Koorum, killing six and wounding all the rest. Stern measures were threatened against the offending tribe and all who might give them shelter or support; but the death of Sir H. Durand disarranged the plans of the Punjab officials, and the punishment of the offenders was reserved for the next cold season. Meanwhile however the tribe in question took fright at the prospect before them and resolved at last to yield unconditionally. So on the 20th September the whole tribe, numbering 500 men, came over to Bunnoo, laid down their arms at the Commissioner's feet, and placed themselves, their families, and goods, including 2,000 head of cattle, at the mercy of the English Government. All who had taken part in the outrage of last year were given up to the Commissioner, who at once placed them under a strong guard, pending instructions from Government for their disposal. The rest of the suppliants with their women and property were distributed among their fellow tribesmen on the Thull, a plain not far from Bunnoo. This act of self-abasement on the part of these restless borderers affords striking evidence of the fear which a stern policy steadily pursued may inspire in the most refractory of our wild subjects and neighbours along the North-Western frontier.

The Indian papers contain some interesting correspondence touching the mutinous conduct of the 19th Madras N.I. General M'Cleverty's letter to the Horse Guards of 13th June, 1871, bears witness to the high discipline of the regiment in 1870 under Colonel Cholmeley, after Lieutenant Colonel Jenkins had been displaced by Lieutenant Colonel Firth. The writer ascribes the misconduct of the Sepoys last February to the mistake made by their officers in withholding from them the two months' advance of pay, to which one wing was legally and both wings were equitably entitled on embarking for three years' foreign service. They thought it a hardship that they "had not the means of sending their dearest to their homes, except by the advance they had solicited four days previously." He is convinced that "no spirit of mutiny or disloyalty existed in the regiment." The men "were actuated by no spirit of mutiny, as evinced in their afterconduct; they used no threats or violence, but, impelled by anxiety about their wives and families, they became impatient in a manner which, though not altogether defensible, could be palliated." It was not they who had been to blame in the first instance, but Colonel Cholmeley, whose "error of judgment" had driven them to refuse their pay as the only means of obtaining redress. General M'Cleverty therefore saw no necessity for delaying their departure from Madras. Under like circumstances he "would have treated a European regiment in the same manner." He held further that Major Bowen had acted hastily in confining the first man, and that Colonel Cholmeley had done wrong to release the prisoners of the first two companies.

In his remarks on the whole case the Duke of Cambridge concurs with the Madras Government in ascribing the misconduct of the 19th N.I. to the carelessness, weakness, or heartlessness of the various officers concerned. At the same time he thinks that "nothing can justify the serious acts of insubordination" committed by the men. In his opinion the regiment should not have been allowed to embark "without the knowledge and express sanction of the Government." Inasmuch as it did embark however, his Royal Highness holds that its offence had been condoned; for which reason he demurs to the subsequent disbandment of part of the regiment; a step moreover that compromised the authority by reversing the decision of the Commander-in-Chief of Madras.

In the Duke of Argyll's reply to a despatch from the Madras Government, his Grace expresses entire concurrence with the views of that Government on the conduct of all directly concerned in the events reported. In approving however the removal of Colonel Cholmeley, Major Bowen, and Captain Atkinson from their several posts, he questions the "justice and propriety" of involving in the same sentence Lieutenant-colonel Firth, who had but lately joined the regiment and was on the sick list when the row took place. No part of Colonel Cholmeley's responsibility as commanding officer ought, in his Grace's opinion, to have been shifted on to his subordinate's shoulders. The Secretary of State finds no sufficient excuse for the misconduct of the Sepoys or the course pursued by the head of the Madras Army in allowing them to embark unpunished. Since he did however make so light of their grave offence, his Grace, in concurrence with the views expressed by the Horse Guards, doubts greatly whether the Madras Government would not have "better consulted the future well-being of the regiment as well as the discipline of the army generally" by leaving General McCleverty's decision untouched, than by taking a step which cannot but weaken the respect of the native soldiers for their military superiors. On this point at any rate all military men will agree with the heads of the India Office and the Horse Guards. To our thinking however General McCleverty has hardly received due justice from either Chief. If the Sepoys had right on their side as against their own officers, ought they to have been heavily punished for refusing to take their pay; the only means they knew of for getting their grievances redressed in good time? Is it not usual for English soldiers to refuse to take their pay, if the amount offered them be less than what they may consider their due? And are they liable to punishment for the mere refusal, especially if their claims on due inquiry prove to be well-founded? It is all very well to say that discipline must be maintained at all costs, but the principle is stretched too far when the heaviest punishment falls not on those who provoke, but on those who are driven to commit the alleged breach of discipline. Let us have justice first, and discipline will maintain itself, in the army as in every other body of organised workers.

Prince Gholam Mohammed, the pensioned descendant of Tippoo Sultan, has again distinguished himself as a public benefactor. He has just added another lakh of rupees (£10,000) to the fund he established two years ago for the relief of the Calcutta poor. Of this sum Rs. 20,000 are set aside for the Christian poor. With the help of the remainder his Highness proposes to add a hundred Mohammedans and twenty-five Hindus to the list of natives already drawing relief. The larger number of Mohammedans indicates the donor's natural preference for people of his own faith.

Of legislative business at Simlah there is not much to record. On the 28th September Colonel Strachey's Bill regulating advances of money by Government for the improvement of land passed through Council. Mr. Cockerell presented the report of the Committee on his Bill repealing certain enactments of the Bengal Code. Mr. Cockerell himself takes two years' leave from December. Lord Mayo was to leave Simlah on the 27th October, travelling across the hills westward to Kulu and Kangra, and reaching Calcutta about the end of November.

The Government Eclipse Expedition sailed on Thursday morning for Ceylon from Southampton in the Mirzapore, under the charge of Mr. Lockyer. They expect to reach Point de Galle about the 27th November. There or thereabout the leaders will confer with their fellow-observers from India with a view to concerted action. In their arrangements for the expedition the Eclipse Committee have been handsomely aided not only by the Government, but by the Peninsular and Oriental Company as well.

The damage done by floods still forms a prominent topic in the papers. Nearly one-half the stock of cattle in Bengal is said to have perished; a result which means heavier and heavier debt for many a cultivator. Berhampore has again been flooded. Gwalior has suffered from a great flood. Jaunpore has almost disappeared in the swollen Goomtie. A heavy storm of rain has washed down many native buildings in Chunarpore. Sultanpore in Oudh the Goomtie has risen thirteen feet higher than the high flood of last year, doing nearly as much damage as at Jaunpore. At Pertabghur the beautiful bridge over the Saye, only four years old, has been "swept away like old refuse." The whole of Eastern Oudh in short is under water or nearly useless for purposes of traffic. At Lucknow forty inches of rain fell in five days, which would account for the terrible floods on that side of India. The consequent loss of life must have been greater than we are ever likely to ascertain. The reports on the other hand from most parts of Bengal are more favourable, and in Bombay and the Central Provinces the crops in general appear to be doing well.

The latest news of Baboo Keshab Chandar Sen represents him taking the chair in the Town Hall of Calcutta during a lecture delivered by Baboo Narendranath Sen on the Marriage Laws of India. The lecture, which appears to have been very exhaustive, went through all the reasons for granting the Indian Brahmists a Marriage Bill of the kind first brought forward by Sir H. Maine, and now committed to the charge of his successor, Mr. F. Stephen.

At Bombay the shareholders in the old Bank of Bombay held a meeting to discuss the expediency of prosecuting their directors for the losses which led to the Bank's collapse. The question however was reserved for further debate on the 16th October.

The Court-martial on Colonel Lowe was still sitting when the mail left. The report of the trial fills several columns of the Englishman. At Bangalore Messrs. Van Ingen have turned the tables on the officers who entered their grounds. Lieutenant Lambart and Sergeant McInnis have been committed for trial for criminal trespass with intent to wound. Lieutenant Frere has not yet recovered from his wound.

A new danger to telegraphic cables has just been reported from China. It appears that somewhere between Hong Kong and Nagasaki the Chinese have carried off a whole length of the cable for their own use, without any regard for the feelings of a bereaved public that cannot do without its telegrams. If this fancy for stealing cables spreads, what is to be done?

The India Office has lost a valuable servant in the lamented death of Lieutenant General Sir George Jameson, which happened last Wednesday at Blackheath, in his seventieth year. The late Auditor of the India Office entered the Bombay Army in 1820 and in 1848 became Deputy Auditor General of that Army. In 1853 he rose to be Auditor-General; and six years afterwards became President of the Finance Commission at Calcutta. In 1861 he obtained the post in which he died, and his financial experience was called into play during the Abyssinian campaign. He had not long enjoyed his knighthood of the Star of India when death carried him off.

INDIAN HARBOURS.

The Surveys in India includes an interesting memoir by Mr. Clements Markham on the surveys carried out under the East India Company by their own officers, and a workmanlike paper by Captain A. D. Taylor, of the old Indian Navy, on the Harbours of India. To the former, which has since been embodied in the larger volume reviewed by us a few months ago, we need not here revert. The latter however demands separate notice on account of the information brought together, and the opinions expressed by an officer who played no ordinary part in the marine surveys of former years. It was Captain Taylor who, twenty years ago, explored the Gulf of Kutch, and afterwards conducted a careful and exhaustive survey of the western coast of India below Bombay. "There is no man living"—says Mr. Markham—"who is so intimately acquainted with the anchorages on the Indian Coast from the mouths of the Indus to those of the Godavery, or who so completely understands their capabilities for improvement." His chart of the winds and currents of the Arabian Sea served yet further to attest the scientific thoroughness of all his work. Returning to England eleven years ago "to recruit health and strength after nineteen years' uninterrupted service in the East," Captain Taylor found himself in 1862 "quietly put on the shelf along with others who had borne the burden and heat of the day." The noble old Indian Navy ceased to exist; many of its most experienced officers, who had toiled hard for years "among Indian rivers, harbours, tides, winds, currents," were pensioned off; their charts and papers handed over to the Admiralty; and the Indian Government, according to Captain Taylor, was left "without a single man of Indian experience in nautical matters, who could inform them what a treasury of harbours and anchorages they possessed in the Far East." So utterly indeed had the fruits of former researches faded out of sight, that last year Lord Mayo was writing home for a civil engineer to examine the coast of India "with the view of discovering sites for ports." No wonder that an experienced officer of the old Indian Navy should feel hurt at a proposal which "ignores the patient peaceful labours of the pioneers of Indian navigation" under the rule of the East India Company. After all the hard-worn discoveries of men like Captain Taylor, who worked in all weathers, often in the leakiest of old native pattimars, it is certainly strange to learn from official reports drawn up in the India-office that "India possesses very few really good ports" except the four or five best known to English merchants. No reference is made for instance to the fine natural harbours of Kattiwar, although "the surveys of its entire seaboard were completed by the officers of the Indian Navy, and the charts published more than a dozen years ago."

Along the western seaboard of India alone Captain Taylor reckons up twenty-six valuable ports and anchorages, of which seven, namely, Poshetra, Seraia, Shalbet, Bombay, Jaighur, Viziadroog, and Karwar, can easily be made into first-class harbours. Besides these there are the Vingorla Rocks, behind which it would any day be feasible to make "an enormous harbour of refuge." Alipee again offers a safe roadstead for large vessels all the year round. Of the bar harbours there are some like Jinjira, Jaighur, Tudri, whose bars, being surrounded by rocky shores, are "kept well down by the strong ebb tides." Many middling and minor bar-rivers indent the Western coast. Karachi itself may not be a first-rate harbour, the delta of the Indus always advancing seaward, so as to make the water to the south-east of Manera always more shoal. Nevertheless, as the nearest Indian port to the Red Sea, its geographical importance needs no demonstration, and sooner or later measures for its improvement are sure to be carried out. It is destined in fact to become the Port Said of India.

At the entrance of the Gulf of Kutch, among the islands of the Kattiwar side lie the excellent natural harbours of Poshetra and Seraia, the one belonging to the Chief of Dwarka, the other to the Jam of Nowanuggur. Both of these are sheltered largest of our ironclads, or even the Great Eastern, at any time of the tide. They need no costly breakwaters, nothing in fact save lights and beacons, wharves, and roads for the conveyance of inland traffic. They are virtually 300 miles nearer than Bombay to Aden in the south-west monsoon, when the cotton crop is ready for carriage to Europe. The cotton of Kutch, now forwarded by Bombay, might be pressed and shipped at either of these ports. After blowing for three or four days together, there is always a lull in the monsoon, during which no vessel would be troubled to find its way out of the Gulf. Heavy rain seldom falls in the Gulf, so that with the aid of proper beacons any vessel nearing the Kattiwar coast could easily run past the great Bural reef which serves as a breakwater to both Seraia and Poshetra. Native vessels bound for the busy port of Mandavi and manned chiefly by a race of bold and skilful Hindu sailors, already find their way in rough weather to safe anchorage at Chanka, an island on the reef, with the help only of "the few landmarks which nature has given;" and why then, naturally asks Captain Taylor, should the Gulf of Kutch be still "avoided by British seamen, after the entire gulf has been surveyed and elaborate charts published?" With such harbours once made quite easy of access, who would think of transmitting the cotton of Kattiwar any longer by rail through Ahmedabad to Bombay?

Shalbet Island, another of the Kattiwar harbours, lies about thirty miles east of Din Head, at the western end of the country ruled by the Rajah of Bhownuggur. During the south-west monsoon it is nearly two days to windward of Bombay. On the north side of this island, once famed as a pirate stronghold, there is good sheltered anchorage, five or six fathoms deep at low water, with a muddy bottom and a narrow entrance between a bank and a reef of rocks. Shalbet Island, properly utilised, would offer the best channel for trade between Bombay, Surat, or Ahmedabad and Southern Kattiwar.

Passing by the Gulf of Cambay as wholly impracticable, and coming to Bombay, Captain Taylor asks what we have done for that port since it came into our possession? Wharves and wet-docks are still to make before Bombay can be placed far ahead of Madras in respect of trading facilities. A scheme for providing wet-docks was all but ripe when the commercial crash of 1865 stopped all further movement in that direction, and since then nothing has been done. Jinjira, the capital of the Hubshi State, possesses an excellent harbour on the Rajpuri River, with a muddy bottom and a depth varing from 3½ fathoms at the entrance to 4½ inside. A very small outlay would furnish a few beacons and a light for vessels seeking safe shelter at twenty-five miles south of Bombay. Jaighur, or Shastri River, would offer safe anchorage against all winds in water three fathoms deep at low tide. The channel, which keeps close to the cliffs under the Fort, might easily be improved by judicious plans. Of Kalbadevi Bay, which lies sixteen miles below Jaighur, and offers shelter in a depth of five fathoms from southerly winds, Captain Taylor thinks less favourably, because it is open to north-west winds. He has more to say for Viziadroog or Gheria, which enjoys "a most excellent harbour," fit for sheltering vessels in the south-western monsoon. The fort here was surrendered in 1755 to Admiral Watson, and the fleet of the pirate Angria entirely destroyed. Viziadroog, with a depth of 3½ fathoms at low water and an old but half-filled dock, can be rendered a first-class port and harbour of refuge at a very trifling expense. A dozen miles further south, at Deoghur, is "an excellent little harbour," into which a small vessel in distress might run in the south-west monsoon. At Vingorla Rocks, a mile from Nuti Point, there is the making of a first-rate harbour, with an anchorage of 10 to 12 fathoms in a broad muddy bottom, and good shelter from north-west and west winds.

Marmagao, not far from Goa, and like Goa on Portuguese ground, could also be improved into a capital harbour. Of Karwar, the newly-selected port for the cotton trade of the Dakhan, what need to speak? The pity is that the only good harbour of the Madras Presidency should have been transferred to Bombay. Anjideva Island, [illegible] miles to the south of Karwar, would shelter ships in the south-west monsoon. This too belongs to Portugal, although in 1662 it was claimed by England as part of the Princess Catherine's dower. Baswarajah Droog might form a breakwater for a landing-pier run out from the northern side of the entrance into Honore River. It is far better, we agree with Captain Taylor, to make good use of natural aids in the shape of reefs and rocky islets, than to spend money in driblets on hopeless efforts to improve river mouths. For the sake of Madras however Captain Taylor lays more stress on utilising Deria Bahadur Ghur, the nearest port to the Agoombi Ghaut leading up into Mysore; while its connection with Travancore could easily be ensured by a coast canal through Malabar. For the sake of Canara something might be done to improve Mangalore, which used to have only six feet of water on its bar at the lowest tides. Calicut also, the capital of Malabar, would bear improving as a fine-weather port. The same and even more may be said of Cochin, where ships have sometimes entered in the lulls of the south-west monsoon. Nor are Alipee and Narrakal to be passed over without a word, as roadsteads convenient to Cochin. If another port were needed for Travancore, a very good one, large enough for coasters and perhaps for large ships, might be opened out at Enciam islet or Calachul Toray, where the outlying rocks form a partial breakwater, about thirty miles from Cape Comorin.

Turning upwards along the eastern or Coromandel coast, and passing by Armagom as a port long since practically superseded by its neighbour Madras, Captain Taylor can recommend for the latter place little more than "a boat harbour of rectangular form, excavated in the foreshore, internally faced with masonry, and the seaward face as an ordinary sloping breakwater." A full description of such a harbour, which could be made at very little cost in comparison with the vast sums needed for an extensive breakwater, is furnished by its projector, Captain J. H. Taylor, who "has traded between England and Madras for thirty years." On the immediate advantages of such a harbour it is needless to enlarge, and even if the grander works recommended by the Harbour Committee were ever carried out, a boat harbour with good quays and ample accommodation would still be needed to render those works complete. As for Coconada, its existence is already threatened by the filling up of the Bay and the proposed attempt to "make the Godavery disgorge its waters by an enlarged opening south of Hope Island." The silting process is also gradually shoaling the Bay of Masulipatam on the Golconda Coast, between the mouths of the Kistnah and the Godavery, so that now a vessel in three and a-half fathoms of water must lie three and a-half miles from shore. Here however the holding is good, being formed of the same mud which fills up the Bay of Coringa and deadens the violent rush of the waves lashed by the north-east monsoon. And so ends an able and useful paper, from which an enlightened Government might reap much profit, if it really sought to further the interests of its subjects in the best and cheapest way.

DEATHS FROM SNAKES AND WILD BEASTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—Permit me to draw your attention to the following extract from the Times of yesterday on the mortality in India within three years caused by wild beasts and snakes, amounting to the awful number of 25,664, equivalent to upwards of 8,554 per annum, which is more than a three years' campaign would probably cost :—

The Viceroy has decided to continue and extend the rewards for the destruction of wild beasts and snakes. The following dreadful records of deaths from both causes during the three years ending 1869 were published in the Government Gazette last week :—Killed by wild beasts—Madras, 888; Bombay (exclusive of Scinde, &c.), 148; Bengal, 6,741; North-Western Provinces, 2,168; Punjab, 310; Oude, 569; Central Provinces, 1,347; Coorg, 147; Hyderabad, 129; British Burmah, 107; total, 12,554. Killed by snakes—Madras, 760; Bombay (exclusive of Scinde, &c.), 588; Bengal, 14,787; North-Western Provinces, 2,474; Punjab, 1,064; Oude, 3,782; Central Provinces, 1,961; Coorg, not given; Hyderabad, 226; British Burmah, 97; total, 25,664.

It is true that the Governor-General has decided to continue and extend the rewards for their destruction, but as I have reason to believe that in Madras, at all events, these rewards do not extend to cubs, which it is the object of those who make the destruction their trade to preserve, it may be as well if the rewards extended to them as well as to small snakes and even eggs of the latter. Ferishta records that one of the Kings of Malwa (I have not the work to refer to, but if I recollect right it was Sultan Hussein of Mandie), who by rewards so cleared his kingdom of wild beasts and reptiles that not one was eventually to be found in his dominions.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—The recent assassinations in India, following as they have close upon the State trials of the Wahabee leaders, have given rise to a general feeling of insecurity. To judge from the accounts in the various Indian papers which have just come to hand, there seems to be almost a panic in some parts of the country.

I have read with attention the various letters and articles that have appeared lately in the Times and your own columns, but it seems to me that none of those who have handled the subject have looked in the right direction for a remedy. To connect the events that have given rise to so much disquietude with the Wahabees is a mistake; and there is danger, if the ideas that have been expressed in this matter are allowed to lay hold of the public mind, of the Government being led into acts of great injustice, and of their falling into an old fault, the cause already of so many troubles and disasters in India, confounding the innocent with the guilty.

To accuse the sect of Wahabees generally of disaffection, and of harbouring murderous designs, is as unjust as it is impolitic. Investigation would show that what the writer under the signature of a "Mussulman at Agra" in the Times recently stated is the truth, and that there is nothing in the tenets of Wahabeeism to justify the stigma which has been cast on Wahabees generally as dangerous fanatics. At the same time there are many indications of the existence of secret societies in India, half-political, half-religious, whence the recent acts of violence may have emanated, and others possibly may be expected. I do not believe that the assassination of the late lamented Mr. Justice Norman, for instance, was the act of an individual fanatic, nor prompted by mere private malice. The habit of secret assassination, when once it takes root in semi-civilised communities, is dangerous and troublesome, as the history of other countries besides India will show. Look, for instance, at Ireland and China. There is only one way of dealing effectually with an evil of this sort. I have no hesitation in saying that in this case the remedy is to be found in the much required reform of our Indian police administration.

What the Indian Government requires above all things, and what it is totally deficient in, is an efficient detective police force. That the elements of such a force are not wanting is clear enough from the way in which Thuggeeism was stamped out; from the way in which Captain Parsons wormed out the Mahommedan conspiracy some four or five years ago, the remains of which have recently been occupying attention in the Patna trials; from the way in which Mr. Forjett confronted and checkmated secret conspiracy in Bombay in 1858-59. There is an officer now in India, Colonel Hervey, the head of the old "Thuggee" and the present "Dacoitee" department, whose name is a terror to Thugs and secret societies all over India. But the services of such men as these, and others like them, are only called for spasmodically, when some danger has announced itself and called for special action. The police administration generally is so managed as to be not only useless for detecting and preventing crime, but a source of positive political danger. What is required for India is a detective force composed of carefully selected officers and men, under the control of one superintending officer, who should be in direct communication with the Governor General and Council. Such an officer would be able to keep the Government informed of what is going on all over the country. At present, the officers who are responsible for the administration of India seem to be in ignorance of any and everything below the mere surface. They know absolutely nothing of native Sovereigns, at meetings and assemblies of wealthy and influential men in the large centres of population. The Government ignores all these things, and is content to be taken by surprise, as it was in 1857, by some sudden outbreak of fanaticism or political disaffection. The old adage that "prevention is better than cure" is totally lost sight of, and we seem content to wait till disaffection, always seething below the surface, declares itself, and calls for violent measures to suppress it—measures which generate all sorts of evil passions, and race antagonism, and stop the progress of civilisation half a century. The police at present is a semi-military body, indifferently armed and drilled, just so much as to make it dangerous, and composed of a class of men adepts in intrigue, as all Orientals are, but too often, as the records of our criminal courts and the pages of Government police administration reports show,* prone to bribery and corruption of the worst kind. One half the power of evil possessed by the Indian police would be removed if the detective elements were eliminated from it; for it is in being employed as detectives that so wide a field for oppression and corruption becomes open to the native police, and it is in attempting the difficult task of detective that the officers, always untrained and generally inefficient at such duty, become tools in the hands of men who in power of intrigue, astuteness and cunning, are so far superior to the European officer as he is to them in physical development.† At the same time a special detective service is imperatively called for in India. It is called for on political as well as social grounds; and if some steps are not taken to make the Government better informed than it is now of what is going on beneath the surface, the time will come when the defect I am pointing out will be seen and deplored. The police as at presented constituted are not only a source of danger to the State, from the fact of their being an organised body scattered over the whole Continent, already half-armed, and capable of arming themselves thoroughly, far removed from effective supervision, with many facilities for communication and co-operation; but the abuse of power which their constant employment as detectives puts into their hand makes them an instrument of oppression to an extent no Englishman who has not resided in India can readily believe. And for the oppression exercised by them in the name of the law, the British Government and its officers get the blame. Take from them all detective duties and make them what an armed police ought to be, merely the instrument for carrying out law and maintaining public security, and you rob them of much of their power for mischief.

* See "Report of Police Administration of Bengal for 1867," Vol. 2, p. 122.

† For more on this subject see "Prichard's Administration of India," Vol. 2, ch. 18, where the whole question is discussed at length.

On the other hand, the nucleus for an efficient detective department already exists in the establishment for the suppression of dacoitee now under Colonel Hervey. The duties of this department are essentially detective, and the system only requires a little modification to render it best adapted for all the purposes for which a detective police in India is so much required. Colonel Hervey or the officer, whoever he may be, nominated to control the department, should be allowed to select his own subordinates, and to carry on the duties of the department in his own way, keeping the Governor-General in Council informed of all that transpires. I am not wholly inclined to support "secret departments" of any kind, but here secresy is the life and soul of the system. Head masters of schools and some heads of families may consider it beneath them, and injurious as showing want of confidence, to keep up a system of espionage and acquaint themselves with what goes on under their roof. But the Government of a country like India, especially one situated as ours is, cannot, at least for long, neglect with safety the precautions which I suspect every other Government in the world find it necessary to adopt.

THE NEW LOAN.

The Friend of India observes that the main features in the new arrangement is the re-issue of thirteen and a-half millions sterling in new notes, bearing 4½ per cent. for seven years, and 4 per cent. for [illegible] the surviving Loan of no less than two the Currency Department. The issue of this notification has produced in monetary circles in Calcutta a feeling of intense indignation. If those who now guide the direction of the financial policy of the Government were desirous of doing a "good stroke of business" for the Currency Department, they might at least have taken care to provide that the loss the transaction entails should fall equally on all present holders of the Five per Cent. Loan. The new issue of thirteen and a-half millions sterling might have been distributed rateably to present holders of that Loan. But it is not so. Government steps in to protect the capitalist, while the interests of the humblest class of holders are entirely neglected. And we doubt not the whole loss this arrangement involves—calculated by a contemporary at about ten lacs of rupees—will ultimately have to be borne by the very class which of all others demanded at the hands of Government the fullest and most indulgent consideration. We cannot but think the Government has committed a blunder in this matter of benefiting the Currency Department at the expense of the holders of the present Loan, and the feeling in commercial circles is one that no Government, if wise, will attempt to trifle with. Another evil of the Government proposal is the immediate locking up of so large a sum as thirteen and a-half millions sterling, which could so easily have been prevented by some simple mechanical arrangements on the part of the Treasury officers. The proposal to make the currency of the new Loan, seven years at 4½ per cent., three years at 4 per cent., does not speak much for the fiscal ability of those who now advise the Government of India. It is to be regretted that at a moment when the Government might have shown its capacity to grasp in a large and liberal spirit the relations in which it stands to the public stock-holder, whether in England or in India, it has preferred to be guided by principles at once indefensible in any view of sound financial policy, and repugnant to every sense of fair dealing. We understand that the Chamber of Commerce has already forwarded to the Government at Simla a respectful but justly indignant protest, and we hope it is not too late for the Governor-general to stop the issue, to save the country from the injustice his financial advisers are about to perpetrate.

LOCAL TROOPS IN INDIA.

The Englishman says that the exclusive employment of local troops in India is a proposition it would not for a moment advocate, but it seems to be of the highest importance, both to England and to India, that a proportion of the troops employed should be local. In the first place, a large number of recruits would be tempted into a local army with local privileges who would never enlist in the general army, and so far the establishment of the former would be an immense relief to the recruiting difficulty, which is now so serious an obstacle to the maintenance of the British army. In the next place, it would save the British army a large amount of wear and tear which it cannot afford. We have noticed lately that in the period 1861-69 the loss of men by death and invaliding was more than one-half the average number employed. This is more than double the rate of loss of the army at home, and it would have been very much greater under the short enlistment system, for it is among the young recruits and during the first years of Indian residence that by far the greatest mortality occurs. Probably twenty per cent. of this mortality would be saved, if half the troops employed were enlisted for permanent local service. In other words, between seven and eight thousand men would be saved to England every ten years. A further important advantage of maintaining a local army would be the large saving of expense to India for passage money, training, and bounties, that would result from it. Other benefits would accrue to India from the possession of a local army which we may notice hereafter.

BULLYING COLONELS.

The Bombay Gazette admits that discipline must be maintained in regiments, but discipline is no longer discipline when it is purchased at the cost of such dissatisfaction as we have heard of in the instance of this Gilbert court martial. Men are men, not, as a rule, brute-beasts to be goaded and driven into the performance of their duties; but Colonel Kennedy would seem to have considered the officers of one of the finest regiments in her Majesty's service as mules and asses, rather than as reasonable beings; he seems, in fact, to have driven them where there was no necessity to drive, and to have goaded them where kindness and courtesy would have far better answered his purposes and those of the public service. Unhappily, commanding officers holding Colonel Kennedy's theories of coercion as their own are not so rare in our armies as could be desired. The public do not hear of their malpractices very often, for, so excellent is our discipline, on the whole, that it requires a court-martial scandal to bring them to light; nevertheless, few military men will be found to deny that much needless tyranny and abuse of authority is to be found in many regiments of the British and India armies, and principally owing to this cause, that officers are placed in the responsible post of commanders of corps without any proper test of their fitness for command in the first place. Mistakes will occur in the best regulated families, but we acknowledge that it surprises us how, when an officer has been in his post [illegible] so long, for [illegible] Colonel Kennedy has been retained in command of the 60th Rifles. We suppose that Colonel Kennedy's highly sensitive feelings have up to the present date been spared the pain of a summons to England from head-quarters; that, in fact, what is rank blasphemy in the ensign is only a very mild offence, to be studiously ameliorated, for the colonel. If Colonel Kennedy was to blame, his punishment should have followed on his offence as swiftly as it did on that of Ensign Gilbert; but as it happens, although the latter could do and did no injury to any one but himself, Colonel Kennedy has been left in command of his regiment for many months subsequent to the Gilbert court-martial with full power and authority to do as he pleased with those unluckily placed under his command. If this is Horse Guards' justice, we must say it is quite as extraordinary as other absurdities issuing from that department.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE.—The Daily Examiner says that the Hon. Francis Baring Kemp, who has just been appointed to officiate as Chief Justice, is the senior civilian of the Bengal Presidency, his service dating from 11th November, 1831, and having consequently reached its fortieth year. By the High Court Act not fewer than one-third of the judges of the High Court respectively, including the Chief Justice, shall be barristers of not fewer than five years' standing; but under the 7th Section of the same Act, the Governor General in Council, on a vacancy occurring in the office of Chief Justice, or during the absence of a Chief Justice, may appoint any one of the judges of the said High Court to perform the duties of Chief Justice till some person has been appointed by her Majesty to the vacant office.

SNAKE-POISON.—The last number of the Madras Monthly Journal of Medical Science contains some valuable papers on further experiments made by Dr. Shortt, Superintendent General of Vaccination, Madras, with snake (cobra) poison. A cobra was made to bite a full-grown dog, and about a minute afterwards one drachm of an extract prepared from Aristolochia Indica was administered. The wound was deeply and freely scarified, and the extract, dissolved in a little brandy, was well rubbed into the wound, among the tissues, skin, and muscular fibrillæ of the bitten part; the wound was also filled with a solution made of the extract. In ten minutes the medicine was repeated internally, the wound cleansed, and a fresh portion of the solution rubbed in and allowed to cover the wound. At this time, the scalp was also scarified and the extract rubbed in, but the animal died in fifty minutes. The wound was merely skin deep, for the cobra, in seizing the leg of the dog, allowed the muscles to slip away, before it could grasp the part, so that the skin only was caught and wounded. Dr. Shortt made another experiment, with the object of testing a different species of the Aristolochias, the Aristolochia Bracteata or worm-killer, known in Tamil as the Addoo timapally, it having been highly recommended to him by several correspondents as worthy of trial. Under these circumstances a dog was bitten by a cobra for the purpose, and to this animal was administered the juice of the fresh plant which had been procured from the Cuddapah district; in the usual way it was repeatedly given internally and applied to the scarified wound; the dog, however, died in three hours.

Accident to Captain Millard.—Captain W. S. Millard, well-known in Calcutta and to all trading with that city, has met with a fatal accident by being thrown from his horse.

Death from Snake-bite.—Mr. E. F. Davis, Assistant Patrol of Bussana, in the Hissar district, died the other day from snake-bite. Mr. Davis was walking in his compound and imprudently kicked a snake lying across his path. He died in three days.

Memorial to the late Chief Justice.—The committee appointed by the attorneys of the Calcutta High Court have met, and determined that the memorial to the late Chief Justice shall be either a bust or a statue of the deceased, to be put up with a suitable inscription in the new High Court building. The choice between the two forms will depend on the amount of subscriptions raised.

Severe Storm.—The station of Ghazipore has, we learn, been visited by a severe storm, accompanied by unusually heavy rain, which commenced on the evening of the 25th ult., and lasted till eleven o'clock the next night. The greater part of the kutcha buildings are said to have been destroyed, and the narrower lanes rendered impassable by the fallen walls.—Englishman.

Lucknow.—Up to the 29th ultimo the number of lives lost in Lucknow through the falling of houses during the three days' heavy rain in the middle of that month was, according to the police reports, seventy. It was, however, understood that a considerable number of deaths remained to be reported.—Daily Examiner, Oct. 3.

The Wahabee Trial.—The Government of India has sanctioned the grant of a deputation allowance of Rs. 200 per mensem, in addition to the substantive pay of his office, for six months, from February to July last, to Mr. Reily, a district superintendent of police, for his special services in [illegible] trial, as recommended by the Government of Bengal.—Indian Daily News.

Central Provinces.—The Weather and the Crops.—During the week ended the 9th of September, rain, which was much wanted, fell heavily throughout the greater part of the Central Provinces, and the prospects of the crops are more favourably reported on. In the Jubbulpore district both cotton and jawar have suffered in a great measure from excessive rain. The health of the people was good, but the cattle disease was very general.

Kabul News.—Gaffur Khan has, it is said, confessed to having shot the Commander-in-Chief of Kabul by order of his master, Sardar Aslam Khán. After his confession he was placed in confinement in irons with Muhammad Aslam Khán and the other two accused. Most of the deserters from the regiments at Farrah have been apprehended, and two of them have been blown from a gun by order of the Amir. The people of Ghuzni and Kelat-i-Ghilzai are said to be complaining much of the oppressions of their governors.

Coal Experiments.—The experiments made by the G.I.P. Railway with Chandah coal during the wet weather are not very encouraging. It was taken to Nagpore and stacked; rain fell, and the coal at once took fire by spontaneous consumption. This, however, was obviated by stacking it a second time only one foot deep. Two trips made, in which it was used, showed it to be a failure, unless used fresh from the pit; exposure seems to be fatal to its being of any real practical use.—Pioneer.

Princely Munificence.—Prince Gholam Mahomed has made a second donation of one lakh of rupees to the charitable fund which he established in 1869, for the relief of the poor of Calcutta. His Highness has expressed a wish that this sum should be distributed in the proportion of Rs. 80,000 for the native, and Rs. 20,000 for the Christian poor, and that the number of natives now on the roll for relief should be increased by one hundred Mahomedans and twenty-five Hindoos. The Government of India has conveyed to the Prince its sense of this further instance of his munificence.

Recruiting in Nepaul.—Our Darjeeling contemporary tells us that Captain Hidayut Ali is in the country about Darjeeling recruiting Nepaulese for the Lushai expedition, and that finding them conveniently collected together in large bodies on the different tea gardens, he has commenced recruiting not far from the tea gardens about Dooteriah. All the Nepaul knives in the bazaars have been bought up. Our contemporary blames Brigadier-General Bourchier for this raid on the tea gardens, and he says that the gallant brigadier from his experience of the Darjeeling district knows the good stuff in the kookrees and coolies.

An Indian Civil Service College.—A scheme for an Indian Civil Service College, attached either to Oxford or to Cambridge, or to both, will, we hear, reach the Indian Government by this incoming mail. The proposition has been favourably entertained at the India Office, and we believe that the Hon. Mr. Bourke, M.P., a brother of Lord Mayo's, is strong in its favour. We shall give our readers the earliest details. One thing is clear, that under the present plan the Civil Service is being recruited by non-university men of a very different intellectual training and calibre from that which we obtained during the first six years of the competitive system.

The Floods in Oudh.—The floods at Jounpore and Azimgurh are at last distinctly subsiding. Mr. Forbes, the Commissioner of Benares, reached Azimgurh, viâ Jounpore, on Wednesday, not without difficulty, having had to perform a great part of the way on foot, and the remainder in an ekka!—Pioneer.

The Looshai Expedition.—Major G. A. Brown, commanding the coolie corps to go with the Looshai expeditionary force, was to leave Calcutta with 350 coolies in the Undaunted and Guide this morning. They will probably reach Chittagong in about four days, when the boats will return for a fresh batch of coolies and commissariat stores. Major Mackenzie, who is, we understand, to be in the Executive Commissariat charge with the troops composing the right or Chittagong column under Colonel Brownlow, C.B., and Captain East, Assistant Quartermaster-General, with the same column, were also to leave in the Undaunted early this morning.—Englishman, Oct. 4.

Military.—It is stated that the committee appointed to revise the office of the Military Controller-General has sent in its report to Government. Our Serampore contemporary says that the new incumbent will be designated Accountant-General, and will be supported by an Assistant Accountant and Deputy Secretary in the Military Department. Mr. George Kellner is understood to aspire to the Accountant-Generalship, and is certainly well entitled to count on his claims being considered best. But the post has hitherto been filled by a military officer, and there will be more than one military candidate for it. We may therefore be on the point of witnessing a struggle between interest and merit.—Calcutta Examiner.

Reports of the Prospects of the Crops.—On the whole, this fortnight's reports need cause no anxiety. In the Lower Provinces prospects are "improving generally;" in Eastern Bengal and Orissa they are even "very good." In the Punjab things look brighter than they did a fortnight ago, in Madras, the Central Provinces, the State of Berar, and Sindh, good harvests may reasonably be expected. In Rajpootana prospects are in some places unpromising, but most of the states expect "good to fair khurreef crops." The Bombay Presidency still suffers from want of rain, while the floods of the Gogra, Goomtee, Tonsh, and other rivers have seriously damaged the crops throughout large tracts of Oudh and the North-Western Provinces. The prospects of cotton continue on the whole favourable.

An Inauspicious Star.—The Urdu Akhbar says that Maulvi Mahammed Salimuz yaman, the famous astronomer of Rampore, whose deductions have generally turned out right, has foretold that in the coming year a blaze of light resembling a shooting star, the like of which no mortal has yet seen, will be visible in the sky. "It will dazzle the eyes of the people of particular places with lustre, and, after remaining for a ghari (i. e., twenty-four minutes), will vanish. The direction in which it will make its appearance will be the North Pole, and accordingly the people of northern countries will see it distinctly. Probably, the natives of China and Persia will likewise have a sight of it. The effect of this meteor will be that the extent of the globe over which its light will fall will be visited by famine during the year, and a large number of the people inhabiting it will be destroyed, while vegetation will also be scanty."—Englishman, Sept. 29.

Floods at Sultanpur.—At Sultanpur, Oudh, the consequences of the late heavy rains in the flooding of the Gumti have also been very disastrous, nearly as much so as at Jounpur. The river has risen no less than thirteen feet higher than last year's flood, which was the highest on record. Opposite the civil station it has spread out into a lake covering from four to five square miles. The ferry, which is usually in the highest floods little more than a hundred yards across, is now more than half a mile. Several villages have been absolutely washed away, and a very great many more are partially ruined. At Pertadgurh the beautiful bridge over the Sye, completed only some four years ago, a bridge of nine spans of thirty-two feet each, has been swept away like old refuse. In fact, there are few, if any, roads in the east of Oudh on which traffic is not hindered or altogether stopped by the destruction of bridges and culverts. Altogether, for a long time to come, the year 1871 will live in the memory of the people as the year of the terrible floods.—Pioneer.

The Floods in Bengal.—The district reports from most of the districts in Bengal which have suffered from inundations have now been received down to the 22nd or 23rd inst., and, with a few exceptions, are more promising than those of the previous week. Generally speaking, the crops are reported as good, except where damaged by floods, but it would have been more satisfactory if we had been told the approximate area of the injured and uninjured lands. In Monghyr we are told, on the 23rd inst., that the prospects were "gloomy and uncertain, almost the whole of the Begoosarai Sub-division under water again." In the Patna district there have been some more heavy floods during the week, the result of which was not known. In Murshedabad the river had again risen six inches. In Naddea the floods were subsiding slowly, and a little fever was prevalent; the cattle also were suffering from disease. In Jessore the prospects are "very cheering, floods rapidly subsiding, and Amun unexpectedly favourable." Rain appears to have fallen in Puri, and the report, which was so unsatisfactory last week, now says "generally favourable."—Englishman, Oct. 4.

THE MURDER OF THE LATE MR. NORMAN.—A reward of Rs. 3,000 has been offered by the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, for information which shall, in his opinion, clearly prove the motives which led to the murder of the Honourable the late Chief Justice, and shall also enable the Commissioner of Police satisfactorily to trace the connections, associates, and antecedents of the assassin. It is also notified that any person affording useful information will be liberally rewarded. According to the Englishman, Syad Amir Hossain, personal assistant to the Commissioner of Bhagalpar, has issued an address to his countrymen, expressing his abhorrence at the foul and treacherous murder of Mr. Norman, reminding them of the lovable disposition of the late Judge, and of "his most liberal and kind treatment of natives," and calling upon them to act in concert with any committee which may be appointed in Calcutta for the purpose of erecting a memorial to the memory of the late Chief Justice. Rs. 581 have already been collected.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—In accordance with a suggestion of the Bengal Government a committee—consisting of Mr. F. M. Lind, C.S., president; and Mr. J. C. Robertson, C.S., Colonel Tyrwhitt, and Major Bonus, members—has been named by Sir W. Muir to inquire into the causes of the late marked diminution of traffic on the East Indian Railway. The suggested causes of the decrease are (1) the decay of trade or (as believed by the East Indian Railway Company) the failure of crops; (2) high rates generally, or for special classes of goods; and (3) want of facilities for the reception and despatch of goods. But all branches of the subject are to be investigated; thus the committee are instructed to examine the returns of contemporary traffic on the trunk road and rivers, with a view to ascertain to what extent merchandise has been diverted from the railway. The publication of Mr. Rivett-Carnac's Memorandum on the interchange of traffic between the G.I.P. and E. I. Railway is OFFENDING CLERGYMEN.—We give on another page, Oct. 4. that two clergymen in Calcutta, chaplains, have been reported by a parishioner to the Bishop as offenders against the rules of the Church of England as plainly declared and explained in recent decrees of the Privy Council. The acts complained of are the elevation of the cup after consecration, and the sacrificial position of the minister during the prayer of consecration, in front of the table with his back to the people. We are further informed that the Bishop has replied to the aggrieved parishioners. We believe we only echo the general voice of the English community when we express our opinion that the Bishop's reply should at once be published. Whatever may be the Bishop's private opinions as expressed in his charge, when he deals with a definite complaint brought before him he must act judicially, his sentence must be according to the laws of the Established Church. We want to know what his decision is.—Delhi Gazette.

MOHAMMEDAN FEELING IN CALCUTTA.—A meeting of Mohammedans was held at the house of Munshi Amir Ali on Sunday evening, "to express their heart-felt grief at the murder of the late Chief Justice Norman, and their abhorrence of the conduct of the execrable wretch whose brutal and diabolical act has put the whole town in mourning." The late Chief Justice was eulogised as "a very amiable, polite, generous, and learned gentleman, and one of the most upright and conscientious Judges that ever sat on the bench of the Calcutta High Court." It was then proposed by Munshi Amir Ali, and unanimously carried, that a sufficient sum of money should be raised by subscription to contribute towards the preservation of the memory of the late most lamented Chief Justice, and another sum to reward the courage and remunerate the meritorious service of Shaik Fakoo, who attacked the murderer at the risk of his own life, and saved the Chief Justice from immediate death. For this latter purpose a sum of Rs. 102 was raised on the spot.—Englishman, Oct. 4.

IMPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Oct. 4.—The continued dull state of the market again render our advices void of interest. Business remains in the same position as when we gave our last report, and there is no special feature to notice.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Oct. 4.—Jute: The arrivals during the week have been considerable, and prices have again declined for all sorts, except fine Serajgunge, of which there is next to none in the market. We now quote Serajgunge, good to fine, Rs. 5-2 to 6; Narsingunge, Rs. 4-6 to 4-14; and Dowrah, Rs. 3-6 to 3-8. Saltpetre has been in good demand throughout the week, and a rise of from 2 to 3 annas has taken place in 5 per cent. refraction, owing to the receipt of favourable telegrams from England. Rice: There has been nothing doing in best white, so there is no change to report in the market. Linseed: Prices continue firm, as favourable reports have been received from England; and, as the greater part of the crop is exhausted, there will probably be a further rise in prices. Rapeseed: The demand has continued, and prices are slightly higher. The better descriptions are scarce in the market. Raw Silk: Although holders are willing to take from 8 annas to 1 rupee per seer lower rates, we have not heard of a single transaction to report.

MONEY AND SHARE MARKETS.—CALCUTTA, Oct. 4.—EXCHANGES: In Calcutta Exchange there has been little doing, and scarcely any variation in rates. Demand may be quoted 100⅜, and sixty days' sight 99⅜.

LEAF-PAVILIONS.—The Government of Madras has sanctioned the erection in the town of Madras of a number of "leaf-pavilions" for the treatment of cases of contagious diseases, and, as an experimental measure, the erection of two such "pavilions" to afford more accommodation in the Detail Hospital at St. Thomas' Mount. Similar "pavilions" have, for a very considerable time, been in temporary use as hospitals in the various districts of the Presidency on the occasions of fairs and festivals, and they will present no novelty to the Municipal Commissioners and members of Local Fund Boards.

WATER SUPPLY.—The Madras Times reports that good progress has been made in the works of the Madras Water Supply Project. The Chembrumbakum Tank enlargement and the Vellore Anicut are the principal works which have been in progress for the last few months in Madras Town. In the several sub-divisions, the anicut, head-sluice, and upper supply-channel have been completed. The earth work to form the embankment of the Cholaveram Reservoir has been thrown up throughout to a level only half a yard below that assigned for completion. The supply-channel to the Red Hill Reservoir has been furnished throughout, as also has the masonry works connected with it. The earthwork of the Soorapadoo Bund has been finished to within one yard of the full level, and the revetment has also been raised. The masonry dam forming the northern portion of the tank enclosure has been built up to a level two yards below that intended as the full supply of the reservoir.

The 19th N.I.—H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge has intimated his concurrence in the opinion of the Government of Madras that the recent misconduct of the 19th Regiment of Madras Native Infantry, for which a company of it was disbanded, was "due to the neglect and weakness of the commanding officers."

Public Works.—Some weeks ago we mentioned that a reorganisation of the Department Public Works was contemplated. We now learn that, there being some differences of opinion among the members of Government in regard to the details of the scheme, the whole matter is likely to be referred for the decision of the Supreme Government, and, as is not unlikely, finally for the ultimatum of the Secretary of State.—Madras Times.

Coast Lights.—From the proceedings of the Madras Government, Marine Department, we learn that it is the intention of Government to erect two lighthouses on the Southern Coast, a third-class red light on the extreme south-east point of Cape Comorin, and a first-class light, either on the rocky islet of Kotah close to the Crocodile reef, or on the main land at Kadiapatam, two and a half miles distant from the Crocodile.

Burmah.—The judicial arrangements in Burmah are to be reformed, and the Government of India has recommended the following appointments: Judicial Commissioner of British Burmah, Rs. 2,500 a month; Recorder of Rangoon, Rs. 2,500 a month; Judge of Moulmein, rising from Rs. 1,200 to Rs. 1,600 a month; three Magistrates (one each for Rangoon, Moulmein, and Akyab), rising from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 1,200 a month.

Lecture by a Hindu Lady.—On the afternoon of Saturday last, Streerungummah Garu delivered a lecture in her own house at Madras to an audience consisting of about four hundred persons, among whom were many women and children. The subject of the lecture was "The Superiority of the Human Being in the Scale of Creation." The lecture was delivered at the earnest request of some of the relatives of the lecturer, who have come down to Madras on a pilgrimage. —Madras Times, Oct. 2.

Returned Emigrants.—The Acting Protector of Emigrants, Madras, has reported the arrival of the ship Nimrod with 320 return emigrants from the Mauritius—eighty-seven for Madras, and the rest for Calcutta. They state they were kindly treated on board during the voyage, and they are unanimous in praise of the kindness they received from the proprietors of the Mauritius estates on which they have been employed. The Madras coolies brought Rs. 2,843-8-0.

A Compliment to Colonel Strachey.—Dr. Francis Day, Madras Army, the new Inspector General of Indian Fisheries, has shown his respect for Colonel Strachey by naming a fish after him. We allude to the Barbus (Barbodes) Stracheyi, Barbus Malabaricus, Day, whose habitats are Akyab and Moulmein. "I have," the learned Doctor records, "named this species after General Strachey, C.B., F.R.S., from whom I have received every assistance in prosecuting my enquiries into the fish and fisheries of India.—Madras Mail, Sept. 28.

A Girl turning Mahommedan.—We have heard of Abdoolah Green, but what say you to Miss Charlotte Hill becoming Mrs. Golam Kader? Whatever may be thought about it, Coonoor on Friday witnessed the admission of the said young lady to the Mahommedan faith, and her subsequent marriage to Golam Kader, Police-constable, No. 703. Some three months back the mother of the said person noticed some liberties being taken by the man Golam Kader, and chastised her daughter, when matters remained quiet for a time. A month ago, owing to taunts by the mother and sister, Miss Charlotte left her home and went to Ooty, remaining there, and having secret communication with Golam Kader and his relatives. On the second of this month she returned to Coonoor, met her mother on the road, and declined to own her as such, saying that she was over sixteen years, and could act for herself. The mother left her for a while to get help to take her home, but she in the meantime disappeared, and was subsequently found in the house of Golam Kader. The mother employed several persons to try and persuade the girl to relinquish her intentions, but she resisted all their entreaties, continuing to remain with Golam Kader. I must here say that Charlotte Hill is a well favoured European girl. The mother complained to the Magistrate of Wellington, without however deriving any benefit, for on the production of the baptismal certificate Miss Hill was found over sixteen years of age; she, moreover, expressed her determination to remain with Golam Kader, and said nothing would induce her to go back to her mother. As I said before, Miss Hill was married to Golam Kader on Friday last.—Neilgherry Excelsior.

EXECUTION OF PRIVATE PATRICK SMITH.

On the night of the 18th of June, about half-past nine, just after the last tattoo had been sounded, Private Patrick Smith, of the 83rd Foot at Poona, left his cot and approached that wherein another man named Thomas Carroll was lying. Smith said, "Are you asleep?" Before Carroll could reply, a revolver was fired at him by his questioner, and he jumped out of bed and ran about twenty yards, and fell. On hearing the shot, two privates, named Neill and Evan Roberts, jumped up, and as Smith went towards the doorway he was intercepted by Private Roberts, whose cot was near the door. He turned on Roberts and discharged another barrel of his pistol at him, shooting him dead. Smith was secured and taken into custody. He was not drunk, but the only reason he would give for his murderous attack on Carroll was "he has been tormenting me all day," while, regarding the murder of Roberts, he would give no reason whatever.

On the 15th September Smith was brought up at the High Court Criminal Sessions, and, after evidence clear and overwhelming had been taken against him, he was sentenced to death.

After his sentence Smith was removed in close custody. His execution was fixed for Tuesday last, the 3rd inst. In his confinement, he fretted much, and on the eve of his execution prepared the following sentences:—

H.M.'s Gorgrose Jail of Bombay, 2nd October 1871.

I, the undersigned, Patrick Smith, lately a private in H.M.'s 83rd Regiment, do hereby freely confess that I am truly guilty of the double murder committed in the barracks of my regiment at Poona, on the 18th of June last, on the persons of Thomas Carroll and Evan Roberts, of the 83rd Regiment.

What impelled me to commit the awful crime were certain taunting remarks which I repeatedly overheard Carroll and Roberts pass upon me whilst conversing among themselves.

I admit the justice of the sentence pronounced against me. I truly and deeply repent for what I have done, and whilst I beg pardon of my fellow citizens for the outrage done to them, and to society at large, I beg them to pray for me, that I may find mercy at the hands of my God, through the merits of His Blessed Son Jesus Christ. Amen.

Witnesses, (Signed) P. Smith.
J. Ciampi, S.J.
Wm. H. G. Mayers.

After making this statement the condemned man retired to rest, and slept till four o'clock, when he was roused by the Rev. Mr. Ciampi, who administered sacramental rites. At half-past seven he was pinioned. He submitted to the operation without the movement of a muscle. At a quarter to eight he was removed from his cell, and in the court-yard Dr. Bhau Dajee, Sheriff of Bombay, read over to him the warrant for his execution; but he still preserved the same stolidity. He walked up the gallows steps firmly, and breathed a short prayer. Precisely at ten minutes to eight the signal was given to the executioners, and a few brief struggles intimated that the unhappy man had expiated with his life the murder of his comrades. He died remarkably easy.

Smith, whose family are said to be in good circumstances at home, was an agreeable-looking man, slightly built (though he became much thinner during the time between his sentence and his execution), and bore an excellent character in his regiment for the seven or eight years he was in it.—Times of India, Oct. 7.

Miscellaneous.

Suppression of the Mutiny at Goa.—According to the Bombay Gazette, the revolt has been suppressed. An intimation having been made to the mutinous battalions, they returned to their quarters without stipulating any conditions.

Official News from Muscat.—Major Ross, her Majesty's Political Agent at Muscat, has sent the following official news report to Government, under date Muscat, 18th September:—Tranquility has continued in all parts of Oman. Numbers of Bidoos have visited Muscat to pay their respects to his Highness the Sultan and receive gratuities. Two Turkish war vessels, under Commodore Aarif Bey, touched at Muscat on their way to the Persian Gulf; they had come from Constantinople through the Canal. H. M. S. Bullfinch and Magpie have called in at Muscat from the Gulf.

Appointments, &c.—The Deccan Herald states that Mr. Erskine, from Nassick, succeeds Mr. Ashburner as Collector of Khandeish, and that Mr. Ovans returns to Nassick. Mr. C. P. Cooper, barrister-at-law, has been appointed as Second Magistrate of Police in Bombay, in succession to Mr. R. H. Showell.

Cotton Traffic.—We observe that the number of cotton bales exported in the business year 1867-8 by the Bombay and Bengal Steamship Company was 45,000, and by the P. and Co. 51,000. In 1868-9 the numbers were 106,084 by the former and 90,000 by the latter company. The P. and O. must now be carrying at a still greater rate.—Times of India.

Railway Sleepers.—In his report on the quantity of sleepers procurable in the Sindh forests for the new line of railway from Mooltan to Kotree, the Acting Conservator of Forests in Sindh states that the total number obtainable is 464,854, the total number required being 600,000. The average price of each sleeper at the place of delivery all over the line he fixes at Rs. 1-6-4, and the Government royalty of eight annas additional will make it Rs. 1-14-4—a price which the Acting Conservator considers excludes competition from any other source. The balance of sleepers will be provided by the Punjab Forest Department; the price of sleepers at Lahore being Rs. 1-8, in addition to which there will be the cost of boat-hire down the stream.—Pioneer.

News from the Persian Gulf.—Colonel Pelly, her Majesty's Political Resident in the Persian Gulf, has forwarded to Government a report, dated Bushire, September 12, 1871, announcing that cholera has re-appeared at Lingah, and that six or seven deaths occur daily from this cause. It is stated that cholera is very bad at Kalcef, and has also broken out in the Turkish camp at Lahsa. Small-pox of a very virulent form is said to have broken out in Guther, and the inhabitants are in such alarm that a small-pox patient is removed out of the town at once. In Bushire the poor still die from starvation. On the morning of the 4th the bodies of five women were reported to be lying along the shore line close to the Residency, and were only interred after a reference to the local authorities.

Sad Accident.—We very much regret to state that on Saturday evening last a melancholy accident occurred near Colaba, by which Mr. W. G. Skinner, of the Oriental Bank, lost his life. About six o'clock Mr. Skinner went out for a ride to the Colaba Lighthouse. On his way back, when opposite the Catholic Church, the animal got startled at a passing carriage, and swerved so violently to the left that Mr. Skinner lost his balance and was thrown on the right side of his head, the horse, which was a large Australian, partially falling above him. He was picked up insensible, and terribly cut and bruised, and was conveyed in haste to the Colaba Military Hospital. He lingered there till ten o'clock, when he died, never having recovered consciousness from the moment of the accident. Yesterday morning an inquest was held on his body, and a verdict of accidental death was returned. In the afternoon he was buried at Sewree Cemetery, and the funeral was attended by a large assemblage of friends. Mr. Skinner was a gentleman much respected in Bombay. He had only attained his twenty-sixth year at the time of his unfortunate premature decease, and the abrupt termination of what promised to be so useful a life will be considered with sorrow by many in Bombay and elsewhere.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 7.

Old Bank of Bombay.—On Monday afternoon an extraordinary general meeting of the proprietors of the Old Bank of Bombay, in liquidation, was held in the offices of the New Bank of Bombay, Elphinstone-circle. Mr. Nathaniel Spencer occupied the chair. The object of the meeting was to complete the liquidation, distribute the assets, and dissolve the bank. Mr. H. Cleveland, in the course of a speech strongly condemnatory of the policy of the directors of the bank in the past in lending large sums without adequate security, which sums were lost to the shareholders, moved, "That the liquidator should forthwith commence legal proceedings for the purpose of compelling the directors of this bank to make good the losses sustained by the bank through loans of the bank's money of an unauthorised nature or on insufficient security." Mr. Cleveland also threw out a hint that as most of the money that the bank had lost had found its way into the Imperial Treasury, a request should be made to Government to hand some of the money back again to the shareholders. Mr. Nowrojee Manockjee Wadia seconded the motion. Mr. Rimington (solicitor) advised the meeting against adopting Mr. Cleveland's motion, which, in his opinion, would lead to long litigation and endless annoyance and expense if agreed to. Mr. Cleveland contended that the shareholders were the best judges of what ought to be done, and pressed his motion. A discussion ensued, and it was terminated, on the application of Mr. Hearn, as the representative of Government, to adjourn the meeting in order that certain ideas Government entertained might be further matured and considered. The meeting was then adjourned for ten days.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 7.

Salaries in the Education Department.—At the instance of the Director of Public Instruction in Bombay, says a Calcutta contemporary, the local Government has recommended to the Supreme Government that the salaries of the senior officers of the Education Department in that Presidency may be revised and assimilated to those of their brother officers in the Bengal Presidency, and has also solicited sanction to the creation of the post of a Professor of Mathematics and Chemistry at the Elphinstone College on a salary of Rs. 1,250 per mensem. The minimum salary of an Educational Professor in the Bombay Presidency is said to be Rs. 500, and the maximum is Rs. 750, while the minimum pay of a senior Professor in Bengal is Rs. 750, and the maximum is Rs. 1,250; and in some cases, Rs. 1,400 a month. The Government of India under the circumstances stated by that of Bombay, has accorded its sanction to the appointment of a Professor of Mathematics and Chemistry on a salary of Rs. 750 per mensem, which is the maximum amount allowed to a senior Professor in that Presidency, subject to the confirmation of the Secretary of State. With reference to the question of the revision of the salaries of the senior Educational officers in Bombay generally, the Supreme Government has observed that the Educational despatch of the Home Government, sanctioning the revision of the salaries of the Educational officers in Bengal, made no mention of the officers of the Educational Department on the Bombay Presidency. The Governor-General in Council, however, would submit their case to the favourable consideration of the Secretary of State for India.

Tampering with Examination Papers.—A highly respected and most promising officer at Kurrachee (a captain of some standing in the service) has, we regret extremely to hear, been placed under arrest within the past week. According to the statements current amongst military men, it appears that a committee, composed of Major Davis, of the 2nd Belooch regiment, as president, and Captains Hogg and Cunningham, of the same corps, as members, assembled on Tuesday, Sept. 26, in the mess room of the 66th Regiment, to examine four officers in the Hindoostanee language according to the "Higher Standard." Shortly after the question were given to the candidates, one of these gentlemen startled the committee by throwing up his paper, and declaring that his moonshee, there was no doubt, had by some means or another obtained access to the examination papers, inasmuch as he had been "coached up" by the man in the very identical questions now before him. The president had no alternative but to report the matter at once to the Brigadier General who caused inquiries to be instituted for the purpose of discovering who had tampered with the papers; whereupon—so the story runs—the Captain alluded to went to General Addison, and confessed that when the sealed packet containing the examination papers came into his hands from Bombay, he opened it, and copied the questions a few days before the committee was ordered to assemble, and that the Moonshee obtained them from him. We must confess the story seems incomplete; but this is the form it takes at present. The whole of the facts connected with the case have, we believe, been communicated by General Addison for the orders of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. We should be sincerely glad to learn that what has been represented to us is not correct. The officer in question is held in good esteem by all who know him.—Times of India.

Dharwar Cotton Report.—Dharwar, Oct. 4.—The latest telegram received here is dated Liverpool, 28th September, Dhollera 7¼ per lb. During the twenty days over which this report extends there has been a steady demand both on European and native account principally the latter, and purchases to the extent of seven hundred candies, mostly Sawginned, have been made at Rs. 230 per candy. We quote to day Sawginned Rs. 232, Compta Rs. 205 f.o.b. Carwar 15th December, usual terms. It is reported that natives have sold some 20,000 bales Sawginned in Bombay for forward delivery, but the sellers do not hold half of that quantity of cotton here, and do not appear anxious to purchase except in small quantities, we presume they expect to fulfil their engagements by purchasing in Compta later on, where prices at present are ruling too high to admit of any margin on the sale rate, and the quality of the stock there now is inferior. The stock of cotton above ghaut unsold is getting very small. Dealers say that it will be entirely exhausted in another six weeks, or two months at the outside, so that business in old cotton this season will be brought to a close much earlier than usual. We are glad to be able to report a most seasonable rainfall since our last. We have had heavy storms all over the district during the past fortnight, four inches and twenty-eight cents having been registered last week, which has done an inestimable amount of good to all crops. The cotton plants generally look healthy, and in some fields they are already four inches high; there is every prospect now of a large yield, and with the increased land under cotton cultivation this year we look for an unusually large crop for 1871-72. The ryots are still continuing to sow more cotton since the rain fell. About 2,000 doeras were sent to Compta a fortnight ago, but all despatches have now ceased for the present. The district roads are again closed, and cotton will not be moved until the rains are entirely over, probably not for a fortnight or perhaps three weeks hence. The shipping season at Compta is open. There is no cotton at Carwar, but we hear of contracts having been made there for December delivery at Rs. 235.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Oct. 7.—Yesterday, on receipt of improved advices from Manchester, some inquiry arose among the buyers for Marwar; buyers, however, have generally been a little disposition to enter the market, but first holders are, with the rise in Manchester, again firm. In Yarns generally a small business has been done, and prices show no alteration. Metals are firm. In other kinds of imports no sales of any consequence are reported..

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Oct. 7.—Cotton: In consequence of favourable advices from Liverpool, a large business has been done here, and prices have advanced generally Rs. 12 to Rs. 16 per candy, the advance in Dharwar Sawginned being fully Rs. 20. The purchases for export in the week amount to about 8,600 candies, of which the following were the principal, viz., Dhollera and Bhownuggar, chiefly deliverable in 45 days, at Rs. 218 to 220½; Dharwar Sawginned, at Rs. 230 to 240, deliverable in 75 days; and New Comrawuttee, deliverable March 5, 1872, at Rs. 225 to 228. The market closes firm.

MONEY MARKET.—BOMBAY, Oct. 7.—EXCHANGE: The business done this week has been very limited, but rates latterly have shown a marked upward tendency, on account of the unsettled state of the Money Market at home, and of the active and upward tendency of the Cotton market. Rates on Calcutta are unaltered, closing at 100⅜ for sight Bank Bills, and at 99¼ for 60 days' sight. On China, rates are weaker; we quote Rs. 218 per 100 dollars for 60 days' sight.

THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE.—The Solicitor's Journal says :—"Sir Lawrence Peel and Sir J. Colvile have been appointed to act as paid members of the Judicial Committee under the Act of last session. These two retired Chief Justices of the Supreme Court of Calcutta have for some time acted as Indian assessors on the Privy Council, under 3rd and 4th William IV., cap. 41, sec. 30, and at the time of the passing of the late Act it was understood that they would be two out of the four paid judges for whose appointment the Act provided. Two more appointments have to be made under the Act, and as the sittings of the Judicial Committee are announced to commence on the 6th proximo, it is to be presumed that the appointments will shortly be announced. The judges to be appointed will, doubtless, be selected from the present judges of the superior courts at Westminster. It is understood that one of the appointments has been offered to Lord Penzance, but we believe that he has not yet accepted it. The difficulty is probably created by the fact that the new Act contains no provision for the judges' clerks. Thus, any judge appointed under it must either turn adrift an old servant or pension him at his own expense, and without any compensating increase in his own salary. This unfortunate economy will no doubt create a difficulty in the way of the acceptance of the appointment by others besides Lord Penzance. It is to be hoped some means will be found of overcoming it."

USE OF ICE MACHINES IN INDIA.—It may not be generally known in this country that in the Indian Presidencies the business houses and some of the houses of the upper classes are supplied with one piece of domestic furniture which is now considered indispensable, namely an Ice-machine. That handy refrigerating apparatus known as "Reece's Patent Ice Making and Water Cooling Machine" appears to be most in vogue at present. It is best understood, easiest of application, and more certain in its effect than its competitors. The modus operandi is as follows :—Mr. Reece's apparatus for the production of cold by the rarefaction of condensed ammonia consists of an upright cylinder, called the analyser, in which a descending current of strong solution of ammonia is met by an ascending current of steam, so that the ammonia leaves the water and is driven off through a tube into a rectifier, where it is freed from any small remaining portion of water that it may have taken over. Thence it passes on into a coiled tube, within which it is rendered liquid by the pressure of its own accumulation, and is then carried on in a liquid form into a receiver, from which it can be liberated at pleasure, and suffered to pass into a refrigerator, in which there is a coil containing liquid destined to convey the cold to the place where it is to be used. Mr. Reece finds that the rarefaction of 130 lbs. of ammonia will reduce by 20 deg. the temperature of six hundred gallons of water. By persons who carry on various trades, such as brewing, meat preserving, and many others, in hot climates, Mr. Reece's apparatus is found invaluable, as well as for the economical production of ice for home consumption, and it will also admit of being used to maintain an uniform low temperature in the holds of ships. The prices of the smaller sizes of Reece's Ice-machines range between £250 and £380. It is made by Messrs. Pontifex, of King's Cross, at whose works it may be seen in operation.

SIR RODERICK MURCHISON.—We regret to have to announce that Sir Roderick Murchison died on Oct. 22, at his residence in Belgrave-square. He had been tolerably well until Oct. 19, when he caught a cold, from the effects of which he never recovered. Sir Roderick was born at Tarradale, in Ross-shire, on Feb. 19, 1792. He was therefore nearly eighty years of age. Having pursued his studies for a few months at the University of Edinburgh, he obtained a commission in the army in 1807, and, joining his regiment the following year, served in the 36th Foot, with the army in Spain and Portugal under Lord Wellington, afterwards on the staff of his uncle, General Sir Alexander Mackensie, and lastly as captain in the 6th Dragoons. He took an active part in several of the most important battles in the war, and earned the reputation of a brave and able officer. He began his geological researches systematically about the year 1830, and in 1849 he received the Copley medal from the Royal Society, in recognition of his having established the Silurian system in geology. His best known work—"Siluria ; or the History of the Oldest Known Rocks containing Organic Remains with a Brief Sketch of the Distribution of Gold over the Earth"—was published in 1854. Sir Roderick, having acted for five years a secretary of the Geological Society, became president of that body in 1831-32, and again in 1842-43. In 1844 he was elected president of the Royal Geographical Society, was re-elected in the following year and again in 1852 and in 1856. He has held the presidential chair of that society down almost to the present time, having been successeded only a few months ago by Sir Henry Rawlinson. In 1846 Mr. Murchison was knighted by her Majesty, the Emperor Nicholas having previously conferred upon him several Russian orders, including that of St. Stanislaus. For Sir Roderick Murchison must be claimed the credit of having inferred the presence of gold in the Australian mountain ranges, from the analogy which their formation bore to the Ural Mountains, with the physical outlines of which h had made himself familiar. He was one of the group of scientific men who established the British Association. In 1863 Sir Roderick Murchison was nominated a Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath (Civil Division). He was created a baronet in January, 1866. Sir Roderick Murchison married, in 1815, Charlotte, only daughter of the late General Francis Hugonin. As he had no issue by his marriage, the baronetcy becomes extinct by his death.

THE OPTOSCOPE.

The practical utility of the OPTOSCOPE is now fully determined. In numerous cases has its merits been displayed in a manner so satisfactory, that in no instance has it afforded less satisfaction to the intelligent inquirer than to the inventor himself. It has long been a matter of considerable importance to those suffering from defective vision to learn the exact state of the refractive humours of the eye, and the proper convexity or concavity of the glasses required to render the vision as perfect as the state of the organs will admit of.

Mr. BEAUMONT'S OPTOSCOPE

is all that can be desired for this purpose, and those desirous of benefiting by his discovery may be suited with the most perfect-fitting glasses at moderate cost.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

FLATULENCY, NAUSEA, INDIGESTION.—Nothing depresses the mind more rapidly or wears out the body much faster than a stomach incapable of fully digesting its food. Indigestion renders life so miserable, that from it spring most of the suicides which daily shock our nerves. If Holloway's Pills be taken regularly for a time, and his Ointment be twice daily rubbed over the digestive organs, these melancholy symptoms will soon cease, and pleasurable thoughts succeed the dismal forebodings engendered by dyspepsia, and which drive the sufferer to misery and despair. Holloway's priceless preparations, by briskly acting on the liver and other internal organs, have long stood prominently forward for the wonderful cures they have effected.

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood stated that Dr. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, being the Inventor was deliberately untrue, which he regretted had been sworn to. Eminent Hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discover of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 12, 1864.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Oct. 14; Agra and Madras, Oct. 12; Calcutta, Oct. 11.

THE late arrival of the mail is hardly compensated by the character or quantity of the news. People were still engaged in talking about Mr. Norman's murder and speculating on the murderer's identity and real motives. The photographs of him have already, according to the Englishman, led to the discovery of what may turn out an important clue to his antecedents. Wild things are still uttered against him in the Calcutta papers. One writer, a native, wants to have him exhibited in public for the gratification of popular curiosity. He argues indeed that two birds might thus be killed with one stone, for "some one from among the expected numerous spectators may come to recognise the murderer and give out his antecedents." The popular feeling against the murderer has not however turned into an attack upon the murderer's race and religion. Such at least is the view expressed by the Friend of India, which hopes that the Mohammedans will gratefully treasure up the fact that the Hindus have never "reminded the countrymen of the murdered man that the murderer was a Mohammedan and not a Hindu." It is yet more satisfactory to learn that the assassination has been strongly condemned by many respectable Mohammedans, and that so far not one Mohammedan has uttered a word indicative even of apathy, much less approval, towards the assassin. Of sympathy with the murdered judge, fresh tokens are reported in the shape of meetings to be holden in Bombay and Calcutta, to consider what kind of monument shall be raised to his memory.

WE note that the Government has at length changed its mind as to the amount of reward payable to any one who can help to discover the supposed accomplices of the Maulvi Abdullah. Instead of Rs. 3,000, the reward now offered is Rs. 10,000, a very handsome bribe to most natives. The Maulvi himself is described as about forty years old, and 5ft. 6in. high, with a thick-set muscular figure, prominent features, small eyes, very low retreating forehead, and slightly pocked face. He knows Hindustani, Pushtu, and a little Arabic, and appears to be a native of Peshawar, or its neighbourhood. Being a Pathan he would have little enough in common with the peaceable and civilised Mongol Mohammedans of Bengal, one of whom doubtless reflected the race-instinct of his fellow-citizens when he called Abdullah a "Punjabi Beast." Race-instincts have often counterweighed religious sympathies.

ACCORDING to a telegram flashed from Simla to Bombay, the Ameer of Kabul has probably cut in the usual Afghan way the knot caused by the arrest of Aslam Khan, the alleged murderer of the Ameer's general, Feramorz Khan. It appears, at any rate, that on the night of the 3rd October Aslam Khan and Hussein Khan were murdered in prison by their brothers, Hassan Khan and Khasim Khan. Of Yakoob Khan we learn that he started from Kabul for Herat on the 25th September, after receiving his father's blessing and a khillat of Rs. 150,000. On the same day the Ameer listened to the complaints of extortion brought by some refugees against Mohammed Alam Khan, Governor of Turkistan. The complainants were readily promised redress, and an order for Alam Khan's removal was issued forthwith.

THE splendid two-storied barracks of Allahabad, which cost about £200,000 to build, have at length been pronounced so fearfully unsafe that the 104th Fusiliers were ordered out of them forthwith, and were already under canvas when the mail left. The immediate cause of this move is said to be the weakness of the trusses to bear the heavy weight of the stone upper floors; so that the whole of the broad verandahs were liable to collapse at any moment. Hot as the tents are in early October, the men will no doubt prefer a little broiling to the chance of being altogether crushed in barracks.

A LUCKNOW correspondent of the Delhi Gazette declares that an order has been issued to the troops at Lucknow forbidding them under penalties to eat duck's eggs. As the writer himself is utterly unable to guess at the meaning of such an order, we must be excused from trying to solve the puzzle for ourselves. Will any kind reader make the attempt?

THE rock-strewn harbour of Point de Galle has just added to its list of victims another of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's fine steamers. In coming out of the harbour on the evening of November 1, on her way to Australia, the Rangoon struck on the Cadda Rock, and foundered at midnight, after all on board, with a few bags of mails and some of the baggage, had been safely landed. Thanks to the telegraph, a steamer was despatched from Bombay at midnight of the 2nd to take on the passengers and the rescued Indian mails from Galle to Australia. Divers also were promptly engaged at Galle to try and recover some part of the cargo and the missing mails; but, owing to the strength of the current, their efforts appear to have been unsuccessful. There is little hope, it seems, of recovering anything of value from the wreck. Fortunately the cargo from China was not on board. The Rangoon, an iron steamer of 1,776 tons and 400-horse power, was built about ten years ago, and carried a cargo worth something less than £50,000. The dangers of the harbour of Galle and its approaches, especially during the monsoon, are so great that we need hardly look to any other source for an explanation of this particular disaster. Owing, we believe, to some change in the monsoon, the harbour has lately become more unsafe than ever. It is to be hoped that the Home Government, which has hitherto disregarded all complaints on that score, may at length be awakened to the need of looking out for a safer anchorage elsewhere.

Major-General Goldsmid, who has just returned to this country from Persia, has already been rewarded by a Knighthood of the Star of India for his success in settling the question of disputed boundaries between Persia and Mekran. He is now about to undertake the settlement of a boundary dispute between Persia and Afghanistan in the matter of Seistan, a province which once belonged to Persia, but during most of this century has either ruled itself or been ruled from Kabul. With Sir Frederick Goldsmid are associated Colonel F. R. Pollock, C.S.I., Commissioner of Peshawar, and Major Evan Smith. The clerical duties of the Mission are entrusted to Rev. Gerard Thomas. The members of the Mission are to start on the 14th inst. by Brindisi and Aden on their way to Bunder Abbas, in the Persian Gulf.

We have published elsewhere the Royal Warrant of the 31st October last, containing the new conditions of service in the commissioned ranks of her Majesty's Army, the Guards and the Ordnance Corps excepted. The rank of ensign and cornet is henceforth done away. Holders of that rank before August 26 last, and those who have since entered it from the A list at Sandhurst, are at once made lieutenants. All other cornets and ensigns will become sub-lieutenants and be attached for one year to regiments at home. Commissions as sub-lieutenants will also be given to candidates chosen by competition, to qualified students from the universities, to Indian and Queen's cadets and Pages of Honour, and to carefully-selected non-commissioned officers. After a probation of not more than three years the sub-lieutenant must either have passed for a lieutenancy or leave the service. Non-commissioned officers are alone excepted from this rule. Lieutenants' commissions will also be given to qualified officers of militia. Young men of seventeen to twenty may become sub-lieutenants, but a B.A. from the Universities may enter the Army at twenty-two. Promotion as a rule will go by seniority, qualified only by the need of passing an examination at each stage, and a lieutenant who fails to pass for his company in five years will as a rule be struck off the Army List with a present of not more than a year's pay. A smart officer on the other hand may rise to be a captain after two years' service as a lieutenant, and a captain in his turn may get his majority at the end of six years. The youngest major again may be selected on due trial for the post of lieutenant-colonel, but neither major nor lieutenant-colonel can claim to hold his appointment more than five years. If he then fails in getting re-appointed he will have to go on half-pay. Lieutenant-colonels will be selected by the Commander in Chief. We are sorry to see that all lieutenants above a certain number fixed for the year will receive only sub-lieutenant's pay. Surely all past experience cries out against so invidious a divorce of rank from pay, especially when the pay of the lower rank is so inadequate to the officer's needs.

Freedom of exchange between full pay officers, "to suit their reasonable convenience," is very properly allowed, on condition of course that the officer proposing the exchange defrays only the fair and reasonable expenses of the officer who agrees to exchange with him. Captains now in the army will be comforted perhaps to learn that they may escape the ordeal of an examination for the next rank, if favourable reports of their efficiency are laid before the Commander in Chief. Not much harm, we think, will befal the regimental system, about which quite enough noise has been made. The examinations will weed out the bad bargains; but, so far as we read the Warrant, promotion up to the rank of lieutenant-colonel will go in great measure within the regiment; quite as much indeed as it did before. For the next two years however the new system will not come into full play, because it will take all that time to work off the present list of supernumeraries. The new Warrant moreover gives only the rough plan of the scheme which is to supersede the Purchase System. There are many points on which criticism is barred for want of further information. One feature however in the present scheme suggests grave misgivings. The character of each officer in every grade is to be guaged by an elaborate system of confidential reports. The captain is to report minutely upon his subalterns, the major on both, the commandant on all below him, and so on up to the generals of division. All this may look well in theory, but the practical result would probably be to sow mistrust and dissension in every regiment, unless the officers themselves combined to reduce the system of reporting on each other to a mere sham. As for the new form of declaration which officers will have to sign upon retirement, exchange, or transfer to the Indian Staff Corps, we can only hope that it will serve its purpose of a safeguard against all attempts to revive the purchase system.

Two more answers to Sir G. Balfour's attack on the Indian Military Department have lately appeared—one from a Field Officer, in the Pall Mall Gazette of October 27, the other from General Norman himself in the Times of Tuesday last. The former appears to score a point against his adversary by showing that since 1862 not 15,000, but only about 10,000, men had been taken off the strength of the English Army in India. On one or two other points also the Field Officer, who writes from Calcutta, seems to have the best of the argument in its present stage. But we cannot credit him with the calmness due from all who would take part in the discussion raised by Sir G. Balfour. His reply degenerates into an outpouring of personal abuse which would damage the best cause. If General Balfour has made mistakes, is it not possible to correct them without calling the offender bad names and imputing to him the worst of motives? A hot climate may sour the sweetest temper, and indignation at a false charge is natural enough; but it is well to be very certain of the facts before you charge an opponent with "perverting an official document for his own ends." General Balfour may possibly have been one of those showy financiers whose savings are purchased at a heavy ultimate loss; but it was rather a rash proceeding to declare "in the plainest and most uncompromising manner" that Sir H. Durand never recorded an opinion "in the slightest degree resembling what Sir George Balfour attributes to him." Sir George had referred to Sir Henry Durand as declaring in 1869 that "it is in supplies, where administrative control is powerless, that the increased expenditure has mainly taken place." This quotation the Field Officer, on the strength of his close acquaintance with Sir Henry, brands as virtually false, adding that the words quoted have either been "somehow altered in extraction, or so wrested from their context, or both, as to entirely pervert their meaning." We are sorry to see General Norman also retorting on Sir G. Balfour to the same effect. The result of course was easy to foreguess. In the Times of last Wednesday General Balfour promised in due time to give a detailed answer to all General Norman's counter charges, but dealt him at once a quietly crushing blow by quoting the very minute in which the disputed passage was to be found. The words in fact were just as he had given them before, and taken as they stand will bear no other meaning than that claimed for them by Sir G. Balfour. Had Sir H. Durand been wont to express himself as obscurely as Cromwell, the words might be twisted to mean something else; but then, according to the Field Officer, Sir Henry "had the gift of expressing himself in unmistakable terms," rarely, if ever, "susceptible of a second meaning."

General Norman also finds some weak places in his opponent's armour. He declares for instance that his remark about the reduced military expenditure for this year referred expressly to Indian expenditure alone, that the extra twopence a-day for English soldiers had really raised the outlay by a third of a million, and that General Balfour had been utterly wrong in taking the estimates for 1862-3 as a guide to the expenses of subsequent years. On these and other controverted points we will offer no opinion pending Sir G. Balfour's promised reply.

Those who remember the past services of Sir George Pollock will have been glad to hear that he has been appointed to succeed the late Sir John Burgoyne as Constable of the Tower of London. The whilom leader of the Avenging Army, that fought its way through the Kyber to Kabul and back again, is already in his eighty-sixth year, but we trust that many years of a hale and honoured old age may yet be in store for the war-worn veteran whose fighting days began with the first siege of Bhurtpore under Lord Lake. For a fitting record of his latest and greatest exploits the reader must still turn to the glowing pages of Kaye's "Afghan War;" but a very full and interesting biography of the new Constable has lately been contributed by Lieut. Low, of the Indian Navy, to the popular serial called Golden Hours.

We observe that Sir James Colvile, formerly a judge of the High Court of Bengal, has just been appointed to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

"Cope's Tobacco Plant" is the name of a penny monthly paper, of which the twentieth number is now before us. As the Anti-Tobacco Journal has reached its hundred and fifty-sixth number, there is no particular reason why a serial written in defence of smoking may not live to a yet greater age. Once get over the monotony of a paper that begins and ends in smoke, and you may find matter for a few minutes' entertainment in the kind of reading here provided. Perhaps the best thing in the present number is a paper discussing Dr. Forbes Watson's Report on the Cultivation and Preparation of Tobacco in India. It appears that some samples of Cuban tobacco grown in India were condemned by two London brokers as good for nothing. Dr. Watson however shows that the fault lay, not in the leaf itself, but in the bad curing and packing of it. This is a fault which time and perseverance might easily remedy in the case of a country where tobacco of one kind or another has long been grown. If India were encouraged to grow tobacco for exportation as warmly as she has lately been encouraged to grow cotton, we have little fear of her ability to meet the demands of the English market. An experimental farm of the kind suggested by Mr. Stuart Clarke and Dr. Watson would soon settle that question one way or the other.

The next mail from India by Brindisi is due in London on Saturday next.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE KUKAS IN THE PUNJAB.

The late murderous outbreak of Sikh fanatics against peaceful Mohammedan butchers and their families in various parts of the Punjab has issued, thus far, in the condign punishment of some at least among the murderers, and in the publication of some strong remarks by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. Mr. Davis starts by asserting the utter groundlessness of the reports spread abroad by ill-disposed people touching the manner in which the Mohammedan butchers had been carrying on their trade. We may observe by the way that others than the ill-disposed were led, in the absence of clearer knowledge, to imagine that the butchers might have given their enemies some pretext for the revenge so bloodily inflicted. For their sakes however we are glad to hear that no such pretext was ever given, that the cattle were slaughtered in the most regular way, and that there was never any intention of departing from the rules laid down at the annexation of the Punjab. Measures have been taken to convince the people of these welcome facts, and several of the ill-disposed have been arrested. With the conduct of the police however in this matter Mr. Davis declares himself very much displeased. "Large numbers of arrests were made, confessions recorded, and a case actually prepared for commital to the Sessions, in which the confessions were utterly false and the evidence worthless and perjured." For much of this the District Superintendent of Police is held responsible. The Maharajah of Patialah on the other hand is formally thanked for helping to hunt down one of the murderers, and handsome rewards in money, swords, and shawls are bestowed for like reasons on several natives in the Rajah's territory.

Having caught and hanged some of the Kukah murderers, the Punjab Government are still engaged in trying to ferret out the truth concerning the new phase of Sikh fanaticism which these murders have brought into startling prominence. How much they have really discovered we cannot pretend to say. If, as we hear, they have been looking to the police for guidance rather than to the district officers, their endeavours after more light will probably bear no large amount of fruit. Meanwhile however some interesting details concerning the new sect of Kukah Sikhs have reached us from trustworthy sources; and of these the curious reader may be glad to avail himself, so far as they serve to account for the recent outbreak.

It is now a good many years since the new movement was started by one Ram Singh, a Sikh whose head-quarters were fixed at the village of Bahni in the Ludianah district. His teaching is said to have aimed at reforming the ritual rather than the creed of his Sikh countrymen. Be that as it may, his followers appear to have borrowed a hint or two from the dancing dervishes of Islam. At their meetings they worked themselves into a sort of religious frenzy, which relieved itself in unearthly howlings, and hence they were generally known as the "Shouters." Men and women of the new sect joined together in a sort of wild war-dance, yelling out a certain form of words, and stripping off all their clothing as they whirled more and more madly round. So harmless however were they long deemed to be, that a place of worship was allotted them even in the heart of Lahore.

Ram Singh himself had served in the old Sikh army, and one of his first moves was to get a number of his emissaries enlisted into the army of the Maharajah of Kashmere. That ruler, it is said, would have taken a whole regiment of Kukas into his pay, but for some reason or another this scheme fell to the ground. Possibly he took fright at the political influence which his new recruits might come in time to wield against himself or his English allies. Ram Singh's followers however multiplied apace, and out of their number he chose his Subhas, or Lieutenants, whose preaching in due time swelled the total of converts to something like a hundred thousand. Of these Subhas, twenty were distributed about the Punjab. The great bulk of their converts consists of artisans and people of yet lower caste, who, having nothing to lose, indulge in wild dreams of future gain. Their leader's power over them appears to be very great. They obey his orders as cheerfully as the Assassins of yore obeyed their old Man of the Mountain. If he has a message to send to one of his lieutenants, however far away, a letter is entrusted to one of his disciples, who runs full speed to the next station and hands it on to another, who forthwith leaves his own work and hastens in like manner to deliver the letter to a third. It is easy to see how little time is thus lost in carrying out the Guru's commands, and how mighty a power for mischief may thus be wielded by the chief of a brotherhood thus strongly bound together. In order to clench his power over his followers, Ram Singh has contrived to interpolate his own name in a passage of the Granth—the Sikh Bible—which foretels the advent of another Guru.

Whatever are the special teachings of this new religious leader, there is reason to think that his ultimate aim was to restore the Sikhs to their old supremacy in the Punjab by means of a religious revival. Secret murder and savage intimidation appear to have been the weapons most frequently employed to that end. Ram Singh's name was connected with a brutal murder that happened in 1868, and his complicity with the recent outrages at Amritsar and Raikot seems to have been placed beyond question by the appeal which one of his disciples made to him in open court. On his denial of the charge, his deluded follower replied that he had always been taught to tell the truth, and now his own teacher lied! For the present at any rate a heavy blow appears to have been dealt at this movement by the promptitude with which punishment has followed crime. Our informants tell us that not only are no new disciples coming forward, but that many have deserted the standard of Ram Singh, as that of one foully stained with the blood of women and children. A body however which is believed to be a hundred thousand strong, bound together by a common fanaticism and perhaps a common impatience of foreign rule, will need some careful watching in the future, even if its old faith in one particular leader may have been sorely shaken by passing events.

THE LATE LIEUTENANT-GENERAL JAMESON.

On Saturday, the 28th ult., the remains of the late Lieutenant-general Sir George Inglis Jameson, K.C.S.I., of the Bombay Army, were interred in the Charlton Cemetery, in the presence of many sorrowing friends. Those who assembled to pay the last honours to this distinguished officer were not only brother officers of the Indian Army, and officers belonging to the India Office, who knew and appreciated General Jameson as an able and indefatigable public servant; there were others bound to him only by feelings of respect for his private worth and who felt that in him they had lost a kind and valued friend.

General Sir G. Jameson joined the Bombay Native Infantry in 1819, and finally closed his Indian career in 1860; being then forced by severe illness to return to England. After a short service with his regiment, his abilities attracted the attention of the authorities, and he was placed on the General Staff. During his Staff service he was employed in the Political Branch, and for a time acted as Superintendent at Akalkote where he received great praise from the Government for the manner in which he discharged the duties of a very difficult post. But the main part of General Jameson's services was in the office of the Military Auditor General of Bombay, in which he rose from junior assistant to the head of the department. General Jameson performed the trying and delicate duties of that office in such a manner as to earn the respect of his brother officers, and frequently received the commendations of the Bombay Government and the Court of Directors. One of his most useful labours was the compilation of the Code of Army Regulations, well known as "Jameson's Code," which occupied him several years. This work has been highly praised, and all who have had occasion to use it will acknowledge its merits and bear testimony to its being one of the best compilations of the kind. General Jameson also devised a plan to correct the very defective system on which the accounts of the Indian Navy were kept up to the year 1848. The arrangement introduced by him was described by the Government as a system "perfect in all its parts, simple and efficient, easily understood, and entirely practicable."

General Jameson closed his Indian career by rendering a most important service to the Government of India. After the Mutiny it became apparent that the finances were so greatly disordered that excessive taxation would be inevitable. General Jameson had early turned his attention to the condition of the finances, and in the beginning of 1859 a friend of the late Earl Canning's (then Viceroy of India) brought to Lord Canning's notice a remarkable conversation he had had with General Jameson on the subject. Lord Canning, much impressed with its import, called on the General to state his views as to the best measures for restoring the finances; and General Jameson's report was so satisfactory that the Viceroy selected him to preside over a Commission of Inquiry into the military expenditure of the three Presidencies and of all India. The commission assembled at Bombay in July, 1859; adjourned to Madras in November following, and thence to Calcutta in January, 1860. General Jameson carried on the important inquiry confided to him until June, 1860, when the heavy work completely prostrated him; but even in that state of exhaustion it was only under the imperative orders of his medical advisers that he consented to return home. His labours during the one year were most valuable to the Government of India. Within that time the commission made seven reports; and pointed out, not only how expenditure could at once be safely reduced, but also how it might be controlled for the future. And a few days prior to his departure from Calcutta General Jameson had the satisfaction of seeing the orders of Government promulgated for establishing this control. Besides various marks of approval during the progress of the inquiry, General Jameson had the satisfaction of receiving, on the eve of his departure for Europe, "the strong expression of his Excellency in Council's appreciation of his zealous and very valuable service" in the following words:—

In a time of great financial pressure . . . . you were selected to preside over a Commission to whom was intrusted the very important duty of inquiring into the state of the Military Establishments in the three Presidencies, and to point out how the expenditure of public money in connection with them all might be controlled, and kept within due limits, consistently with perfect efficiency. This was a task of no ordinary magnitude, and in prosecuting it you have entirely fulfilled the expectations of the Governor-general in Council. To a great extent this task has now been completed, and the very valuable reports which have been laid before the Government of India by your Commission afford the strongest proof of the laborious assiduity, and of the great practical ability which you . . . have brought to bear on the whole range of your comprehensive undertaking." In conclusion, it was stated that "the Governor-general in Council participates in the fullest manner in the regret which you express that it is not permitted to you to carry on the labours of the Commission."

The return to a temperate climate and a period of rest greatly restored General Jameson's health; and in 1861 he was called on by Sir Charles Wood (now Lord Halifax) to serve on a special committee—composed of War Office and Indian officers—appointed to investigate the amount of charge that ought to be borne by India on account of pensions and retiring allowances to officers and men for service in India, and for maintaining in England the depots of regiments in India. Shortly afterwards General Jameson temporarily undertook, during the illness of his friend, Mr. Sandoz, the duties of Parliamentary Auditor of the Home Expenditure at the India Office, and on the retirement of Mr. Sandoz Sir Charles Wood appointed General Jameson to fill the office permanently, in recognition of his services in India. During the ten years that he held this post, General Jameson, whilst performing his difficult and delicate duties with courtesy and kindness, successfully enforced an accurate audit of expenditure, to the great benefit of the public service.

General Jameson's modest and self-denying character prevented his seeking public recognition of these services, but a few months since his friends were gratified by his being made a Knight of the Star of India. In spite of advancing years, and warnings of failing strength, Sir George Jameson laboured on to the last, and died in harness. The fatal termination was somewhat sudden, as his friends believed that he was recovering from a lengthened indisposition.

Thus has passed away an able and distinguished officer of the old Indian service, one who in the discharge of his duty looked solely to the public interests, irrespective of personal advantage. His sound judgment, extensive practical experience, and, by many, his personal friendship, will be long and greatly missed at the India Office.

Correspondence.

A CONTRAST.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—It is interesting to compare our unwearied devotion in revising the English translations of the Bible with our inexcusable negligence in refusing, as a nation, to give to one hundred and fifty millions of our Indian subjects God's Word in a pure and idiomatic form. Our apathy in neglecting to revise the most important versions will appear to a future generation to be unaccountable; and it is, therefore, desirable to investigate and test the validity of the excuses offered by many of our pious, and by a few of our learned countrymen.

From 1854 to 1857 (the year of the Mutiny) the common excuse was that the different versions were quite good enough.

Have Englishmen considered their own English versions quite good enough? Will they ever be satisfied with them? For three hundred and fifty years the learned in England have sought to perfect the translation. Still we are dissatisfied. Tyndal's translation in 1525 was a wonderful work. Coverdale's version in 1535, the Geneva in 1560, and the Bishops' in 1568, were the product of vast learning and profound knowledge of the meaning of the Hebrew and Greek originals. But our ancestors were not satisfied; and in 1604 the King's Government appointed fifty-four of the most learned men in the kingdom to make a careful revision. Let us never forget what we owe to those great and good men, Doctors Andrews, King, Thompson, Byng, Reynolds, Miles Smith, Boys, and their devoted partners in holy toil.

Since then hundreds of our learned men have carefully weighed the meaning of each difficult verse, and still we are not satisfied. We still seek at home and abroad for learned men to render God's Word into English in a manner at once plain and majestic, pure and idiomatic. Every rendering has been submitted to the most searching criticism—by those of the High Church, who are convinced that many words cannot be rendered into our tongue; by Calvinists, who are zealous for their doctrine of Election; and by the weak in faith, who doubt the record of God's dealings with men.

And what has been our reward for all this pious labour? God has blessed this land above all lands. While other countries have been torn and distracted by wars and sedition, we have been blessed with peace and happiness to a greater extent than any other nation ever has been since the time of Solomon.

Now look to the other side of the picture. Our responsibilities are not limited to the translation of God's Word into English. Her Majesty's Government has for thirteen years past assumed the responsibility of governing 150,000,000 of the natives of India, and the question is—How have our duties towards these ignorant millions been performed? The Marquis of Wellesley, the greatest statesman that India has seen since the illustrious reign of the Emperor Akbar, defined our national duties as follows:—"He had thought it his duty to have the Scriptures translated into the languages of the East, and to give the learned natives employed in the translation the advantages of access to the sacred fountains of Divine Truth. He thought that a Christian Governor could not have done less, and knew that a British Governor ought not to do more"—Parliamentary Debates, Vol. 25, page 698.

From 1801 to 1804 this eminent statesman persevered in displaying before the eyes of fanatical millions his sure trust in God. The wonderful victories gained by his generals, Wellington and Lake, he, in the most public manner, ascribed to the God of the Bible. While showing his determination to enforce perfect toleration among all sects, he knew that his native subjects would appreciate his truthfulness, and despise the policy of those who pretended to be neutral and indifferent.

I have been told that disaffection might be caused by Governments assisting in the work of translation; that the imperfections of the languages of India prevent good translations; that the English translation is not perfect, and a native translation cannot therefore attain perfection; that the Hebrew and Greek text is not perfect, and has to be compared with newly found manuscripts; that this is not the proper time for Government to undertake the revision; that Churchmen and Dissenters would never agree to co-operate; and that the appointment of well-paid translators would be jobbed.

You will not have space for my answers to all of these objections; I, therefore, at present offer remarks only on the objection raised by a distinguished Indian statesman in a letter dated Jan. 6 last. He wrote:—

"As regards the translation of the Bible, I do not so well see my way. I do not yield to you in thinking the work most desirable (at least the greater part of the Bible), and worthy of a great Government; but in these days we cannot do all that we might have done in the beginning of the century, and it seems to be established that the money of the natives must not be spent in any directly Christian work, so that the Bible is almost the only book we cannot venture to translate."

My own conviction is that the existence of God's Word in the languages understood by our Indian subjects is the best security for peace and order. I and many others at the time of the Mutiny owed our lives to the Almighty's putting veneration for Abraham into the heart of a Mohammedan havildar. The man had very obscure ideas regarding Abraham, but he looked upon the latter as our nearest common ancestor, to whom his conscience could appeal to urge him in the path of duty. Sheik Mokeem is now a distinguished soobahdar, and thankful (I hope) that he had been taught the existence of Abraham.

No native would object to the public money being expended in the work of translation, provided that those in power will guarantee that there be no jobbery. Jobbery and nepotism are sins of the conquerors, which the conquered races are justified in protesting against. Translators must be appointed on account of their linguistic attainments only, and the learned among Mahommedans and Hindoos must be offered liberal salaries to induce them to assist zealously in the work. It is a hopeless task to attempt to translate into Arabic and Oordoo without the aid of learned Mohammedans, or into Sanskrit and Hindu without the aid of learned Hindoos.

Mohammedans are at present blaming Government for expending vast sums on unworthy objects, while learned scholars are left to starve. No civilised Government has ever done so little for literature as our Government has done in India, since the Marquis Wellesley resigned sixty-six years ago.

But if the tender conscience of the Indian Government should prevent its giving any money after the lapse of more than two generations for the purpose of supplying one classical work for the enlightenment of two hundred millions of souls and their descendants, it has only to appeal earnestly to the pious in England, Scotland, Ireland, and America, and ample funds will speedily be accumulated for the establishment of Philological Colleges at Benares and Lucknow.—Your obedient servant, T.

The Iliad of Homer. Translated by J. G. Cordery, of H.M.'s Bengal Civil Service. Rivingtons. 1871.

If Mr. Cordery's translation of the Iliad into blank verse had been less masterly than it is, we might with reason have protested against another attempt to reproduce in an English dress and in unrhymned Iambic metre the flowing hexameters of the greatest of Greek poets. The blank verse translations of Cowper, Wright, and Lord Derby had done little to warrant the belief that Homer's fire and flow and clear straightforward diction could be adequately rendered into a metre which few of our most original poets have handled with a master's power. A year ago Worsley alone among our modern translators could claim, with his sweet yet spirited Spenserian stanzas, to divide the crown of merit with Chapman and Pope. Since then however Cullen Bryant, the American poet, has shown how gracefully the old Greek singer can walk under the burden of good blank verse; and now a member of the Indian Civil Service comes forward to challenge comparison with Mr. Bryant. Mr. Cordery himself indeed disclaims all premeditated rivalry of this sort. His own translation was begun, he tells us, in 1862 and finished towards the close of 1866, during most of which period he was unaware "that so many others were engaged upon the same work." Even had he been aware of such a fact however, he could still have pleaded, as he does now, that "no really independent translator of Homer can be like another;" and the undoubted excellence of his own work would have gone far in his case to justify the plea. We do not quarrel with the tragic poets of Greece or the great painters of mediæval Europe for giving us so many different versions of the same familiar themes; and the Iliad is a masterpiece which every fresh translator of any merit is certain to set before us in something of a new light, in a dress that differs more or less markedly from every other. The pleasure of comparing one with another is like that which a playgoer may get from seeing the part of Hamlet or Lady Macbeth performed in turn by different actors of nearly equal ability.

Such pleasure the volumes before us will afford, we think, in ample degree to all who care for good workmanship guided by a due admixture of scholarly training and poetic insight. "Rapidity of movement and directness of speech" were Mr. Cordery's avowed aim, nor can any one read far into the book without discovering how greatly he has succeeded. So far as our blank verse can ever do justice to Homer's fire and flow, the present translation may be said to do that justice. After Pope's magnificent heroics blank verse must always sound tame, except perhaps the measure of which Byron gave but too rare a sample in his "Dream," or that which Shakespeare wields with consummate art in scores of his most dramatic speeches. It can hardly even touch the level of Worsley's Spenserians. Nevertheless Mr. Cordery has handled his metre with an easy varied grace not always equalled by Bryant himself; and any defect in rapid movement is made up by the clear directness of his diction. He can write at any rate good homely, tuneful, flowing English, not too compressed to illustrate the fulness, nor too diffuse to recal somewhat of the buoyant strength of his original. His language, seldom if ever unpoetic, is just archaic enough to convey some notion of the difference between Homer's language and that of Sophocles. The following is only an average sample of Mr. Cordery's verse:—

> Ah! dear my brother! Vow'd I then thy death,
> Vowing this treaty, when I set thee forth
> To fight alone with Troy for all our sakes?
> For, lo! how they have struck thee, of their oaths
> Regardless, trampling down their own pledged words!
> But not all vain those oaths, the lambs' blood shed,
> The offerings of pure wine, the clasp'd right hands,
> Wherein we duly trusted, even though Zeus
> Fulfilleth not their import all this day;
> Yet of a surety shall fulfilment come,
> How late soever, and the price shall fall
> The heavier—ev'n their own lives, and the lives
> Of all their wives and children. Yea, I speak
> That which I know, and hold it most assured;
> The day will come when Ilion's sacred towers,
> Their King, and all the people of their King,
> Shall perish utterly for evermore;
> When Zeus, enthroned in upper air supreme,
> And judging thence the wicked deeds of man,
> Shall, in his anger for this foul deceit,
> Shake the dread Ægis and appal all eyes.
> These words shall not be let to pass away;
> But if thou diest, if thou hast now fulfilled,
> My brother, the short measure of thy life,
> Cruel were my sorrow; happier then than I,
> The vilest of my subjects might return
> To drought-enduring Argos; since the host
> Would straight remind them of their fatherland,
> And we should leave to Priam and to Troy
> The boast of Argive Helen; but the earth
> Would rot thy bones in this far land reposed;
> In Troy reposed, and all thy work undone.
> "Iliad," Book IV., l. 184-215.

This surely is many degrees better than Lord Derby's state-paper English and stiff unmusical versification. Here and there it is a little too expansive, but the meaning of the original is clearly rendered in fluent and well-turned verse. In the famous parting of Hector and Andromache Mr. Cordery leaves little to desire. His translation of the closing lines of Book VIII. runs that of Mr. Tennyson a very near race indeed. In his rendering of Homer's epithets he is usually very happy, and the signs of careful scholarship may everywhere be traced beneath the surface of an unforced idiomatic English style.

THE INDIAN COMMISSARIAT.

The Madras Times holds that in cantonment the commissariat performs its duties smoothly and effectively, and in the field, however sudden the order of march, or the number of men to be supplied, it has almost ever earned the commendation of those who might feel well inclined to grumble under the heat and fatigue of an Indian campaign. Its officers certainly are allowed a considerable amount of latitude in their operations—one of the secrets of its success as a department—and its baggage train may appear enormous in comparison with that of a German field force; but it is to be remembered that Indian armies require an unusual amount of carriage, and so far from desiring to see that carriage curtailed, we question very much the wisdom of those who are at present raising a cry to have it reduced as far as possible. Playing at soldiers at the Delhi Camp of Exercise under the most favourable conditions, and in a pleasant cold weather, it may be all very well to observe the utmost limit to which carriage for an Indian field force can be reduced; but the Delhi exercises will be something very different from active warfare, and if "Control," as a rule, is to be introduced into India, as we have it at home, the results are obvious—the Indian Commissariat will cease to be the admirable department that it at present is. Economy in this matter has played us strange pranks in England; out here its enormities would be doubly lamentable, for they could have no other effect than to impede the movements of our troops in this country; leave the European soldier, who costs us so much, to sicken and die by the roadside under the terrible inclemency of the Indian climate, and pave the way for such discontent among our troops as could hardly fail to prove injurious to their efficiency and verve when called upon to exert themselves to an unusual pitch upon extraordinary occasions. It certainly seems strange that when every one in India and abroad praises our commissariat arrangements as excellent above all measure, and the Control and Supply at home is held up to universal ridicule and contempt, we in India should be disinclined to let well alone; nay worse, to change good for evil by introducing the economical hobbies of the Control Department into this country! Our usual partiality for blundering is here shown. If, at immense trouble and expense, aided, too, by rare good fortune, we succeed in organising a model department that will not belie its name, we must, forsooth, take exception to it for some reason or other, and fancy that it can be improved upon, or that at least its expenses may be lessened. Then comes the game of retrenchment! Officials are appointed upon tall salaries to pick holes in the serviceable garment, and as soon as, under their exertions, it becomes ragged and unfit for wear, the public cries out—but too late for any good purpose. We sincerely trust that, with the misfortunes of the control and supply in England staring it in the face, the Government of India may not be induced to alter the constitution of the Indian Commissariat for the worse; and yet when we hear of such mad theories propounded as those which are to distinguish the Delhi camp on this subject, we much fear that theory may run away with us, as it has already run away with the War Office people at home; whence, in the next Indian campaign, instead of hearing the usual laudations on the matter of our commissariat arrangements, we shall only be reminded of the infamous shortcomings of a department now upon its trial in England.

OCTROI DUTIES.

The Indian Economist regards it as a generally accepted belief amongst Englishmen that octroi duties ought everywhere to be disallowed as being opposed to English principles, whereas octroi duties properly regulated are frequently the best mode of taxation a municipality can adopt. Objections to octroi duties are reducible generally to the following heads:—

(1) The cost of their collection.
(2) The vexation attending their levy.
(3) Their tendency to press unfairly upon the poor.

Now no tax whatever can be collected without some cost and inconvenience to the taxpayer, while it may frequently happen that the imposition of an octroi is the cheapest and least vexatious of all modes whatever. Take Bombay in illustration of the fact, where the octroi is collected by the Imperial Customs machinery, with the following result:—

Octroi collected 1870.	Cost of collection.	Percentage.
Rs. 6,30,139	Rs. 23,623	Rs. 3¾

Now here is a case in which the cost of collection is exceedingly small, and where by wisely confining the impost to three or four great articles of consumption, the tax is levied with so little inconvenience and vexation that the local journalists have positively adduced the fact as an argument against the continuance of the tax. The community is so little conscious of its existence that the tax is held to be demoralising as making the municipality careless of its expenditure. The truth simply is that the two first of the objections to octroi duties have no necessary connection with the tax whatever. All that "political economy" says in the matter is the truism that if the imposition of octroi duties in any community proves a costly mode of taxation or a vexatious one, and other modes less costly and less vexatious are open thereto, the octroi should be rejected. The third and last objection to these duties is their tendency, where heavy, to press with undue severity upon the poor. Now here again the whole force of the objection is gone where the impost is so adjusted as not to fall with undue weight upon the poor. The real objection is to the imposition of a heavy duty upon necessaries of life. There is no objection whatever to an octroi upon necessaries as the contribution of the poor towards the Municipal Exchequer, so long as the impost does not press unfairly upon them. The masses must pay in some way or other, and an octroi equitably adjusted is, we are satisfied, the very best mode in which they can be made to do so. The fact simply is that when Englishmen speak of octroi duties and array against them the objections we have been noticing, it is not such duties in the abstract, but the Paris octroi which they really have in mind. Octroi duties must necessarily, they suppose, be of the French order; and so deep rooted is the prejudice with which the nation regards the impost, that English journalists and economists are simply afraid of recommending it.

THE WAHABI MOVEMENT.

The Friend of India agrees with Mr. Hunter that the Mahomedans really have cause for discontent, and that they are discontented. We found their ancestors holding all the great offices of the various states. We have reduced them, or rather they have reduced themselves, to menial offices for the most part. Our clerks are Hindoos. To them the great mass of offices open to natives fall. No candid critic would say that this was the fault of the British Government. There has not been an intelligent and thoughtful man in India in this generation who has not lamented the impossibility of inducing the great mass of the Mahomedan population to make any effort whatever for their personal advancement, unless it could be made in the old tracks of their race. All attempts at education have failed utterly, and we are at this moment, with all our educational machinery, almost as far away from possessing any educational hold upon the Mahomedans of India as we were a quarter of a century ago. Their reminiscences are of the sword, not of the pen, and to that sword they look while they are gradually dwindling away from the power to use it in the old form. A subject like this would be exceedingly dangerous if the elements were quite as ready for explosion as some people suppose, or if there was not the possibility of preventing the explosion by wise and statesmanlike measures. We have long taken exactly the same course that Dr. Hunter has taken in urging upon the Government of India to make a strong and resolute attempt to introduce a Mahomedan element into public affairs. Whatever Mr. Hunter's full meaning is, however, there is no doubt that nine out of every ten Englishmen reading his book will exaggerate the danger; and this, to some extent, will be a public misfortune, because it will be an exaggeration merely and not the creation of a phantom. The fact exists. The danger is in denying its existence on the one hand or exaggerating it on the other. For our own part we believe that if the Mahomedans are fairly dealt with, if their leading men can be induced to lend their aid to the cause of education and to individual advancement, and if we are as watchful on the frontier as we may be, and as we ought to be, there has never been a treason in India that we may more safely snap our fingers at than this of the Wahabees. Only it must be by resolute and strong will and by a watchfulness as unremitting as its own. Mr. Hunter's book is a complete justification of the Wahabee prosecutions, an intellectual reply to Mr. Anstey's rhodomontade. But we are not yet on the eve of succumbing to Wahabeeism; and, as the subject will inevitably be viewed in England, Mr. Hunter's picture is overdrawn.

The Pioneer, reviewing Dr. Hunter's book, exclaims:—"A standing rebel camp on the frontier, and a chronic conspiracy within the Empire; an elaborately organised system of proselytism by fanatical missionaries; warrior races at our most vulnerable point, whom our utmost vigilance can scarcely control, and who have time after time involved us in costly and inglorious campaigns; thirty millions of subjects, sullen, despairing, and aggrieved, the lawfulness of non-rebellion earnestly discussed, and hanging at last on the decision of a few Arabian law doctors!—all this is a splendid specimen of the 'art of putting it,' but (except of course as the rhetoric of a clever counsel) it is all rather ridiculous. The 'rebel camp' is beyond the frontier, and will remain there; the 'chronic conspiracy,' if handed over to the Thuggee department, might be suppressed in a twelvemonth. As foreign rulers we must make up our minds always to have some small dangers. May we never have any worse than the present!"

TRIAL OF MR. NORMAN'S MURDERER.

The Hindoo Patriot holds that the stoicism of the man plainly indicates that he had been actuated by some strong religious feeling. He probably imagines that he has secured a high place in heaven by this cold-blooded murder, the horrible character of which we doubt whether he realises to himself, and so he is utterly indifferent as to the threats and punishments which may be heaped upon him. Indeed, as we looked at the countenance of the man at the High Court we concluded that he must have laughed within himself at the solemn pageant of his trial. When he had committed the atrocious crime he must have been prepared to receive the extreme penalty of law, but as an Asiatic he could not but have wondered at the external forms of British justice. It is as well that he and men like him should wonder. Amid the sorrow and sadness of the occasion nothing could be more impressive upon the mind than the stern rules of an English Court of Justice, which would not deny a fair and open trial to the basest criminal. Let the enemies of the British Government ponder over the forms of this trial. Here was a criminal, who had been caught red-handed, and if he had lived in a native State his head would have, perhaps, been severed instantly. But what does our Government do? He is arrested by the police, and taken before the coroner, who holds a preliminary inquiry, and at the end he is allowed every opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses and prove his innocence. He is again brought up before the magistrate, where the same form is observed. At the High Court he is allowed to challenge the jury, who had been summoned to try him, and to examine the witnesses to any length he likes. The Advocate-General, who conducts the prosecution, exhorts the jury to dismiss from their minds what they had heard outside and to bring in their verdict without bias and in good conscience. The prisoner is asked to make what declaration he likes, but not compelled to confess his guilt. Every word of the evidence is interpreted to him. It would be thus seen that nothing could be more fair and above-board than the forms of trial in an English Court of Justice, and we hope the lessons of this trial will not be lost upon fanatics like Abdulla. That punishment, swift and terrible, should overtake him is the natural sequence of his bloody and brutal deed, but the observance of all the forms of procedure to give a fair and impartial trial even to such a ruffian shows the character of British rule to the best advantage, and we would fain hope that the moral force of this fact would conquer the worst passions in the breasts of the evil-disposed.

THE ASSASSIN ABDULLAH.—The Lucknow Times suggests that the assassin Abdoola may possibly prove identical with one Abdullah Shah, a fanatic Moulvie who lived at Lahore many years ago, and was a disciple of the Wahabi Moulvie Ismail. Our contemporary thinks that if a photograph of the murderer could be obtained and shown to some Punjabis in that station, who formerly knew Abdullah Shah, the point might be set at rest. It appears that the Punjabee Mussalman at Lucknow, who was reported to be able to identify the murderer Abdullah, merely made a guess that he knew the man. From the similarity of the names he thought that he might be identical with one Abdollah Shah, a fanatical Moulvie, who used to live at Lahore many years ago, and who is a follower of the notorious Wahabee Moulvy Ismail. Abdollah Shah, when at Lahore, had organised an attack on the Tazia procession one Moharrum, such displays being condemned by his sect as superstitious. He used to preach his tenets in one of the mosques, and hold controversies with the followers of more peaceful sects. If a photograph of this villain could be sent to Lucknow, the Punjabee might perhaps be able to identify him by the aid of Punjabees who had seen Abdollah Shah at Lahore.—Bombay Gazette.

BRAVE CONDUCT.

Major E. S. Earle, superintending engineer Upper Bari Doab Canal, in reporting to Government a flood on the Ravee, in July last, thus narrates the brave conduct of Supervisor Francis, in risking his own life in the attempt to save others :—

"I regret to have to report that during this flood four natives lost their lives, and that two of these were men employed in passing on the timber which had collected at the piers of the new weir before these gave way. On the piers beginning to go, some of the men employed managed to get back safely on to the bank before they fell, but others were carried away on the logs. All, except one man, who was carried straight away and was not again seen, got drifted on to an island of silt not far off, where some men and women already were, who had gone out to collect sticks and chips of wood, and had been cut off from returning by the rising of the river.

"Mr. Francis, Supervisor Special Works Division, on seeing the danger that these people were in, put off to their assistance in a darey—drai, or raft of mussuks. On getting out to them he sent back on the darey the women first, four in number, and these were safely taken across; but on the darey-men making a second attempt to get out to the remainder (Mr. Francis and seven men), they did not succeed in landing, and were taken down the stream a great way, and before they could return the island of silt began to get washed away by the rising water; those on it then had to take to the logs, and were all swept down the stream. Fortunately Mr. Francis, who deserves very great praise for the brave manner in which he risked his own life to save those of others, was, with four others, saved; but the remaining three men were, I regret to say, drowned, making a total loss of four men."

"From the Government of India, to the Joint Secretary to the Government of the Punjab :—

"Simla, Sept. 25.

"Your letter of the 11th inst., and enclosures, reporting the occurrence of an extraordinary flood in the Ravee on the 23rd July last, and its effect on the canal works, have been laid before the Governor-General in Council. In reply I am to express his Excellency's satisfaction that so little injury has occurred to the works, notwithstanding the unprecedented character of the floods to which they were exposed, and to convey his Excellency's appreciation of the gallant conduct of Supervisor Francis in rescuing the lives of several natives on the occasion."

Miscellaneous.

In Memory of the late Mr. Justice Norman.—The Indian Mirror is informed that a general meeting of the Mahommedan inhabitants of Calcutta and the suburbs was to be held at the residence of Moonshee Ameer Ali Khan Bahadoor, Calcutta, on Wednesday, October 11th, for the purpose of taking practical steps to perpetuate the memory of the late officiating Chief Justice Norman.

Judicial.—Calcutta papers announce the death of Mr. Afleck Moodie, Second Judge of Small Causes. Mr. Moodie had officiated as second judge during the absence, on leave, of Mr. Fagan. We hear that Mr. Millett, barrister-at-law, has been temporarily appointed to succeed Mr. Moodie as Second Judge of the Small Cause Court.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.—Mr. George Campbell promises to become a very formidable rival, in the way of extensive travel and untiring energy, of the ex-Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces himself. It was only the other day that we announced the return to Belvidere of his Honour from a tour that would have fatigued any ordinary man. But not so Mr. George Campbell; for we read in the Calcutta papers that "the Lieutenant-Governor, accompanied by Mr. Bernard, will leave Calcutta for Darjeeling on Saturday next.' His Honour evidently intends to revolutionise the civil administration of Lower Bengal.

A Contrast.—In an article commenting on the trial of Abdoola, the murderer of Mr. Norman, the Indian Public Opinion says :—"We venture to hazard the opinion that the occasion was scarcely proper for eulogising the victim, reflecting on the criminal's native country, recommending a guard for the judges, alluding to Mr. Norman's widow, and more than hinting that the murderer deserved horrible tortures. All this is merely sensational and unnecessary, and very much wanting in judicial calmness. Mr. Justice Paul denounces the murderer and his kind as 'vermin.' If he wants to learn how to treat such 'vermin,' let him take a lesson from the trial of the other judge-murderer, Bishen Singh, so calmly and patiently conducted in the Commissioner's Court at Lahore. At the end the sentence was as short as it should be, short and stern, and in the prisoner's native tongue. 'Prisoner, what the witnesses and assessors say is true. You are found guilty of murder, and will be hanged as soon as an answer can be got from Simla. Lejao!'"

Misappropriation of Trust Funds.—We (Englishman) regret to learn that the Húgli College is not the only case of grave misappropriation of Mussulman educational bequests by the Government. In the Punjab there is a great fund of Rs. 174,000, known as the Itimad-ud-Dowlah's foundation, given by a Shiah Chief for a Shiah school, and for the encouragement of Arabic and Persian. We are informed that this fund has been misappropriated to a Hindoo school for the teaching of Sanscrit, and to paying an extra English master at the Delhi Government College. We observe that among the candidates for the present entrance examination there were no fewer than fifty-two Maulavis, Pandits, and Munshis.

Military.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, writing from Mussoorie on the 8th Oct., says :—"You have heard of the unexpected orders received regarding the breaking-up of the convalescent depot at Landour. The men will take their departure from this on the morning of the 16th, fully one month earlier than they generally do. The Landour depot is no exception to the above order; the early break-up is applicable to all convalescent depots. In these days of economy Government are ready to apply the scissors to any department that will stand clipping. Just imagine in future all commandants and station staffs of convalescent depots will receive their staff pay merely during the season, that is, from 1st April until 1st November! and during which periods only they will vegetate in the hills!! This order, I fear, will not be a popular one by any means, and may result in such appointments not being so much coveted in future."

Suppression of Port Canning.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal tolls the passing bell over Port Canning. "From the 15th October, 1871," he says, "or from such day after that date as may be convenient, all harbour establishments will, under the orders of his Excellency the Viceroy of India in Council, be withdrawn from Port Canning; the moorings and buoys in the river Mutlah will be taken up, and Port Canning will no longer be maintained as a British Indian port."—We (Times of India) can scarcely believe that the energetic George Campbell will carry out his weak and shiftless intention to blockade Port Canning. Whilst we are having costly harbour engineers out from home, and spending thousands on paper plans for the improvement of our ports, it does seem the most perverse farce to "douse the glim," and pull up the buoys and moorings on the great estuary of the Sunderbunds. If the Lieutenant-Governor does adopt this reactionary step, it will be cited as one of the instances proving that rumour described him truly as one "who would make a spoon or spoil a horn." He is spoiling a horn in this case; but it is possible the barbaric order to pull up the buoys of the Mutlah may have been issued by the Customs department, which is not able to discriminate between the necessity of maintaining a fat establishment at Port Canning, and that slight inexpensive attention which the place requires at present.

MEMORIAL TO LORD NAPIER.—The Punjabi Akhbar learns that the Rajahs and Chiefs of the Madras Presidency are raising a subscription for a statue of Lord Napier. One Rajah, it is said, has contributed Rs. 50,000.

MANGALORE.—The landholders and chief inhabitants of Mangalore appear to be taking very much to heart the rumoured proposal to transfer their district to the Bombay presidency. It is somewhat strange, to say the least, that the first news of this proposed transfer—which has evidently advanced beyond the rumour stage—should come all the way from South Canara. Speaking for ourselves, we object to this presidency being bothered either with Mangalore or its moplahs; still, if the scheme has really been seriously entertained by Government, it is one of sufficient importance to justify them in laying it before the public for free and honest discussion.—Times of India.

MILITARY OFFICERS TRAVELLING BY RAIL.—It has, we believe, been proposed before now, says the Madras Times, "That all military officers travelling by rail in India should be allowed tickets at half-price. There does not appear to be any objection to such an arrangement. Speaking broadly, the army is the only profession in this country that is clearly underpaid, and undoubtedly such a boon as this would be much appreciated. It would enable many a man to get a spell of fresh air on the hills who now lingers in the plains, unable to take his family by the first class, and unwilling to subject a lady to the possible annoyances of the second. Whether, however, such a boon, granted to a particular body of men, would be more preferable to the more general introduction of a medium charge, is an open question."

MOVEMENTS OF LORD NAPIER.—His Excellency the Governor has been paying an unexpected visit to Salem. Early on Friday morning he was taken ill in the train the other side of Jollarpet, and on reaching Salem it was thought unadvisable to proceed. His lordship accordingly remained at the station till the arrival of the Zillah surgeon, Dr. Pearse, who removed him to a bungalow belonging to one of the railway officials. By the evening of the same day he was almost entirely recovered, and the next morning changed his quarters for the house of the collector, Mr. Longley. With accustomed energy his lordship availed himself of returning health to visit the Central Jail on Saturday morning, where we understand he enquired most minutely into the state of the manufactory, and system of discipline in force, while in the evening he drove all over the town, inspecting the public buildings, &c. The wonderful improvements that have been effected during the last year or two were the subject of much remark. The Mutual Improvement Society holding its usual monthly meeting on Saturday night, his lordship kindly consented to be present, and appeared much pleased with the intelligence displayed in a lecture by a young Hindoo gentleman. Yesterday morning, Sunday, his Excellency proceeded by the early train. We are not aware of the exact nature of his sudden and brief indisposition, but understand that it was nothing more than a slight, though momentarily severe, attack, such as is common from one cause or another in this climate.—Madras Times, Oct. 13.

LIGHTING THE MADRAS COAST.—Improvements are, we learn, to be made in lighting the coast of Madras, the local Government being about to "erect two light-houses on the Southern Coast; a third-class red light on the extreme south-east point of Cape Comorin; and a first-class light, either on the rocky islet of Kotaka close to the Crocodile reef, or on the main land at Kadiapatam, two and a half miles distant from the Crocodile."

THE NEXT GOVERNOR.—Mr. Eastwick seems to be obtaining a very general support in the Indian press as a candidate for the Governorship of Madras. The Pioneer has a long article advocating his claims, and the Times of India has already spoken highly of them. I Indian appointments were likely to be much influenced by these discussions, journalists might join in them with greater zest; and perhaps the good day is coming when public opinion here may have due weight at home. Referring to the probability of Mr. Eastwick being made Governor of Madras, the Daily Examiner thinks "Sir Richard Temple has fairly earned the appointment, if willing to accept it, and than that energetic and energy-inspiring minister the Madras Presidency could not have a better Governor." There are two opinions about this.

THE HAIRY FAMILY AT MANDALAY.—The editor of the Rangoon Times has been visiting "the hairy family" at Mandalay, and a singular family he says it is, and quite out of the ordinary run of monstrosities. This is the description. The family consists of the mother, a son, who is grown up, without any noticeable peculiarities, and another son and a daughter. The "mother is forty-six years of age, a slender woman, about five feet four inches high, teeth good, with hands about the same as other people. The neck (our contemporary has been wonderfully observant) had a few white long hairs shining on the dusky skin as on a new horse blanket." "As the bust was covered" he could not tell "whether that part had so anomalous an appearance as the face and neck." She was a "lively body," but not in any way singular. The second lad's face is covered with snuff coloured hair of a glossy appearance, and so thick that it has to be brushed away from his eyes to enable him to see. The "nasal orifices" (we suppose that must be something relating to the nose) were covered with a ruff of hair. The lad "made no objection to his nose being examined, but he had to keep brushing off the hair out of the sight and from the mouth to enable him to breathe." He has a capital appetite, and ate his breakfast before the visitors in order to show them that he eats like other people. "His throat and chest, and arms and legs were sprinkled over with the same hair that figured on his mother." The little girl is under five feet high, and is like her brother, only the hair was not so strong. And now comes the great point of the visit. The hairy family is a prize, and is under the special protection of the King, who has to give his consent to their being seen by any stranger.—Friend of India.

TROOPS FOR ENGLAND.—The troops to leave Bombay for England, via the Suez Canal, in H.M.'s Indian troop-ship Malabar, will be, we believe, the 104th Fusiliers, and the 3rd, 4th, 6th, and 7th Batteries of the 22nd Brigade Royal Artillery—from Bengal; also details of time-expired men from the Bombay presidency.

FAMINE IN KATTYWAR.—We learn that about a fortnight ago four Hindoos residing in the village of Delwara, in Kattywar, belonging to H.H. the Nawab of Joonaghur, committed suicide in consequence of their sufferings from starvation. We are glad to hear that a large quantity of grain has been forwarded by some of the members of the Kupole Bania community in Bombay to certain places in Kattywar where the people are suffering from the famine. —Bombay Gazette, Oct. 14.

MEETING IN MEMORY OF CHIEF JUSTICE NORMAN.—A meeting of the principal Mahomedan inhabitants of Bombay was to be held on the afternoon of October 21, at the bungalow of Mr. Cumroodin Tyabjee, solicitor, High Court, situated at Khetwady, for the purpose of expressing their sentiments of deep sorrow and regret at the cowardly assassination of the late Mr. Chief Justice Norman, and their sympathy for his family. In conformity with the tenor of the principal resolution to be offered at the meeting, it is intended to address a letter of condolence to Mrs. Norman in the name of the Bombay Mahomedan community.

GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE.—After much uncertainty, the question, who is to act as Principal of Grant Medical College in Dr. Hunter's absence? is settled—and in the only way it could properly be decided. Dr. J. H. Sylvester is appointed as Principal of the College and First Physician of the Jamsetjee Hospital, retaining one professorship—which is not quite certain. This appointment is only a due recognition of Dr. Sylvester's high professional acquirements, and cannot fail to give satisfaction to all who are sincerely interested in the scientific and educational progress of the institution. We cannot but regret, however, that this change will deprive the Cowasjee Jehangier Eye Hospital of its peculiarly skilful surgeon; but we trust that with the aid of the apt pupil Dr. Sylvester leaves behind him the post will be satisfactorily filled up.—Times of India.

BOMBAY PORT TRUST.—The merchants of Bombay will wake up too late to the gravity of this Port Trust muddle. It is now stated, and on alarmingly good authority, that, seeing it is impossible to get an adequate return from the bunder fees and other wharfage charges to meet the crushing capital debt piled up against the port, the intention now is to double the tonnage fees on the shipping! It is high time to make this a personal question, and to expose the workings of the official mind which could devise or support the irrational action of making Bombay commerce sustain a burden of two millions sterling. Possibly this proposal to double the tonnage fees may be only a threat, but it is one that should be met at once in the most public and emphatic way possible. Have our citizens any public spirit left?—Times of India.

PROPOSED STATUE TO MR COWASJEE JEHANGHIR READYMONEY.—A meeting of the promoters of the movement, recently initiated for the purpose of marking the sense of the people at Bombay of the character of Cowasjee Jehanghir Readymoney, Esq., C.S.I., as a great public benefactor, by placing a statue of him in the Elphinstone College buildings or in some other public institution in this city founded or endowed by him, was held on the afternoon of October 11, at Mazagon Castle. The Hon. Sir James Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Bart., C.S.I., was called to the chair. It was resolved that the draft advertisement, explaining the object of the movement, which was submitted to the meeting, should be published in the newspapers. The meeting unanimously adopted a suggestion made by the Hon. Mr. Justice Gibbs that, in the event of the funds raised being more than are required for the statue, the balance should be disposed of by the committee in some further object to perpetuate the name of Mr. Cowasjee Jehanghir. This was all the business before the meeting. A subscription list was circulated among the gentlemen present, and a sum of nearly Rs. 5,000 was subscribed on the spot.

NEWS FROM THE PERSIAN GULF.—BRITISH RESIDENCY, BUSHIRE, Sept. 23.—The Turkish steam corvette Lebanon, and s.s. Askanderia, sixteen and eight guns respectively, arrived at Bushire under the command of Aariff Beg, Commodore of the Sublime Porte, who gave out that these two vessels were the vanguard of a fleet of ten set apart for duty in the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf. A royal salute was fired by the vessels after anchoring in the Bushire inner roads. The salute was returned after a short interval by the Persian artillery. The Commodore Aariff Beg then landed and called on the Deputy Governor, who had previously sent a deputation to wait on him. The native agent on the Arab coast reports all quiet by land and sea, but states that many deaths from cholera have taken place and that all people are engaged in interring their friends. The ports of Shargah, Rasul, Khyma and Bokha have suffered heavily, as many as seventy persons being carried off in one day. Cholera has appeared at the Government station at Bassidore, at Old Bassidore, and at Bunder Singow. The poor are daily increasing in numbers, notwithstanding the many deaths from starvation. The price of bread has decreased, but the poor are unable to find employment and have not the means of purchasing bread. Some relief has been afforded to the poor by charitable contributions from England and India.

THE DISTRESS IN PERSIA.—The steamer Cashmere arrived from the Persian Gulf on Saturday last, with news from Yezd to the 29th August, and from Bunder Abbas to the 27th September last. Letters from Yezd of the 22nd, 25th, and 29th August state that the distress among the Zoroasters in that city had increased from a total want of occupation, which adds to the lingering effects of the famine; while injustice and plunder render the people entirely helpless, in consequence of which they are now starving. People are deserting their houses in Yezd. Mr. Godrez's brother distributed among the sufferers about four thousand maunds of wheat, the price of which is rapidly rising in the neighbouring villages; and it is intended to distribute the remainder of the stock in Yezd itself. The news from Tabreez is that rain fell there most inopportunely, and that a portion of the city has been swept away by the inundations. The advices from Bunder Abbas show that Khosroo, Mr. Godrez's brother, reached that city on the 26th August, and found there seventy Parsees, who were suffering greatly from sickness and starvation. Of these, twenty-six were men, twelve women, and thirty-two children, who had arrived five days previously. Two deaths had occurred among them, and three persons were in a precarious state. Their wants were provided for from the funds sent from Bombay. The Mahomedan Government prohibits their being sent on to Bombay, although efforts are still continued to induce them to allow the sufferers to depart.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 14.

IMPORTS.—Bombay, Oct. 14.—The business in Manchester Goods during the past week, although on an increasing scale, has not been large for this period of the season. The demand has been principally for Shirtings, Jaconets, and Mulls at former prices, whilst Printers, Longcloths, and Domestics have commanded higher rates. The market is firm at the close. In Bleached Goods there has not been much doing, but prices are well supported. The business in Dyed and Printed Goods has been on a moderate scale, full rates being obtainable. Turkey Red Goods have been very dull, and rather lower in value. The sales of Grey Twist have been rather large, and a slight advance has been established. Coloured Yarns are firm; most sorts rather dearer, with the exception of Turkey Red, in which buyers have a slight advantage. The business in Metals has been small, but the price as a rule has been maintained, and the prospects of the market are generally considered favourable.

EXPORTS.—Bombay, Oct. 14.—Cotton: Dealers have reduced their quotations Rs. 7 to 12 from the extreme prices demanded a week ago; but as at this reduction there is no margin between Bombay and Liverpool prices, the buying has been only on a small scale, comprising about 7,000 bales, the greater portion of which consists of New Oomrawuttee and Broach for delivery in March, 1872, and Dholleras, for delivery in one and a-half to two months. To-day's quotation for new cotton is about Rs. 10 below that current when the last steamer left, but there is little demand at the prices the dealers are now asking. The market is quiet at the close.

MONEY MARKET.—Bombay, Oct. 14.—Money: The alterations in the accounts of the Bank of Bombay for the past week comprise an increase in deposits of about 11 lakhs, and in loans of 8 lakhs, the cash balance being improved by 12 lakhs. There is no change of interest to notice in the position of our Money Market, either with regard to the character of the demand or in rates of interest and discount. Government Securities: The transactions in Government Paper have been small, and rates have declined above ¼ per cent. in sympathy with the advance in sterling exchange. Shares: The business in this department has been unusually small, and rates have declined above ¼ per cent. in sympathy with the advance in sterling exchange. Shares: The business in this department has been unusually small. In Spinning Shares a few transactions only are reported at barely former prices. Land Shares are very quiet, and buyers would have a slight advantage. In Press Shares the only new feature has been a demand for those of the Fort Press Company, which have improved Rs. 300 per share. Bank of Bombay Shares continue very firm, at former rates.

Our will and pleasure is,

That the undermentioned articles of our warrant of Dec. 27, 1870, be cancelled accordingly, viz. :—

Articles 33 [Paragraph a], 36 [Paragraph a], so much of Article 40 as relates to regimental promotion, Articles 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 61, 62, 63, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 102, 109, 959, 961, 967, 968, 969, 970.

And whereas it is expedient, pending a more complete revision of that section of our said warrant of Dec. 27, 1870, which now governs the promotion of combatant officers, to provide at once for certain necessary changes in respect of first appointments, regimental promotion, and exchanges;

Our will and pleasure is,

That this warrant be established and obeyed from the 1st day of November, in this present year, in respect of all matters herein contained, and that it be construed, administered, and interpreted with our said warrant of Dec. 27, 1870.

I.—FIRST APPOINTMENTS.

SUB LIEUTENANTS.

1. A commission as sub lieutenant in our army may be given :—

(a.) To a successful candidate at a competitive examination in general subjects to be held under such regulations as may be issued from time to time by our Secretary of State;

(b.) To a student from the University of Oxford, Cambridge, Durham, London, Dublin, Edinburgh, St. Andrew's, Glasgow, Aberdeen, or the Queen's University, Ireland, who has passed "Responsions" at Oxford, the "Previous Examination" at Cambridge, or the corresponding examination at the other Universities—under such regulations with respect to the age and manner of selection of such candidates as may be issued from time to time by our Secretary of State;

(c.) To our cadets, styled "Queen's Cadets;" to those styled "Indian Cadets;" and to our Pages of Honour. These cadets and pages of honour shall pass such a qualifying examination in general subjects as may be fixed from time to time by our Secretary of State;

(d.) To a non-commissioned officer who is recommended for promotion by our Commander in Chief, and who shall pass such a professional examination as may be fixed from time to time by our Secretary of State.

2. Sub lieutenants, in order to qualify for the rank of lieutenant, shall be required to serve satisfactorily for twelve months with one of our regiments, and after such service (except in the case of non-commissioned officers promoted to be sub lieutenants) to go through such a course of study, and to pass such a professional examination, as may be fixed from time to time by our Secretary of State.

3. Sub lieutenants shall be removed from our service for moral or physical unfitness, or if they fail to pass satisfactorily through the prescribed course of study. They shall, except in the case of non-commissioned officers promoted to be sub lieutenants, be required to pass the professional examination for the rank of lieutenant within three years, failing to do which they shall be removed from our service. Their time for retirement on full or half-pay shall be reckoned from the date of their commissions as lieutenants; and in fixing the date of such commissions, such portion of their service as sub lieutenants may be allowed as their conduct and qualifications may merit according to regulations to be issued from time to time by our Secretary of State.

4. Sub lieutenants appointed to a cavalry regiment who are not qualified for service in the cavalry may be transferred to the infantry.

APPOINTMENT FROM THE MILITIA.

5. A commission as lieutenant in our army may be given to a lieutenant of one of our regiments of militia under such regulations as to age or otherwise as may be issued from time to time by our Secretary of State. The officer shall pass a professional examination similar to that which will be required of a sub lieutenant in our army before he receives a commission as lieutenant.

II.—PROMOTION.

LIEUTENANTS.

6. A sub lieutenant in our army may receive a commission as lieutenant—

(a.) If he has been promoted to the rank of sub lieutenant from the rank of non-commissioned officer—after a satisfactory service of not less than twelve months as a sub lieutenant;

(b.) In the case of other sub lieutenants—after a satisfactory service of not less than twelve months with one of our regiments, and after having gone through a course of study and passed a professional examination, as laid down in Article 2.

CAPTAINS.

7. A qualified lieutenant shall be eligible for promotion to the rank of captain after two years' service in our army. In the case of officers entering our army after the 26th August, 1871, this service shall date from the date of their commissions as lieutenants; in the case of other officers from the date of their first commissions.

MAJORS.

8. A qualified captain shall be eligible for promotion to the rank of major after six years' service in our army. In the case of officers entering our army after the 26th August, 1871, this service shall date from the date of their commissions as lieutenants; in the case of other officers from the date of their first commissions.

LIEUTENANT COLONELS.

9. A qualified officer holding the substantive rank of major shall be eligible for promotion to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

GENERAL RULES.

10. Every promotion shall be made upon the recommendation of our Commander in Chief, with the approval of our Secretary of State:—

11. Succession to vacancies shall be regulated as follows:—

(a.) If a vacancy shall arise—

(1.) By the promotion of an officer to the rank of major general,

(2.) By the death of an officer,

(3.) By an officer becoming supernumerary under Article 21, or

(4.) By an officer being promoted to fill a vacancy in another regiment or corps, the promotions in the several ranks necessary to fill the vacancy shall, unless it shall be expedient that the vacancies be otherwise filled, be given to the senior qualified officer of each lower rank in the regiment or corps, except in the case of promotion to be lieutenant colonel, in which case the vacancy shall be filled by a qualified officer to be selected by our Commander in Chief with the approval of our Secretary of State;

(b.) If a vacancy shall arise from any other cause, it shall be filled by a qualified officer of our army who shall be selected by our Commander in Chief with the approval of our Secretary of State.

12. No selection shall be made in succession to any vacancy caused by the retirement of an officer until such retirement shall have been completed and shall have appeared in the London Gazette.

13. Officers below the rank of field officer shall not be recommended to us for promotion unless they shall have previously passed such professional examination as may be fixed from time to time by our Secretary of State. Officers serving with their regiments at distant foreign stations may be provisionally promoted to vacancies previous to passing such examination, but such promotion shall be cancelled should the officer fail in his examination. Captains now in our service may be appointed majors without examination, if specially reported to and approved by our Commander in Chief as having proved their efficiency for the rank of major.

14. Lieutenants shall be required to pass the professional examination for the rank of captain within five years from the date of their commission as lieutenants, failing to do which they shall be removed from our service, and may receive a sum not exceeding one year's pay, provided that, in cases of exigency, our Secretary of State may enlarge the time allowed for their examination. Officers now in our service who received their commissions before the 26th day of August, 1871, shall not be liable to the provisions of this article.

III.—TENURE OR APPOINTMENTS OF MAJOR AND LIEUTENANT-COLONEL IN A REGIMENT.

15. The appointment of major in a regiment or battalion shall, in the case of officers so appointed after the date of this warrant, be held in the first instance for five years, the officer being eligible for reappointment. If not reappointed, he shall receive half-pay.

16. The appointment of lieut. col. of a regiment or battalion shall, in the case of officers so appointed after the date of this warrant, be held in the first instance for five years, and may be renewed if it appear to our Commander-in-Chief, with the approval of our Secretary of State, that such renewal is desirable for the good of our service. If the officer be not reappointed, he shall receive half-pay.

IV.—ROYAL ARTILLERY AND ENGINEERS.

17. The foregoing articles of this warrant, viz., Articles 1 to 16, shall not apply to our Royal Artillery or Royal Engineers.

V.—EXCHANGES.

18. Subject to the sanction of our Commander in Chief, officers of equal substantive rank on full pay, serving in our cavalry, infantry of the line, and colonial corps, and officers (below the substantive rank of field officer) in our Indian Staff Corps, may exchange from one regiment or corps to another, and officers of equal substantive rank on full pay serving in brigades of Royal Artillery, in companies of Royal Engineers, or in regiments of more than one battalion, may exchange from one brigade, company of Royal Engineers, or battalion to another; provided that the commanding officers of the officers exchanging certify that the desired exchange does not originate in any cause affecting the honour, character, or professional efficiency of the officers, and provided also that a certificate of a military medical officer be transmitted in each case, declaring that the officer is in a fit state to serve at the station where the corps, brigade, battalion, or company into which he applies to exchange is quartered. Each officer shall also declare that it is his bona fide intention to join immediately and do duty in the corps, brigade, battalion, or company to which he proposes to exchange; and no officer shall be permitted to retire within six months of the date of his exchange, excepting in the case of ill-health or other emergency, which shall be specially considered.

19. An officer so exchanging shall be permitted to defray all fair and reasonable expenses incurred through such exchange by the officer with whom he exchanges, provided that the sum to be paid be approved by our Commander in Chief before payment is made.

20. An officer exchanging into a regiment shall be placed, for regimental seniority, below all officers holding the same regimental rank at the time of his exchange.

VI.—SUPERNUMERARY OFFICERS.

21. An officer may be retained on the strength of his regiment or corps as a supernumerary—

1st. In case of a reduction in the establishment of a regiment or corps when his retention is authorised by our Secretary of State;

2nd. If, in the case of a field officer belonging to a regiment or battalion serving in India, he be appointed to a brigade command, or to a staff situation in that country, tenable by a regimental officer for the usual period of five years;

3rd. When appointed to be—

(a.) Assistant adjutant and quartermaster general if a substantive major;

(b.) Professor, instructor, or other officer on the establishment of our Royal Military College, Royal Military Academy, or Staff College;

(c.) Garrison instructor, deputy assistant adjutant general for musketry, captain instructor or lieutenant instructor of musketry;

(d.) Adjutant in a regiment or corps of our auxiliary forces;

Or to hold such other appointments as may be fixed from time to time by our Secretary of State with the approval of the Lords Commissioners of our Treasury.

22. An officer supernumerary to the establishment of his regiment or corps shall retain his military position, and be eligible for promotion precisely as if he had remained on the active list of such regiment or corps.

23. A supernumerary officer under Article 21, on being promoted to a lieutenant-colonelcy or majority in a regiment or corps, shall join the regiment or corps to which he may be promoted.

24. A supernumerary officer who completes the term of service fixed for his appointment, or resigns it on satisfactory grounds, shall rejoin his regiment as supernumerary in his rank, except in the case of a substantive major, who shall receive half-pay until absorbed, retaining his regimental position.

25. A supernumerary officer who resigns his appointment on unsatisfactory grounds, or is displaced therefrom for misconduct or incapacity, unless he be removed from our army, shall receive a reduced rate of half-pay of such amount and for such period as our Secretary of State may decide, taking into consideration the length and character of the services rendered by the officer.

26. If a supernumerary officer shall die, be promoted, or retire, or if an officer of the rank in which there is a supernumerary officer waiting absorption under Article 24 shall die, be promoted, or retire, no promotion shall take place in succession to such vacancy.

27. Cases of reduction of establishment shall be specially considered, and such arrangements made for the gradual absorption of supernumerary officers as may be approved by the Lords Commissioners of our Treasury.

VII.—PROVISIONAL ARRANGEMENTS.

28. Cornets and ensigns in our army appointed before the 26th day of August, 1871, and cornets and ensigns in our army appointed after such date who passed from our Royal Military College on the A list, may be promoted at once to the rank of lieutenant. No greater number of lieutenants than that allowed by the establishment which may be fixed for the year shall receive lieutenant's pay; and no officer shall receive such pay until he shall have passed the examination required by the existing regulations for the rank of lieutenant.

29. Other cornets and ensigns in our army appointed after the 26th day of August, 1871, candidates who have passed the examination for direct commissions before the date of this our warrant, candidates for commissions in the Household Cavalry and Foot Guards who are nominated to fill the vacancies which occur in such regiments previous to the date of the first competitive examination for sub lieutenancies and who pass a qualifying examination, and candidates from the Universities now on the list of our Commander-in-Chief, may receive commissions as sub-lieutenants.

30. Such sub-lieutenants as have passed satisfactorily through a course of study at our Royal Military College may be promoted to the rank of lieutenant after twelve months' satisfactory service with one of our regiments.

Given at our Court at Balmoral this 30th day of October, 1871, in the 35th year of our reign

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM TO ACCOMPANY THE ROYAL WARRANT.

1. The scope of the present Warrant is confined to making those changes which are rendered immediately necessary by the abolition of purchase, and it therefore deals only with the subjects of first appointments, regimental promotion in the cavalry and infantry of the line, and exchanges.

2. Questions affecting the household cavalry and foot guards are under the consideration of her Majesty's Government, and the promotions which have heretofore carried superior army rank, are for the time to be suspended.

3. The regulations which are required for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the Warrant are either published along with it or are in course of preparation, and will be issued shortly.

4. In the meantime, the following explanatory statement has been drawn up for general information.

5. Commissions as lieutenants will be given to all cornets and ensigns appointed before 26th August, 1871, and to cornets and ensigns appointed since that date from the A list at Sandhurst, their commissions to date from 1st November.

6. Commissions as sub lieutenants will be given to—

(a.) All other cornets and ensigns appointed after 26th August, 1871, the rank of cornet and ensign being abolished.

(b.) Candidates who have passed the examination for direct commissions, in their turn as vacancies occur.

(c.) Candidates for commissions in the household cavalry and foot guards who are nominated to fill the vacancies which occur in those regiments before the date of the first competitive examination for sub lieutenancies, and who pass a qualifying examination.

(d.) Candidates from the universities now on the Commander in Chief's list.

7. Sub lieutenants will be attached for a year to regiments at home. They will then be required to go through a course of instruction, and on passing a practical professional examination be commissioned to regiments as lieutenants. They will be under strict discipline, and will be liable to be removed for unfitness, either moral or physical, and for misconduct. Those unsuited to the cavalry may be transferred to the infantry.

8. In dating their commissions, they will be allowed a portion, not exceeding one year, of their service as sub lieutenants; the time allowed being determined by the class of certificate they receive after their year's regimental training, their conduct while under instruction, and their position at the final examination. Their service for retirement will reckon from the date of their commissions as lieutenants.

9. Candidates who have passed the examination for direct commissions, and have also passed satisfactorily through a year's course of study at the Royal Military College before being appointed to be sub lieutenants, and Sandhurst cadets from the B list, will be commissioned to regiments as lieutenants on serving satisfactorily for twelve months with a regiment as sub lieutenants.

10. There are now a large number of supernumerary officers, and also a large number of candidates who have passed for commissions.

11. The absorption of supernumerary officers will probably be completed, and the candidates who have passed for commissions have received their appointments, in about two years from the present time, and first appointments in the army will then only be given as follows:—

(a.) To successful candidates at a competitive examination.

(b.) To non-commissioned officers recommended for promotion by the Field Marshal Commanding in Chief.

(c.) To candidates from the universities.

(d.) To Queen's cadets, Indian cadets, and pages of honour.

(e.) To lieutenants of militia.

12. The competitive examination will be carried out by the Civil Service Commissioners, the standard of qualification being that recommended by the Royal Commission on Military Education. Ample notice will be given of the first examination, and there will be no advantage in any applications being made for admission to be examined before the publication of such notice.

13. Non-commissioned officers on being selected for promotion will pass an examination in certain professional subjects; and then, after twelve months' satisfactory service as sub lieutenants, will receive commissions as lieutenants.

14. A certain number of sub lieutenancies a-year will be allotted to candidates who have passed the university examination specified in the regulations. If they also pass the examination for the degree of B.A., they will be allowed two years' extension of the limit of age. University candidates will be required to give at least six months' notice of their desire to be admitted into the army. If in any year there should be more candidates than appointments, the requisite number will be chosen by competition between the candidates; after their appointment they will go through the same course as other sub lieutenants.

15. There will be no vacancies for two years for any candidates from the universities whose names are not now on the Commander in Chief's list.

16. Queen's and Indian cadets and Queen's pages will be required to pass a qualifying examination, which for the present will be the same as that recommended by the Royal commission on military education. The nominations will remain as heretofore. When appointed, cadets and pages will go through the same course as other sub lieutenants.

17. First appointments as subalterns in the militia will be made on the recommendation of the lieutenants of counties. Candidates, before receiving their commissions as lieutenants in the militia, will be required to pass a qualifying examination in general subjects equal to the standard fixed as necessary for a candidate for a sub lieutenancy. They will next be required to be attached to a regiment of the line for three months, or such time as may be necessary to teach them their drill. After serving with their militia regiments for two annual trainings they will be eligible for the appointment of lieutenants in the army. In order to obtain such an appointment they must be recommended by the commanding officer of their militia regiment, his recommendation being confirmed by the general officer commanding the district, and they will be required to pass an examination in professional subjects of the same kind as that which will be required of a sub lieutenant before he receives his commission as a lieutenant.

18. The limits of age, except for non-commissioned officers, will be fixed at from 17 to 20 for sub-lieutenants, the limit being raised to 22 in the case of candidates who have passed their examination for the degree of B.A. at the universities, and from 19 to 22 for lieutenants from the militia.

19. So far as it is possible to calculate beforehand, the vacancies on the present establishment of officers in the army will provide for about 200 admissions a year by competition, and for one commission a year for each militia regiment of ten companies, and for the smaller regiments in proportion, besides the number allowed for candidates from the universities, non-commissioned officers, &c.

20. In addition to the examinations hitherto required from regimental officers, those who are promoted to the rank of captain after the 1st of November will, before being promoted to the rank of major, be required to pass a professional examination.

21. The necessary alterations in the Queen's Regulations with respect to this and other examinations will be made public as soon as possible.

22. Adjutancies of the auxiliary forces will in future be filled by half-pay officers or by officers belonging to regiments, who will be made supernumerary to their regiments while so serving. The appointments will be held, in the first instance, for a term of five years; but if their service prove unsatisfactory, they will be liable to be sent back to their regiments, or put upon a reduced rate of half-pay, under Article 25 of the warrant, at any time; if satisfactory, they will be eligible for reappointment after the expiration of their first period.

23. It is not intended to interpose any obstacles in the way of exchanges between officers on full pay which are made to suit the reasonable convenience of officers. It is therefore provided that an officer wishing to exchange shall be permitted to defray the fair and reasonable expenses of the officer with whom he exchanges, provided that the sum to be paid is approved by the Commander-in-Chief. Precautions have been taken in the Queen's Regulations for the army to guard against any abuse of such arrangements.

Persons who may be specially authorised by Government to appear as candidates by a certificate under the hand of a Secretary to Government.

2. A certificate will be required from every candidate of his character, respectability, and general moral fitness, such certificate being signed by two gentlemen of his own nationality, resident in the district of which he is a native, or where he usually resides, and also signed by the judge or magistrate of such district. The certificate of the two first-named is expected to be based upon personal knowledge, and the certificate of the judge or magistrate to indicate that the gentlemen who have signed it are qualified by their position and character to give such a certificate, and that the judge or magistrate himself knows nothing to the prejudice of the candidate. In the case of the town of Calcutta, instead of the signature of the judge or magistrate, the certificate should bear that of any Judge of the High Court, or the Commissioner of Police, or the Commissioner of the Presidency Division.

3. Each candidate will be required to produce a certificate from a medical officer resident in Calcutta, who will be specially selected for the purpose, stating that the candidate is generally a man of sound health, that he has expressed his willingness to serve in any district of the Lower Provinces, and that he (the medical officer) believes him to be capable of doing so, so far as can be judged antecedently.

4. Every candidate will also be required to prove that he can ride, and for this purpose he may apply to the magistrate of any district, who will either satisfy himself on the point, or select some other person he thinks competent for that purpose. The examiner must certify from his own personal observation that the candidate can ride not less than twelve miles at a rapid pace, and is in this respect competent for all practical purposes of district work: and if such examiner be not the magistrate himself, the certificate must be countersigned by the magistrate. All candidates presenting themselves without such certificate will be required to appear before some person in Calcutta who will be selected for the purpose.

5. Previous to the other examinations, European candidates who have not passed any University examination will be required to pass an examination in English, in order to show that they possess a thorough knowledge of reading, writing, and arithmetic. They must be able to write well, quickly, and correctly from dictation, to compose a report, and to do all ordinary arithmetic correctly and quickly, which must be duly certified by the examiners.

By European is meant any person whose native language is English or any other European tongue.

6. Besides procuring the above certificates, all candidates, subject to certain exemptions hereinafter mentioned, will be required to pass an examination.

(1.) In the vernacular.
(2.) In surveying and engineering.
(3.) In law.

EXAMINATION IN THE VERNACULAR.

7. All native candidates will be required to show that they can read and write office papers and orders in the vernacular with complete facility.

8. All European candidates will be examined as to their ability to speak and understand a vernacular language, to read it in print, and translate it. Their knowledge of it must be sufficient to enable them to do business easily immediately on appointment.

9. The vernacular language in which candidates will be required to pass under the two preceding rules may be either Bengali or Hindustani. But a candidate may, at his option, present himself for examination in both these languages, or may add to either of them Ooriya or Assamese, or any of the languages spoken in the territories under the Government of Bengal, the extra language counting pro tanto in his favour.

Candidates who pass in Bengali only will not be eligible for vacancies in Behar, nor will candidates who pass in Hindustani only be eligible for vacancies in Bengal or Orissa.

EXAMINATION IN SURVEYING AND ENGINEERING.

10. Candidates who possess a degree in civil engineering will not be required to pass an examination in surveying and engineering; but all others will be examined in the following subjects:—

SURVEYING.

1.—Mensuration.
2.—Surveying with chain, and with compass and chain.
3.—Levelling.
4.—Construction of field-book, plotting, tracing on the ground.
5.—Construction and use of scales.

ENGINEERING.

1.—General knowledge of properties of building materials in most common use, and of constructive trades.
2.—Estimating of a simple building or bridge.
3.—Construction of simple buildings.
4.—Construction of simple roof and bridge trusses for small spans.
5.—Elements of road-making (including the construction of culverts and small bridges).

EXAMINATION IN LAW.

11. Candidates who possess a degree in Indian law will not be required to pass the examination in law.

All others will be examined in the elements of the law prevailing in Bengal in one of the following branches:—

CRIMINAL LAW.

Penal Code.
Code of Criminal Procedure.
Police Act V. of 1861.

(b.) To qualify for the subordinate executive service.

The criminal law, as above, and the principles of the revenue system in Bengal, embracing the fundamental provisions of the permanent settlement, the putnee system, the sale and rent laws, the settlement laws, the abkari laws, and the laws for taking up land for public purposes.

N.B.—The following are the more important sources from which the above subjects can be learned:—

Regulation VIII., 1793, and the land revenue system promulgated in that year, and Act VIII. (B.C.) 1869.
Act XI. of 1859, Act VII. (B.C.) of 1868.
Regulation VIII. of 1819.
Regulation VII. of 1822.
Regulations II. of 1819, IX. of 1825, XI. of 1825, and IX. of 1833.
Act X. of 1870.
Act XXI. of 1856.

(c.) To qualify for the Opium Department.

Act XXI. of 1856.
Act XIII. of 1857.
The Board's rules for the guidance of officers in the Opium Department.

Candidates may offer themselves for examination in one or more of these branches (Rules 7—11) at their option.

12. Every candidate, when submitting his application, should state the subjects in which he desires to be examined, and annex certificates in the other subjects in which he is required by these rules to show that he is duly qualified. He must, at the same time, tender a fee for each subject in which he has to be examined, computed according to the scale given below :—

Elementary English examination for European candidates	Rs. 8
Law, for each branch	8
Surveying and engineering	8
Each vernacular	4
Medical examination	4
Riding examination	4

N.B.—It will be seen that the fee for the medical examination and for examination in one vernacular will be payable by all candidates, and the fee for the English examination by all Europeans liable to it. In other objects no fee will be required when a certificate is produced.

13. To every candidate who passes the examinations above prescribed a certificate will be given stating the subjects in which he has passed, and that he is qualified for an appointment in the subordinate executive service, or the police, or the opium department, as the case may be.

N.B.—This certificate will give no claim to an appointment.

C. BERNARD,
Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

Sept. 26.—The first examination under the above rules will be held early in January, 1872, on some date which will be hereafter notified.

THE DESTRUCTION OF HUMAN LIFE AND PROPERTY IN INDIA BY NOXIOUS ANIMALS.

A recent issue of the Gazette of India contained a carefully-prepared paper on "Loss of Human Life and Cattle from Wild Animals and Poisonous Snakes, and Measures taken for their Destruction." The statistics on the subject, which Government has focussed in the pages of the Gazette, appear to us calculated to raise the subject into the dignity of a question which has a not unimportant place in the economy of the country. The deaths in a year from noxious animals are, so far as they can be ascertained from even imperfect reports, astonishing, if not alarming. And behind the primary matter of mortality there are others which should not be overlooked in estimating the importance of the question : not only is property destroyed, but it is known that through the system of terrorism which is set up in places where noxious animals are abundant and bold, natives are intimidated, and abandon whole villages at times ; it may be also considered established that difficulties such as these impede, at least to some extent, the clearing of ground, and make would-be settlers half-hearted in their intentions.

It is alarming to see grouped in a table the following facts :—

Province.	Killed by Wild Beasts.	Deaths from Snake-bite.	Total number of Deaths in the three years from both causes.	Amount spent in Reward.
Bombay (exclusive of Sind, &c.)	148	588	736	19,679
Bengal ...	6,741	14,787	21,528	62,812
N.W. Provinces	2,168	2,474	4,642	8,474
Punjab ...	310	1,064	1,374	60,693
Oudh ...	569	3,782	4,351	10,728
Central Provinces	1,347	1,961	3,308	1,65,773
Coorg ...	147	Not given.	147	12,520
Hyderabad ...	129	226	355	14,273
British Burmah ...	107	22	129	2,000
Grand Total ...	12,554	25,664	38,218	4,55,755

It will be thus observed that there is a mortality from ground pests of 12,736 people per annum. This is a great number—it would make a tolerable army that could do much in the way of destruction; but it could form an array that would be infinitely more advantageous to the country if every individual in it were allowed to devote himself to its cultivation, or in some way assist in the development of its resources.

The following paragraphs, taken from the Gazette, appear to be in the right direction :—

RESOLUTION.—The papers now before the Government of India conclusively establish the fact that the evil under consideration is a very serious one. The loss of life, though probably not quite accurately reported, is certainly enormous. Nowhere is the destruction of life by wild beasts so great as in the Lower Provinces of Bengal. In other provinces, as cultivation and civilisation have advanced, wild beasts have diminished in number. In the Punjab, and in most parts of the Bombay Presidency, the presence of the more dangerous species is now stated to have become exceedingly rare.

2. In the opinion of the Governor general in Council this serious mortality could be very largely reduced by the extirpation of those animals in the neighbourhood of human habitations. This should be first attempted, and every reasonable means taken to secure their destruction whenever they make their appearance near towns or villages. The system of rewards hitherto in force in all provinces seems to be the most effective means by which the Government can accelerate the work, and local governments and administrations are empowered to increase, within the limits of their respective budget allotments, the rate of the authorised rewards, whenever such a measure is considered desirable ; but rewards should only be given for killing destructive and not merely wild animals.

3. As regards snakes, it seems to be overlooked by many officers that there is a deep-rooted prejudice among most natives against killing a snake—a prejudice which nothing but the offer of a reward will overcome. And as deaths from snake-bite are extremely numerous, the Governor general in Council has no doubt that the recent prohibition against the grant of rewards for killing snakes should be partially withdrawn, and that rewards not exceeding two annas a-head, as a general rule, should, at the discretion of the local Governments and Administrations, be offered for snakes known to be deadly—that is, the cobr and some other species to be expressly named. But such rewards shoul not be offered throughout a whole province or for an unlimited perio but in selected districts, where the mortality from snake-bite is greates and for a period not exceeding two years. At the end of this period th result of the experiment should be reported to the Government of Indi in order that, if successful, the propriety of extending it may be con sidered ; and it is clear from the correspondence that care should b taken that no reward be given without the snake, when killed, bein seen by the officer who grants the reward, and that the head of ever such snake should be cut off and destroyed as soon as the reward is given

4. Although it is not desirable to grant a monopoly for the purchas of the skins of the wild animals killed for rewards, or in any way t commence a traffic in them, yet it is proper for the district officers t exercise an effectual check on the disbursement of rewards by subordi nate officials, where the work is entrusted to such officials. Whenever shikarees are allowed to appropriate the skins of animals, precaution should be taken to prevent the same skins being shown twice. Th correspondence shows the necessity of care in this respect to preven fraud, especially in the case of animals for which the lower rates of re ward are offered.

5. As to Captain Rogers' scheme, it has been generally considered a impracticable ; but he deserves thanks for the interest he has taken i the matter.

ORDER.—Ordered, that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to th several local governments and administrations for information and guidance.

Ordered, that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the financia and foreign departments.

Ordered also, that the above resolution be forwarded to Capt. Rogers with reference to his letter dated Aug. 9, 1869.

THE INDIAN SILK TRADE.

Read also a paper by Capt. T. Hutton, Corresponding Member of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Bengal, containing notes on the Indian Bombycidæ, dated July 26, 1871.

OBSERVATIONS.

The Government of India has been recently endeavouring to acquire full information as to the present state and prospects and past history of the Indian silk trade, in view to ascertaining the best practical methods of developing it, and improving sericulture generally in India.

2. Amongst other papers received from various sources, Capt. Hutton has forwarded a paper on the Indian and Asiatic species of the Bombycidæ, to which it seems desirable to give early publicity.

3. Much, it is believed, may be done towards both increasing and improving the silk produce of India ; but one of the first essentials to any successful action in these directions is complete information as to all that has yet been done or attempted in India in this matter. A good deal of useful information has been gleaned from the records of the Government of India, and some few papers have been received from Local Governments and private individuals ; but much more is, it is believed, available, which his Excellency the Governor general in Council is anxious to obtain, and in the collection of which he would invite the co-operation of the public generally, and all Government officers.

ORDER.—Ordered, that this resolution and Captain Hutton's notes on the Indian Bombycidæ, be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India, and that the several Local Governments and Administrations, the public generally, and all Government officials, be invited to furnish the Government of India in the Department of Agriculture, Revenue, and Commerce, with any information (whether in print or in original manuscript) of which they may be in possession, in regard to sericulture in India, and the Indian silk trade, past and present.

Ordered also, that the thanks of the Government of India be conveyed to Captain Hutton for his monographic sketch of the Indian Bombycidæ.

Ordered also, that a copy of this resolution, and of Captain Hutton's notes on the Indian Bombycidæ, be forwarded to the Local Governments and Administrations of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, N.W. Provinces, and Punjab ; to the Chief Commissioners of Oudh, Central Provinces, British Burmah, and Mysore and Coorg ; to the Resident at Hyderabad ; to the Chambers of Commerce of Madras, Bombay, and Bengal ; to the Agricultural Societies of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the Punjab, Oude, and Central Provinces ; and to Captain Hutton.

By order of the Lieutenant governor of Bengal.

C. BERNARD, Officiating Sec. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Home.

MILITARY.—The claims of the Indian Artillery officers who have been complaining, are being considered by the War Office, and we can ask them with some assurance and comfort to wait a little longer.

NEW MEMBER OF THE COUNCIL FOR INDIA.—We are authorised to state that Sir Henry S. Maine, K.C.S.I., has been appointed a member of the Council of the Secretary of State for India, in the room of Mr. Elliot Macnaughten, resigned.

MEDICAL.—Rumour has it that Dr. G. S. Beatson will soon return to India for a second term of five years as Inspector General of the Army Medical Service. This would be a piece of good fortune for the worthy doctor, but it would be a great injustice to the senior officers of his department.—Army and Navy Gazette.

CONSULAR APPOINTMENT (FOREIGN-OFFICE, Oct. 28.)—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Don Marcos Riglos y Benavente as Consul at Brazil, and of Don Patricio Gibson as Consul at Liverpool for the Republic of Peru; of Mr. Henry Francis Brown as Consul at Calcutta for his Majesty the King of Denmark.

ORDER OF THE STAR OF INDIA.—(India-Office, Nov. 1.) The Queen has been graciously pleased to nominate and appoint Colonel Frederic John Goldsmid, C.B., Madras Staff Corps, now employed on a special mission to Persia, with the local rank of Major-General, and late Superintendent of the Indo-European Telegraph, to be a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 1st inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were — to Calcutta, £250,000; to Bombay, £100,000; and to Madras, £50 000. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11⅜d. will receive about 64 per cent., and on Bombay, at 1s. 11½d., in full.

EXPORT OF BULLION TO INDIA.—We extract from Girard de Quetteville's Indian Circular of Nov. 2, 1871, the subjoined exports of bullion by the steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. From Southampton—per Ceylon, Oct. 21, 1871; to Bombay, in gold £11,000, in silver £97,000. Per Candia, Oct. 28, 1871; to Alexandria, in gold £10,000; to Bombay, in silver £54,950; to Ceylon, in gold £11,000; to Madras, in gold £9,459; to Calcutta, in gold £10 000.

THE INSURRECTION IN GOA.—The Portuguese Government have chartered the English screw-steamer Neera, 2,167 tons, to convey 450 troops from Lisbon to Goa, their old colony on the west coast of India, where they have lately suppressed a serious insurrection. Viscount Duprat, the Portuguese Consul-General in London, accompanied by Captain Testa, of the Portuguese navy, have arrived at Liverpool to superintend the fitting up of the steamer. She will leave the Mersey for Lisbon next Saturday, and after embarking the troops, stores, &c., there, will sail direct for Goa via the Suez Canal.

THE FAMINE IN PERSIA.—Since the formation of the Mansion-house Fund for the relief of the sufferers by the terrible famine in Persia the Lord Mayor has received the sum of £727 in all. This amount, although somewhat increased by the aid of the executive committee sitting in Parliament-street, is still strikingly small in comparison with the extreme need that exists, and it is to be hoped that the appeal of the chief magistrate—the fourth one this year—to the citizens for the exercise of their customary liberality will not go unheeded, especially in such a case of unusual emergency. Further subscriptions may be paid daily at the Mansion-house, or at the committee-rooms, 55, Parliament-street.

CAMBRIDGE, PROFESSOR OF ARABIC.—Mr. Edward Henry Palmer, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, who has just been appointed Lord Almoner's Professor of Arabic in that University, is one of the most accomplished Oriental scholars of the present, day. From early youth Mr. Palmer was a diligent student of the principal Oriental languages, in which he attained extraordinary proficiency, although he was almost entirely self-taught. He accompanied the Sinai Survey Expedition to Sinai in 1868-69, in order to investigate the nomenclature, traditions, and antiquities of that country, and in 1869-70 he explored the desert of Et Tih, the south country of the Scripture, and Moab, in company with Mr. C. F. Tyrwhitt Drake.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.—The Straits Settlements, situated in the Malayan Archipelago, and comprising Singapore, Penang, and Malacca, were transferred from the control of the Indian Government to that of the Secretary of State for the Colonies in the year 1867, by an order in Council under the provisions of the Act 29-30 Vic., cap. 115. In Malacca the Malays are the chief part of the population, the Chinese forming about one-sixth thereof. It is by far the most extensive of the settlements, and comprises an area of about 1,000 square miles. The Chinese colonists include some of the most wealthy and intelligent of the merchants in the Straits. The European Government consists of a Lieutenant-Governor and an Executive Council. The colony also maintains a small military establishment. But we shall surprise our readers by informing them that, according to the latest statistics furnished by the Colonial Office, the military establishment of Malacca consists only of "one European officer and 125 men of the Madras Native Infantry." How Madras troops came to be originally quartered at Malacca is a question that must be referred to the records of the old East India Company. All that we are concerned with here is the fact that the colonists have now petitioned the Government for a stronger protective force, on the plea that Malacca is much exposed to Malay aggression, and that such aggression may arise from the circumstance that the colony possesses something to lose consequent upon her increased and increasing material prosperity. Did a Malay invasion take place Malacca, while unable to defend herself with her handful of Sepoys from the incursions of the fierce tribes by which the settlement is hemmed in, would be compelled to suffer the destruction of her towns and villages, and the pillage of public and commercial property, which successful commerce has been the means of accumulating for many years. The petition addressed to the Colonial Office is numerously and influentially signed by the official, the mercantile, and the general residents of Malacca. It supplies information to the Home Government clearly implying that the fears of aggressive conduct on the part of the Malays are warranted by recent overt acts. Now, as the Madras Presidency can very well afford to lend more troops than a company or two of Sepoys to Malacca, from her very considerable Army, it is probable that a requisition will be made for an entire regiment to furnish a thriving colony with an effective military establishment, such as is demanded by the exigencies of the occasion. If this should not be done, we may at any moment hear of Malacca suffering from serious disturbances arising from Malay disaffection.—Broad Arrow.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE NEW WARRANT.

The Times observes that the new Army Warrant, though declared to be provisional on certain points, deals decisively, so far as principle is concerned, with the whole system of first appointments, regimental promotion, and exchange. From this present day the army is under the complete control of the Crown and its Ministers; it belongs to the nation as fully as any other branch of the public service, and unless negligence and apathy supervene in the Administration, the interest of no man or class of men will be allowed to interfere with its efficiency. It would be of little use to abolish purchase if care were not taken to guard the service from the less capable class of men whom purchase introduced. To effect this it has been decided that first appointments shall be given as a general rule after competitive examination, and that they shall be probationary, and revocable in case the unfitness of the successful candidate shall be demonstrated by a practical trial in his work. There are a good many persons, with no lack either of good sense or liberality, who will be rather frightened by this word "competition." They will think very rightly that something more is required in an officer than brains and application, and that the methods of selection which are suited to an officer in the Civil Service hardly apply to men who have to march and fight, to bear cold and hunger. But care, the Times believes, will be taken that no man not physically qualified shall receive an appointment. In fact, the physical will accompany the intellectual examination. The next point is to ascertain whether the young man who has succeeded in gaining his first appointment is fit to rise higher. Here we begin to see the advantages of the abolition of purchase. The Government is master, and being free to make and cancel appointments can consult the good of the service without fear of violating pecuniary rights. Candidates will be removed from the service for physical or moral unfitness, or if they fail to pass satisfactorily through the prescribed course of study, or to pass the examination for lieutenant within three years. Thus we have at length a real basis for the reconstruction of our land forces. The militia are brought into closer connection with the regular army; and the commissions in both are now open to the ambition and the martial spirit of the whole nation. The field is clear for whatever genius is destined to organise into one powerful body our dispersed and heterogeneous forces.

The Daily News thinks that we can hardly call the work which this warrant will accomplish merely that of reorganisation. It lays the basis of a scheme to give England practically a new army—an army which shall not only have the personal daring and loyal character of that force which can appeal to the whole course of modern history for testimonials, but which shall have weeded away from it those deleterious growths which had sprung up in many branches of the service during long periods of repose and peace. Besides providing for the more thorough preparation of officers entrusted with command, Mr. Cardwell's scheme fulfils the scarcely less important duty, which has often been pressed upon the Government, of effecting some reasonable fusion between the diverse forces of the Crown. The militia is no longer to be looked upon as an exoteric arm. If the Prussian system has not been copied so far as to institute the constant transference of the line into a perpetual reserve, the reserves we at present possess are to have something like unity of interest with the line. Certainly, so far as the present warrant goes—and it leaves out of question, for the moment, the organisation of the household cavalry and the foot guards—it is obviously based on Prussian precedent. The regulations for training officers on entering the army are very similar to those existing in Germany; and we shall hope to see the examinations, upon which the success of the new scheme plainly depends, formed and carried out with that thoroughness and that disrespect of persons which have given Prussia so admirable a staff of officers. That much we may fairly copy. There is now no question of our legislating in a panic or endeavouring to transplant into this country in its entirety a system which is not adapted to the soil. We cannot produce a Prussian army in this country, but we may safely borrow such hints from the Prussian method of training soldiers as shall render our own army, peculiar as it is in many respects, thoroughly efficient.

WOULD THEY LIKE TO KNOW?—We learn that Major Bowen, Acting Commissioner of Police, Madras, at the request of Government, went to certain offices in the Fort on Thursday last, to investigate how the local newspaper press became possessed of the information regarding the recent letters from the Home Government on the disbandment of the late No. 1 company of the 19th Regiment Native Infantry. The Acting Commissioner asked for the copies which had been struck off, and the correct number was shown to him. Being fully convinced that not a single copy was missing, Major Bowen asked the head of another office if he could throw any light on the matter, but even here he was unsuccessful. He found that the number of copies was correct, and they were just as clean as when received by the head of the office. Major Bowen was told that if Government were more cautious and had taken the trouble to mark the communication "confidential," greater care no doubt would have been taken. Major Bowen left the Fort quite disheartened at his unsuccessful investigation, expressing surprise that the press could have become possessed of such information. The investigation, we hear, lasted for two hours and a-half. The result of Major Bowen's investigation will be communicated to Government. The investigation was continued on Friday, but no more success attended Major Bowen's exertions than on the previous day. It is said that further investigation was made by Major Bowen on Saturday last, but that on this occasion he was obliged to obtain the assistance of Inspector Simpson. We hardly think that the combined efforts of the Acting Commissioner and his subordinate have tended to throw even a ray of light on the subject of their inquiries. Our risible faculties were somewhat excited on hearing the steps taken by Government to discover the sinner who divulged important information from the sanctum sanctorum of the Secretariat. Lord Napier will probably remember the lines of his national poet, which if our memory serves us properly run somewhat as follow:—

"The mair they talk I'm kent the better,
E'en let them clash.
An auld wife's tongue's a feckless matter
To gie ane fash."

His Lordship will doubtless think the quotation an apt one.—Madras Athenæum, Oct. 12.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

With the approaching winter it is prudent for all to rectify any ailment afflicting them, but it is incumbent on the aged, suffering from ulcerations, and similar debilitating causes, to have them removed, or worse consequences will follow. This Ointment is their remedy; on its powers all may confidently rely; it will not simply put their sores out of sight, but extirpate the source of mischief, extract the corroding poison, and stimulate Nature to fill up the ulcer with sound healthy granulations that will abide through life. Under this treatment bad legs soon become sound, scorbutic skins cast off their scales, and scrofulous sores cease to annoy. Such hope for the diseased was unknown in former days.

THE OPTOSCOPE.

The practical utility of the OPTOSCOPE is now fully determined. In numerous cases has its merits been displayed in a manner so satisfactory, that in no instance has it afforded less satisfaction to the intelligent inquirer than to the inventor himself. It has long been a matter of considerable importance to those suffering from defective vision to learn the exact state of the refractive humours of the eye, and the proper convexity or concavity of the glasses required to render the vision as perfect as the state of the organs will admit of.

Mr. BEAUMONT'S OPTOSCOPE
is all that can be desired for this purpose, and those desirous of benefiting by his discovery may be suited with the most perfect-fitting glasses at moderate cost.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Oct. 21; Agra and Madras, Oct. 19; Calcutta, Oct. 18.

FROM the Indian papers we gather nothing new regarding the murderer of Mr. Justice Norman. A Times telegram however of November 6 from Calcutta settles the question of Abdullah's fate. He was hanged on Saturday, November 4, and his body burned the same day by men of the lowest caste. So far as yet appears, his secret, if any he had, has gone with him to the gallows. It is said that some particulars about the murderer's past life have come to light; but, according to the Bombay papers, nothing has yet transpired to prove that he was even a Wahabi.

LORD NAPIER, the Governor of Madras, appears to have fallen foul of the Madras Athenæum for its ill-natured comments on his conduct with regard to a private letter from General McCleverty, of which his Lordship made public use. That he did so, appears to have been no fault of his, but the result of somebody else's mistake. Lord Napier however was stung by the critic's seeming unfairness into demanding through his lawyers a full apology, which the editor of the Athenæum refused to give on the plea that no particular libel had been brought to his notice. The suit therefore is to proceed, unless his Lordship should meanwhile take counsel with his calmer thoughts. Public men, as Lord Chief Cockburn said, have no business to be thin skinned.

THE question of a successor to the late Major-General Broome has been decided at last, to the general satisfaction, by the appointment of Mr. Kellner as Military Accountant General to the Indian Government. Mr. Kellner's financial repute has for the most part been earned in the civil branch of the service; but a good accountant ought to belong to no particular school, and if the Government are satisfied with his qualifications, no one except some disappointed candidate will have any reason to complain. For the last ten years at any rate Mr. Kellner has had some experience of military accounts. In 1860-61 he was connected, it seems, with the Military Finance Commission in India. During his subsequent furlough he found employment under the War Office in London and Paris, and ever since General Broome's departure for England he has been serving with acknowledged ability as Controller-General of Military Expenditure.

THE Legislative Council met again at Simlah on the 12th of October to pass Mr. Stephen's Bill for the registration of criminal tribes and eunuchs, and to give the first reading to Mr. Stephen's Bill consolidating and amending the law concerning offences in foreign States. Two other Bills, one for amending the European Vagrancy Act of 1869, the other to regulate the construction and maintenance of public works for Irrigation, Navigation, and Drainage, were also advanced a stage. The legislative work at Simlah was nearly over, as Lord Mayo was to begin his downward journey on the 1st of this month. His Excellency is expected to spend a month on his way to Calcutta, part of which would be devoted to a tour through the Punjab, by way of Kangra, Dharmsala, and Dalhousie. Mr. Davies, the Lieutenant-Governor, was to reach his own capital on the 1st November, in time to prepare for the Viceroy's reception.

OF the lesser magnates, Lord Napier, of Madras, has been paying a visit to Tanjore, and exploring its antiquities. While Lady Napier inspected a large girls' school called after her name, his Lordship examined a boys' school in the same place. From Tanjore he was to visit Combaconum, Tranquebar, Trichinopoly, and some other places, before settling down again at Madras. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald had returned for a time to Bombay, where several important matters awaited his consideration; among these the affairs of the Bombay Municipality, on which a committee of inquiry had just sent in a damaging report. On this point Bombay appears to be very sore, for a telegram of November 10 asserts, that on account of the sudden departure of the Municipal Commissioner, who is charged with misapplying certain funds, an indignation meeting had just been held at the Town Hall by the native and European ratepayers, who unanimously condemned the municipal administration, and held the Government responsible for all shortcomings on that score. With regard to the Port Trust also, it appears that the people of Bombay are much displeased with the Supreme Government for the heavy burden it has laid on the port without first inviting public discussion of its new scheme. Among the visitors whom the Governor was to receive were several Dewans and Agents of Native States, and the Marquis of Drogheda, who has just arrived at Bombay on his way to share the hospitality of Lord Mayo.

MR. GEORGE CAMPBELL, the active Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, had gone off to Darjeeling, leaving his secretary to indite to the Commissioner of Dacca a despatch which must have caused a stir among the educational officers of Bengal. He complains that the Inspectors of Schools so arrange their circuits as to avoid all contact with the civil officers of districts. The Educational Department, he observes, has more than any other "striven to emancipate itself from local control, and to take a purely independent position." To this Mr. Campbell decidedly objects, declaring himself resolved to "bring the two classes of officers more into correspondence with one another."

His intention is good, but it will prove no easier task to make one department work heartily with another in India than it seems to be in England.

The movement of troops and stores towards the Cachar frontier is steadily going on. A detachment of the 2nd Ghoorkas was to pass through Meerut on the 9th October on its way to the south-east. The 44th N.I. were to leave Shillong for Cachar on the 1st November, proceeding by boat to Tipai Mukh, on the Barak river, where a stockade containing stores for the Cachar Column is about to be built. It is believed that the 42nd N.I. would be carried down the Brahmaputra and up the Surmah, so as to reach Chattak by the 12th November. To the same point the 22nd N.I. were to be conveyed by steamer before the end of October. From thence two if not three regiments and a great quantity of commissariat stores would be forwarded by boat to the frontier. Some six hundred policemen with four English officers are to accompany General Bourchier's column, fully armed and equipped for special service. Each column will be furnished with a supply of Norton's tube pumps. Science will be represented by Lieutenant Browne of the 44th Foot, under whose orders a trained native from the Indian Museum will gather specimens of the local fauna and flora. Tipai Mukh and Demagiri are to form the respective starting-points of the Cachar and Chittagong Columns. From these two points the field telegraphs will be carried as far into the enemy's country as the nature of the ground marched over will allow. The medical staff will be placed under the chief control of Deputy Inspector general H. B. Buckle, C.B. Major Moore, with 722 coolies, left Calcutta for Cachar on the 13th October, and another batch of about the same strength, under Captain Crohan, was to start on the 17th. These men are engaged at Rs. 8 a-month each to carry doolies, baggage, and supplies, to make roads and cut down jungle, for which latter purpose they are to be armed with a "dao," or "kúkri" (a large two-edged knife), each.

Lord Mayo wants to know "whether a cement can be manufactured from any of the Indian limestones capable of application under the varying circumstances and climates found in India." Surely this seems a curious question to ask at this time of day. One would have thought that modern architecture in India had no need to go to school again for the very rudiments of its art, had we not lately heard so much of the propensity of Indian mortar to stultify the boasts of Indian engineers. In the old days at any rate before the English conquests in India there was no such difficulty in finding good cement. So strong was the mortar used in old Indian buildings, whether of Hindu or Mohammedan days, that it is easier to break the masonry than the cement. The very chunam or stucco with which native builders faced their brickwork was often as hard and smooth as marble, and the brickwork itself rivalled that of the old Roman builders. Is the secret of their excellence to be found in their superior skill and knowledge, in the better quality of their materials, or in their superior honesty? Perhaps some of the persons who helped to build the splendid failures at Allahabad and elsewhere could enlighten Lord Mayo on these points—if they chose.

The results of the enquiry into the cause of the outbreak of August last among the Hindu prisoners in the Bareilly Jail have been laid before the Lieutenant Governor. Sir W. Muir agrees with the Commission in regarding the conduct of Dr. Eades, who deprived the Brahmans of their caste-threads and then flogged some of them for showing their annoyance, as ill-judged and fraught with mischief. Dr. Eades pleaded his impression that the sacred threads were articles of clothing, a plea which Sir William scouts as puerile, and betraying "a singular deficiency of common sense." Still more strange—he adds—"in a medical officer of five years' standing, and one who had been already for a considerable period in charge of a district jail, is such ignorance of the habits and usages of the Hindu race." We are therefore not at all surprised to hear that the services of Dr. Eades have been replaced at the disposal of the Military Department.

With regard to the subsequent outbreak of September 6, the Lieutenant-Governor believes that the previous discontent caused by Dr. Eades's conduct had "a very sensible effect in making the prisoners combine to attempt an outbreak." Our readers will remember that the ringleaders on that occasion were Mohammedans, who repeated with some success their old dodge —as illustrated in the Mutinies of Vellore and 1857—of using the Hindus for cat's paws. Sir W. Muir "entirely justifies" Mr. Brown, the jailer, and the police, in firing upon the prisoners, and promises officially to thank Mr. Brown, with a present of two months' pay moreover, for "his prompt, cool, and gallant conduct." His Honour also bestows rewards in money or extra pay on the deputy-jailer, Mr. Anderson, on the police jemadar and two head watchmen, on three convict-warders who took the lead in attacking their fellow-convicts, and on the jail-guards who hurried up to their help.

Colonel Pelly's last despatch from Bushire draws a sad picture of human suffering on the Persian seaboard. After a side blow at the Persian Minister in London, he describes his own method of doling out relief to the famished wretches about Bushire from the funds supplied him by the charitable in India and England. He has little comfort to impart with regard to the immediate future. Even if the grain-dealers threw open their stores at once, he fears that the famine would not be materially checked, for the smaller stores, he thinks, are already exhausted, the seed-corn in many places has failed to come up, money is scarce for want of employment, and the famine will hardly abate before the harvest season of April or May next. With a famished mob surrounding his house and trampling on each other in their fierce hunger, he deems it "a sad absurdity" to question the existence of a famine. To Colonel Pelly there seems "very little direct relation between the price of grain and the famishing condition of the people" in those parts. Prices at Bushire and other ports are usually governed by the trade value of imported grain; but in presence of a starving people, "without a pice in their pockets, and without a chance of selling their labour," he deems it "futile and cruelly fallacious to argue that, because prices are not at famine rates, therefore no famine can prevail."

Mr. F. S. Chapman has been reappointed Bombay member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council. Mr. Cockerell's departure home at the end of his term will leave a vacant seat in the Council. It is rumoured that Mr. F. Stephen will resign his seat next spring; but this, we imagine, is hardly probable unless the present law member has a better opening ready for him at home. Mr. Strachey takes sick leave for six months early next year, at which time the two Under Secretaries, Messrs. Howell and Westland, will also go on furlough.

Several changes have lately been made or reported as impending in the India Office Staff. Sir Henry Maine, late law-member of the Viceroy's Council, succeeds Mr. Elliott Macnaghten in the Council of India. A fitter appointment was probably never made, and this one has the advantage of not being made too late. Sir Henry Anderson is, we hear, to take charge of the Revenue Department in addition to his present duties as Judicial Secretary. Mr. Clements Markham, C.B., becomes Assistant Secretary in the Revenue Department on the retirement of Mr. Phillimore. The new Assistant Secretary in the Public Works Department is Mr. Phillimore. Mr. J. C. Melville resigns his post of Under-Secretary of State from the 31st December. It is probable that his appointment will not be filled up; its duties being merged in some other office. The question of a successor to the late General Jameson in the Audit Department has not yet, we believe, been finally settled, although the name of Major General Hannyngton, sometime Military Auditor-General of Bengal, and now employed on special duty at the India Office, has been pretty widely quoted as that of the coming placeman. In this case however we believe that the public have got upon the right scent, and General Hannyngton's past services are almost certain to place him at the head of the poll.

Some of the Indian papers talk of Sir H. Anderson as destined to succeed the present Governor of Bombay. All such talk is certainly premature. Whatever the Duke of Argyll may purpose doing, we have reason to believe that no such appointment has yet been made; and in view of the fresh duties just undertaken by Sir Henry, we incline to think that he will prefer staying where he is.

In his after-dinner speech at Guildhall the other evening Mr. Göschen announced the selection of Lord Lawrence as Chairman of the Royal Commission to enquire into the loss of the Megæra. A better choice for the purpose could hardly have been made. Lord Lawrence can be trusted to conduct the enquiry without fear of persons or regard for party feeling, and his Indian experience will enable him, if any one, to lay the blame of so discreditable a disaster upon the right shoulders. The very fact of his appointment would seem to imply a genuine desire on the part of the present Government to elicit the whole truth, however much that is likely to tell against some of its own supporters. But then Lord Lawrence must have fair play in the selection of his fellow-commissioners, whose names are not yet before the public.

It was right, no doubt, to select Sir J. Colvile as a paid judge on the Committee where his services have so long been rendered gratuitously. But when is the name of Sir Barnes Peacock to be added to that of the three already appointed? Even those who, with the Asiatic, cast doubts on "the stability of his mental equilibrium," whatever that may mean, have nothing to say against his "ability and legal acumen." In point of fact Sir Barnes was about the ablest Chief Justice who ever adorned the Calcutta Bench; and, being still young enough to remember what he learned in India, he could be trusted to make quick work with the hundreds of Indian suits that still await the final award of the Judicial Committee.

According to a Times telegram of Nov. 13 from Calcutta, the Viceroy arrived at Palumpore Fair on the 6th current. The next day he held a durbar of the hill chiefs. His Lordship arrived at Dhurmsallah on the 12th. He will meet the Maharajah of Cashmere at Madhapore on the 16th inst., and will hold a durbar at Lahore on the 18th. At Sonepore he will be met by Sir Jung Bahadoor, and is expected to reach Calcutta about Nov. 26.

We are glad to see that Mr. Prichard's recent efforts to fix the attention of his countrymen at home upon important Indian questions have met with just recognition at the hands of native reformers in India. A letter of Oct. 10, from the President of the Bombay Association, conveys to Mr. Prichard "the warmest thanks" of the Association, as unanimously voted at a meeting held the day before, for his efforts aforesaid and for the "deep interest" he has so often displayed in the welfare of the native Indians.

We have reason to believe that an examination for admission to the Indian Medical Service will take place in February, 1872, and that about forty appointments will be made. It is now nearly two years since the last examination was held, and in consequence of deaths and retirements during this period, the strength of the Medical Establishments in India is somewhat below the regulated number.

The next Overland Mail, viâ Brindisi, is due in London on Saturday next.

Recruits.—In January, 1868, the Government of India sanctioned a free passage by railway for all recruiting parties going from and returning to their regiments, and for recruits joining their respective corps. This is not applicable to men on furlough who may pick up recruits at their homes. Under a certificate, however, from commanding officers, that a soldier on furlough is authorised to recruit, passage warrants at the Government expense may be granted for the conveyance of the recruits, though not to the man or men or men returning from furlough.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

Tuesday, November 14, 1871.

THE LATE MR. J. P. THOM.

It is with sincere regret that we have to announce the death, on the 3rd inst., after a short illness, of Mr. James Pattison Thom, an Assistant Secretary in the Military Department, India Office.

Our regret, we feel sure, will be shared by every one who may have been brought into contact with him during his official career—which extended over forty-two years, first in the service of the East India Company, and, since 1858, in that of the Secretary of State in Council for India—and who experienced the kindness and attention which he ever displayed towards those with whom he had official intercourse.

Mr. J. P. Thom was a son of Mr. William Thom, of the East India Company's Home Service. He was born in 1812, in the parish of St. Nicholas, in the county of Aberdeen, and in due course received the rudiments of a classical and commercial education at Christ's Hospital. In the early part of 1827 he was nominated by Mr. James Pattison, a director of the East India Company and an old family friend, to an Indian cadetship, and after the usual course of study at Addiscombe, he passed his examination there on the 12th December, 1828. He, however, resigned this appointment to the Army, and, having obtained a nomination from Mr. Pattison to the Civil Service in India, he entered himself as a student at the East India College at Haileybury on the 7th January, 1829. This appointment he also relinquished in favour of another, which was presented to him by Mr. Pattison—viz., that of junior established clerk in the Secretary's office of the East India Company's Home Establishment, vacant by the retirement on account of ill-health of the chief clerk, Mr. Alexander Way Mason, after a long and distinguished service of thirty-six years.

In the changes which took place in the Home Establishment in 1836, consequent upon the abolition of the commercial privileges of the East India Company in 1834, Mr. Thom was transferred to the office of the Examiner of Indian Correspondence as the junior clerk. In 1838 he was appointed minuting clerk to the Revenue, Judicial, and Legislative Committee, and in 1844, on his transfer to the Military Department, he received the appointment of minuting clerk to the Political and Military Committee. In 1860 he was appointed an assistant secretary in the Military Department. He died on the 3rd inst., having just entered his sixtieth year. C. M.

HARCOURT'S "KULU, LAHOUL, AND SPITI."

SOME of our readers will be glad to hear that Captain Harcourt, of the Punjab Commission, has brought together in one neat volume, published by Messrs. Allen of Waterloo-place, the fruits of his varied researches among the hills and valleys of that distant "corner of the earth" which lies between the Upper Sutlej and the south-eastern frontier of Kashmere, with its easternmost section touching Tibet, and the Kangra Valley for its western limit. Of the three districts here classed together Kulu lies furthest south with Lahoul on its northern and Spiti on its eastern side. To the north of Lahoul and Spiti stretches the Kashmerian province of Ladakh, while the little native State of Chamba forms the western boundary of Lahoul. The whole region covers an area of 6,025 square miles. It is emphatically a "land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills." Rasselas might almost have mistaken it for his Happy Valley, for a wall of lofty peaks and ridges shuts it in on three sides and a-half, and the Sutlej guards the remainder. From the sketch map which accompanies the volume one can see for himself moreover how much of its surface is dotted about by peaks of different heights and interlaced with streams of every size. Most of the former range from 10,000 to 21,000 feet high, and chief among the latter are the Sutlej, the Beas, the Spiti, the Chandra, and the Parwati, each of which throws out its numberless branches on every side. Lahoul itself, says Captain Harcourt, "may not inaptly be termed a network of mountains, which intersect it in every direction; and the numerous glaciers, no less than twenty-three in number, form a fair index as to the heights of the ranges that encircle them." The space between the Bhaga and Chandra rivers is described as "one great icebed, broken here and there by lofty heights of impassable rock and snow." To the south of one very high peak stretches a glacier twelves miles long, met by another even larger. Spiti can only boast of one small glacier, although its mountain-tops range from 20,000 to more than 23,000 feet above the sea. Kulu also is shut in or crossed by ranges more than 20,000 feet high, but the height of the mountains gradually falls off to the west, until the south-western boundary is left comparatively open. Towards the Beas the hills slope off into long sweeps of arable land, but Seoraj, the southernmost corner of Kulu is crossed by two chains of hills thrown out from the great snowy range of the Himalayas.

From the south-eastern slopes of the Bara Lacha range, that divides Lahoul from Ladakh, issues the Chandra river, at 16,221 feet above the sea. Flowing thirty miles southward in a broad and deep bed, through wild waste gorges, walled or topped with ice and snow—a scene of desolate grandeur such as Shelley alone could have fitly painted in words—it turns sharp off again to the north-west, under "the glittering Shigri peaks," past a mighty glacier, which continually threatens to crash down into the stream and renew the havoc done in 1836. At the village of Koksur, the first place where signs of life appear, the valley widens, the trees grow in clumps, and tillage becomes possible. About Gondla the country opens and the hamlets grow larger; yet even here the hills on one side of the river tower up to a height of 20,000 feet, crowned with eternal snow. Then joined at Tandee by the Bagha, the Chandra finally passes into Chamba at Jolang, and joins the Indus at Mittsankot, after a course of 960 miles. The lower part of the Bagha valley is "rich in cultivation, large tracts of level arable land lying between the mountains and reaching to the river;" but to the north of Darcha, as you near its source, the country is a mere rugged waste of bare hills and frightful precipices. The Spiti winds through the district of that name for about 120 miles until it reaches the Sutlej about five miles beyond the boundary. In Spiti there is very little timber, but the country is much more open than in Lahoul, and the hills slope gently upwards from the plain. It contains however some very striking scenery, framed in with a glorious background of snow-clad peaks, through which the Manirang Pass leads into Bassahir. Along the Spiti river old river-terraces of sand and shingle rise up to a height of 400 feet above the present stream. Behind these are vast mounds of gravel, often rising 1,500 or 2,000 feet above the river; of gravel which the frost has hurled down by degrees from the steep lime-stone cliffs that bound the valley. The Beas, the chief river of Kulu, rises in the Rohtang Pass 13,325 feet above the sea, and takes a southerly course of sixty-three miles through Kulu, crossing the boundary at Larji, and finally joining the Sutlej near Ferozepore. Captain Harcourt soars above the regions of common prose in describing the beauties of this "noble stream," as it bounds along between tall cliffs or banks covered with pines, or at the foot of mountains clothed with dense forests of deodar, walnut, plane, and other timber, or amidst waving crops that rise in woody terraces above each other. Further down, about Menalee, "mountains rise above mountains, the great army of cedars becoming more and more scattered as the higher altitudes are approached;" far off towers the Snowy Range; nearer are thick forests of pine and cedar clinging to every practicable spot, and "descending in serried phalanxes into the vales below, broken, or, rather, relieved by masses of rock, or more pleasantly by picturesque villages, hiding like coy beauties in the woodland that veils and yet enhances their charms." At Bajoura the vale narrows again, the scenery changes, "the mountains crowd up in ascending precipices that run down to the river's edge, many hundred feet below the road," and there is only one village between Bajoura and Larji where two affluents swell the volume of the Beas.

Yet grander in some places is the scenery of the Parwati, which enters the Beas above Bajoura. The valley is well peopled and bears very fine crops. Nearly as large a stream as the Parvati (or Parbuttee) is the Larji which joins the Beas at the place so named. Another affluent of the Beas is the Solang or Beash Khund, which rises at the foot of a peak more than 20,000 feet above the sea. The Solang valley contains perhaps the largest deodar in India, and certainly the grandest scenery in Kulu; the river rushing between "mountains clad in impenetrable forests, from the midst of which jut out vast headlands of perpendicular rock," while at one place the river is lined by a series of huge cliffs rising sheer up to a height of 600 feet.

In so mountainous a country one looks for passes of a corresponding height. The Rohtang Pass on the main trade line in Lahoul rises to a height of 13,325 feet. It was here that seventy-two coolies, in October 1862, were overtaken by a furious snow-storm, which buried all but a few of them where they stood. Here too it was that Lord Elgin in 1863 fatally aggravated his heart-complaint, by crossing and recrossing the pass in the same day. From the top of the Malauna Pass, 12,000 feet above the sea, you get marvellous views of the Snowy Range; mile on mile of glacier and peak towering beyond peak without end. The villagers of Malauna keep entirely to themselves, neither eating nor intermarrying with the people of any other village. None but themselves can comprehend their language, which has evident affinities with the Tibetan and Burmese. The Hamta Pass, 15,000 feet high, leads from Preenee in the Upper Beas valley to Chaitroo in the Upper Chandra valley. It is open from May to the end of October and sometimes even to December, and is easier to cross than the Rohtang. The Bara-Lacha Pass, more than 16,000 feet above the sea, lies between Zinzingbar and Lingti in Lahoul. Still higher is the Shingo-la or Zanskar Pass, used by petty traders going from Lahoul to Ladakh. Two passes, each more than 17,000 feet high, wind up from the Chandra Bagha Valley into the district of Bara Banghal, on the road to Kangra. The Manirang Pass, leading out of Spiti into Bassahir on the south, rises steeply from the Simlah side to a height of more than 18,000 feet, and gains the Spiti side by a large glacier which ends in a sheer wall of ice. Highest of all is the Parang-la, between Spiti and Ladakh, a pass much used by traders and sometimes even by tourists. Its crest is a rocky limestone ridge with high snowy peaks on either hand, and a mighty glacier on its northern slope. Open from June till October only, it is dangerous even in summer from the severe snowstorms that sweep through it,

After describing the physical features of this Indian Switzerland, Captain Harcourt proceeds to give interesting details regarding the people who dwell in it, the crops they cultivate, and other kindred subjects—our notice of which must be reserved to another week. For the present we will only note by the way the wisdom of the new arrangement which furnishes Kulu with an Assistant Commissioner irremovable for at least two years, and armed with sufficient powers for hearing appeals both in civil and criminal cases. The old plan of leaving the country for half the year under the sole charge of native Punjabi officials, and displacing the English officer just as he began to know something of the people and their language, was an obvious blunder which has not been remedied too soon.

OCTROI DUTIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Permit me to justify English journalists and economists from the charges brought against them by the editor of the Indian Economist, quoted in page 1069 of your Paper of the 7th inst.

The English press and English statesmen are afraid of recommending octroi duties, not because the French have adopted this form of taxation, but because in India the levying of such duties is sure sooner or later to degenerate into licensed extortion.

The effect of Bombay octroi appears to be to raise considerably the prices of the necessaries of life. Bombay is a very expensive place to live in, as married lieutenants and clerks in Government offices can testify. Of course the rich merchants, Parsees, Europeans, and Jews, who make enormous fortunes, and exercise great influence in the Municipal Council, feel the pressure less.

It is easy to collect an octroi in Bombay, and easy to repress smuggling. There is a large Imperial Customs Establishment, of the services of which the Municipality are thankful to avail themselves. Bombay is almost an island, and it is always easier to prevent smuggling by water then smuggling over land.

Sir Charles Trevelyan, the ablest financier that India has seen for forty years past, demolished all the arguments of the advocates of octroi in his masterly Town Duty Report, published as far back as 1833, and republished by the Viceroy's Government for general information on the 14th of September, 1864. The Government of Lord William Bentinck was convinced by this report that the octroi duties were in practice onerous transit duties, which impeded trade, injured the agriculturist, and ruined manufacturers. These oppressive town duties were abolished.

It would be well if every civil officer employed in India were supplied with a copy of the Report of 1833; from that year up to the annexation of the Punjab octroi duties were prohibited. When the British Government annexed the Punjab, the Governor-General sent some of the cleverest officers to be found in India to administer its affairs. You, Sir, can perhaps call to mind the rosy-tinted reports which held up the Punjab Administration as a model to be imitated by all officers in India, though, if the success of an administration be weighed by the encouragement given to free trade, the officers governing other parts of India had no cause to be ashamed of comparing their administration with that of the Punjab.

The Punjab Government, in sanctioning the imposition of octroi, appears to have been guided by the argument that the case with which a tax can be collected is its greatest virtue. It is usually easier to collect an indirect than a direct tax; and in India it is easier to collect Rs. 100,000 by an octroi, than Rs. 10,000 by a house-tax.

And in the Punjab the collection of an octroi tax was possible. The towns are, or were at that time, walled, and it is comparatively easy to prevent smuggling, when all articles of consumption must be introduced through a limited number of gateways.

Umritsur, the seat of the manufacture of the so-called Cashmere shawls, and a place of great trade, was considered the model town, and an account of its octroi management was published for the edification of Government officers throughout India. Although free discussion is disliked in a non-regulation province, those who watched the course of trade observed that free competition, which is the life of commerce, was not encouraged by the Umritsur octroi rules. INDIAN HARBOURS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—You were good enough in your issue of Oct. 31 to notice with favour my paper on the "Harbours of India." Perhaps you can find room for a few more remarks on subjects, connecting themselves with the commercial prosperity of that vast country, which I would notice under different heads—Harbours—Marine Surveys—Lights—and perhaps, Charts.

To-day let us take up the first, and ask how the Viceroy can be expected, without any Marine Department out there, to take up questions affecting 4,000 miles of sea-board and more than 400 ports on the fringe of India. The master attendants of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay are the only officials of nautical experience, and theirs is purely local, or confined to the suburbs of those three chief towns. They could not visit the ports and creeks within the limits of their respective Presidencies, without for several months deserting the commercial centres of which they are the conservators and to which all their time and attention is due. Who, then, is there to advise his Excellency on questions involving the general Maritime interests of India?

Port Canning on the Mutlah (recently deceased) has, with its carriage drive to the metropolis, cost the people of India some £800,000. Who was its father? Was he civil engineer or public opinion? or was it merely adopted by landsmen because recommended as an accessible port? Now this I say, that neither accessibility without necessity, nor necessity without accessibility, should commend any port.

Let us now jump across the peninsula, and look at Kurrachee, which has cost half as much, about £400,000, but is not dead yet, and still asking for more. Have all its costly works produced even one foot more water on the bar than it had a dozen years ago? Let the Admiralty Chart (1869) and Bombay Administration Reports (1868-70) answer. I hope Kurrachee may last till the opening of the railway through Persia, between Europe and Calcutta; then may follow its natural absorption (an event which, in my opinion, there is just cause for anticipating) into the western delta of the Indus; a fate similar to that of its predecessor, Lahori Bunder, visited by Captain Alex. Hamilton in 1699, but now left twelve miles from the sea coast.

I will now notice a third port, Bombay, aspiring to be called the commercial capital of India. How has money been laid out there? Not in utilising the best and deepest portions of the harbour, but in costly reclamation schemes, which have involved it in financial difficulties. The latest rumour is that legislation is about to double the port dues; but, though in debt, she has no wharves, and must still employ cargo-boats, a system which detains ships double the time there is any necessity for. Am I wrong in saying that, so far as concerns convenience for shipping cargoes, Bombay is almost as Nature made her.

I need not again allude to the minor ports of the Madras Presidency, for we shall doubtless soon learn how the civil engineer of special experience intends to deal with them. But I ought to confess that in my list of harbours there is an important missing link which Sir James Elphinstone has since supplied in the harbour of Mootapetta, or "Port Lorne," the south entrance of his proposed Ship-Canal in the Gulf of Manaar—a project which, if properly carried to completion, has my best wishes.

The wreck of the Rangoon suggests enquiry into the mode of managing harbour matters in the Eastern seas. As yet we know not the cause of her disaster, but I venture to ascribe it to the absence of a buoy at the north end of the dangerous Cadda Rocks which cover a length of four hundred yards in a north and south direction. Their south end has one, but there is neither buoy nor beacon on Meemattia Rock, between which and the Caddas the west channel lies, with a breadth of only three hundred yards. But the Rangoon most probably was passing to eastward of the Cadda Rocks; and, having to stop or to avoid another vessel, was set by the four-knot westerly current (now running, as per telegram,) on to the Caddas.

The sailing directions say, "The approaches to Point de Galle Bay are rendered dangerous by numerous sunken reefs, and it is necessary that vessels should obtain the services of a pilot." I would now suggest the necessity of buoying those sunken reefs, and of an examination, by a competent marine surveyor, of the approaches to all Indian Ports, for the purpose of pointing out where buoys, lights and beacons may be advantageously placed for the safety of the rapidly-increasing coast-traffic of the East Indies. Do not lay all the blame upon the poor pilot, but see to it that good and sufficient marks are provided.—

Yours faithfully,] A. D. TAYLOR, F.R.G.S., Pensioned Commander late Indian Navy.

"KYA HOGA?"

The Delhi Gazette observes that vague rumours of a great upheaving in the Punjab of discontent and overt acts of—we will not say of rebellion—of rioting in Rohilcund, and of the "objects and intentions" of Government in assembling a powerful force of all arms, well equipped for active service in any direction, towards Delhi, float about among the native community. We observe that the prevailing view of events appears to be, that, whatever happens (and that we are on the eve of startling disclosures seems to have laid fast hold upon the native mind), the Government will appear on the scene, not in any way concerned in results this time, except as peace-makers between contending religious factions. Recent events in the Punjab are attributed to ill-feeling between the Seikhs and Mahomedans, and in Rohilcund to a similar feeling between Mahomedans and Hindoos. By a process of reasoning which we confess our inability to fathom, Hindoo, Seikh, and Mahomedan prophecies, Russian invasion, the stamp law, Prussian victories, the income-tax, the "autumn campaign," the murder in Calcutta, the visit of the Duke of Edinburgh, the Looshai expedition, the Public Works departments, the respite to Abdulla, and the arrest of Leakut Ali, have all been jumbled together, and are openly discussed as signs that everybody should prepare for the worst and make up his mind to fight for something or somebody somewhere. The first question put by an intelligent native visitor not given to watching and weighing public events is, "Yih kia hotha hai sahib? Kia hoga? Say to him that you do not know to what he alludes, and, too polite to tell you so, he will look at you as if you had joined certain of the conspirators and would not reveal their secrets. The intentions of the Government in assembling troops at the camp of exercise is of course the first consideration. Explain it; describe the object; represent the advantages—do all that calmly in your very best vernacular, and the conviction will gradually creep upon you that not a syllable of all you have been saying has been credited. "Dekha jaiga" is the remark of your visitors as they rise to leave your presence, and they leave you under the uncomfortable impression that you will for some time be counted among men not to be trusted. It is very difficult, if not quite impossible, to make a native understand the necessity or the utility of a Camp of Exercise, without some ulterior object. And then a British camp without the mem sahibs, and with officers restricted in luggage and creature comforts—without balls, and pic-nics, and sky races, and theatricals! Well, there is nothing for it but time and patience. We hereby resolve that for the present no native visitor shall receive any other answer from us than Dekha jaiga (we shall see).

ENGLISH IGNORANCE OF INDIA.

The Madras Times observes that a good many people in England who ought to know better, have an idea that all people who have been a long time, and all those who are born in the country, must necessarily be black. We have an idea that some of our friends would be quite surprised to find that there was no particular resemblance between us and say, "Uncle Tom." Then with regard to tigers and serpents, there is a tremendous amount of misconception; but we think the people out here are somewhat to blame in this respect. Some people are in the habit of sending home terrible yarns of their dangers in this respect. We know a worthy missionary who wrote to his father that wild beasts were in the habit of roaring round his house at night, the said wild beasts being jackals! The father at once sent out two of the best breech-loaders he could procure for his son to defend himself from the attack of these furious creatures. Then with regard to the way in which we live, what odd notions the people at home have! The old notion of sitting all day doing nothing, with a man on each side of us fanning us most furiously, is not yet dead. We are supposed to revel in luxury and idleness. The English mind cannot take in the idea that life out here is of the most prosaic kind, and that people work harder as a rule than they do at home. There are exceptions, of course. A "doing general duty officer," for instance, does nothing beyond drawing his pay; but we fancy an Indian judge works harder than an English one, despite the climate. We are not quite the lazy beings that they fancy us to be; neither do we live in the style that they ascribe to us. Then our morals—we either are very wicked or we ought to be. It is incomprehensible to people at home that we should be as good as they are; and when they find people returning who do not drive a coach-and-four through the greater part of the decalogue, they think they must be the exception, and not the rule. Next we have the blunders made by the Home Government. Really some of the statements made in Parliament are too ridiculous to be noticed. It is inconceivable how any one professing to know what India is should speak such nonsense as is often heard about this country.

THE WRONGS OF THE INDIAN ARTILLERY.

The Englishman holds that the Indian Artillery have done such good service to the country that they deserve to be justly dealt with. The Government has forced them to give up their old career as an Indian corps, and manufactured them into Royals with a high hand. We hold that they have at least as good a right as the other arms of the Service to the advantages which the infantry and cavalry have obtained by the change. In the first place, they have a right to admission to the Indian Staff Corps if they see fit to avail themselves of it. What would be the condition of the cadres of our old infantry regiments if every officer had been forced to remain in them? The Staff Corps has in their case prevented a total block in the promotion, and the Artillery, which is at present debarred from the Corps, is now suffering from precisely this stoppage. The change has further deprived the old Indian Artillery of its former purchase system and bonus. Again, while a colonel in the Staff Corps gets an allowance after thirty-eight years' service, which enables him to retire at once, the Artillery colonels do not receive this allowance, and have neither the inducement to retire, nor the means necessary for doing so. Their general officers, moreover, are placed on a separate list, and are thereby frequently superseded. Such supersessions affect not only the chances of the seniors, but the promotion of the juniors. The statistics published last year show that while in the seventeen brigades of the old Royal Artillery there was not a single colonel of forty years' service, there are nine colonels of that standing in the fourteen Indian brigades, and that one of these colonels stands as low as twenty-sixth on the list for promotion to major-general. The Horse Guards give every year £42,400 as inducements to colonels and other officers of the Royal Artillery to retire, and any colonel of thirty years' service in the Royal English Artillery may obtain an annuity of £600 by rotation. It seems to us self-evident that if the efficiency of the Indian Artillery is to be maintained, Government must either make up its mind to adopt a plan similar to that pursued at home, or else throw open the staff corps to our Indian brigades. In a time of heavy taxation we could not, in the interests of the public, recommend the former; but in justice to a gallant body of men who have rendered valuable services to the State, we press the expediency of the second alternative. No one who has learned by practical experience what fifteen years of Indian service means, can read the actuaries' report without a feeling of compassion for one of the most accomplished corps in the service. The artillery is our great mainstay in India. It has again and again turned the fate of battles, and it is the arm to which, in the time of danger, we necessarily look to maintain our supremacy against the millions who surround us. Yet this branch of the service has been singled out for exclusion alike from the concessions which have made amalgamation bearable to the other arms, and from the advantages which the officers senior to 1861 would have enjoyed had they belonged from the first to the royal (English) brigades.

SWALLOWING A SNAKE.—A few days ago, while a gentleman was travelling on the railway, he arrived at the Arconum station quite thirsty. He eagerly snatched up the first goblet that he came across, and gulped down a large quantity of water. He, however, soon felt that he had swallowed something more than water, and became restless and faint. Arriving at the Perambore station, he was at once conveyed to the General Hospital, when on a dose of some purgative being administered, it was discovered that he had swallowed a young water-snake. The astonishment of the gentleman on discovering what he had swallowed may be easily imagined. —Madras Athenæum.

DHARWAR COTTON REPORT.—DHARWAR, Oct. 18.—Our latest news of the Liverpool market is to the 12th inst., quoting fair Dhollera at 7¼d. per lb. We have not heard of any business doing in these districts in cotton during the past fortnight. We quote Sawginned nominally Rs. 240 per candy f. o. b. Carwar, December shipment: there is no good Compta offering. The crops, both of cotton and grain, promise very well indeed, and the ryots say they have had quite enough rain. All estimates of the out-turn of the coming crop can only be roughly taken at present. We however think that we shall have a crop larger than that of last year by 40 per cent. On the coast there are no stocks whatever, and there are not likely to be any large quantities for sale for another month. All the cotton that was stored in Compta during the monsoon has been shipped to Bombay. Some few hundred carts have been sent down to Compta since the rains, and the cotton was shipped off to Bombay immediately; the quality of these latter shipments was good.

BURNING AND SINKING OF THE "LADY MELVILLE."

An alarm of fire was given on board the Lady Melville, lying at No. 7, Esplanade Moorings, Calcutta, about 11.45 A.M. on Saturday morning. It appears that the steward of the vessel, accompanied by the captain's servant, had gone down into the store-room near the after-cabin for the purpose of pumping a supply of rum. They took a bull's-eye lantern with them, and the steward pumped two buckets of rum. He then went up, and the boy handed the buckets to him for the purpose of emptying them The captain's servant then proceeded to fill the third bucket, and in doing so, he slipped and disarranged the pump, and a portion of the rum falling on the lantern immediately ignited, and some of the burning liquid fell on the cask, and an explosion took place, blowing both ends of the cask out. The liquid fire, running over the hold, ignited a bale of gunny-bags near the cask. The boy and the steward informed the chief mate, who at once ordered all the crew aft to fit up the fire-engine on board, and endeavour to prevent the fire from spreading. The captain, who was at the office of the agents (Messrs. Ernsthausen and Oesterley), was at once informed, and speedily came to the ship. Shortly after, the Calcutta Police Fire Brigade with two engines arrived. The immense volume of water poured into the burning vessel caused her to come over on her starboard side, until at about 5 P.M. the open port-holes were level with the water, which rushed in and filled the afterpart of the ship. Shortly before this all hands were sent to the pumps, but the water was evidently gaining fast, and the men commenced to save what personal property they could, which was brought ashore on dinghies. At 5 P.M. the vessel suddenly gave a lurch to her port-side, and, righting, sank, with upwards of thirty men on board. These were, of course, precipitated into the water, and made the best of their way in boats, or swam to land. But we regret to hear that Mr. William Clayton Wood, Messrs. Ernsthausen and Oesterley's shipping clerk, who was on board the vessel when she went down, was drowned. The body of the unfortunate gentleman was discovered in the pantry of the ship yesterday, about noon, by Inspector Palmer, of the River Police. A midshipman named Boon was reported as missing, and his body was discovered yesterday afternoon, at about 4.30 P.M. The sudden sinking of the vessel jeopardised the lives of all those on board at the time, and several narrow escapes from drowning are reported. One man was sent to the Medical College Hospital with injuries caused by the falling of some of the spars on him. Several of the members of the Fire-brigade also received severe bruises, but no serious injuries are reported. On enquiry we find that most of the men managed to save their boxes, but the captain and officers have lost the greater portion of their personal property, the former gentleman being, we understand, a very heavy loser.

The vessel is sunk in about seven fathoms of water, at a distance of not more than thirty yards from the shore; her main deck is about five or six feet under water. Yesterday morning her sails were unbent, and some of the boats floated. It has not yet been decided whether an attempt will be made to float her. She was fully loaded with rice, gunny-bags, and jute, and was to have cleared out for Bombay to-morrow at the latest. The ship, one of Green's Blackwall liners, was well known as a regular trader between this port and London, and her captain, Mr. Harrison, had made several voyages to Calcutta in her. Her tonnage was about 966.—Englishman, Oct. 18.

Miscellaneous.

MEDICAL.—We hear that Dr. Joseph Rose is likely to officiate as Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals at Allahabad; Surgeon-Major Walker reverting temporarily to his former charge of the Sappers, &c., at Roorkee.—Pioneer.

RAILWAY POLICE.—It is said that the Government of India have sanctioned the substitution of a detective police force in lieu, or supplementary, of the present train guards on the East India Railway.

DAMAGE DONE BY FLOODS.—Captain Plant, the Deputy Commissioner at Henzada, in Bengal, has reported the amount of loss sustained by the floods in the Myanoung district to be about nine and a-half lakhs to the natives, and about half a lakh to Government.

JUDICIAL.—Mr. Rivers Thomson, Secretary to the Government of Bengal, in the Judicial Department, was expected to return from leave and resume charge of his office in November. In that case Mr. S. C. Bayley, the officiating secretary, reverts to his former appointment in the Mofussil.

THE LATE ALLEGED SUICIDE.—A post mortem examination of Mr. Kennedy's body, and an enquiry into the circumstances of his death, have been made at Simla. The verdict was that the deceased destroyed himself in a fit of delirium tremens. It is said that the inquiry was hurried and has been strongly commented on by high authority, and that a further investigation will probably take place.

BARRACK DEPARTMENT.—Probably with reference to the failure of the Allahabad Barracks, the Pioneer is informed that the question of placing the Barrack Department under the Public Works Department is now under consideration, and that it will, in all probability, be placed permanently under the Government of India.

CIVIL.—We hear that Major Tighe is going home on furlough some time next month, and that he is to be succeeded by Mr. Macnabb of Umballa. It is also rumoured that Mr. Forsyth, on his return to India, will be appointed to the Umballa Division, having his summer quarters at Kussowlie.—Delhi Gazette.

MILITARY COMMANDS.—The Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India has requested that, in future, when the offer of a command is made to an officer residing in England, under circumstances which would entail his at once proceeding to India, communication may at the same time be made to her Majesty's Government.

RAILWAY TO DARJEELING.—A public meeting has been held at Darjeeling, at which the form of a memorial to the Lieutenant-governor was agreed upon, praying for the extension of railway communication to the Sanitarium. It has also been suggested that his Honour's attention should be drawn to the state of telegraphic communication, as it now takes forty-eight hours for a message to reach Calcutta.

UNCOVENANTED LEAVE RULES.—It is in contemplation, the Indian Daily News believes, to amend certain sections of the Uncovenanted Leave Rules. As the rule requiring an uncovenanted officer proceeding to England on medical certificate for two years or less to forfeit his substantive appointment when overstaying the said leave operates hardly against uncovenanted servants, the Government of India intend to recommend a modication of the said rule.

MALT LIQUOR FOR TROOPS.—The Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council having had before him the question of the issue of malt liquor to British troops on the line of march, and having given the matter full consideration, has been pleased to order the discontinuance of such issues in the Bengal Presidency, owing to the generally muddy and unpalatable state of the liquor on such occasions, and the Governments of Madras and Bombay have been requested to do the same, should there be no special objection to it.

NATIVES AS CIVIL ENGINEERS.—The Indian Mirror says:—A doubt having arisen as to the term "British-born subjects" with reference to the rules lately published for the admission of students into the new Indian Civil Engineering College at Cooper's-hill, one of our countrymen, now in England, lately wrote to the India House, inquiring as to whether the term applied to natives of India. We are informed that the authorities replied in the affirmative, and said that the term included all natural-born subjects of her Majesty. Here, then, is a new opening for our enterprising countrymen. If they are wise they ought to lose no time in availing themselves of it.

GOVERNMENT PRESSES.—The Governor in Council has decided that the existing system by which each department of the Secretariat has a separate press establishment be abolished, and that one Centra Press be substituted. The following gentlemen have been appointed a Committee to ascertain the strength and cost at which the new establishment should be maintained, and the quantity of plant that will require to be purchased: Captain Baker, R.E., Mr. J. Nugent Mr. Wassoodeo Pandoorung, Mr. W. Pereira, and Mr. W. Abraham. A General Superintendent will be appointed, who will also be the Editor of the Government Gazette, and the pay of this officer is to be on the scale of an Assistant Secretary.

PORT CANNING.—Writing on the abandonment of Port Canning, the Englishman says:—"At first it seemed reasonable to ordinary people that the moorings and buoys should be left in the river for the convenience of any trade which hereafter might frequent the Mutlah. But it was pointed out by experts that if buoys and moorings were left in the Mutlah, and were not looked after, they would certainly be carried out to sea, and lost in the second, if not in the first, monsoon. The public money spent on the moorings, &c., would be lost, and there would be a number of huge iron buoys bobbing about the Bay of Bengal, ready to knock holes in the sides of any ship they might meet. If ever the Mutlah were frequented, the cost of putting the buoys and moorings down again would be much less than the loss incurred if they were carried out to sea. This, at any rate, is the Government view of the matter, as it has been put to us."

ANOTHER OUTRAGE BY A KOOKA.—We regret to learn that another brutal outrage has been committed by a member of the Kooka sect, followed, however, by prompt punishment. It appears that two inoffensive Brahmins were proceeding a few days ago from Loodiana to Simla; when near the village of Jundialla, in the Loodiana district, they stopped to rest at a road-side well. A party of Kookas were seated near the well, and one of these men, without the slightest provocation, rushed at the two Brahmins and struck one of them on the face with a hatchet, inflicting a severe wound. The would-be assassin was seized by his own comrades, but succeeded in effecting his escape to his own village, where he was captured a few hours afterwards. He at first affected to be insane, but afterwards gave up this line of defence, and made a free confession of guilt, alleging that he was prompted by some power of evil to commit the assault. He was at once brought before the Deputy Commissioner, who sentenced him to seven years' rigorous imprisonment.—Mofussilite.

TELEGRAPHS.—The Supreme Government is said to have sanctioned a revised scheme for a patrolling and maintenance establishment for the whole of the Telegraph Department in India.

NATIVE REFUSAL TO GO TO A NAUTCH.—The Indian Mirror has the following:—"We thank Rajah Kali Krishna Bahadur and brothers for kindly inviting us to Durga Puja Nautches at their house. It may be ungracious to refuse a polite invitation, especially when it comes unexpectedly from a high quarter, where we cannot claim the honour of personal acquaintance. But we must thankfully decline the favour. We object to Durga Puja, and we object to nautches. The worship of Durga is idolatry, and we cannot as Brahmos attend Puja. Nautch in India means, if we are correctly informed, the dance of prostitutes and harlots, and we hold it to be extremely immoral; our better nature would not allow us to be present on such an occasion. Even at the risk of being ridiculed and scoffed at as Puritans, fanatics, or boors, we have ventured to give out our honest convictions, and state the wherefore of our non-compliance with a Royal invitation. We do not mean to be harsh when we say that we should very much like to see both Durga Puja and nautches abolished."

MILITARY.—In consequence of General Beatson's departure for England on medical certificate, the temporary command of the Sirhind Division devolves on Colonel W. Payn, C.B., of the 72nd Highlanders.—It is reported that Major-General Fraser Tytler, C.B., is to be re-appointed to a divisional command in the room of Major-General Beatson.—Colonel G. U. Johnson has arrived in Lucknow to assume command of the Royal Artillery in that division. Brigadier-General Olpherts, C.B., V.C., we learn, is transferred from the Gwalior to the Rohilcund command, Brigadier Bright taking his place, who in his turn is succeeded by Brigadier-General Walter, from Sealkote, to which command Brigadier-General Turner has just been appointed.—We are glad to be able to announce that Captain Dick, late second in command of the 11th Bengal Lancers (Probyn's Horse), has been appointed to the regiment, Captain Boyle succeeding Captain Dick as second in command; Captain Prinsep gets Captain Buller's vacancy on his appointment to the Central India Horse, and Captain Bax becomes third squadron officer from first squadron subaltern.—Pioneer.

DISCOVERY OF ANCIENT COINS.—About a month and a half ago some of the villagers of Soneput, while digging out a ruin in the vicinity of an old tank, discovered an earthern pot (not unlike a common sorai) containing three seers and a half of silver coin. The earthen pot was buried about seven feet under ground; the coins at the bottom of the pot were completely defaced by corrosion, although nearly three-fourths of its contents were in a very good state of preservation. On examination the coins were found to belong to Greco-Bactrian Kings. The coins of Menander are certainly more numerous than those of any other king, though by far the best impressions are the coins of King Philoxenus. The following are the names of the kings whose coins have been deciphered:—Menander, Philoxenus, Diomedes, Antialkider, Appollodotus, Hermæus, Heliakles, Heaton, Antemachus, Hermæus, and Kaikalliope. A description of the coins and the circumstances of their discovery is being prepared for the London Academy; and we hope to give the historical portion of the article, as it is hardly possible for us to burden a daily paper with complicated illustrations.—Delhi Gazette.

THE LUSHAIS.—Speaking of the Lushais, or as they are sometimes called Kookies, a Commissioner of considerable experience in Bengal gives it as his opinion that the raids made by the Lushais and by the other tribes in Eastern Bengal are made chiefly for gain. Captives, he says, are sold as slaves among the frontier tribes for sums which vary from Rs. 100 to Rs. 200 each, and then some money and ornaments are obtained which furnish means whereby the Cookies purchase arms and ammunition, materials for making the latter, dhos and iron for spear-heads. Another motive is glory; for these tribes consider a raid as war, and a successful raid as a glorious achievement. Again, raids sometimes originate in a desire to retaliate for some injury committed on the raiders. It is also said that the Cachar Lushais, or Kookies, take to raiding for the purpose of obtaining human heads, for without a certain number the funeral obsequies of a chief cannot be performed; but this custom is unknown in the Akyab and the Hill districts. The Commissioner gives the following account of a raid, which we take from the Bengal Times:—"The usual practice is to surprise the village at break of day, and, though resistance is scarcely ever made, owing to the suddenness of the attack and the strength and arms of the raiders, the rule is to kill every male adult that can be caught, and carry off the women and children as captives. Latterly, however, this rule has not been strictly adhered to, as in the raids in the hill districts a number of Bengalee wood-cutters were carried off alive; and at Khizapara, as well as the Lah-hak raid in Akyab, females as well as children were butchered in the most brutal manner. When the raiders march on their return journey with their captives, the least resistance on the part of the latter results in their being murdered on the spot, and if any women or young children are unable to keep up with the party, they are similarly treated without compunction. Great cruelties are sometimes practised in order to prevent the escape of captives both on the march and in the Kookie villages. One way is to make an incision in the wrist and pass a ligature behind the tendons.

IMPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Oct. 18.—The market has been mostly closed since last issue on account of holidays, and the moderate business which has been in the interval transacted has been at rates current at date of our last. Business will not be resumed till Oct. 30.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Oct. 18.—The Custom-house and all the banks and offices closed on Saturday last for the Doorgah Poojah holidays, consequently there has been no export business done to report. Up to Saturday prices of goods of all sorts continued firm, as some shippers were anxious to secure lots to fill up before the holidays. We shall give no further report till after the offices are again opened.

STATION TALK.

TANJORE, Oct. 13.—Lord Napier has fully employed his time since here in inspecting every object of interest. The day after his arrival he visited the Fort, paid a short visit to Lady Napier's Girls' School, and subsequently walked in the gardens. On Wednesday he spent the greater part of the early morning minutely examining the great Pagoda and the mighty Bull, with which I believe he was somewhat disappointed; he then went to the Palace and spent some time in the library examining the various MSS. of Surofa Rajah and other works of interest. He looked in at the Dispensary, which is also in the Fort. After breakfast he went to the school of the S. P. G., and spent the whole morning examining the boys, some 400 or 500, and expressed himself well satisfied, I believe. In the evening, accompanied by Lady Napier, he paid another visit to her ladyship's school, which is, I am happy to say, in a most flourishing state, and afforded immense gratification to the distinguished visitors. After that another visit was paid to the Palace to inspect the jewels, so that his Excellency is doing Tanjore pretty energetically. On Friday, I believe, he visits, accompanied by Lady Napier and his staff, Mr. Cadell at Vellum, and spends the day there. Next week he will proceed to Combaconum, and after inspecting that town and the anicuts in its vicinity, will proceed to Tranquebar and Karikal, and return to Tanjore. Subsequently, if possible, his Excellency will go to Poodoocottah, the Rajah of which place is most anxious to receive a visit from his lordship, after which Trichinopoly will be his destination, where a few days will be spent, and then Madras.

MYSORE, Oct. 13.—An inspection of the book kept in the travellers' bungalow at Swasamoodrum necessitates the conclusion that the Cauvery Falls are being deserted. The once fashionable resort is such no longer. Travellers going through the country by ten-mile stages no longer halt and make a pilgrimage to the shrine. The railroads do the work of dawks nowadays, and no railroad comes this way. The last name but one which I read in the bungalow book is that of the immortal Thomas Jones, who makes an entry on Guy Fawkes' day, 1868, writing in such a terrible hand that one is puzzled to know how the Government of Bengal ever manage to read it. What Mr. Jones was not above doing I presumed to do to-day, and went to see the falls. The courteous Jagherdeer mounted me on an elephant, and took me the rounds of the place. We invaded the natural solitudes in native style with tom-toms beating and clarionets blowing. It was with difficulty I could persuade my host that the music of the waters was preferable. When we arrived at the last cataract the sun was setting, the sky was cloudy, and gloom pervaded the scene. This I thought was the best aspect. Swasamoodrum, the "Ocean of Siva," is a sacred village situated on an island in the Cauvery. One side of the river belongs to the Rajah of Mysore, the other to the British Government. The island is long and narrow, and divides the river into two branches called the two Cauveries. About a mile beyond the village the stratum of surface rock on which the stream has hitherto run, stops abruptly, and is succeeded by a light alluvial soil. This has been gradually hollowed out by the water till gorges 200 feet deep have been formed. The two branches of the river rushing over the ledge of rock into these gorges form the cataracts known as the Cauvery Falls. The water begins to accumulate in these rivers about May; by the end of June the falls are fairly covered, and by the 20th of July they are in full flood. One branch of the river forms two cataracts, which are together called Gungun Chooka, the other forms two more together called Burra Chooka. Gungun Chooka is supposed to have a clear fall of 165 feet, and Burra Chooka of 180 feet. Some say that the Cauvery falls do not equal the Garsopa; this is a matter of opinion which each person may settle for himself. The beneficent Cauveri Ammah the goddess, who sits at the bottom of the flood, with her hair entangled in the river weeds, seemed to me a sufficiently beautiful object without troubling oneself to draw comparisons. The country round the falls is jungly, and during the best part of the year feverish; but just now it is safe. A better place for a picnic could not be desired, and would that some of the Bangalore fair could be tempted to make an excursion. In July the days are never sunny. There is good shooting on the hills which surround the basin. In the island itself the game is rather shy, and beaters are not forthcoming. The natives find the place unhealthy, and there are no inhabitants. A Fakeer who keeps an ancient Mussulman tomb close to the Gungun Chooka, and who, I am sure, makes his money out of the devotees, showed me his piece of land, and told me he had had it for sixty-two years without being able to find any body to cultivate it. It occurred to me to ask why he did not amuse his leisure hours by digging his own potatoes; but I reflected on caste, and refrained.—Madras Times Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE PAUMBEM CHANNEL.—Two borings have been successfully made in the works of the Paumbem Channel. From the facility with which they were effected it is surmised that the difficulties anticipated will soon be overcome.

SETTING IN OF THE MONSOON AT MADRAS.—We think the monsoon has fairly set in. Yesterday we had a good downpour, accompanied with thunder, while the wind blew steadily from the north-east until late in the afternoon, when it wheeled round to the south. There is every likelihood of a good monsoon this year.—Madras Times, Oct. 18.

JUDICIAL.—A Madras contemporary understands that the Hon. Mr. Justice Holloway intends remaining in India during the next hot season, should his health permit his doing so, with the view of completing his full period of service preparatory to his retirement on the full pension of a first-class civil servant, namely, £1,000 per annum.

MILITARY.—We understand that Captain Cook, 21st Fusiliers, has been offered, and has accepted, the command at Ramandroog, near Bellary.—Madras Mail.

THE GODAVERY DELTA.—The Secretary of State for India (a Madras paper tells us), in a despatch dated July 27, 1871, has approved of the completion of the system of irrigation and navigation in the eastern section of the Godavery delta. These improvements will cost Rs. 10,80,800, and the area of irrigation is expected to be increased from 1,23,000 to 1,88,170 acres.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN T. S. M. ROBINSON.—We regret to learn of the death at Nowgong, Bundlecund, Central Provinces, on Oct. 2, of Captain Thomas Stewart Moore Robinson, Madras Staff Corps, 1st Wing Subaltern 15th Regiment M.N.I. This promising young officer was gazetted Ensign of the 21st Regiment Madras Native Infantry in January 1853, was promoted to Lieutenant in September 1866, and to Captain in May 1869.

MESSRS. FRERE AND LAMBERT.—The medical board which was held at Bangalore last Monday on Mr. Frere, 21st Fusiliers, recommended that he should go to England as soon as he is strong enough to travel.—Madras Mail.—The Bangalore Herald says that Lieut. Lambert, of the 21st Fusiliers, has been posted to the 1st battalion of his regiment on promotion, which he will not, however, be able to join until the upshot of the unpleasant affair in which he figures as the principal is known.

POPULATION OF THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.—Census returns, published for the first time, for Singapore, Penang, and Malacca, show the entire resident population to be 306,776, among whom the Europeans, from all parts of Europe, number only 1,599. The number of Malays is 147,684; the Chinese, 114,130; and Klings, or the natives from the Madras coast, 20,125. The remaining are Javanese, Bugis, Boyanese, Armenians, Jews, Bengalees, Siamese, and Burmese. There are 992 Europeans in Singapore, 47 in Malacca, and 623 in Penang.

THE KING OF BURMAH.—It is rumoured that the King of Burmah has recently appointed a British merchant to proceed to England and represent the injustice done to his Majesty in not allowing him to import fire-arms under the late treaty. This gentleman is said to be well provided with funds, not only to push for the required permission but also to contract for the material; and we are told, in apparent good faith, that the envoy has assured his Majesty that he will obtain from the British Government the surrender of Bassein, or some other port, to the kingdom of Burmah! It is difficult to credit such a report, and still more difficult to believe that his Majesty could imagine such a cession possible, unless, indeed, the Burmese peacock has become the Burmese gull.—Rangoon Gazette.

LORD NAPIER.—Lord Napier arrived at Tanjore on Tuesday last, about 3 P.M., and was received by Mr. Cadell and all the civilians of the place, and at once drove off to the residency. He had a very pleasant and successful journey down from Coimbatore, stopping at Erode for breakfast, and at Trichinopoly for luncheon, at which latter place he was received by the judge, Mr. Davidson, the collector, Mr. Whiteside, and General Mackintyre and staff. The station was beautifully decorated. At Trichinopoly, and especially Tanjore, crowds of the native population were in attendance to catch a glimpse of, and to welcome his Lordship and Lady Napier. The weather was everything that could be desired, cloudy and cool, and the country passed through was extremely beautiful, the rivers and nullahs being full, and the fields in some places being re-planted, and in others awaiting the sickle.—Madras Times, Oct. 19.

ACTION FOR LIBEL.—Lord Napier has instructed his solicitors to take legal proceedings against the Athenæum unless that paper publishes a full retractation of, and apology for, the statements it recently published affecting his lordship's reputation as a gentleman regarding his intercourse with the late Commander-in-Chief. We think that this course on the part of his Excellency is to be regretted. It will give a fictitious importance to utterances that the public had only noticed to scout, while it will not tend to enhance his lordship's dignity. Lord Napier could very well have afforded to treat these attacks with contempt—as others who have had libellous imputations flung at them have done—satisfied that the public do not believe one word of the abuse. To get an apology from such an assailant, under pressure, would be poor satisfaction indeed. The paper has not apologised, so we suppose the action must go on.—Madras Times.

DR. W. G. HUNTER.

The mail to-day carries away to England Dr. W. G. Hunter, Principal of the Grant Medical College, and First Physician of the Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy Hospital. Although Dr. Hunter is proceeding on leave, it is reported that he will not return to this country, having the prospect before him of more congenial employment at home. We may therefore refer to him as one who has terminated his Indian career.

As an officer of the Educational Department Dr. Hunter has, for the last five years, occupied a leading position as chief of the Grant Medical College. In this institution many changes have been inaugurated. The college has increased the number of its students, and a vernacular class has been added, the teaching department of which has been entrusted to licentiates of the University. The staff of European professors has been increased. To swelling numbers and additional teachers there should have followed a manifest advance of medical education in this Presidency. But has this result been achieved? We scarcely think so. The number of passed licentiates and their practical efficiency has not corresponded with the advantages which the college afforded. Dr. Hunter may not be wholly responsible for this; but the time the Grant College has been in existence, and the admirable management which inaugurated the foundation, and was continued for many of the subsequent years of the institution, led to the formation of high expectation during later years. The disappointment which has followed has been variously explained, and is said to be owing to a variety of causes. Be these causes what they may, the lamentable want of harmony which has notoriously prevailed among the body of professors during the period of Dr. Hunter's presidentship could have exercised no salutary influence within the college walls. Was the misfortune of the college the misfortune of Dr. Hunter, or the misfortune of his colleagues?

But it is as the first Physician of the Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy Hospital in which Dr. Hunter's career may be most profitably reviewed. In this large and practical medical and surgical institution, making up 600 beds, the cases being chiefly selected ones in consequence of the want of sufficient hospital accommodation in the city, there is scope afforded not only for the highest display of the powers of the healing art, but for the accumulation of a record of cases of the deepest interest to the medical profession. How have these advantages been availed of? The reproach has clung to the hospital that, during the whole period in which Dr. Hunter has occupied the responsible post of First Physician, not a single paper on practical medicine or any other subject has emanated from his pen. The experience of five eventful years, in which the science of medicine has made the greatest recorded progress, has thus been entirely lost. Dr. Hunter may be taking away with him rough material to be worked up in England during his leisure; of this we know nothing; but we do know that up to the present time the published medical literature of the Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy Hospital has been a blank.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 21.

Miscellaneous.

THE CENSUS.—We are requested to state that the taking of the census in the Bombay Presidency has been postponed till the month of February next. The exact date will be notified hereafter.—Bombay Gazette.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIAN RAILWAY.—We understand that the new station of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central Indian Railway, opposite Church Gate-street, was to be opened on the 26th ult.

COTTON FRAUDS ACT.—We understand that the Chamber of Commerce has sent another letter to the Government of Bombay praying for the abolition of the Cotton Frauds Department, and complaining that its former letter has not yet been replied to.

MR. RAVENSCROFT.—We understand that Mr. R. W. Ravenscroft, of the Bombay Civil Service, who is expected to arrive here by the mail steamer next week, will be the Acting Chief Secretary to Government, during the Hon. Mr. Chapman's absence.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 21.

HOLKAR'S LOAN.—The agent to the Governor-General in Central India has just reported to the Supreme Government the payment to the Bank of Bombay of the sum of five lakhs of rupees, being the sexth instalment of the amount of the Maharajah Holkar's Railway Loan.

MISCONDUCT AT KURRACHEE.—The officer of the 66th Regiment at Kurrachee, who confessed to having surreptitiously obtained copies of some examination papers before going up for his examination in the native languages, has been placed under arrest. He is said to have hitherto borne a high character in the regiment, and to be a general favourite.

MILITARY.—General Patrick Lynch, K.H.S., having returned to India, will displace Colonel E. Beale from the command of the Deesa Brigade. It is thought probable now that Colonel Beale, instead of Colonel Schneider, will be appointed to the Aden Brigade, rendered vacant by General Tremenheere's promotion to his present rank.

TROOPS FOR ENGLAND.—The troops to leave for Aden and England in H.M.'s Indian troopship Serapis, on the 30th November, are as under:—From the Bombay Presidency.—For Aden: 3rd Battalion 60th Rifles (from Poonah), comprising 26 officers, 3 ladies, and 3 children; 577 men, 55 women, and 99 children. For England (to embark at Aden): 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade, comprising 24 officers, 3 ladies, and 4 children; 563 men (including 8 convalescents), 44 women, and 83 children. Five men of the 6th Brigade Royal Artillery will also embark at Aden. From Bengal: 126 time-expired men (including 5 military convicts), 28 women, and 31 children. To embark at Bombay: 57 officers, 9 ladies, and 14 children; also 10 men, including 4 insanes from Madras and 4 men for discharge with ignominy. Total for England: 81 officers, 12 ladies, and 18 children; 704 men, 72 women, and 114 children.

THE PRONGS LIGHTHOUSE.—It will be remembered that some time ago a petition was drawn up for signature by nautical men protesting against the Prongs Lighthouse being built on the site on which a commencement has been made. This petition has now been forwarded to Government, and the Chamber of Commerce and the Harbour Board have been asked to support its prayer. Some objection having been taken to the alteration of the site of the light-house because of the expense which the erection of a building at the extreme points of the Prongs would necessitate, we hear that an engineer of great experience in such works has expressed his opinion that there would be very little difficulty in founding a light-house at the end of the Prongs at 25 per cent. less than the amount sanctioned for the building which is at present being erected. In the opinion of the engineer to whom we refer, not only would there be no difficulty in raising the column in twenty-six feet of water (low water), but the foundation could easily be laid at even three times that depth. He believes that the cost of the foundation at the extreme end of the Prongs would be about Rs. 1,25,000, or 25 per cent. of the amount sanctioned for building the light-house half way between the shore and the point of the Prongs; and in six months' time from receiving the order (leaving out, of course, the monsoon season), he would undertake to put in the foundation of a light house at the end of the Prongs up to high water level, the foundation to be upon the most improved principle and laid in the most substantial manner. If this can be done there can be no reason why the request of the ship captains should not at once be complied with. It might perhaps be difficult to utilise the foundation which was built last season; unless Government could make it convenient to put Colonel Kennedy inside and keep him there, which would be a great relief to the whole community of Bombay.—Bombay Gazette.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Oct. 21.—The business in Grey Goods during the week has been of a limited nature, in consequence of the firmness of the first holders; the selling at the close of the market is rather quiet, there being not many buyers. Excepting Water No. 30 and Mule No. 40, in which there has been a fair amount of business, very few transactions in Yarns have taken place. We have also to report a very small business in Metals and other kinds of imports.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Oct. 21.—Cotton: There has been a very limited amount of business done in all sorts, and if large quantities of good Cotton had been offered for sale the rates which were quoted could hardly have been maintained. Repeated accounts of want of rain arrive from up-country, and it is feared that this season's crop of Cotton will somewhat suffer. The total quantity bought for export during the week was about 3,000 candies, including upwards of 1,000 candies of Oomrawuttee Cotton, bought for delivery in March next.

MONEY MARKET.—BOMBAY, Oct. 21.—MONEY: The Bank's rates of discount stand unaltered, viz., at 5 per cent. for loans on Government Securities, at 6 per cent. on Cash Credits, and at 8 per cent. on Mercantile Bills. The Money Market continues as before in an unsettled state, and as business of every description is far from being brisk in Bombay, and there are no demands from Calcutta, owing to the Pooja holidays, it is not to be expected that money will become clear immediately. EXCHANGE: Since the arrival of the advices that Council Drafts had changed hands in London at advanced rates Exchange began to rise, and at the close of the market were quoted at 1s. 11¾d. for sight Bills, at 1s. 11 11-16d. for six months' sight Bank Bills, and 2s. for Document Bills. The rates for Bills on Calcutta are nominal, and may be quoted at 99½ for 30 days' sight Bills, and at 100¾ for sight Bills.

Leave to Lieutenant Governors.

The following correspondence with the Secretary of State for India is published in the Gazette of India of Sept. 30:—

Extract from a Despatch from the Government of India in the Financial Department, to the Secretary of State for India, dated Simla, June 9, 1871.

7. We consider that the utmost which should be allowed to a lieutenant governor is the leave for six months on medical certificate, which is admissible to a member of the Council of the Governor general, or of the governor of a Presidency, and we recommend this be granted, it being definitively declared at the same time that a lieutenant governor is entitled to no other leave.

Public Despatch from the Secretary of State for India to the Government of India, dated Aug. 10, 1871.

The despatch of your Excellency in Council in the Financial Department, dated June 9, 1871, submitting for consideration the question of leave of absence to lieutenant governors in India has been considered by me in Council.

I entirely concur with your Excellency in Council in considering that the utmost leave of absence to be granted to a lieutenant governor should be leave for six months on medical certificate, and I desire that this decision may be announced with a declaration that a lieutenant governor is entitled to no other leave.

2. With reference to the above order, the Governor general in Council is pleased to sanction the amendment of the third paragraph of the notification of this department, dated Feb. 8, 1871, prefatory to the Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code, by the insertion in that paragraph of the words —(1.) Lieutenant governors of provinces, before the words "(1) Members of the Council of the Governor general."

The numbers (1), (2), (3), (4), as they stand in that paragraph, should be correspondingly altered.

CIVIL SERVICE LEAVE CODE.

Supplementary to the notification No. 3,019, Aug. 22, inserted in our last, the subjoined appeared in the Gazette of India for October 11:—

The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to sanction the insertion of the following rule as No. 4 under section 31 of the Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code:—

An officer drawing allowances under this section should be appointed to the first appointment (not being a special one) suitable to his rank and qualifications, which may become substantively vacant. If its pay is less than that of the substantive appointment which the officer last held, he should be promoted as substantive vacancies occur, until his pay is equal to that of the substantive appointment which he last held. Until he regains this position he may draw, unless the local Government declares him unfit to be restored to his former rank, such personal allowance as will raise his salary to the amount which he would draw under this section, and the rules explanatory of it.

GARRISON INSTRUCTION.

Head Qrs., Simla, Sept. 30.—The first course of garrison instruction will commence about Oct. 15 next.

In consequence of the limited number of text books and instruments at present available, the number of officers attending the first course will be limited to five, instead of the number laid down in para. 16 of G. O. 152 of 1871.

Officers desirous of attending the classes will forward applications to the general officers commanding the divisions in which the centres of instruction are placed, who are requested, in communication with the garrison instructors, to make the necessary selection, and communicate the result to the applicants.

With reference to G. O. No. 152 of 1871, officers not under the rank of captain, who may consider themselves qualified for the appointment of garrison instructor, and may be desirous of filling such vacancies as may from time to time occur, are invited to forward their applications, accompanied by any certificates or qualifications or specimens of their military drawing and field sketching, that may be available, to the adjutant general, head-quarters, Simla.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

The following notification of the financial department is republished for information and for guidance in cases of persons ordinarily engaged for service in the P.W.D. who are more than twenty-five years of age:—

Fort William, Jan. 20.—No. 423.—Resolution.—The Governor-General in Council observes that the admission into the service of other than young men tends to throw upon the State an undue liability in respect of pensionary allowances.

H.E. in Council is accordingly pleased to declare that, as a general rule, no person should be admitted into the uncovenanted service of Government after he has attained the age of twenty-five years. But if, for special reasons, any one is, after this date, admitted at a later age, then, in the event of his being required to retire under the operation of any rule for the removal of officers from the service as superannuated on their attaining a particular age, the pension to which he would, but for this rule, be entitled, shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of years of pensionable service he has completed bears to thirty years —the full period required for a good service pension.

For instance, if an officer so retiring has completed twenty years' service, then his pension will be one-third of his average pay,* multiplied by 20/30; if he has completed twenty-six years then it will be half his average by* multiplied by 26/30.

EXAMINATIONS FOR BENGAL APPOINTMENTS, C.S.

Calcutta, Oct. 9.—Covenanted civilians, subject to the examination to be held on the 4th Dec. next, whether they have passed the lower standard or not, will be required to pass only in the higher standard revenue paper, being excused altogether the judicial paper. The higher revenue paper will be prepared in the same manner as heretofore, and bear the same value.

Examinees other than civilians will have to pass both in judicial and in revenue, lower and higher standard, as the case may be. These papers also will be prepared in the same manner as heretofore, and bear the same values.

In languages both classes of examinees will have to pass in the higher and lower standard, as the case may be. For each standard there will be the usual four subjects—translation into the vernacular, translation into English, dictation, and conversation. The only difference from the previous mode of examination will be that instead of there being for each of the first three subjects two papers, one for the lower and the other for the higher standard, there will be but one paper, so prepared that the first portion will be of an easy description, and the remainder of a more difficult character. Examinees coming up for the lower examination will be required to pass in the first half, which will bear a value of 50 marks, of which 25 must be obtained to pass; those for the higher standard must pass in the whole paper, which will bear a value of 100 marks, 50 of which must be obtained to pass; the award of marks in the latter case being given on a consideration of the whole paper.

* For the last five years of his service the limit of Rs. 2,000, Rs. 3,000, Rs. 4,000, or Rs. 5,000 is to be applied before, and not after this multiplication.

With the exceptions noted above, the ensuing examination will be conducted in precisely the same manner as has hitherto obtained; the further change proposed in the Government resolution in the Gazette of Aug. 17 not taking effect until the first examination of 1872.

V. H. SCHALCH, President.

THE NEW WARRANT.

An officer will only be held to be entitled to receive whatever the Purchase Commissioners may assign as the value of his commission and its over-regulation price, on his retiring from the army on the conditions which regulated the over-purchase system. Under that system the value of a commission could only be realised, if purchased; or in the case of a non-purchase, if a certain service had been given, by a sum of £50 being assigned for each year of home and £100 for each year of foreign service within a maximum of the regulation price of the commission, upon the officer's retirement or death in the field; anything else lost the amount to his estate. The Army Regulation Act is but too explicit in ruling that the same conditions shall apply to the recovery of moneys from the Purchase Commissioners. Hence officers who remain in the Service do so at the certain sacrifice of the interest of the money they might realise by retirement and at the peril of losing the capital by death.

The Act is equally explicit in ruling that "over-regulation price" of a commission in any regiment shall be the customary sum, if any, payable in the regiment in excess of the regulation prices, on the occurrence of a vacancy, according to the custom prevalent in the regiment prior to the 1st day of January, 1871. Now it is very well known that over-regulation, or rather extra-regulation-moneys, vary according to circumstances—a tour of service in an unhealthy climate is hardly calculated to send up extra-regulation prices. A spell of lounging at an English watering-place affords every pretext for a rise. An average will accordingly be taken of over-regulation rates for each rank in every regiment. Such a mode of fixing the sums to be allowed, appears equity itself in the old Royal regiments. The averages promise to be somewhat difficult of adjustment in the non-purchase regiments, drafted into the English Army List from the Indian Service; the officers of these corps are guaranteed by the Act the sums they would have received from their juniors, according to the custom of their regiment, had the retirement been effected prior to the 1st day of November, 1871.

The register of claims of officers to compensation will bear date on that day, when the commissioners will place against each officer's name the sum to which he will be entitled whenever he may retire from the service. Rumours are afloat of appeals to Parliament to invest such claims with a proprietary in lieu of a reversionary interest, and to make them payable to an officer on retirement, or in the event of his demise to his representatives. Any such concession, however, on the part of the Legislature would be in direct hostility to the Act, which carefully limits the field of the nation's liability to individuals; and we are hopeless, hard as it may appear, that either Government or Parliament will consent to any modification of this proviso. Officers will do best to look steadily at the fact that it will be only upon their retirement, and under a medical certificate that at the time of such retirement the officer is in a good state of health, and "free from any malady threatening early dissolution," as required by the Royal Warrant of December 27, 1870, that compensation will be given for their commissions, and that, in the event of such dissolution before retirement, the money will be lost to their estates.—Home News.

Miscellaneous.

Ecclesiastical Appointment.—The Rev. John Mills Walker, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge, Curate of Holy Trinity, Marylebone, has been appointed a chaplain on her Majesty's Madras Establishment, on the nomination of her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

Suicide of an Indian Officer.—There has been a shocking suicide at Exeter. The deceased, Lieut.-Colonel Stirling, who formerly served in India, was seventy-seven years of age. For some time past he has been in a strange and depressed state, induced by family troubles, and a month or two ago was closely watched, having been found one day on his knees with a razor placed against his throat. On Nov. 2 he seems to have possessed himself of a small pistol, the barrel of which he placed in his mouth and then fired it. One side of his face was greatly shattered by the bullet, and death was almost instantaneous. At the inquest the jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased committed suicide while labouring under temporary insanity.

The Army Service Corps.—One of the unanticipated results of the abolition of purchase has been the return of several officers to the Army who had entered the Army Service Corps on probation, in consequence of the little prospect they saw of promotion under the old system. The removal of this bar to their advancement, and, conversely, the poor career before them in the Control, has induced them to re-enter the Line, and so far the fears of those who imagined the Army would lose its best men under the new regulations, have been singularly falsified. The Army Service Corps, however, has thus been deprived of some of its most valuable officers, and unless something be done to render that branch of the service more attractive, its efficiency must be seriously compromised. Even before these defections took place the department was undermanned, and we do not hear that there is any substantial ground for the rumour of an intention to increase the number of officers. The measure, however, will certainly become indispensable, if the vote be taken for the repetition of the autumn manœuvres in 1872. It may be worth consideration whether the Service Corps should be handed over to the direct control of his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, to be officered by him with due regard to the interests of the special service and the desire of officers to serve therein. We may have something to say on this point hereafter.—Broad Arrow.

The Royal Engineers' Mess Plate.—Before the recent siege operations at Chatham, the officers of the Royal Engineers, with their Colonel in command, Field Marshal His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, lunched at their mess-table in Brompton Barracks. On this occasion General Sir John Cheape, in the name of the Engineer officers formerly in the Hon. East India Company's Engineer service, presented to the Engineer's mess, a piece of plate intended as a token of the union of the two corps, amalgamated in 1862, and as a pledge of brotherly good will. It is a tazza upon a silver base, the entire work, except the figures, being embossed. Upon the foot of the tazza are representative figures of England and India, having between them shields containing the arms of the Royal Engineers, and of the East India Company's Engineers. The body of the tazza is enriched by a frieze, which represents figures of Victory wreathing laurel around medallion portraits of distinguished Engineers—namely: Burgoyne, Napier, Cheape, Jones, Pasley, Waddington, Caldwell, and Fletcher. It is surmounted by a figure of Victory. The ornamentation is Indian, elaborately wrought, the surface being entirely covered. The base is of embossed silver, with Indian ornament, and contains reliefs of "The Breach at the Cashmere Gate, Delhi," and "Seringapatam," and panels with the inscription and a list of the most celebrated sieges and military operations in which the corps of Indian Engineers has taken part. This plate has been manufactured by Messrs. Hancock and Co., Brutonstreet. It was designed by Mr. H. H. Armstead, sculptor.—Illustrated London News.

Gun-cotton and Lithofracteur.—Although the quantities of gun-cotton experimented upon have in some cases been considerable—as, for example, in the case of the gun-cotton which has been stored experimentally for several years in sheds built for the purpose in Woolwich Arsenal, to which reference was made at the inquest—still it certainly appeared desirable that we should have some positive data with regard to the behaviour and stability of some tons of pure gun-cotton. The material has been adopted for use in naval and military operations, and its valuable properties are too well known for our engineers to lightly abandon it. It therefore became necessary for the question of the safety of gun-cotton—safety in manufacture, in storage, and in transport—to be once again and exhaustively investigated. We are glad to be informed that a mixed committee has been appointed to conduct this inquiry, and to make the necessary experiments. The committee will also, we understand, be required to collect evidence with regard to the value of gun-cotton as an explosive agent, and generally to pronounce as to the suitability and safety of the material for use in torpedoes, breaching stockades, mining, &c. The committee consists of Colonel Younghusband, R.A., president; Colonel Milward, R.A.; Colonel Gallwey, R.E.; Lieutenant-Colonel Nugent, R.E.; Captain Field, R.N.; with the following civilian members:—Dr. Odling, F.R.S.; Mr. H. Bauerman, School of Mines; Mr. G. Bidder, C.E. The question of the safety of the new explosive, "Lithofracteur," which a German firm are anxious to be permitted to make in this country, has also been referred to this committee.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Epidemic of Dengue at Aden.—The garrison at Aden has been visited by an epidemic of dengue—a disease vulgarly known as the break-bone fever. It would seem that the earliest attacks occurred by the end of June, but the nature of the disease was not at first determined. It spread with much rapidity, and was believed to be very contagious. More than seven hundred cases occurred, out of a strength of upwards of nine hundred individuals belonging to the Rifle Brigade and Royal Artillery, forming the garrison of Aden. The disease attacked officers, men, women, and children alike, but it did not prove fatal to any. It is believed that the disease was imported from Zanziba", at which place, and along the neighbouring coast, it had been prevailing for some time previously. Its introduction into Aden is attributed to the free communication that existed between that station and the infected localities by means of native trading vessels. Dengue somewhat resembles rheumatic fever, or that variety of scarlet fever, attended with marked arthritic symptoms, sometimes witnessed in this country. Its invasion is sudden, associated with fever and rheumatic pains, and followed by an exanthem, which seems to vary much in its character, being sometimes a diffused redness like that of scarlatina, sometimes papular, and occasionally even vesicular. After a remission of the symptons, a relapse often occurs about seven days from the date of the first attack. Pains in the joints and muscles are often complained of for some time after apparent convalescence. Those pains partake very much of the neuralgic character; they are attended with the pricking, burning sensations of a disordered innervation.—Lancet.

BRINDISI via MONT CENIS.—Passengers for India, China, and Australia, via Paris and the Mont Cenis Tunnel, leaving London on Saturday morning, will now find no difficulty in overtaking the mails which are still despatched by the tedious route over the Brenner Pass. The train starts from Charing-cross at 7.40 A.M. and reaches Paris, via Dover and Calais, at 6 P.M., leaves Paris at 8.40 P.M. via Dijon and Macon, and is due at Culoz at 8.50 A.M. on Sunday morning, from thence at 9.55 A.M. arriving at St. Michel at 2.27 P.M., starting again at 3.15 via the Mont Cenis Tunnel for Susa, which is reached at 8.40 P.M. A special international weekly train leaves Susa on Sunday night at 10 P.M. for Bologna, stopping for an hour and twenty minutes at Turin, and arriving finally at Bologna at 7.6 A.M., where the mail which left London on the previous Friday is overtaken, and passengers by both routes are sent on with the mail starting from Bologna generally about noon, or as soon after as possible; they are due at Brindisi on Tuesday, at 3.15 A.M., where the Peninsular and Oriental steamer awaits their arrival. Full particulars as to the time allowed for refreshment at the intermediate stations will be found in Bradshaw's Continental Guide, pages 54, 221, 222, 236, 655, and 671. Through tickets to Turin, via Dover and Calais, can be had at Messrs. Grindlay and Co., 55, Parliament street, London, for £7. 2s. each, first class; from Turin to Bologna the fare is 36 lire 95c., or 15c. under £1. 10s.; and from Bologna to Brindisi it is 83 lire 60c., or 3 lire 90c. under £3. 10s. These fares can be paid in sovereigns. Passports should have the French vise.—Home News.

About 1,000 bales of cotton and 200 bundles of coir have been landed from the vessel, the greater part badly damaged. A quantity of loose cotton (on fire) was thrown overboard by order of surveyors; of this about one and a-half to two tons has since been picked up by boatmen, and sold by auction for £23. The master (Thomson) intends having the vessel temporarily repaired, without discharging more cargo, as recommended by surveyors.

OFFICERS' PAY.

The Broad Arrow holds that it is all very well to say that there would be no difficulty in finding men ready to serve in the Army were the pay even less than it is at present—and even this we are inclined to doubt—but this is not the fair and honest way of looking at the question. The question is—does the present rate of pay in the Army bear anything like a favourable comparison with that earned in other professions? Does it allow a poor man who is really in earnest in his desire to master his profession—and who gives up the best of his life to that profession—and this is the stamp of man the country clamours for—does it allow him to devote all his energies to his duties without having to take too much thought for the morrow—what he shall eat—what he shall drink, and, more especially, what he shall put on? Is it up to the market value of the times, considering the climates the recipient has to serve in and the risks he has to run—or does it give him any reasonable hope that after many years he can possibly manage to lay by enough to support his family (supposing him to be married) in decent circumstances—or that, in the event of his death, that family would not be dependent on charity for the bare necessaries of life? To each and all of these questions we can safely give an answer in the negative, and we are not without hope that some supplementary Army Regulations will ere long appear which will introduce reform in this important particular. Articles on this subject have been of late going the round of the daily papers, deploring the inadequacy of the pay of the British officer, and suggesting multitudinous plans for improving his pecuniary position. One of the most sensible of these articles appeared in the Standard a few weeks ago, in which, after enumerating many sensible plans for lessening the expenses, the writer winds up by declaring that £300 a-year for a captain, £400 for a major, and £500 for a colonel would be a fair remuneration for services rendered. And we do not think the remuneration could in any fairness be fixed at a lower price. "Slightly raise the pay and reduce the expenses," says the Standard, and we echo the words of our contemporary.

TRANSFER TO HOME REGIMENTS.—Under the authority of the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, it is notified that when an officer of H.M.'s British service employed in a staff appointment is removed from the Indian establishment by transfer to a regiment out of India, or is removed or promoted to the half-pay or unattached list, he will be allowed, until he can be relieved of his office, the same aggregate rate of pay as he may have been receiving prior to such removal or promotion; such aggregate pay will include any British pay of the higher rank to which the officer may be promoted. It must, however, be distinctly understood that in all such cases an officer must be relieved within one month of the date on which notice of his removal or promotion is announced.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

THE OPTOSCOPE.

The practical utility of the OPTOSCOPE is now fully determined. In numerous cases has its merits been displayed in a manner so satisfactory, that in no instance has it afforded less satisfaction to the intelligent inquirer than to the inventor himself. It has long been a matter of considerable importance to those suffering from defective vision to learn the exact state of the refractive humours of the eye, and the proper convexity or concavity of the glasses required to render the vision as perfect as the state of the organs will admit of.

Mr. BEAUMONT'S OPTOSCOPE

is all that can be desired for this purpose, and those desirous of benefiting by his discovery may be suited with the most perfect-fitting glasses at moderate cost.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Oct. 28; Agra and Madras, Oct. 26; Calcutta, Oct. 25.

During the fortnight's holidays devoted by Hindus to the worship of the Goddess Dúrga, the news from India is seldom varied or exciting. The cold season which had already visited Upper India was beginning to show itself in Bombay, where a passing excitement had been caused among the natives by the departure home of Mr. A. J. Forbes, spokesman of the party which has lately taken up the question of Municipal Reform. His progress from his own office, where he had to exchange farewell words with a large number of native gentlemen, to the Apollo Bunder whence he had to embark, was a regular triumph. Crowds of cheering natives followed his open carriage, and, but for his determined resistance, would have drawn it part of the way themselves. Nosegays and rose-leaves were showered into the boat which carried him off to the steamer. His departure was a pleasing interlude in the controversy which has lately been dividing Bombay, as to the manner in which Mr. Crawford, the Municipal Commissioner, had discharged his duties. His last measure, the payment of the police in defiance of the order of the Bombay justices, has led a number of indignant citizens, European and native, to demand a general meeting for the 13th December, in order that the Commissioner and those who acted with him may be brought to book.

THE search after evidence bearing on the guilt of Liakat Ali, the captured rebel once known as the "Maulvi of Allahabad," has led to the arrest of a Maulvi at Ghazipore, who is known to have corresponded with Liakat Ali. With regard to Abdullah, Mr. Norman's murderer, we are told that the Government has received news which leaves no doubt of his identity. If that is all however, the Government is not much wiser than it was before, touching the real motive to the crime for which he has already paid the penalty.

TWO fatal accidents to officers are reported by the last mail. Dr. Metcalfe, the civil surgeon in medical charge of Karnal, was killed at Landour by a fall from his horse; his funeral took place on the 15th October. The other death is that of Captain Lillingston, Deputy Conservator of Forests, whose horse fell with him over a precipice a thousand feet deep at the new hill-station of Chakráta. The deceased officer, formerly of the 11th Hussars, and afterwards A.D.C. and private Secretary to Sir W. Muir, had taken his M.A. degree at Oxford, and enjoyed in India the repute of an accomplished linguist.

BENGAL is fortunate in having a Commander-in-Chief who refuses to follow the fashion of continually shifting officers from one post or regiment to another. If he finds an officer in a native regiment fit for promotion to a vacancy in the same regiment, Lord Napier will not promote an outsider over his head. On this principle he appears to have given the command of the 11th Lancers, formerly Probyn's Horse, to Captain Dick, and the command of the 13th Cavalry to Captain Lowe. Some old colonels are said to be naturally disappointed thereat; but the regiments in question will no doubt gain considerably by their misfortune.

LORD NAPIER seems to have resolved that the work cut out for the Delhi Camp of Exercise shall be done thoroughly. Everyone who is to take part in the coming manœuvres will have time to learn his lesson properly before the final examination. For the first three weeks, we are told, there is to be no sham battle. During that time the troops will be engaged in brigade and division movements, so that no part of the machinery should be found suddenly unequal to the strain of a mimic warfare. The Commissariat, under so practised an officer as Colonel Dickens, may be trusted to come out of the ordeal as brilliantly as it has always come in India out of a real campaign. Several regiments have already got their orders to reach the grand camp in the first days of December. Lord Napier himself is not expected to join it during the first fortnight. Every regiment told off for the camp is to take with it the tools which were lately issued for shelter trench drill. The only two division commanders yet appointed are Generals McMurdo and Travers. With regard to the artillery division, everything will be done to render it as fit as possible to take the field. Among the artillery officers named as likely to take a leading part in the manœuvres are Colonels Huyshe, Johnson, Atlay, and Bruce—of whom the first-named will probably serve as Umpire, while Col. Johnson will command the artillery in camp.

IN the province of Khandeish famine appears to be gaining ground fast. The crops are failing everywhere, and the soucars or money-lenders will make no further advances to the impoverished peasantry. The poorer classes of Bheels and Mahars can no longer make a precarious livelihood by the sale of grass and wood. Cholera has also broken out in one district with fatal severity, killing eleven out of fifteen attacked. In view of the growing distress relief-works have been organised; among others one for the making of a road from Dhoolia to Surat; and to this crowds are already flocking. Except in the South Mahratta country and the neighbourhood of Broach, the cotton crops in Western India are reported to be suffering from drought. Cholera has also broken out in West Berar, where rain was urgently needed for the autumn sowings. On the model farm set up there by Government the advantage of deep ploughing has been made all the clearer by the prevalent drought; "the roots of the plants"—writes Mr. Dunlop—"having penetrated deeper into the soil, consequently getting more moisture than those near the surface."

BENEVOLENT people at home with a little money to spare might find just now in India as fit an outlet for their charity as in Chicago. Our readers have already heard something of the floods which have ravaged several districts in Oudh and the North West Provinces. From an appeal since made to the Indian public by Mr. Mayne, Commissioner of Allahabad, and three other civil officers, we learn that every house in Jaunpore on the southern, and half the houses on the northern side of the Goomty have been destroyed; some 17,000 people being thereby rendered homeless. Half the little town of Zaffirabad, which contained 3,000 people, mostly Mohammedans doing a good trade in paper-making, has been buried in the waters. In Jalalpore, on the Sai, not a stick of the bazaar is left standing. Azimghur, as large as Jaunpore, was partly saved by means of earthworks thrown up by the residents at the advice of the district officers; but all its suburbs and approaches were utterly destroyed. Along the whole course of the Tonse the poor villagers have suffered similar losses, and the full amount of havoc caused to towns and villages by the rising of the Sai and the Goomty "has yet to be learned." For losses so unprecedented "measures of relief on a large scale are absolutely required." Government is ready to administer what help it can, but a great deal of the suffering it cannot touch. "Houses must be rebuilt, homes refurnished, the little stores of the sufferers replenished; medicines must be supplied to the sick, food to the starving." Relief committees have therefore been started at Jaunpore and Azimgurh, and money has already begun to flow into their hands; Sir W. Muir subscribing Rs. 500, the Rajahs of Benares and Vizianagram Rs. 2,000 each for Jaunpore, and Rs. 1,000 each for Azimgurh. Will any kind-hearted Englishmen in this country open their purses in aid of the movement thus set on foot by native noblemen and English officials living near the scene of so cruel a disaster?

THE amendment now introduced into the European Vagrancy Act deals with the case—by no means infrequent—of men who have been tempted over to India from Australia in charge of horses, only to find themselves cast adrift, without means of securing a return passage, in a strange country where the demand for European labour too often falls short of the supply. The amended Act therefore provides that, "when any person of European extraction lands in India, being or having been during his passage to India in charge of, or in attendance upon any animal, and becomes chargeable to the State as a vagrant within one year after his arrival in India, then the consignee of such animal, or the agents in India for the sale of such animal, or if such consignee or agent cannot be found, the agent to whom the ship in which such animal arrived in India was consigned, shall be liable to pay to the Government the cost of such person's removal under this Act, and all other charges incurred by the State in consequence of his becoming a vagrant." The consignee or agent, in his turn, is entitled to recoup himself from the consignor or principal for any outlay incurred by him under the Act; a provision which ought to make the shippers of Australian horses for India more careful as to the terms on which they engage men to look after the horses. Whether the new clauses will tend to check the growing trade in Australian horses we cannot tell; but if the standpoint taken in this matter by the Government be, as we may assume, the right one, it is only meet that trade-interests should give way to the general good. The new clauses come into force next New Year's Day.

OUR contemporary of the lively fancy and the glowing style —we mean of course the Spectator—appears to have indulged the one and cultivated the other at the expense sometimes of accuracy and good taste. Some two months ago that journal quoted the "Scotch convert, Beharee Lal Dey" as having said in the Town-hall of Calcutta "that the bitterest drop in his cup was that God had compelled him to accept the news of salvation from the mouth of the white man." This tersely worded sentence having met the eyes of the said Behari Lal in Calcutta, that gentleman writes to the Englishman "distinctly and absolutely to deny" that he "ever made such a statement in the Town-hall of Calcutta, or in any place under the sun." He also challenges the Editor of the Spectator to show cause for putting into his mouth "a proposition so monstrous and revolting." Curiously enough a similar charge made by the Friend of India in 1858 had been repelled at the time with emphatic earnestness by the same Behari Lal Dey. He was accused of an intense anti-European spirit, of finding the gift of eternal life "distasteful" to the Hindu "when it comes through a European," because in his address he owned to having "sometimes thought it a circumstance prejudicial to the interests of Christianity in this country, that our missionaries—at least most of them—should belong to the very nation that has conquered us." It is easy to see that the Hindu preacher meant something very different from the meaning so placed upon his words; for he went on to "thank God" for having sent the English to India, and to declare himself "to all intents and purposes an Englishman." At the same time he insisted with much truth that missionaries from a conquering nation had a harder task than German missionaries, for example, in recommending their religion to men of the conquered race. We should like to think, for the sake of the Spectator, that the accusation so strongly renewed in 1871 came from another pen than that which first brought it forward thirteen years ago; although Behari Lal assumes that the present editor of that journal was then the editor of the Friend of India.

INDIA, it seems, is again to be saddled with the burden of paying other people's expenses. After a good deal of correspondence between all the authorities concerned, the Viceroy in Council has "reluctantly resolved" to order an additional postage at the rate of a penny on each half-ounce letter which passes to or from India through Great Britain." It was in vain that the India Office protested against the gross injustice of making India pay £12,269 for the mail service between Ceylon and Calcutta, and the yet greater injustice of depriving India of her share in the "excess postage collected as well in British India as in Great Britain upon the mails despatched by the French packets." The branch line between Galle and Calcutta is of hardly any use to India. It merely forms a casual link in the entire service, and its cost ought in common decency to be distributed among all the countries interested in that service. My Lords of the Treasury however "are not prepared to alter or disturb the present arrangement," and so the Indian Government which unfairly loses £30,000 a-year in all under the present system has to recoup itself by raising the postage on English letters from a shilling to thirteen pence.

A MEMORIAL, which is now being largely subscribed by officers of the Indian Army, points to a grievance which certainly calls for redress at the hands of the home authorities. Its substance is to the following effect. The pensions of £191 after twenty, and of £292 after twenty-four years' service in India, are declared to be "totally inadequate in the present day to maintain a military officer in the society to which he belongs." They place him at a serious disadvantage in comparison with those of other services officered from the same class of society. He cannot after so long an Indian service hope to better himself by taking up new employment at home. Hence many an officer prefers holding on to the service at a real loss to the State, until he can retire upon his "off-reckonings;" but if ill-health or any other cause should intervene, he must submit to see himself "consigned to a state of semi-pauperism and penury." The existing rates of pension were first laid down in 1766, when money went much further than it does now. At that time a pension of £191 a-year was equivalent to one of £400 in the present day. From 1837 until now no real revision of the old rates has ever been granted, for the Despatch of 1866 merely added two pensions of £600 and £750 for officers who had served thirty-five and thirty-eight years; and no officer would retire on £600 a-year, if by waiting three years longer he could secure his retiring allowance as colonel. It is evident that the [illegible] must lose in many ways by an arrangement which compels many old officers to cling to their high salaries in India rather than fall back betimes on the pittance they would receive in England. The hardship of the present rules is heightened not only by comparison with the improvements made and still making in the pension rules of the Covenanted Civil Service and other branches of her Majesty's Service in India, but also by the fact that an old officer can no longer eke out his retiring pension by means of a bonus obtained from his regimental juniors. Here then is a case which fairly addresses itself to the just consideration of India's rulers in this country. The Indian bonus system was sanctioned by the old East India Company as a means of quickening promotion by inducing officers to retire on something better than £191 a-year. Now that the bonus system has been done away, what else than sheer necessity will ever induce an officer to make room for younger men by accepting a pension miserably inadequate to his past experiences and the wants of his declining years? Either the bonus system ought to be retained, or else the present rates of pension for retired and invalid officers need much revising.

In a long letter to the Times, Sir C. Trevelyan tries to handle the question of Indian Mohammedanism from a new point of view. The Mohammedans, he infers, cannot specially dislike us, because it was not we but the Sikhs and Mahrattas who first wrested the sceptre out of their hands. It appears then that we never fought for empire against Hyder Ali and his son Tippoo, nor could we have had any part in banishing the last of the Mogul Emperors to Rangoon. Sir Charles also boldly denies that the Mohammedans are "either incapable of profiting by" the present system of State instruction, "or are, as a class, seriously opposed to it." Will he be good enough, then, to tell us what it is of which so many Indian Mohammedans do complain?

Mr. Elliot Macnaghten has resigned his seat in the Council of India. In him that country has lost an able and energetic supporter of its best interests; one well knowing what those interests really were, and how they were to be advanced. In every discussion he was always on the side of broad principles, and never lent his support to the belief that England could really be served by any measure that tended to repress or injure India. Mr. Macnaghten went to India as a very young man, and was attached to the Supreme Court during the whole of his residence in that country. He returned to England before he reached middle life, and very shortly obtained a seat in the Court of Directors. There he soon distinguished himself by his strong common sense and acuteness of perception. What he saw, he saw clearly, and adhered with remarkable pertinacity to what he felt to be true and right. As chairman of the late Court of Directors he held his own with a happy combination of firmness and moderation, never swerving from the plain course of duty to win support, and never giving needless offence by any harshness of manner. He passed into the Council of India with the same high character that he had obtained in the Court of Directors. His kindness of heart won him the regard of all, and the affection of those most intimately acquainted with his many excellences. He has now retired with the esteem and respect of all his colleagues, and of all the officers of the department with whom he was associated in business; and many a successor will join the ranks of the former before it will be their good fortune to welcome one more sagacious, more far-seeing, and of greater independence of character than distinguished Elliot Macnaghten.

By an unlucky slip of the pen Mr. Phillimore, who retires from the Revenue Department of the India Office, was also named in our last number as the new Assistant Secretary in the Public Works Department. The name which we meant to insert was that of Mr. H. Waterfield.

We note that any Indian officer who wishes to join a Committee now forming in London, to watch over the interests of his service as guaranteed by Government under the "Henley Clause," is invited to communicate with "Justitia," to the address of Messrs. King and Co., 45, Pall Mall.

The next overland mail from India viâ Brindisi is due on Saturday next.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, November 21, 1871.

HARCOURT'S "KULU, LAHOUL, AND SPITI."—II.

The present representative of the old kings of Kulu is Rae Dhuleep Singh, who owns a jagheer barely worth £7,000 a-year. The last acknowledged prince of his race was Jeet Singh, who was dethroned by the Sikhs in 1840. His ancestors assumed to trace their origin back to Paras-Rám, whose wondrous deeds are duly recorded in the oldest of Indian epics, the Rámáyan. If that very mythical hero ever lived, his dynasty must have been founded about fifteen centuries before Christ. After seventy-seven chiefs called "Pals" had reigned over Kulu, the next ruler—in the middle of the fourteenth century of our era—took the title of Rajah. Fourteen Rajahs reigned successively in his stead over a country which seems to have been called Kulu because it was reported to be Kulaul-Pith, "the end of the inhabited world." The seventy-seven Pals must have reigned about forty years each to fill up the wide gap between Paras-Rám and the first Rajah of Kulu; but chronology was never a strong point among the Hindus, and it is quite enough to the purpose to know that the kings of Kulu claimed a long line of respectable ancestors. Like many other kingdoms, Kulu gradually increased in size from a little State lying between Sultanpore and the Rohtang Pass, to an area of 10,000 square miles which included Lahoul, Spiti, and Bara Banghal. With Jeet Singh's defeat and death in 1840 ended the long line of independent Sovereigns, and their kingdom was broken up into a number of small estates.

The people of Kulu, who appear to be mostly Hindus, consist mainly of Kaneits and Daghees, with a sprinkling of Brahmans, who generally cultivate their own lands, and a few Rajpoots. The Kaneits are the largest landowners, while the Daghees or Kolees follow various trades, and are regarded by the Kaneits as a lower caste. In Lahoul, which was once a province of the petty Buddhist kingdom of Gugé before it fell under the sway of Kulu Rajahs, the Daghee class greatly preponderates, and the bulk of the people are of pure Tibetan race. Their whole number in 1868 did not exceed 6,265 souls, whereas Kulu altogether could boast of about 90,000. Lahoul was annexed to Kulu in the beginning of the eighteenth century by Rajah Boodhee Singh. From the traces of old tombs found in Lahoul it is inferred that the country was once invaded by Mohammedans, whom local tradition describes as coming from beyond Yarkand. During the last century a good many emigrants from Bara Banghal, Chamba, and Ladakh appear to have settled in Lahoul. Unlike the people of Kulu proper, the Lahoulees are by no means a comely race; the women especially showing their Tartar origin in their short figures, oblique eyes, flat faces, and large mouths.

In Spiti the people, who number only 2,272, betray still more clearly their Mongolian type of face and figure. "In positive hideousness of countenance"—says Captain Harcourt—they are "perhaps pre-eminent in the British empire"—that is, according to Aryan ideas of beauty. There is certainly a wide contrast between the classic shapeliness of the pure Hindu and the broad flat features and small slanting eyes of the average Mongol, and the slender symmetry of the Hindu figure would take the eye of a sculptor far more pleasantly than the short thick-set form of his Mongol neighbour. Good looks however and even greater intelligence may sometimes be outweighed by moral drawbacks; and with regard to the people of Spiti, their looks, according to Captain Harcourt, are the worst thing about them.

There is no trustworthy notice of Spiti earlier than the middle of the eleventh century A.D., when it seems to have been governed from Tibet. Two centuries later Spiti, like Tibet, probably fell under the sway of the great Kublai Khan, with whose deeds Colonel Yule's edition of Marco Polo has made us all familiar. After the fall of the Tartar Empire, Spiti acknowledged the supremacy of Chinese Tibet, until in the seventeenth century it passed under the rule of Ladakh. After more than one change of masters in the next hundred years, it came at length to pay tribute to the Rajah of Kulu. In 1846, after the first Sikh war, Spiti was made over by its then master, the Rajah of Kashmere, to his British friends, by whom it was farmed out to the Wazir of Bussahir, for three years before it finally passed under the care of the Assistant Commissioner of Kulu. The people of Spiti have no regular system of caste, for they will all eat and drink together; but the Kaneits, who are pure Tibetans, will not intermarry with the Lohars, or smiths, of whom there are only 100 in the country; nor these last with the Bedas, about forty-six in all, who answer to the Hensees, or musicians, of Lahoul. The language of the people is pure Tibetan. In Lahoul, on the contrary, four different dialects are spoken, three of which have a Tibetan basis, while the fourth consists of a Hindi framework, filled in with Tibetan and local terms. In Kulu the common language is made up of Sanskrit and Urdu, with a sprinkling of Tibetan and a larger admixture of the Hill patois. At one village, Malauna, the people have a dialect known only to themselves, which contains a large admixture of Tibetan; a fact the more curious because Malauna lies far away from any Tibetan district, and Tibetan is an unknown tongue in any of the surrounding villages.

The climate of Kulu is described as very equable and agreeable. The disappearance of the winter snows in March ushers in a pleasant spring, and the heat never becomes oppressive till the end of June. In the upper Beas Valley the next two months are far from disagreeable, and September is generally "as enjoyable as it can be anywhere out of England." In the southern districts the heat in summer is of course greater, and the sun's rays more powerful. Seoraj, the southernmost district, is also the most exposed to the monsoon rains, which elsewhere fall in drizzling showers with bright weather between them. In Lahoul spring begins about the middle of April, and still later in Spiti. Neither of these provinces has much rain, and in both the climate is generally colder than in Kulu, the general level of Lahoul being 10,000 feet and of Spiti 12,000 feet above the sea, while the main level of Kulu is about half the former height.

In most parts of the last-named province the soil yields two crops a-year. Rice, opium, tobacco, and several kinds of grain grow freely, and many kinds of vegetables known in Europe can be raised with ease, some of which with European culture will rival the produce of our own markets. Some of the fruits, such as walnuts, apricots, plums, and quinces, are pleasing to the taste; and strawberries of a very rich flavour have been reared in the Upper Beas Valley. It is only indeed for want of careful gardening that so much inferior fruit abounds in a country where "almost every article fit for human food grows to perfection." During June and July the Kulu women may be seen up to their knees in mud and water, busied in transplanting the young rice-shoots. Towards evening these sturdy labourers wax playful, throw water over each other, and sometimes play the same trick upon some unwary bystander. Much of the rice crop gets converted into a spirituous drink called loogree. The rice-fields are irrigated every third or fourth day for about three weeks. The poppy is sown in November and December, reaching its perfect stage some time in May. We are sorry to hear that the Kulu zemindars deal largely in adulterated opium. Tobacco-sowing begins in May, and the work of transplanting in June or July. The leaf as made up for use sells at twelve to sixteen pound for the rupee. It is not considered first-rate, but that is probably due to imperfect curing. Very good tea is also grown in Kulu, and sold to Indian messes or private customers for two rupees a pound.

The main crops of Lahoul are barley and buckwheat. There are no cultivated vegetables and but few fruits. In Lahoul and Spiti the soil yields only one crop a-year. In Spiti it produces peas, mustard, two kinds of barley, and "a very fine hexagonal wheat," but no fruit nor any vegetable worth naming. Unlike its western neighbour, Spiti is remarkably bare of trees. In Lahoul and Spiti ploughing is done and milk supplied by a hybrid between a cow and a yák. Bears, leopards, hyænas, deer, wild cats, flying squirrels, jackals, foxes, and martens may be found in Kulu, besides plenty of pheasants, partridges, and many other game-birds. In Spiti on the other hand game-birds are very scarce.

Captain Harcourt devotes an interesting chapter to the religious usages of the three little states which make up the official Kulu. The Buddhism which in Kulu itself has long been displaced by some form of Brahmanism, still prevails in the non-Hindu districts of Spiti and Lahoul, where every pious Buddhist has his praying-wheel, like that which may now be seen at the Crystal Palace. On the amusements, character, and domestic life of the people, including the custom of polyandry in Kulu and Lahoul, and an account of the curiously isolated village of Malauna, the reader will find much to amuse or interest him. In other chapters he will learn all that is worth knowing about the trade and industry of the country, its mineral resources, and its geological features.

OCTROI DUTIES.—II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—When the British Government annexed Oudh, an attempt was made to imitate the Punjab octroi system, but it was found to be impossible to collect an octroi tax in towns and villages, which had no walls, and the houses belonging to which were scattered and separated by gardens and waste places. In Lucknow the octroi line was from the first many miles in circumference, but when the extensive cantonments also were included, it comprehended a very large area. North of the octroi post on the Sultanpoor road the nearest post was at a great distance, and there was no patrolling between the two; in a single night enormous quantities of Manchester cloths could have been smuggled through.

All of the injurious effects on agriculture, manufactures and trade, so lucidly described in Sir Charles Trevelyan's masterly report, were again repeated; H.M.'s Indian subjects, high and low, rich and poor, were demoralised by the enormous profits resulting from smuggling, and by the necessity of bribing the octroi collectors; and in addition, two other evils sprang into existence without a parallel, I believe, in the fiscal history of civilised nations.

1st. The farmers of the octroi tax were authorised to collect duties at each citizen's door, instead of at gateways, or at barriers across roads leading into the town or village.

2nd. The farmers of the octroi tax were permitted to put a stamp on the cloths which had paid octroi in order to cause them to be distinguished from other cloths which had been smuggled.

1st. What would be said if the Government of this country were to authorise the Lord Mayor of London to raise money for municipal purposes by selling by auction the right of levying from every retail shopkeeper in London a percentage on the value of all goods sold by such shopkeepers? Such an inquisitorial imposition necessarily involves an examination of trade accounts much more vexatious than Income-tax collectors have ever required.

It having been found impossible to collect the octroi, a tax on retail sales by shopkeepers was substituted, but after many trials the latter could not be successfully realised, and hence originated the extraordiuary system of compounding, so highly eulogised by certain officials. The shopkeeper to escape robbery consented to give a certain sum to the speculating contractor, who at auction had purchased a year's license to tax, and the contractor limited his demand for fear that the shop might be shut up altogether.

2nd. The annual contractor of octroi duties could enormously increase his income by means of a large seal and a good stock of ink. I have seen a piece of gauze silk rendered comparatively valueless by the ink seal stamped in the middle, the ink of which had penetrated through four or five folds of the silk. The owner had paid all the octroi which could be exacted from him, but had probably refused to give extra fees to the servants. I detected the octroi stamp on the back of my wife's cloak. She had had it made up by her dirzie or tailor, but the shopkeeper who had sold the cloth must have satisfied the octroi extortioners, for the stain was very faint.

It has been found impossible to prevent the octroi from degenerating into a transit duty; Manchester cloths were the goods which appear to have suffered most from this; after the importer has paid customs duties on them, octroi has been levied in various towns through which they have been passed.

The abuses practised in the collection of octroi duties became so notorious that on the 14th of September, 1864, H. E. the Viceroy re-published Sir Charles Trevelyan's report of 1833 for the information of all civil officers in India, and on the 14th of November, 1868 (shortly before resigning the Viceroyalty), he published a resolution in which he emphatically condemned the octroi system, and called attention to many of the evils by which it injured trade and demoralised the people.

I counsel the editor of the Indian Economist to study carefully this resolution.—Your obedient servant, T.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Allow me to correct an error in your issue of the 14th November, page 1093, where Myan-oung is represented as being a district of Bengal, when it is a district of British Burmah. Might I also be allowed to suggest that a separate space be allotted to British Burmah, as the administration is under the Imperial Government, and in no way connected with Bengal. The remarks on the Loosways or Looshays, in page 1094, are very true, and all of us who have had anything to do with the Hill Tribes are anxiously looking forward to the result of the present expedition; and having had some experience in the management of the Arakan Tribes, I am firmly of opinion that none of these tribes can be kept quiet by soft measures. The great mistake has been in allowing the matter to go on so long, and also in allowing free trade in old arms, sulphur, &c.; nitre they make in small quantities from manure. It is much to be feared that an armed expedition will have but little permanent effect, and that the climate will not admit of an agency being established in their midst. The most effectual way, however, of bringing them to reason would be prevention of all trade, save with Government storekeepers appointed for the purpose, and then only on condition of good conduct.—Yours faithfully,

AN UNCOVENANTED SERVICE CLUB.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Would you kindly allow me a small space in your columns for the purpose of suggesting the advisability of establishing an "Uncovenanted Civil Service Club?" Until this is established it will be impossible for the members of the Uncovenanted Service to pull together so as to bring their grievances in a proper form before Government. The number of Uncovenanted Civilians is now very large, and there are many who, I am quite sure, will only be too glad to become members. As, however, the number at home might not be sufficient to keep up a Club, it would be advisable to admit others, but still the primary object of the Club must not be lost sight of. Trusting that this letter may attract attention to the subject, and cause some more influential than myself to make a move in the matter, I enclose my card and remain yours faithfully,

THE NEED OF A CIVIL SERVICE COLLEGE.

The Englishman holds that in no point does the present hap hazard education of the young Civilians more conspicuously fail than in the training needed to give them an acquaintance with the history and character of the people with whom they will have to deal. In former times the class of youth from which the Service was recruited lived in a society penetrated with Indian ideas, with Indian sympathies, and with Indian traditions. We question very much whether any amount of reading, at least of such Indian histories has hitherto exist, could do as much for a boy in this respect as merely growing up in an Indian family. But it is certain that well directed studies in Indian history and in Indian literature would bring into play a new and most desirable set of aspirations and of interests among a body of youths selected for an Indian career. There is a constantly growing danger that increased communication with England will go on widening the interval between the governing body and the people. In common with most other Indian journalists, we regard this as unquestionably one of the greatest dangers which threaten the stability of our power. No one can shut his eyes to the fact that the breach is year by year growing wider and wider, and that the governing race is becoming less and less in accord with the people. Such a breach is the more to be deplored, as with the existing causes at work, it seems altogether inevitable. In the first place, we have ceased to draw the administrative body from the class which had an almost hereditary interest in the country, the class whose most youthful aspirations all pointed to it, and for whom India was the natural career. In the second place, there is no influence brought to bear upon the youth selected for the service, such as Haileybury exercised in former days. In the third place, even after the civilians have come out to India, the greater facilities for going home prevent them from permanently and definitely settling down to their career. We do not blame them for this. It is an inevitable result of our increased communication with England, and one which equally affects all classes of Anglo-Indian society. But we think that the India College may do much to counteract all these three influences. If it can only get one or two men who combine talent with practical Indian experience, and who can succeed in really interesting the young civilians in the people of India and in an Indian career, it will have added no small safeguard for the permanence of our Indian Empire.

DR. EADES AND THE BAREILLY JAIL.

The Friend of India admits that the Report of the Commission and the endorsement of it by the Lieutenant-Governor would be termed severe in a settled country. It is not by any means severe in India. The prizes that are open to the Indian Civil Service are so great that the responsibilities attaching to high office cannot for a moment be dispensed with. It is hard, personally considered, that a man like Dr. Eades should be visited with such consequences for what was purely an error of judgment. But such error of judgment entails consequences so terrible that error in such a case becomes more dangerous than crime. If a Governor-General made the same mistake on the large scale that Dr. Eades has made on the small one we should have a mutiny to-morrow. Dr. Eades, as the Lieutenant-Governor has pointed out, made two errors. First, he did an individual wrong by taking from prisoners what no one has any right to take from them. Secondly, he forgot that the principle upon which British power in India rests is religious toleration. The stern and just reproof of Sir William Muir on these heads will probably be severer punishment to Dr. Eades than his removal from the superintendency of the jail. For they are not the words of a man who delights to press hardly on his subordinates, of a man who wishes to be severe when he can be at once merciful and just, but of one whose highest honour, as a Governor in India, has been his marked, steady, and consistent identification with works of mercy and benevolence. The reproof was one that Sir William Muir could not in the interest of the country escape from, and it is well tempered by a hope that the order which was a necessity in the case of Dr. Eades, as Superintendent of a Jail, will not operate to his disadvantage in his own profession. We hope the same. There is nothing in the conduct of Dr. Eades dishonourable to him as a man. Nothing in the slighest degree. But placed in a position of immense responsibility he failed in that knowledge, in that perception of the peculiarities of the native races which in India disqualifies a man for rule in all cases where native prejudices are concerned, and where tact is needed. The high administrative talent that characterises Indian administration is in a great measure the offspring of almost despotic rule. But that rule has a responsibility as great as its power. The prejudices of a race, or of races, may be trampled under foot with impunity a hundred times. But tread upon them one time more, and we may see on a large scale what we now see on a small one in Bareilly jail; a stern lesson if we know how to read it rightly.

His Monopolist Majesty of Burmah.—The King of Burmah is determined to become a monopolist, and European, Chinese, and Mogul tradesmen are all grumbling. They complain that they cannot compete with his Majesty, and some of them are closing their shops. The King has opened one large central depot, and several smaller ones, in different parts of the town; and the native purchasers all have recourse to them, as they consider it would be against the King's orders to purchase elsewhere. The King's excuse is that he wishes to replenish his treasury, but his Majesty loses money on these transactions, and yet still extends them, and promises to extend his other branches of trade in produce very considerably. His Majesty seems determined, in spite of advice to the contrary, to have his own way, and get everything under his direct control. Forests, timber, and trade, are all being included in the royal trade-net that is spreading over Upper Burmah. It remains yet to be seen whether British trade will considerably suffer in the end. Some Chinese traders have determined to return their imports of piece goods to Rangoon. The King has also sent a large consignment of cotton to Bhamo, and has engaged the services of two men there—one on a salary of Rs. 60 per mensem, and the other on Rs. 50—to proceed with the cotton, when the season is favourable, to the Shan States and, it is said, Yunan, for the purpose of selling it and opening out the routes. His Majesty has promised to open out the routes, and has stated that he will see a great change in three months' time.—Englishman.

Planting at Wynaad and the Neilgherries.—The Government have had before them several papers relating to the present depressed condition of the planting interests in the Wynaad and on the Neilgherries, and to the expediency of affording them some relief by a modification of the terms on which land for planting purposes is now procurable. It appears that no change in the rules for the acquisition of land on the Shevaroy Hills is needed. The interests involved on the Shevaroys are, however, comparatively insignificant, and the condition of the plantations on the Neilgherries and in the Wynaad is certainly very different, but the Government are by no means of opinion that the present depression can in any way be ascribed to the operation of the Waste Land Rules. As observed by the late Collector of Malabar and the Commissioner of Neilgherries, it is probably owing to other causes, among which may be mentioned the increase in the price of labour, a succession of bad seasons, the recent commercial crisis at Bombay and England, the ravages of the borer, the insufficiency of the capital possessed by the planters for their operations, the high rate of interest paid for borrowed money, &c., &c. At the same time the Government fully recognise the political and other incidental advantages to be derived from an influx of Europeans and European capital into India, and they would gladly give every reasonable encouragement to this movement. It is true that the grant of land by Government entirely free of tax would not make the cultivation of coffee, tea, or chinchona, a profitable speculation under certain circumstances; but any modification of the existing rates which would render them more favourable to the planter could not fail in some degree to assist him, and it is impossible to deny that at present the large majority of the existing estates are in a languishing condition, and that their proprietors have been brought to the verge of ruin. Government have sanctioned the following relaxations, by which it is hoped some relief may be afforded to the planting interest. In the Neilgherries no quit-rent will be exacted on forest land taken up for the purpose of planting until the sixth year; in the Wynaad, where the coffee plant comes more rapidly to maturity, forest land will be held free of assessment for three complete years, and the rent of grazing land has been reduced from one rupee to eight annas.—Madras Athenæum.

Bengal.

The Calcutta Volunteers.—On Wednesday morning, Oct. 18 the first parade of the Calcutta Volunteers for the season 1871-72 took place. Out of 589 members of the volunteer corps, rank and file, 426 were present, and 163 were reported sick or unavoidably absent.

Archæological.—The Government of Bengal have requested the Commissioner of Dacca to obtain photographs of the Mahomedan architectural ruins of Sonargaon, to assist in the illustration of Mr. Ravenshaw's historical sketch of the kingdom of Gour, which the Government of India have requested Major-General Cunningham to revise in communication with Mr. Ravenshaw.

Oudh Railway.—We are glad to be able to welcome the return to Lucknow of Major-General Beadle, the agent of the Oudh and Rohilkhund line. The gallant general has, we understand, done yeoman's service at home in furtherance of the best interests of the company, and now returns invigorated and full of energy.—Lucknow Times, Oct. 21.

The Weather and the Crops in the Central Provinces.—The official reports on the crops up to the 30th September are generally favourable, the exceptions being in Sambalpur, where "the cotton has failed everywhere," and Belaspur, where the cotton has suffered slightly from showers. Fever was very general, but in many parts the cattle-disease was abating.

A New Scandal.—It appears impossible, says the Englishman, for a hot season to pass without some disagreeable scandal arising at one or more of the hill-stations. This year Deyrah bears away the palm, for we hear that "a sensational defamation case" is to be heard there on the 23rd inst., and that a divorce case, in which there are to be about a dozen co-respondents, is also soon to come before the Court.

Uncovenanted Leave Rules.—It seems to us that the Indian Daily News is incorrect in stating that, under the Uncovenanted Service Leave Rules, an officer extending his leave on medical certificate beyond two years forfeits his substantive appointment. There is no such rule. The only rule which applies to forfeiture of appointments is that under which privilege leave is taken; and this rule applies equally to all three branches of the service—covenanted, uncovenanted civil service, and to military officers in civil employ.—Times of India.

Mr. G. Campbell.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal arrived in Darjeeling on the 18th October, but the style of his entrance into the station does not seem to have been ostentatious. The Darjeeling News says he arrived in an old dooly followed by a small party of two or three officials, some baggage tats, a few dogs, and a number of coolies. On the 21st he received a deputation of the residents and visitors of Darjeeling, who presented a petition for the concession of a strip of road from Caragola Ghat to the foot of the hills for the construction of a light line of railway.

A Novel Performance.—A company of Punjaubee strolling magicians exhibited before a large concourse of people at Godra the other day some very extraordinary tricks. A native contemporary gives the following account of the exhibition:—"A man throws high into the air a thing resembling a drum. The drum, while ascending, produces beautiful music, and remains for minutes in the sky without any visible support. Another of the jugglers produces a pigeon, which flew away on being told to go and fetch its flock; soon after the bird returned, accompanied by about 500 more pigeons. The spectators exhibited great surprise, and attributed the performance to magical influence."—Times of India.

Camp of Exercise.—The Pioneer hears that the following officers of the Royal Artillery are likely to be nominated to commands at the approaching Camp of Exercise:—Colonel Huyshe—Umpire; Colonel G. V. Johnson—Commanding Royal Artillery; Colonel Atlay, C.B.—Commanding Horse Artillery; Colonel Bruce—Commanding Horse Artillery and Cavalry Reserve. Lieutenant-Colonels Evans, Gray, and Bent to command batteries of divisions. Staff officers and adjutants will also be nominated, as it is intended to render the Artillery just as perfect in its working organisation as it ought to be when taking the field for active service. An Artillery train with reserve ammunition will also take the field.

The Palatial Failures.—"We understand," says the Lucknow Times, "that the Government have at length taken up the subject of the dilapidated state of the generality of the barracks at our military stations. Colonel Hutchinson, of the Public Works Department, an officer well worthy of the duty, will proceed at once on a tour of inspection through the various military stations and sanitaria in the Punjab, the North-West Provinces, and Bengal, and will thus be able to report from his own observations on the state of the different Government buildings, particularly those said to be of faulty construction. He returns to Calcutta about the middle of December, and then will proceed to Bombay and Madras on the same duty. On his return we hope the public will be favoured with his report on all these deficiencies. It is high time that the system of frittering away the public money in rotten buildings should cease."

THE LOSHAI EXPEDITION.—The Peshawur Mountain Battery, better known as Hill's Battery, arrived in Calcutta on the evening of Oct. 25, under the command of Lieutenant King Harman. The battery is encamped outside of the Fort. Colonel Hills, the commandant, had preceded his battery in order to get cradles made for the guns. Messrs. C. E. Pitman, F. T. Rickards, and J. W. B. Duthy, of the Government Telegraph Department, with five telegraph signallers and fifty-five coolies, started for Dacca by the steamer Lucknow, which left Calcutta early in the morning of Oct. 24. The Lucknow was accompanied by two flats carrying a large quantity of Commissariat stores, consisting principally of rice, tarpaulins, and boots.

MR. NORMAN'S MURDERER.—The singular story about the murderer Abdoola having been recognised by some students of the Mirzapore Zillah School as a man who two years ago had attended the Arabic class is confirmed by a Calcutta contemporary. Mr. Baird, the head master of the Mirzapore School, has arrived in Calcutta in charge of the three students. When the prisoner saw Mr. Baird in jail he at once recognised him as his old schoolmaster.—The police authorities, says the Englishman, are busily engaged in trying to discover something about Abdoola. In addition to the Mirzapore clue, another, altogether different, has just been obtained. We trust this will be carefully followed up, and that every possible step will be taken to thoroughly test each item of the information which the police are now receiving.

FINE ART EXHIBITION.—The Fine Art Exhibition for 1871 will be held at the Dalhousie Institute on Dec. 18 next. The Council of the Institute have drawn up rules for the guidance of competitors, and the following are the details of the prizes to be awarded :—The Governor General's Prize—Gold Medal for the best figure painting in oils. The Commander-in-Chief's Prize—Gold Medal for best landscape in oils. Sir Richard Temple's Prize—Gold Medal for best figure painting in water colour. The President's Prize—Gold Medal for the best landscape in water colour. The Institute Prizes will consist of the following silver medals :—1 to 4. For the second best of each of the above for which gold medals are given. 5. For excellence in architectural drawing. 6. For the best sculptured or modelled group of either human figures or animals of any kind. 7. For the best basso-relievo. 8. For the best set of etchings suitable for book illustration.

MILITARY.—We learn that Colonel Maclean, Deputy Commissioner of Saugor, having refused the Chuteesguile Commissionership, vacant by the departure of Major Cumberlege on leave, the choice lies between Colonel Dennys, Deputy Commissioner of Hoshungabad, and Major Fenton, Deputy Commissioner of Nagpur, if an outside civilian be not brought in. The last is considered the most probable method by which the Commissionership will be filled up. The Commander-in-Chief of India has ruled that in future each battery of Garrison Artillery will have at all times attached to it two soldier artificers in the capacities of wheeler and smith, to attend to any incidental repairs that might be needed in the course of a campaign. We believe an officer and two privates from each of the European regiments under orders for the Camp of Exercise have been directed to proceed to Rurki, to undergo instruction at the Thomason College in army-signalling, under Lieutenant Allan Cunninghame, R.E.—Pioneer.

THE DESTRUCTION AND LOSS OF LIFE AT LUCKNOW.—The Karnamah gives another list of those who perished during the late fall of houses in Lucknow. This counts up twenty-nine more lives lost in the more eastern mohallahs. The interior of the city, which no European officer has, we dare say, ever taken the trouble of visiting, is so full of ruins that it is impossible to find one's way through them. Besides the fall of houses, which has been truly enormous, many of the sewers that had been constructed in olden times for the drainage of the city have been dammed up or have given way. The complaint is general that during the late tremendous fall of rain no notice was taken of the poor occupants of falling houses by our local authorities, and that they received no assistance from the police in removing themselves before the crash came, or in removing those who were buried under those already fallen, and thus saving their lives, as they did last year, when we had local officers possessed of a greater share of the milk of human sympathy.—Lucknow Times.

CIVIL.—As Dr. Clarke will retire about the time that Dr. Walker arrives, the latter will be appointed Inspector-General of Prisons, and Captain Dodd will in consequence be appointed permanently to the Press.—Madras Standard.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.—The Penang Gazette mentions the death and burial in that town of Mr. Charles Owen, senior magistrate of the Straits Settlements, who died at the early age of thirty-four years. The Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Justice and all the leading members of the community were in attendance at the funeral.

AN AWKWARD CUSTOMER.—The Moulmein Advertiser states that Captain Arnot, I.N., and Master Attendant of Rangoon, when walking along a sand bank at the Eastern grove, was attacked by a large alligator, and was only saved by his dog running round and barking at the huge brute. Captain Arnot's boat and lascars were at the time a long way behind.

LORD MAYO'S VISIT TO BURMAH.—The Rangoon Times says that the Governor-General has definitely determined to visit Rangoon, but owing to the visit which the King of Siam is about to pay Calcutta, the Governor-General will not arrive so early as was expected. His Siamese Majesty has also fixed to visit Rangoon after Calcutta, and it is quite possible that he and Lord Mayo may come here together.

POPULAR IGNORANCE.—A native gentleman who assisted in taking the census at Cuddalore says that the greater portion of the people, in spite of all persuasion to the contrary, especially the ignorant, persist in regarding the remuneration "as proceeding from some undivulged machination of our Government to ensure correct returns with a view of imposing the much-hated capitation-tax."—Madras Times.

REDUCING AT THE WRONG END.—Another reduction of the finances is contemplated in the reorganisation of the Madras Department of Public Works. The Superintending Engineers of that presidency will in future be designated Deputy Chief Engineers, but their large salaries will not be lessened. Their office establishments will however be reduced. The head clerks' salaries will be cut down from Rs. 200 to Rs. 50 per mensem !—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 18.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—The Commander-in-Chief of Madras will proceed on a tour of inspection to Trichinopoly and Quilon on the 26th inst., and head-quarters will be established at Madras on the 6th prox. The officiating Deputy Adjutant General, Assistant Adjutant General Royal Artillery, and officiating Deputy Quartermaster General, and one aide-de-camp will proceed to join their respective offices at Madras on or about 26th inst.

MR. J. B. NORTON.—We regret to learn that the Hon. J. B. Norton, who has for so many years occupied a prominent position in Madras as a friend of national progress and improvement, leaves Madras for England, by the end of this month, for good. We hear it rumoured that the Hindu community, for whom he has done so much by his fearless advocacy of their cause, contemplate testifying to him, in some substantial manner, their appreciation of his valuable and disinterested services.—Madras Athenæum, Oct. 19.

CHOLERA HUTS.—We are glad to find that Government have sanctioned the erection of cholera huts at the public expense not far from those stations on the Madras Railway where medical assistance can be had. Passengers attacked with cholera are to be removed into these huts and treated by the railway apothecaries till the services of some Government medical man can be secured. Magistrates are authorised to pay as a contingent charge the bills submitted by the Railway apothecaries for absolute necessaries supplied by them to cholera patients; and when a traveller is attacked with cholera and cannot be left at a station where medical aid is available the carriage in which he is travelling should be cleared of other passengers and placed at the end of the train, and the sick man should be allowed to occupy the infected carriage with any friends or persons who may be willing to aid him, until he reaches his destination or some intermediate station where he can receive medical aid.—Native Public Opinion.

A SUSPICIOUS CASE.—We learn from Beypore that the Rest-house Superintendent, Mr. Matthews, was found dead in his bed on the morning of the 16th instant. The deceased was in very good health, and his death is said to be a suspicious one. He was in conversation with the railway inspector the previous evening at the Beypore station-yard; he was sober and was always known to be a steady and straightforward man. The deceased's wife and family were expected from England in one of the troop-ships, and after a short conversation on the subject with the inspector, Matthews retired to his quarters, and his servant gave the alarm the next morning that his master was dead. The police came to the house, and had the body removed to Calicut without delay. Matthews succeeded Sergeant Hodgson, who died a few months ago in a scuffle which took place between him and one Sherry, who was tried at the last High Court Sessions and discharged.—Madras Standard, Oct. 20.

MOMEIN.—The news from Momein is not satisfactory. Tah-sa-Kon, the Governor, has been fighting hard, and has received a bullet wound in one of his arms, a flesh-wound only. In one action the Panthays secured some seventy percussion muskets from the Chinese, and consequently Tah-sa-Kon is a little suspicious as to whether the English supplied these muskets or not. The Panthay officers have, it is said, received instructions to make full inquiries regarding them, and to make a representation to the King of Burmah, who is also suspected of supplying arms to the Chinese. Tah-sa-Kon has expressed his determination to open out the trade-routes next season, and it is to be hoped that he will be able to carry out his intention. The Chinese have still large bands of men at Nantin, Hotha, and other places; but, curious enough, the Panthays seem to have a considerable force at Thansee, near Manphoo. From what the interpreter says, it seems that a route to Yunan could be opened without difficulty from Mogoung, as there are no Chinese to oppose the same. The probability of this route is well worth inquiring into, as it is quite possible and probable that steamers of light draught could go up to Mogoung during the dry season. The successful opening of the Bhamo routes is very uncertain; it may take place during the ensuing dry season, and it may not be for years to come.—Englishman.

STATION TALK.

ABOO, Oct. 13.—The school children of the Aboo Lawrence School had a great treat given them last night by his Highness the Maharaja of Jodhpoor. After dinner his Highness gave each child the sum of Rs. 2 for pocket money, and he has also most generously presented the school with the munificent sum of Rs. 500. Such thoughtful kindness is worthy of record, and we wish the kind-hearted Maharaja all the happiness he can desire, for he has bestowed much on the orphan children. It is said the committee to decide on the enlargement or amalgamation of the Aboo School with the Ootacamund School are to meet in March next at Aboo. We hope they will let well alone. The Aboo School is as near perfection as it can be, and no one desires what would be a needless change.

KOLAPOOR, Oct. 13.—A telegram was received by the Political Agent last evening, conveying the sanction of the Supreme Government to the adoption of Narrain Rao, son of Dinker Rao Bhonsle Savardekur, to the Kolapoor Gadee. The Chief of Phulton, with his daughter, who is the senior Ranee, have been telegraphed to and requested to come to Kolapoor without delay, to take part in the ceremony, which is to be carried out with great pomp and display on the 23rd instant, the Dussera festival. The Chief of Meeruj is at the same time to be invested with the administrative powers of his State, and will be presented with a dress of honour. To give effect to the whole proceeding, a grand durbar is to be held on the 23rd inst., which the Chiefs of the Southern Mahratta Country and all the civil and military officers at the station are to be invited to attend. I need scarcely add that this intelligence has caused great rejoicing throughout the native town.

KHANDEISH, Oct. 15.—During the past fortnight we have had only fifteen cents of rain, which was barely sufficient to moisten the ground; not only therefore are the prospects bad for the lower classes, but even the middle and better classes of natives, such as patels, koonbess, &c., are beginning to feel the effects of famine. Some very touching instances of stern endurance under the keen pangs of hunger were brought to the notice of the late Collector, Mr. Lionel Ashburner. What is to be done for the wretched people? to beg they are ashamed; labour on public works they will not, they would rather starve and die. The only means that suggests itself is to assist them by judicious grants of taccavee, but these should be given with great caution, and only to those of the better classes suffering from famine, who on account of their caste prejudices will not be induced to labour on public works. The clouds that were lowering about have all cleared away, and the last lingering expectation of rain has consequently disappeared. Want and famine are staring the people in the face. The district around Dhoolia has been particularly unfortunate; the greatest distress is felt there. I was at Parola the other day, and was glad to hear that the sanction of Government has been received to open out the Parola and Kujgaum road as a famine work. This road will connect the former wealthy and important town in the Amalnair talooka of this collectorate with the station of Kujgaum on the N.E. line of the G.I.P. Railway, developing the resources of the rich districts in the neighbourhood. The road is estimated to cost Rs. 1,84,000; the plans are designed by Mr. Sandford, L.F. Engineer of the district. The work is in charge of Captain Greig, of the P.W. Department, under whose superintendence, assisted by Lieut. Joseph, R.E., already nearly six miles have been staked out within the past month. The work is being vigorously pushed on from both ends. The constructing this road is a great blessing to the lower classes; I met large numbers flocking in from all quarters for work; none are refused, and all are engaged, irrespective of caste or creed. The name of Girek sahib is worshipped by hundreds of Bheels and coolies who would have otherwise starved to death.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MILITARY.—We understand that on the arrival of the 14th Regiment N.I. from Mhow they will be detained for some time at Poona for garrison duty; the 8th Regiment N.I.—the relieving corps of the 9th Regiment N.I.—is not expected here from Ahmedabad before March next.—Poona Observer.

CIVIL.—Colonel Lambert, who returned from furlough by the last mail steamer, took over charge from Major Dunsterville of his duties as Collector and Magistrate of Kurrachee, and Deputy Commissioner of Paper Currency, Sind Circle, on the 13th instant. Major Dunsterville, who is at present engaged on special duty in Kurrachee, will leave for Upper Sind about the end of this month, to take up his appointment of Collector and Magistrate of Shikarpoor.—Sindian, Oct. 18.

KATTYWAR.—The Native Princes and Chiefs of Kattywar are against the opening of the Purdhan Court at Kattywar, and have sent their Kharbarees to Bombay to confer on the subject with H.E. the Governor. Colonel Law and other officers who have great experience of Kattywar and its people are at present in Poona, where the matter will be fully discussed before H.E. the Governor in Council. We hear that a petition in favour of opening such a Court has been forwarded to H.E. the Governor by Mr. Rustomjee Merwanjee Narialwalla, a well-known citizen of Bombay. The object of opening this new Court is to protect the Bhyads and Gerassias of Kattywar from the oppression of the Native Princes and Chiefs, and to secure their rights and privileges.—Bombay Gazette.

BUSHIRE.—Lieut.-Col. Lewis Pelly, Political Resident in the Persian Gulf, furnishes the following items of intelligence up to the 7th October, 1871:—"The Customs Master at Bunder Abbas intimates the reappearance of cholera at that port, also that the populace are much distressed by famine. The last day's reports of the distribution of charity at Bushire show some three thousand persons in distress collected near the Residency. The Armenian and Jewish communities have also appealed for relief for the poor of either sect, which will be accorded. It is reported that some six hundred bags of rice, charitably contributed by Messrs. Nicol and Co., of Bombay, will shortly arrive for the relief of the famishing poor of this neighbourhood. It is reported that the charitable fund sent to Kazeroon will carry the remaining destitute there through the winter. Perfect tranquillity prevails at sea along the Arab coast. The pearl fishery in the gulf is considered to have been very productive this year. H.M.'s gun-boat Hugh Rose, B.M., arrived at Bushire from a cruize on the 28th September, and left again on the 29th."

LATEST INTELLIGENCE FROM PERSIA.—Messrs. Godrez Mehrban and Co. have received letters by Messrs. Nicol and Co.'s S.S. India, which arrived here on Saturday last from Bunder Abbas. Nineteen more Zoroastrians have arrived by the steamer, and have been sent to the Chowpatty Asylum. When the party first embarked at Bunder Abbas they numbered twenty-six, out of whom one died at Kurrachee, and other six being very ill were landed at the same port. A letter from Bunder Abbas, dated the 10th instant, states that two bungalows, carrying 129 Zoroastrians, have left Bunder Abbas for Bombay. About 60 exiles still remain at the former place, and other 200 are daily expected to arrive. Those who arrive at Bunder Abbas appear as if just rescued from the grave. Letters from Yezd contain the same distressing and unsatisfactory accounts. Famine, want of occupations, cholera, robberies, and lawlessness in every form still continue. Corn is again scarce. From 700 to 900 destitute Persians have left Persia in three different parties to come to Bombay, via Bunder Abbas. Cholera has made sad havoc in Tabriz and Teheran. Money is scarce. Messrs. Godrez Mehrban and Co. received the following telegram from Bunder Abbas on Saturday, from their brother, Mr. Khosroo :—"200 Persian Zoroastrians sent to Bombay ; Rs. 2,000 expended. 200 more exiles expected shortly to arrive at Bunder Abbas."—Times of India, Oct. 28.

AFFRAY BETWEEN SOLDIERS AND NATIVES.—A serious rencontre has, we are sorry to say, just taken place between a portion of the garrison at Neemuch and some natives of a neighbouring village. The particulars, we believe, are as follow :—It appears that a party of five soldiers, belonging to the 8th King's, went out on the 7th inst. for a day's shooting in the district. On their way back, towards evening, they went to a village about four miles from the station, and asked for water to drink ; on its being refused them, they helped themselves from a neighbouring well. For some cause or other this gave offence to the natives, who were standing round in considerable numbers, and without more ado they commenced pelting the soldiers with stones, abusing them at the same time. This, of course, was not to be borne, so they retaliated, and unfortunately one of them, irritated by a severe blow, fired his fowling-piece and wounded a native in the arm. Upon this a general rush took place, and the soldiers were overpowered and disarmed. Three of them, however, managed to escape, and got off with a few comparatively slight injuries ; but the other two, after being unmercifully beaten with their own guns, were tied together back to back, thrown on the ground, and made the foundation of a heap of weighty boulders piled on by no gentle hands. In this plight they remained for some hours, till the arrival of help from barracks ; the villagers meauwhile sat round them in a circle, smoking and mocking them. When they reached camp late that night they were at once taken to hospital, and were found to be severely injured, one of them having both his arms broken, and the other his skull fractured. The matter is undergoing the strictest investigation. That the attack was a preconcerted one would appear likely from the fact that the inhabitants of two villages, situated about two miles apart, took part in it.—Times of India.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Oct. 28.—Business in Piece Goods was checked by the receipt of advices from Manchester reporting a decline there in 7 and 8¼ lbs. Shirtings, and a slight decline has in consequence taken place in some descriptions of Grey Shirtings. The Goods principally in request have been Printers, Muddapollams, and Jaconets. The same remarks are applicable to Yarns, but considerable sales have been effected in Water No. 30, although at reduced rates. The market generally closes very quiet. In Metals and other kinds of imports a very small business has been done.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Oct. 28.—Cotton : The market has throughout been in a state of utter stagnation, partly owing to the unfavorable advices from Liverpool, while prices here continue so much higher than those ruling at home, and partly to the small quantity of Cotton now in Bombay offering moreover no selection. Prices generally may be quoted at Rs. 5 to 8 per candy lower. The transactions amount altogether to about 500 candies, of which only 450 candies were of old Dhollerah and Bhowungger quality deliverable in 45 days, at prices ranging from Rs. 230 to 223½. The market closes quiet.

MONEY MARKET.—BOMBAY, Oct. 28.—GOVERNMENT PAPER : The market during the week has been steadier, but a small business has been done, about 10 lacs only having changed hands. Of the new Four and a-Half per Cents., about two millions sterling have already been issued by the Government of India. In Calcutta no business has been done, on account of the Doorga Poojah holidays. EXCHANGE : On the resumption of business, on the 25th, after the Dussara holidays, rates opened at the closing quotations of last mail, at which they continued until yesterday, when they became somewhat firmer on the news coming to hand that the Bank of England rate remained unchanged at 5 per cent. On Calcutta a few transactions in 60 days' sight have been reported at 99½. The rate on China for 60 days' sight, House Bills, is Rs. 217 per 100 dollars.

PAY—STAFF.—In continuation of G.G.O. No. 24 of 1865, published at page 8 of standing orders for that year, the following letters, from the Government of India in the military department, are published for information :—From Secretary to the Government of India, military department, to the Controller of Military Accounts, No. 20, dated May 2, 1870. —"With reference to your letter No. 376, of the 8th ult., I am desired to observe that officers of the substantive rank of captain are not eligible for appointment to the post of quartermaster, but when such officers may, under the exigencies of the service, be temporarily appointed to officiate in the post, half staff salary may be admitted." From Secretary to the Government of India, military department, to the Adjutant General, No. 355, dated Sept. 12, 1871.—"I am directed to acknowledge your letter, No. 1,735, dated Aug. 24, 1871, finance, and in reply to acquaint you that the ruling in the case of Capt. ————, 2nd wing subaltern and officiating quartermaster, 2nd ————, is not in accordance with the intention of the Government in the military department. The letter (military department letter, No. 20, dated May 2, 1870) quoted in support of the pay examiner's view was not intended to restrict captains holding the appointment of quartermaster to half salary, but to allow them to draw it. When the full salary is available and other conditions are fulfilled, such officers come under the operation of G.G.O. No. 24 of 1865.

I. The Board of Examination should, if possible, be composed entirely of officers of the British service, and of the same branch as the candidate.

II. The proceedings of the board are to be made out in duplicate on the W.O. Form No. 263, the names of the officers examined are to be inserted in the heading, and the concurrence (or otherwise) of the general officer, in the opinion of the examining board, is to be entered after the signatures of the officers composing it.

III. The examination papers of the officers themselves are to be made out on half sheets of foolscap paper of uniform size, neatly attached together at the upper left-hand corner, folded lengthwise, and each set docketed at the back with the regiment, rank, and name of the officer examined, and each sheet is to be signed by him. The questions as well as the answers to be in the officer's own handwriting.

IV. For the examinations of cornets and ensigns there will be, in addition to whatever verbal questions the board may consider it advisable to ask, 100 written questions, divided amongst the subjects detailed in paragraphs 159 and 160 of "The Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Army," in the following proportions:—

IX. The reports are to be forwarded to the Adjutant general in India, or of Presidencies, as the case may be, with a separate covering letter from the general or other officer commanding the division or district.

TRANSPORT AND PASSAGE.

G.O. 10, Troopships, dated Feb. 1.

I. The following arrangements and regulations in regard to the appropriation of cabin accommodation for military officers on board her Majesty's troopships are notified for general information:—

II. The captain of the ship will determine what cabins are to be allotted for the general use of the military. The appropriation of particular cabins is, however, to be determined by the officer commanding the troops to be embarked, or a military staff officer deputed for that purpose, in concert with the paymaster of the ship—or, in his absence, such other officer as may be appointed by the captain. No subsequent alteration in this appropriation is to take place without the sanction of the captain, which must be applied for through the military commanding officer.

III. Field officers, and those of similar rank, are not entitled to separate accommodation in any ship, although priority will be given to them in allotting the cabin accommodation; but when they embark in her Majesty's ships, and the number for whom conveyance is required will admit of it, separate cabins may be assigned to them in those vessels. Officers of the rank of general officers, and those proceeding in command of troops, are alone entitled to separate cabin accommodation. THE ROYAL WARRANT.

THE INDIAN ARMY PROVISIONS.

The Royal Warrant embodying the new conditions of service in Her Majesty's Army (the Guards and Ordnance Corps excepted) applies to officers of the Indian Army in the following respects, viz.:—

SUBALTERNS' COMMISSIONS.

Commissions as Sub-Lieutenants will be given to candidates chosen by competition to qualified students from the Universities to "Indian and Queen's Cadets" [and Pages of Honour], and to carefully selected non-commissioned officers.

EXCHANGES.—INDIAN STAFF CORPS, &C.

Officers of equal substantive rank on full pay, serving in the Cavalry, Infantry of the Line, and Colonial Corps, and officers (below the substantive rank of field officer), in the Indian Staff Corps may exchange from one regiment or corps to another, and officers of equal substantive rank on full pay serving in Brigades of Royal Artillery, in companies of Royal Engineers, or in regiments of more than one battalion, may exchange from one brigade company of Royal Engineers or battalion to another, provided that the commanding officers of the officers exchanging certify to moral conduct, honour, professional efficiency, &c. With regard to supernumerary officers the Royal Warrant stipulates as follows:—An officer may be retained on the strength of his regiment or corps as a supernumerary —first, in case of a reduction in the establishment of a regiment when his retention is authorised; second, if in the case of a field officer belonging to a regiment or battalion serving in India he be appointed to a brigade command, or to a staff situation, in that country tenable by a regimental officer, for the usual period of five years.

CADET EXAMINATIONS.

Queen's and Indian Cadets will be required to pass a qualifying examination, which for the present will be the same as that recommended by the Royal Commission on Military Education. The nominations will remain as heretofore. When appointed, Cadets will go through the same course as other Sub-Lieutenants. So far as it is possible to calculate beforehand, the vacancies on the present establishment of officers in the Army will provide for about 200 admissions a-year by competition.

EDUCATION IN INDIA.

The second lecture of the course provided by the Sunday Lecture Society was given at St. George's-hall on Sunday afternoon, the 12th inst., by Jiram Row (of Mysore), before a large and respectable audience. The lecturer treated of the education of the people of India in connection with the propagation of the Christian faith among Hindoos. He said there were in India two systems of education at work, the one being the secular education directed by the Government, the other the missionary system. He took the latter first to discuss. The missionaries proceeded upon the dictum that the natives being Pagans and heathens were lost to salvation unless they embraced Christianity. This was the dogma with which it was sought to convert and educate the Hindoo. But the lecturer said that while grateful for the pains taken by the missionaries to implant moral and religious principles, according to the Christian faith, in the minds of his countrymen, he had serious doubts whether the object desired could be accomplished to any considerable extent. The strong natural antagonism which existed between the Hindoo ideal of religion and the Christian ideal must always prevent the latter from superseding the former. Some of the more practical tenets of Christianity might become incorporated with Hindooism in the course of time, but Christianity opposed itself to the most cherished feelings and sentiments of the believers in Buddha. These differences in the two religions were explained seriatim by the lecturer. Speaking conscientiously, and from the experience of years passed in one portion of India (Madras), he stated that within his knowledge, which was tolerably extensive of Hindoo life, Christianity has not made any adequate stand in his country. He knew it to be the fact, that notwithstanding the vast machinery employed by the powerful Protestant and Catholic societies engaged in the conversion of the Hindoos, but few converts had been made; what conversions had been effected had taken place in the classes that were known as the Pariahs of the population. Proselytism was discountenanced by the upper classes of society in India, which had great weight with the inferior classes. The Pundits again refuse disdainfully to sacrifice their refined philosophy spiritualised in Buddhism for the metaphysical religion embodied in Christianity.

The lecturer next explained that the education of the people depended upon secular rather than missionary instruction. Noticing those modern institutions in England which directed their attention to scientific education—the Social Science and similar societies—the lecturer thought that such modes of conveying practical knowledge would be found most useful in such a country as India. He advocated free and open discussion on the Education question in India as well as in this country, and between Europeans and Hindoos alike. It could alone be from the mutual expression of free thought that the best modes of effecting the moral and material improvements could be introduced or inculcated. The imperfect educational systems pursued by the British Government were unsuitable to the Hindoos, therefore inoperative, and would have to be given up. The subordinate class of Government instructors he (the lecturer) had found working the Government system of education in the Madras presidency were not, he considered, the persons suitable to instruct anybody. They were certainly not, in the opinion of the people, vestals bearing the light of knowledge and truth into a benighted land.

With regard to secular knowledge, the disposition of the natives to adopt the superior scientific systems of Europe, in carrying out for instance agricultural and manufacturing improvements in India, was well known; indeed, scientific knowledge had to some extent been applied already in agricultural and manufacturing occupations. Let, then, instruction in practical science be encouraged by the State, and in every other way. It was, however, indispensable that the instruction of the peasant class in India should emanate from native instructors rather than Europeans, in the first instance, because the natives could not be taught agricultural or manufacturing arts except through the agency of their own countrymen. The first step would appear to be, therefore, to introduce institutions of practical science into India, as a means of qualifying native teachers to instruct those incapable of being otherwise taught.

THE MAHOMEDANS IN INDIA.

On Thursday evening a lecture on the above subject was delivered, in connection with the Association in Aid of Social Progress in India, at the Society of Arts, by Syed Ameer Ali Khan, M.A., L.L.B. Mr. I. T. Prichard occupied the chair.

After tracing the career of the Mahomedan power in India to its fall, the relative positions of Mahomedans and Hindoos were described at the time of the Administration of Lord Cornwallis; the object being to show the inequalities the Mahomedans endured at the hands of their conquerors, while the Hindoos—more tractable in their nature—by submitting to the new rule imposed upon them by the British, and stooping to circumstances, obtained greater protection and concessions than could be accorded to the Mahomedans. But the Mahomedans had always, notwithstanding, remained loyal to the British Government. From the commencement of the British dominion until the Governor-Generalship of Lord William Bentinck they had held an equal rank with other nations. But in later times invidious distinctions had been drawn detrimental to their status; and they had had to endure even acts of oppression. He (the lecturer) referred to the great question connected with the "Sunnuds," which arose from the escheatment of Mahomedan landed property in default of proof of validity of title. This had been a most oppressive grievance endured by the Mahomedans, which they had never recovered from and never forgotten. The whole subject would be found dealt with in Dr. Hunter's work—"Our Indian Mussulmans." Another complaint preferred was the favouritism that had always been shown to the Hindoos, while Mahomedans had been neglected. The British had established their schools and colleges for the education of the natives of India, but the Mahomedans had not been encouraged to participate in the advantages of those schools. Mahomedans could not send their children to schools where the Christian creed was taught, unless the Koran was also allowed to be read to their children. Mussulman girls were prohibited by Mahomedan law and custom from associating with the children of another creed at school. But if the Koran could be read to Mussulman children, the difficulty of association might be got over; it was a question well worthy of the consideration of the association he was now addressing. Mahomedans from the establishment of our Government in India down to the present hour had had to contend against our exclusive system. While Hindoos were admitted to the service of the State, Mahomedans had been largely excluded. No friendly intercourse existed between the latter and Europeans, so that in a social or domestic sense estrangement, seclusion, and isolation was the fate of the neglected race. The impolicy of this exclusive system was dwelt upon by the lecturer, who said he believed that respect for the Zenana and free social intercourse between English and Mahomedan families was means by which to create a far better feeling between the two nations. It was true that more liberal ideas were beginning to be entertained on behalf of the social status of Mahomedans. The present noble Viceroy, Lord Mayo, was believed to be desirous to remedy the anomalies of their political and social condition. Unfortunately the good feeling had been temporarily checked by an occurrence of the most sudden and unexpected character—which he deplored and could only allude to on account of the political significance that had been attached to it—he meant the assassination of Chief Justice Norman at Calcutta. But he begged to assure the audience that all reputable Mussulmans deplored and expressed the utmost indignation at the murder of Judge Norman. He regretted much, too, that the proceedings of a small sect of Mussulman fanatics in Lower Bengal should have been in some way connected with the murder of the English judge. But the Government might be sure that there was no disaffection against the ruling power on the part of Mussulmans in India.

In conclusion, the speaker repeated that what was asked of the Government was that the British should observe the strictest impartiality between the different races. The watchword of future progress should be "United India."

A discussion then took place, in which several native gentlemen engaged; but it assumed a somewhat too polemical character in relation to the religions of Hindoo and Mahomedans; and Mr. W. Taylor, objecting to the course the discussion had taken, as being opposed to the principles of the Association, the secretary and chairman (Mr. Prichard) protested against his dictum, and maintained that the Society, in accordance with its objects, was only performing its duty in allowing the fullest expression of opinion regarding the interests of the natives of India.

Miscellaneous.

THE LE BAS PRIZE.—The subject of the Le Bas Prize at Cambridge for the present year is "The Present Condition and Influence of Mahomedanism in India."

THE PROFESSORSHIP OF ARABIC, CAMBRIDGE.—Mr. E. H. Palmer, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, was on the 10th inst. admitted to the office of Professor of Arabic at Cambridge University.

ARMY PURCHASE COMMISSION.—Officers desiring to communicate personally with the Army Purchase Commissioners are requested to attend at 109, Victoria-street, on Wednesdays, at two o'clock, having stated, either verbally or by letter, the purport of their visit to the Secretary before two o'clock on the preceding day.

A CAUTION.—It is necessary to mention that some persons styling themselves "C. F. Coutts and Co.," and occasionally "Coutts and Co., Bankers, and Army, Navy, and Civil Service Agents, 213, Piccadilly," are sending circulars to India and elsewhere, inviting business. People at a distance might be misled by the similarity of the title to that of the well-known banking firm in the Strand.—Times.

THE ECLIPSE EXPEDITION.—A correspondent announces that the Mirzapore, with the Eclipse Expedition, under Mr. Lockyer on board, commenced her passage through the Suez Canal on the 8th, and arrived at Suez at noon on the 10th. After leaving Malta on the 4th the weather was very fine, and the members of the expedition took advantage of it to test their instruments, and prepare for the observations they propose to make. It was thought that the party would reach Ceylon on the 25th inst.—Daily News.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 15th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were — to Calcutta, £299,300; to Bombay, £100,000; and to Madras, £700. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 11d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11¼d. will receive about 13 per cent., and on Bombay at 1s. 11½d. about 22 per cent. Above in full. The average rate on Calcutta was 1s. 11 66d.; on Bombay, 1s. 11 65d.; and on Madras, 1s. 11 5d.

FALMOUTH, GIBRALTAR, AND MALTA TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta Telegraph Company's report for the six months ending 30th September last has also been issued. It states that the alternative cable betweeen Lisbon and Gibraltar was completed on the 9th of October, thus securing two lines of communication between those stations. The revenue account shows a balance of undivided profit amounting to £32,747. 12s. 10d.; and a dividend of 7s. per share on the original capital, and 1s. 2d. per share on the new shares, being at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, is recommended.

BRITISH INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The directors of the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company have issued their report for the half-year ending 30th September last. They state that the operations have been more profitable than in previous years, the cables have sustained no interruptions, and the position of the company is steadily improving. They also announce that they have carefully considered the question of amalgamation, but have not yet succeeded in agreeing on satisfactory terms. The net receipts for the six months have been £44,823. 12s. 4d., and a dividend of 6s. per share is recommended, a balance of £10,777. 3s. 5d. being carried to reserve fund.

THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.—Two important Indian appeals have been before their lordships during the past week from the Chief Court of the Punjab, arising out of the property of the late Dyce Sombre—the first case, "Ann May Troup and others v. the Secretary of State for India in Council," and the second "The Hon. G. C. W. Forester, M.P. (the husband of Mrs. Dyce Sombre), and others v. the Secretary of State for India in Council." The property involved in the appeals, with interest claimed, exceeds one million sterling, and raises important questions as to the rights of the Government on State policy as to Indian affairs. Some time is likely to elapse before their lordships deliver their judgment in both appeals.

MR. E. W. BARNETT, the Conservative candidate for the representation of Dover in Parliament, was an engineer on the Madras Railway. His name is well known in India, and had it not been for men like him, England would, in the time of the Indian Mutiny, have lost her great Eastern Empire. The 27th Regt. N.I. was in a disorganised state; Mr. Barnett mounted the whole of his regiment, which ever afterwards went by the name of "Barnett's Horse," and prevented the Mutiny spreading to Madras. The Mutiny was succeeded by a famine, and Mr. Barnett, as engineer of the Madras Railway, employed thirty thousand people to save them from starvation. At a public meeting held at Dover on the 16th inst., Mr. Barnett was very favourably received, and there appears to be little doubt of his being the favourite and accepted candidate.

MR. C. PHILLIMORE.—The Revenue Department is the most important in the India Office, embracing, as it does, the consideration of those great imperial questions relating to land tenures, settlements, and taxation, upon which the success or failure of our Indian policy depends. Mr. Phillimore had been in the public service since 1835, and for the last fifteen years he had devoted all his energies to the work of the Revenue Department. He had especially made the forest administration his own, having watched it from its infancy, and perseveringly impressed its importance upon successive Secretaries of State. His retirement will be regretted by the forest officers, whose work he has always appreciated, and over whose labours he has watched with zealous care; and the public service generally will suffer from the ill-considered and unnecessary measure which has led to his resignation. There was no more conscientious and painstaking public servant than Mr. Phillimore, and his services could ill be spared.—Civil Service Gazette.

DIVORCE CASE.—At the Divorce Court, on Saturday morning, the suit of "Brewer v. Brewer and Dark" came before Lord Penzance. This was the husband's petition for a dissolution of his marriage on the ground of his wife's adultery with the co-respondent. The parties were married at Stratford, in 1855, where the petitioner was a coppersmith. In October, 1862, he obtained an appointment in India, at a salary of £20 a month, and it was arranged that his wife should remain at home with his friends, he allowing her £21 per quarter. In 1865 he received a letter from his wife, in which she confessed having committed adultery, but at the same time added "that she was left without a protector, and 'twere better to live upon a crust together than to be thus separated." The husband then ceased his support and instituted proceedings, but Lord Penzance refused at the time to grant a decree unless it was shown that the petitioner was willing to take his wife with him, and that she had given her consent to his going away. The husband was now present, and, having satisfied the Court in this respect, he was granted a decree.

MONUMENT TO SIR HERBERT EDWARDES.—A very beautiful monument to the memory of Major-General Sir H. Edwardes, K.C.B., has just been erected in Westminster Abbey by order of the Secretary of State for India. It consists of a well-executed bust, in marble, of the gallant officer, supported on each side by angels, and is placed near the bust of Cobden in the north transept, surrounded by monuments of distinguished officers of the late East India Company's service. The tablet contains the following inscription:—"To the memory of Major-General Sir Herbert Benjamin Edwardes, K.C.B., K.C.S I., D.C.L., LL.D., who in early life as a subaltern of the East India Company's army, by his fertility of resource, and his promptitude in action, struck the first victorious blow at the insurrection of Punjab in 1848; who in later years, by courage, sagacity, and mastery over men, ever animated by Christian principle, won an enduring place in the affections of the people, to whose welfare he long devoted himself; and in 1857, at a time of unexampled danger, greatly contributed to the security of the frontier and the salvation of the British empire in India. Born November 12, 1819; died December 23, 1868."

BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE.—The labours of the Special Prize Committee in the investigation of the Banda and Kirwee Booty still continue, the object being the prosecution of the claims of the late General Whitlock's division. Some Parliamentary papers have just seen the light in India, and have been referred to by several Indian contemporaries. These documents, we conclude, are the same that were laid before the House of Lords by Lord Cairns last Session, on the subject of the Banda and Kirwee Booty, in answer to the requirements specified in Lord Harrowby's able and effective speech in defence of the prescriptive rights of soldiers to prizes taken in war; rights which no legal tribunal had power to supersede, and which could only be superseded, as Colonel Anson told the House of Commons, at the risk of future discipline, as the spoil would be appropriated by those who took it, instead of being honourably given up. The latest action taken in the matter is the publication of certain letters written by General Miller, dated April last, appealing to the equitable consideration of the authorities. Should a fair and liberal settlement be still refused, a petition, we understand, is to be presented to her Majesty in Council, and the matter is also to be brought forward in the ensuing Session in the House of Lords. The claim preferred in General Miller's letter of January 11 last, for interest on the prize property lodged in 1858 at Allahabad, has long ago been admitted by the India Office. But four years have now elapsed, and, after much correspondence on the subject, the claim still remains unsettled on the plea of a reference to India.

THE ALBERT ASSURANCE COMPANY.—Lord Cairns has recently given judgment in the Albert arbitration in a case submitted to him as to whether executors could be made contributories either in their individual or representative capacity. The facts were these:—It was endeavoured by the Western Insurance Company, which was amalgamated with the Albert, to place on the list of contributories the four executors of a Mr. Driver, who, it appeared, at the time of his death, in 1857, held a hundred shares in the Metropolitan Counties Society, which was in August, 1862, amalgamated with the Western, which was neither registered nor incorporated. By the deed of amalgamation each shareholder in the one company was to accept the shares allotted to him, and execute a deed of adhesion to the other company. This deed was executed by one of the executors, and Driver's name was entered on the list of shareholders as the holder of 216 shares, and dividends were received on them down to the 15th of February, 1865. It was contended that the estate ought to be bound by this deed. Lord Cairns, in delivering judgment, said that he considered that these executors could not be fixed on the list of the Western Society. As individuals they had done nothing to make themselves liable, and had not professed to do anything, and they were not themselves shareholders in the Metropolitan. Their testator was a shareholder, but he was dead at the time of the amalgamation. In order, in their representative character, to constitute them shareholders, it must be shown that the agreement for the amalgamation was such that it bound the assets of the testator, but he did not consider that anything of the kind was shown, and he did not think that the executors had power to bind the assets by taking shares in the Western. The result, therefore, was that the executors would not be put upon the list. The money received by them must be restored, and they were entitled to costs.

ORIENTAL STUDIES IN CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—(CAMBRIDGE, Nov. 14.)—The Board of Oriental Studies have presented the following important report to the Vice-Chancellor, which is at present under discussion by the members of the Senate:—"They (the Board of Oriental Studies) are unanimously of opinion that the time has now arrived for assigning to the Oriental languages a more prominent position among the studies of the University. These form at present the only great branch of learning which, though long recognised in the University by the foundation of professorships, fails to take its proper place in our great examinations. The impulse given in the last few years to the moral and natural sciences by the establishment of triposes suggests to them similar examinations in their department as the best method, in accordance with the present University system, for fostering the early growth of Oriental studies. As the Oriental languages now represented in the University naturally separate into two main groups, they beg to recommend the establishment of two independent Oriental triposes—(1) the Semitic and (2) the Aryan. In each of these two great divisions it would probably be found expedient to confine the attention of the student to a few of the leading languages rather than to encourage a superficial knowledge of many. Hebrew (together with Chaldee), Syriac, and Arabic might be taken as the best representatives of the first group. In Arabic, the intricacies of the grammar and the extent of the vocabulary render an early systematic training especially necessary. Its literature is rich and varied in poetry, history, and science, and indispensable to all who would fully understand the spirit of the Mahomedan religion. Not only is Arabic the spoken language of that part of the East most interesting to Europeans, but it enters largely into the composition of Persian and Turkish. In the Aryan group Sanskrit holds the first and foremost place. Independently of its vast literature, which embraces the authoritative theological works of the Brahmans, it is the eldest sister of the Indo-European tongues, and is now acknowledged to be an indispensable aid in unravelling the structure of Greek and Latin, as well as of the Germanic, Keltic, and Slavonic tongues. It is the parent of most of the spoken languages of Northern India, and also of Pali, the sacred language of the Buddhists. Persian also possesses an extensive literature of especial value for historic and theosophic investigations; it is cultivated by the Mahomedans in India as well as in Persia itself, and might, therefore, be introduced with advantage into this tripos. They feel that it would be presumptuous to expect any great result from the establishment of Oriental triposes until these studies have won a due share of the College endowments; yet they confidently hope that the University will grant, as far as lies in its power, a fair field for the growth and development of studies so intimately connected with Biblical and Ecclesiastical literature, with the religion of our Indian fellow-subjects, with the science of language, and the history of the human mind."

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY.—During the present year the powerful fleet of the Peninsular and Oriental Company has been reinforced by five new steamships of a larger and superior class to those previously employed, having, in addition to the elegant accommodation provided for passengers, great capacity for carrying cargo. Of these vessels, the Indus was built by Messrs. Denny Bros., of Dumbarton, and the other four by Messrs. Caird and Co., of Greenock. The Indus, Khedive, and Mirzapore are now successfully running in the Eastern seas, the Pekin had her official trial trip on Nov. 11 in Stokes Bay, and the Peshawur was launched a fortnight ago, and will soon be ready for sea. It may be mentioned that the whole of these vessels have been added to the fleet without any additional call on the shareholders, and it is believed that the same remark will apply to four more steamships of a similar class, for which the directors have just concluded contracts. The new steamers have carrying capacity, besides mails, specie, passengers, and baggage, for as much as 2,100 tons of dead weight of cargo, or the corresponding measurement of goods, whether they consist of 17,000 bales of silk, 8,000 bales of cotton, or 4,000 chests of tea. The Pekin, as already mentioned, was taken to Stokes Bay on Nov. 11, under the command of Captain Woolcott, where she underwent an official trial at the measured mile, having a large party of the directors, Government and company officials, and other gentlemen on board. The results of four runs at the mile were as under:—First run, 4min. 30secs., or 13·333 knots per hour; second, 4min. 5secs., or 14·694 knots; third, 4min. 38secs., or 12·950 knots; fourth, 4min. 5secs., or 15,694 knots; the true mean speed being 13·918 knots per hour. Average steam, 46lb.; vacuum, 26; revolution of engines, 62 per minute. She had a total weight of coals, water, and stores on board of 904 tons, and the vessel's draught of water was 17ft. forward and 18ft. 2in. aft., the mean draught being 17ft. 7in. The wind at the time was N.N.E., with a force of 3, and smooth sea. The Pekin is fitted with compound engines of 600-horse power nominal, indicating 3078 during the trial; diameter of cylinders, 62 and 104 inches; length of stroke, 54 inches; heating surface of boilers, 11,720 square feet; firegrate surface, 316·8 square feet; condensing surface 6 059 square feet; diameter of screw, 17ft. 6in.; with a pitch of 22½ft., increasing to 24ft. The dimensions of the vessel are as follow:—Length between perpendiculars, 378ft. 1in.; length over all, 400ft.; breadth of beam, 42ft. 5in.; depth from top of floor to spar deck, 33ft. 2in.; register tonnage, 2098·56; gross tonnage, 3777·37. The Pekin has accommodation for 180 first and 56 second-class passengers, and the whole of the fittings of the spacious saloon, state-rooms, bath-rooms, &c., are of the best character, while all the latest improvements are introduced for ventilating and other purposes. The vessel behaved admirably during the trial, and Admiral Sir William Hall, who presided at the dejeuner, warmly complimented Mr. Caird, who was on board, on the manner in which his firm had turned this noble vessel out of hand, greatly to the satisfaction of himself and his colleagues. The Pekin is appointed to leave Southampton on Wednesday, Nov. 22, for Shanghai, via the Suez Canal, calling at Gibraltar, Malta, Port Said, Suez, Galle, Penang, Singapore, and Hong Kong, with passengers and cargo, and also taking passengers for Madras, Calcutta, and Australia, to be transferred at Galle to the mail steamers.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

CONFIDENTIAL REPORTS.

The Broad Arrow thinks it is clear that the reports required are too exhaustive and mechanical, as well as subversive of the spirit formerly governing the intercourse of brother officers, for it is beyond the bounds of reason to imagine that any general or other officer could, in the case of the former, furnish the whole of the private information required. A general's acquaintance with the private life, moral character, and general disposition of an officer under his command, must of necessity be limited. Unless a system of espionage is to be established, and brigadiers, inspecting officers, and commanders-in-chief are to be metamorphosed into a force of detective police, with duties to consist principally in examination of liquor accounts, periodical visits to the officers' quarters, or attempts to undermine the fidelity of soldier servants by a system of bribery, we cannot see how all the information is to be obtained. However this may be, it is evident that if the reports are to be anything more than a matter of form, such espionage, coupled with the abolition of regimental messes, must bring about a revolution in the spirit which has hitherto linked officers of the same regiment in a bond of brotherhood, and end in the destruction of morality, integrity, and high-minded feeling, in fact, in that high tone which was, with lamentable exceptions, the attribute of the British officer of the past. Once establish a feeling among any class of men that the aim and object of their lives is to be, for the future, to avoid detection, and you abolish for ever that system of mutual confidence which has been one of the strongest supports of a happy relation between senior and junior in our army. How the scheme will work is another matter; the problem is to reconcile the position of a spy and informer with that of a brother officer, as the term has been hitherto understood, and we can only hope that the material of which our officers, in the future as in the past, will be composed, may afford some guarantee against the degradation of the service. Considering the number of officers under one general's command, and his want of opportunity of becoming personally acquainted with the private character of each one, his report, independent of that of the immediate commanding officer, must be necessarily incomplete. Any serious charges of immorality are sure to be brought to his notice, and, as far as professional efficiency is concerned, he will have sufficient supervision even of individual officers to enable him to form a judgment on that point. We have no fault to find with the requirement which aims at the knowledge of whether an officer is a good horseman, for unhappily there are in the service field officers whom no amount of riding-school would ever turn into cavaliers; but against the inquiry into the antecedents of our officers there is much to be said. Let a man be the finest fellow that ever stepped, sober, steady, zealous, and efficient, may there not have been a turning-point in his career—that well-known period, dear, and perhaps justly bitter, in the recollection of many of us, when the sowing of wild oats was recklessly, but at length fortunately and fully, accomplished. On the whole, it is an unmitigated good that the power of a superior to crash a junior officer secretly by a confidential report is abolished, and, apart from captious criticism, it cannot be denied that the principle of open reports by even a captain of a company may, if properly regulated, in accordance with the spirit of our English institutions, conduce to make the subaltern ambitious of being in truth, what he oftentimes now only appears to be, a credit to the service. It is against the superfluous folly of too much organisation and administration, too much goody-goody worship, that we would at present protest.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

THE HISTORY
OF THE
BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.
FROM THE
APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE
TO THE
POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.
BY
LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,
Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. . . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attractions for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshahur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially favourable way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Portnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.

MEMORANDUM.

In addition to the copies of this work prepared for the use of the Government, the Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the publication of an edition for sale.

The work will contain about 450 Photographs on mounts, in eight volumes, super-royal 4to., and it will be issued at £2. 5s. per volume.

The First and Second Volumes are still on hand.

From the TIMES.

"We gather from the Preface that this work grew to its present handsome dimensions from a very modest commencement. It originated in the wish of Lord and Lady Canning to take home a private collection of photographs which might serve to recall the scenes and incidents of their Indian life, but as it advanced its importance began to be perceived, and Government, with a most judicious expenditure of public money, took it in hand. Very few of the photographs are unaccompanied by descriptions, often copious and graphic, of the subjects they illustrate, and the result is a singularly varied panorama of human life and character exhibited under almost every conceivable aspect. Although these four volumes deal with only a portion of the empire, there is scarcely a type of character, from the loftiest to the most debased, that is not to be found in them, and nowhere else, perhaps, in the world are peculiarities of character so strongly marked and sharply defined as in India. We might exhaust far more space than we can afford without giving the reader at all an adequate idea of the strange varieties of character to which these volumes introduce him."

THE OPTOSCOPE.

The practical utility of the OPTOSCOPE is now fully determined. In numerous cases has its merits been displayed in a manner so satisfactory, that in no instance has it afforded less satisfaction to the intelligent inquirer than to the inventor himself. It has long been a matter of considerable importance to those suffering from defective vision to learn the exact state of the refractive humours of the eye, and the proper convexity or concavity of the glasses required to render the vision as perfect as the state of the organs will admit of.

Mr. BEAUMONT'S OPTOSCOPE

is all that can be desired for this purpose, and those desirous of benefiting by his discovery may be suited with the most perfect-fitting glasses at moderate cost.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Are the only universal medicine of the present day; no combination of drugs can excel it in cooling, purifying, regulating, and aperitive qualities. The sun never sets upon the scene of its beneficial influence; no part of the globe fails to record its voluntary testimony to this medicine's merits. In lands both civilised and savage it is the medicine of the million for the internal complaints of the human frame. This famous medicine gives tone and vigour to a debilitated constitution, and immediately restores to health those who suffer from sick headache, loss of appetite, impurity of the blood, or, in fact, any of the internal diseases that are not utterly beyond the reach of human aid.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Nov. 4; Agra and Madras, Nov. 2; Calcutta, Nov. 1.

THE news from India is of the same quiet complexion as before, except for the amount of fresh disturbances at Goa. The preparations for the Camp of Exercise and the Loshai Expedition were quietly advancing; the excitement about Mr. Norman's murderer was visibly subsiding; so were the floods in Bengal, whence come encouraging news of the crops, more encouraging indeed than the reports from Western India, some parts of which are seriously threatened with famine. The inquiry into the state of the barracks at Allahabad has led to a confirmation of previous stories regarding the unsafe character of the roofs, which will have to be entirely replaced. Lord Mayo had just given Rs. 500 towards the relief of the famine-stricken Armenians in Persia, whence the stream of Parsee emigrants still kept flowing into Bombay. Maharajah Sindhia has held an industrial exhibition at Gwalior. Lord Napier (of Madras) persists in his suit against the Madras Athenæum.

ACCORDING to the Englishman it appears that a change is contemplated, if not already resolved upon, in the line of march to be taken by the Cachar Column of the Loshai Expedition. Instead of taking the Tipai Mukh route, it will probably have to go by the Gutar Mukh, the line formerly followed by General Nuthall's force. If this be true, it certainly does look as if no trust could be placed in our supposed friend, Sukpilal, the goodwill of whose tribe alone would justify the adoption of the first-named route. In Sylhet the country was drying fast, so as to justify the hope that the elephants would very soon be able to move from Dacca to the front. Mr. Daly was to leave Cachar at the beginning of November in order to go up the Barak and begin clearing a camp at some point above Mynadhur, the easternmost of the frontier stockades. On the 28th October the 2nd Goorkas under Colonel Macpherson, C.B., left the Hooghly for Chittagong, in company with Lieutenant Hyslop's Company of Sappers and the guns of the Peshawar Mountain Battery. Dr. Lyons had started a few days before in charge of 400 coolies for Kersalong, where the Hospital Depot of th Chittagong Column will be formed. It has been wisely arranged that the meat-rations supplied by the Commissariat should consist of preserved mutton and beef.

IF the new information brought home by this mail regarding Mr. Norman's murderer be correct, a clue has at length been found to Abdullah's antecedents. A Police Inspector had started for Calcutta from Delhi, taking with him a man who is said to have recognised the prisoner's photograph as the likeness of one Isa Khan, a bigoted Wahabi agent who had long been employed as a post-runner by the fanatics on the frontier, and had often brought money back with him from their brother-fanatics in British India.

THE Camp of Exercise is gradually acquiring shape on paper. The troops are to be mustered in three Divisions, each comprising one cavalry and two infantry brigades, with a certain strength of Sappers and Miners. The Division Commanders are Major-Generals Travers, M'Murdo, and Sir H. Tombs. We are glad to see that the system of overgrown brigades which found favour at Aldershot has not yet found favour with Lord Napier. Each brigade will consist only of three regiments and a battery of artillery. In the standing camps the troops will be allowed their usual tent-equipage, bell tents and "pauls" being reserved for the moving camps. They are to be out for six weeks, the first of which will be entirely devoted to brigade drill under the superintendence of the division commanders. During the next fortnight each division will perfect itself in manœuvring under its own commanders; after which the business of a regular campaign will begin with a succession of field days for the purpose of illustrating various problems in combined tactics and strategy. The duties and efficiency of each arm and of every superior officer will be brought into full play, by means of movements which will include all the preliminary processes of a regular siege.

THE Madras journals are justly indignant at the exclusion of selected officers of the Madras Army from a place in the coming manœuvres near Delhi. Economy is the excuse pleaded by the Supreme Government, greatly to the annoyance, it is said, of Lord Napier himself, who would naturally take the question from the soldier's point of view. If the Camp of Exercise was meant for something better than a sham, we do not see the wisdom of confining its lessons to officers in one particular province, in order that the Treasury may save a few thousand rupees.

IN our remarks on the Kukas of the Punjab we referred to the enlistment of many of these fanatics in the army of the Kashmere Rajah, at the instigation of their "head-centre," Ram Singh. Now that the British Government has taken these Kukas in hand, his Highness of Kashmere seems to have taken courage to follow its example, for he has just discharged four hundred Kuka sepoys from his service. It were much to be wished that he could have kept them there, for they will only return to trouble our police; but no doubt he had good reasons for getting rid of them.

AT the meeting of the Viceregal Council at Simla on the 24th October, Mr. F. Stephen presented the report of the Committee on the Bill for declaring what laws are in force in the Punjab. Mr. Egerton was to move that the report of the Committee on the Bill to regulate the construction and maintenance of public works for irrigation, navigation, and drainage be considered, with an amendment by Mr. Cockerell that the Bill be recommitted, with instructions to report again thereon in two months.

Among other items of news, we note the death of the son and heir to the Nawab of Rampúr after a short attack of fever, the departure of Mr. Crawford in a very sad state of health from Bombay, Mr. Sandford's appointment as Judicial Commissioner of Burmah, Yakoob Khan's arrival at Herat, and the noble conduct of Rajah Paraeb Narain who, during the floods at Putia, fed daily at his own cost 3,500 people and 6,000 cattle.

A Times telegram of this day's date (Monday) from Calcutta announces the arrival of Lord Mayo at that city. At Government House his Lordship was met by a large assembly of Europeans and Natives. His reception along the road is described as most enthusiastic.

According to some of our Indian contemporaries a project for establishing an Indian Civil Service College in England, in connection with one of our chief Universities, has already been taken in hand by the Indian Government. It is even rumoured that some plan of the sort has found its way to the India Office. The latter statement however appears to be somewhat premature, glad as we should be to find any encouragement given either here or in India to the formation of a new Haileybury destined to a longer existence than the last. The tide of opinion is every day setting more and more strongly in favour of a reform which would do away with many of the drawbacks to the present mode of preparing young men for the most important branch of Indian service. Every argument employed to justify the founding of a special College for Civil Engineers destined to Indian service, would tell with yet greater force in favour of a college at which young men preparing for the Indian Civil Service might be equipped with all the advantages which a sound college training ought to imply. For the higher ranges of Indian service we want something more than a system of periodical examinations, to which candidates properly crammed may come up with a certainty of passing through, whatever their defects in matters lying beyond the scope of a formal competition. A college training would supply the needful equipment for a career demanding other qualities than those which mere examinations can bring out. If the new Engineering College turns out a practical success, we may reckon on seeing an improved kind of Haileybury spring orelong into healthy life. The day for such a consummation will not be far off, if once the Cambridge authorities accept the new scheme just laid before them by the Board of Oriental Studies. It is proposed to establish two Oriental Triposes, one for the Semitic, the other for the Aryan languages. A direct encouragement would thus be given to the study of Arabic, Persian, and Sanskrit, which all enter more or less largely into the languages spoken or studied in British India. Such an arrangement, if fairly carried out, would at once give a wider scope to the somewhat narrow education of our English youth, and hold out to candidates for the Indian Civil Service the advantages of a regular university training, combined with a special preparation for an Indian career.

The long expected "Syllabus of Studies" at the Indian Civil Engineering College has at length been published "by authority," under the care of Messrs. Allen and Co. It contains a goodly list of subjects, compulsory and optional, for the final examinations. There are four main branches of study, Engineering, Mathematics, Natural Science, and Languages, in all which taken together, the candidate must score at least 150 marks, with leave to double that number if he can. Two hundred marks more are allowed for optional subjects. The first branch includes Descriptive Engineering, Surveying, Architecture, Geometrical Drawing, and Accounts, all which form part of the first two years' work, besides Notes and Reports and a Project reserved for the third year. Freehand Drawing is entirely optional. In the other subjects a minimum of 64 marks in all must be gained, of which only 3 are assigned to Architecture and 2 to Accounts. The highest minima are 18 for Descriptive Engineering, 14 for Geometrical Drawing, and 12 for Surveying. For Descriptive Engineering, Architecture, and Freehand Drawing, as optional subjects, 40, 20, and 20 marks are severally allowed; such marks all counting towards the aggregate minimum. For the second Branch, including Pure and Applied Mathematics, the lowest number of marks is 18, and 10 for the third Branch, that is for Experimental Science, Geology and Mineralogy. Branch IV. includes Hindustani, Indian History and Geography, rated at only 8 marks. The optional subjects under this head are Latin, Greek, French, and German, two only of which may be taken up by one candidate, with a minimum of 6 marks for each. For the optional subjects in the second and third branches a total of 60 and 30 marks each can be obtained. It will thus be seen that the qualifying minimum of 150 marks exceeds by fifty the total laid down for compulsory subjects. The duty of qualifying in every subject will be waived in the case of any student who may take a first class in both Engineering and Mathematics. The final examination will occupy some weeks. The marks are to be assigned with due regard to the student's previous advance, and no one who has not given fair proof of diligence in the past will be allowed to take part in the final struggle.

The Syllabus goes on to describe in detail the kind and amount of knowledge, practical or theoretic, required of the student in each section of the branches above-named. Descriptive Engineering for instance comprises thirty-three different subjects, bearing on the nature, production, and uses of constructive materials, such as stone, brick, tiles, cement, plaster, wood, metals, and so forth. In the field of Hydraulic Engineering he must know something about the modes of measuring, estimating, and storing water, about water-channels, systems of drainage, works of navigation and irrigation. His studies in Mechanism are divided into four heads, while eight are specified in connection with the Design and Execution of Structure. The three years' course of Surveying includes much practical work with chain, compass, sextant, and theodolite, besides mapping and practical astronomy. A course of lectures on Architecture will be delivered in the first or second year. The Geometrical Course will embrace Plane and Solid Geometry, Perspective, Architectural, Mechanical, and Engineering Drawing, and Estimating. Under the head of Accounts one section specially deals with the Indian Public Works Department. During his third year the student will take notes and drawings of the works on which he may be employed under a civil or mechanical engineer; and the last year's course will close with a "Project" or complete plan of some definite undertaking which will test the extent of his engineering knowledge in every direction.

In the sphere of Pure Mathematics the student will have to master the principles of Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, and Integration. His knowledge of Applied Mathematics will be tested under sixteen different heads, and he will further be examined on the Theory of Mechanism, the flow of water, and the working of machinery. In Natural Science his studies will embrace Chemistry, Magnetism, Electricity, Sound, Light, Heat, and Geology. The only language he is obliged to take up is Hindustani, of which he must know enough to construe passages from three ordinary class-books. His examination in Indian History will involve some knowledge of Indian ethnology, of the present system of Indian Government, the physical geography and productive wealth of India. Viewed as a whole, this programme, of which we have given a mere outline, looks like genuine work. If all goes well, the new college at Cooper's Hill will soon furnish the engineers of England with a standard of efficiency hitherto unattainable in this country.

The November number of the "Cornhill Magazine" contains a pleasantly written and well-informed essay on "Dravidian Folk-Songs," interspersed with racy specimens of the songs themselves. The Dravidas, who inhabit the Draved or Southern India, are a distinct race from the descendants of the Sanskrit-speaking Hindus, although by Sanskrit writers they were called degenerate Kshatriyas, that is, members of the warrior caste. For some time indeed it has rather been the fashion to class them ethnologically with the Turanian races; in other words with the Australasian or Negrito type of mankind. The term Turanian is itself utterly misleading and unmeaning, for it is made to couple races so entirely distinct as the Mongolian and the Negro. Its application to the Southern Indians we have always felt to be a huge mistake, if physical structure be worth anything to the point. It is comforting therefore to find the writer of this essay insisting on the right of the Dravidian races to rank as near kinsfolk of the Aryan Hindus. Trusting to the evidence of language he claims precedence for the former in respect of age over their younger brethren of the Sanskrit-speaking stock. In the Tamil, Telugu, and Canarese dialects there is scarcely a root, he maintains, which does not appear in Gothic, Old English, or Icelandic. To this day Tamil and Telugu "possess the complete verb which has left such traces in our language as are, art, and were." It is not very creditable to English scholarship that a matter of this kind should have lain so long in doubt; but we have much to learn yet about the peoples of India. The songs quoted in the "Cornhill" are mainly remarkable for their underlying sadness of tone, and for the protest they indirectly raise against the grosser forms of popular Hinduism. Some of them are rich in satire upon the priests and philosophers who "tell them wondrous tales," and becloud the worship of the one God with "all the rules of senseless complicated ritual." The Buddhistic idea seems still to influence the popular thought in Southern India. There is a very curious parallelism also between the old Semitic tradition of the Scape-goat and the Dravidian practice of sending a scape-calf into the wilderness laden with the sins of a dead Hindu of the race that inhabits the Nilghiri Hills. Yet, as the essayist points out, "there is no shred of evidence to connect the Badagas with any Semitic race."

DEATH FROM A JACKAL BITE.—On the 2nd ult. a woman residing at the Mulleer, named Bhagul, was bit by a mad jackal. She did not seem to have been much affected by the bite, and was progressing well; but on the 20th inst. the woman became deranged, and died.—Sind News, Oct. 26.

FURTHER DISTURBANCES AT GOA.—The following is taken from the Goa journal, the India Portugueza of the 28th October:—"Hardly has the first revolutionary movement been suppressed, than rumours are current that a fresh attempt is being set on foot by the military rebels here, which his Excellency the Governor is trying his utmost to quell by his good sense. The prompt measures adopted by his Excellency go so far to show that he himself apprehends something disagreeable, and that too at no distant date. The rumours to which we referred last week were not without foundation, and two detachments have already been sent to reinforce the garrisons of the fortresses at Aguada and Reis Magos. Lieutenant Adriano Xavier has been ordered to leave Goa at once for Damaun. The sentries at the jail are kept ready armed to act against any unforeseen attack by the mutineers as was done during the late crisis. Additional precautions are being taken by his Excellency by posting at Morrmurgaum fortress a sufficient number of soldiers commanded by Lieutenant Francisco Pereira da Costa and Joao Carlos Xavier." The Pharol-i-Pramar (also a Goa paper) of the 27th October says:—"The object of the mutineers (as the special correspondent of our contemporary the India remarks) in occupying the two principal fortresses at the entrance of the harbour, Aguada and Reis Mago, is to obstruct the passage of the schooner Estephania, which is expected at Goa shortly with about four hundred able and well-trained soldiers. We do not know with what ulterior object the mutineers have done so, but we believe that his Excellency, early on the 24th, received a very disagreeable message which made him call Mr. Ozorio, Chief Secretary to Government, Military Department, before him, and two aides-de-camp were, one after the other, specially despatched with a mission. The two officers commanding Attitheria and Guarda Municipal were next summoned to the palace, and after a long interview with these officers, official letters were forwarded to certain officers requiring them to present themselves forthwith before his Excellency, and recalling others to town from different places at which they were posted on special duty. Among other precautionary measures adopted by his Excellency, he has mounted a schooner lying in the harbour with a number of guns."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MARCO POLO ON INDIA.

IN the second volume of Marco Polo's Travels, as edited by the scholarly and accomplished Colonel Yule of the Bengal Engineers, there are some very interesting chapters which describe what the Italian agent of the great Kublai Khan saw or heard tell of the India of the thirteenth century. Having duly discoursed of Chipangu or Japan, which the great Khan had vainly tried to conquer, of Chamba or Cochin China whose King had 326 children, of Java and its wealth in spices, of Angamanain or the Andaman Isles, where the people in face are "all just like big mastiff dogs," and of Seilan, "the best island of its size in the world," Marco Polo takes us to the Coromandel Coast, to "the great province of Maabar, which is styled India the Greater: it is the best of all the Indies and is on the mainland." His account of the pearl-fishing indicates Negapatam in Tanjore as his probable landing-place; but about the King of those parts, described as one of five royal brothers, nothing definite seems to be ascertained except that his true name was Sundar Pandi. The "Abraiamans" or fish charmers, "who charm the great fishes to prevent them from injuring the divers whilst engaged in seeking pearls under water," are no creatures of an inventive fancy, but may still be seen driving their old trade under British protection. Their headman, says Colonel Yule, "is, or was not many years ago, paid by Government, and he also received ten oysters from each boat daily during the fishery." In all Maabar, according to Marco Polo, there was "never a tailor to cut a coat or stitch it, seeing that everybody goes naked." Even the King himself differed from his subjects only in having a finer waist-cloth and decking himself with necklaces, bracelets, anklets, and toe-rings of pearls, rubies, sapphires, and other precious stones, of which he had "great store." He had also five hundred wives with a corresponding number of children, and a body of faithful Barons, called Trusty Lieges, who when he died were bound to burn themselves on his funeral pile. The practice of Satti was then in full swing; those widows who observed it being held in special honour.

Then as now Arab and Persian horse-dealers carried on a brisk trade with Southern India, where good home-bred horses were very scarce. The people of Maabar, we are told, "do not know in the least how to treat a horse; and besides, they have no farriers." Marco Polo also mentions a custom strangely resembling the Hara Kiru of Japan. A criminal doomed to death might obtain leave to slay himself in honour of some idol. In that case he was furnished with twelve knives, with which he proceeded to stab himself to death. We read of the Gavi, or "low people," corrupted from Kayavar, who ate the flesh of the sacred ox when they could get it, and could never be induced to enter the place where St. Thomas the Apostle lay buried. The native taste for fat horses, the general objection to eating animal food or killing anything that has life, the practice of using only the left hand for certain purposes, the native manner of drinking and sitting on the ground, the drawing of horoscopes at a birth, are all described with a fair degree of accuracy. Another custom of which Polo treats is said still to survive among the poorer classes in some remote districts: we mean the practice of drawing a circle round the debtor, beyond which he dared not move on pain of death until he had paid or pledged himself to pay his debt. Polo himself was once present when a merchant, a creditor of the King, drew a circle round him as he was riding through the city. "The King on seeing this halted, and would ride no further; nor did he stir from the spot until the merchant was satisfied." The bystanders "marvelled greatly" thereat, applauding the justice of a king who could thus submit to justice. Perhaps his Majesty's sense of duty was quickened by a superstitious dread, for, according to Dr. Caldwell, the ceremony is always clenched by invoking curses on the debtor in the name of a particular divinity if he should break through the circle without satisfying the claim.

From Maabar the Italian Herodotus passes on to the kingdom of Mutfili; meaning Telingana or the modern Guntoor, of which Motapalli was a chief town. The kingdom in question had been ruled for some forty years by a queen who governed "as well as ever her husband did, or better." Her people are described as idolaters, living on flesh, rice, and milk. This is the region of diamonds, the Golconda in fact of later times, and Polo's story about one way of getting the diamonds may be compared with a like story told by Sindbad in the "Arabian Nights." Among the mountains are deep gorges filled with snakes and diamonds, but inaccessible to men. Man's wit, however, proves equal to the need. Pieces of flesh are thrown down into the hollows. On these swoop the eagles who haunt the mountain-tops. As soon as they have brought the meat up from below, they are frightened away from their nests by the men on watch, and the meat is recovered stuck all over with diamonds. Polo's book teems, as one might expect, with these travellers' tales. Less hard of digestion is the reference to the muslins of Masulipatam as "the best and most delicate buckrams," which "look like tissue of spider's web. There is no king nor queen in the world but might might be glad to wear them."

In his account of the Abraiaman merchants of "Lar" or Guzerat, Polo agrees with other writers of that day in bearing witness to their perfect truthfulness and trustworthiness in all business matters. People who are wont to talk of Hindus as born cheats and liars will be surprised perhaps to hear that their forefathers spoke the truth and bargained fairly; but those who are best acquainted with the Indians of the present day will doubtless consider such statements to be quite in harmony with some at least of their own experiences. Polo indeed appears in some of his details to have confused the Brahmans with the Banyans of Western India, but that makes nothing against the general truth of his description; and besides, it is not at all unlikely that by his time many of the Brahmans had come to engage in trade.

The "great and noble city" of Cail, where all the ships touch that come from the West, whose King is one of the five brothers that rule over Maabar, is identified by Dr. Caldwell with Káyal on the Támraparni river, "now shrunk into a petty village, inhabited partly by Mohammedans, and partly by Roman-Catholic fishermen of the Parava caste." Evident traces of former greatness may be found in the miles of ruined forts, temples, wells, tanks, and storehouses, interspersed with broken tiles and pottery, chiefly of Chinese make, which surround the modern village. Polo's reference to the practice of chewing betel-leaf "prepared with camphor and other aromatic spices," is confirmed by the evidence of other writers, who all mention camphor as one of the ingredients sometimes mixed with the leaves.

In Coilum, easy to identify with Kaulam or Quilon, Polo found some Jews and Christians intermixed with the native idolaters. Its wealth in pepper, ginger, brazil-nuts, indigo, its "black lions" or leopards, its peacocks, and parrots, are pretty correctly described; whatever we may think of the sun's heat being so great, that an egg put into the river "will be boiled before you have had time to go any distance." Capital drink, we are told, is made from palm-sugar, "and very speedily it makes a man drunk." Comari, or the country about Cape Comorin, the Komaria Akron of Ptolemy, is briefly described as a very wild country, noted among other things for "gatpauls" and monkeys "of such peculiar fashion that you would take them for men." The gatpauls were probably some kind of ape. The "Kingdom of Eli," which contains no proper harbour, but "many great rivers with good estuaries," appears to be the same with the Hili of Arabic writers and the modern Cananore. Its name still survives in Mount d'Ely, a tall headland about sixteen miles north of Cananore city, the first Indian land seen by the famous Vasco da Gama. In his account of Melibar, the modern Malabar, Polo tells of the pirates who haunted its neighbourhood, as they did up to a very recent date, of its great trade with the province of Manzi or Southern China, and of the "very delicate and beautiful buckrams" manufactured there. The people of Gozurat, that is, Guzerat, he describes as "the most desperate pirates in existence." Its cotton-plants growing six paces high, and the excellence of its embroidered and inlaid leather-work for mats and bed-covers, are specially noticed. Tana or the Konkan was still governed in Polo's time by a king of its own, who appears to have shared the plunder gained by pirates from the merchants sailing towards his ports; a practice condemned by Polo as "naught and unworthy of a king." From Cambae, the modern Cambay, cotton, indigo, hides, and fine buckram were exported by its inhabitants, "good people" as Polo calls them, who "live by their trade and manufactures." Such too are the people of Seminat, or Somnath, whose temples and idols were a second time destroyed by Mogul invaders a few years after Polo's visit. His Indian travels end with Kesmacoran, easily translated into Makrán, the classic Gedrosia, through which Alexander's legions marched from the Indus back into Persian ground.

Of the interior of India Marco Polo says nothing, "because that would make too long a story." In a former journey however overland through Western China he appears to have followed the track since made familiar to us by Major Sladen. His account of Bangala seems at first glance to indicate a visit to Bengal Proper; but further research probably justifies Colonel Yule in thinking that Polo himself never got further westward than Pegu.

"SIC VOLO SIC JUBEO."

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—You have doubtless received many letters from time to time on the subject of the Furlough Rules of 1868, but I venture to bring forward an anomaly under clause XI. of those Rules which still calls for attention and alteration. The Rules themselves have been so altered since 1868 that the kind and liberal author of them would have much difficulty in recognising them in their present form, and the officers who look to them for guidance find much that was easy and liberal altered into the converse. Yet the publication in your columns of a well-founded complaint is sure to obtain for the aggrieved a fair hearing, especially when the circumstances of the cases now brought to notice have been apparently overlooked by the authorities at the India Office. The cases of officers on leave under clause XI. of the Rules are those that require some advocacy. Let us follow the fortunes of an officer on furlough in England under that clause, and let us see how he fares. Starting from India on leave, given on account of urgent private affairs, he is about to return to India when he finds necessary an extension on medical certificate for six months. He must take the extension, and he does so with reluctance, and after much consideration, for he thereby forfeits his Indian appointment. Still he has a "balance of furlough" due to him, and under G.G.O. No. 627 of 1870 he will be so far compensated as to be allowed half the Indian pay of his rank; so he is comforted, and on the faith of the order he asks for and obtains an extension. Then comes the day for drawing pay and the stipulated rate is applied for, but the claimant is met at once with a refusal of anything beyond the English pay which was granted to him while he still held his appointment, and he withdraws, feeling that he is an impostor, that he ought to have become ill in India (and not in England), when he would have been given two years' sick-leave on half Indian pay of rank. Well, it is rather late to withdraw and to skip over 8,000 miles, and rejoin, even if the Board would let him go; so he reads No. 627 again and again, and still he finds his "balance of furlough" the passport to his modest claim, and no other order can be found ousting him. Then he enquires and learns that without any published order it was intended that No. 627 should apply only to officers becoming sick in India and not to those who get their sick leave in England, the question of "balance of furlough" being also intended to count for nothing. He cannot even wrap up his balance of furlough and use it hereafter, for it is debited to him as expended, and as for his appointment, that has been in orders given away to another when his claim to it ceased. It surely only requires that such a hardship should become known at the India Office beyond the office of details, for a fair and liberal construction to be passed on Rule XI. extending the meaning of G.G.O., No. 627, of 1870, in its plain English to those who read it as English, without the reservation of intentions, and who ask for no indulgence or FAVOR.

MARINE SURVEYS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—According to promise, I now offer a few remarks upon Marine Surveys. The charts of the Indian Navy were but the preliminaries of a system of graphic information, the first-fruits of maritime research. They met the requirements of navigation in their day. But, as commerce increases, new ports are opened up, and navigators hug the shore more closely, until, in trying to cut off corners, their vessels frequently come to grief on a rock which the preliminary examination has failed to discover. Then more minute surveys are called for, just as in European waters, where efficient establishments are maintained for the purpose. But poor India has nothing of the sort. Those whom she had cradled at great expense, who had grown up in her service (and how many had passed away in the hardening process whilst the residue were becoming acclimatised?), and had attained to some knowledge of her growing wants, were then cast off by foreign rulers who had no conception of the requirements of hydrography. And what is more, the last page of the Parliamentary Paper on Indian Marine Surveys, reviewed by you on October 31, reveals the fact that Colonel (now Sir George) Balfour, and Mr. (now Sir Richard) Temple, were in favour of maintaining a Naval Surveying establishment for India, because a thorough knowledge of the coast had not yet been attained. But, in spite of warning from men of such intelligence, the hydrographic vessel was lodged on a dangerous shelf, as well known to navigators as the Pearl Rock.

At length, repeated complaints of the want of large-scale charts induced the Bombay Government towards the close of last year to start some fresh surveys in the Persian Gulf; and they sent Mr. Girdlestone there, a most able officer, who had four or five years of such work in the Indian Navy and afterwards seven years under the Surveyor General of India. But he was sent away without a single surveying assistant, having only two mates to look after the vessel. Thus, at least fifty mouths had to be fed to enable one head to work, where three persons might have been profitably employed, and would have produced three-fold the amount of work at a trifling additional outlay. It may have been an unavoidable circumstance that he was sent single-handed, but this indicates the necessity of some decided organisation on a re-commencement of such important and costly work. A recurrence to the former anomalous state of things—viz., a surveying service without qualified direction or a central office for the preservation and reproduction of charts—calls for enquiry as to the cause of the old department's having come to a collapse. Thus may India yet reap profit from past failure.

While many of my brother surveyors have been for years engaged in various spheres of usefulness in this country, I have clung to the stranded hydrographic ship, hoping against hope that some day she may be seen afloat again. And now seems the opportunity. Public sympathy is awakened here and in the East, and the Secretary of State for India tells the Viceroy that the subject of marine surveys is one of very great importance, and deserving of the early and serious attention of the Government of India. When the mercantile and maritime public are of one mind with the rulers of India, let us hope that all will heartily join in the good cause, and that with a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether, the dear old craft may be launched again; and, under proper management, bring profit to India through a better knowledge of her coasts, and more honour than was accorded, in times past, to those who served in her.—Yours faithfully, A. D. TAYLOR.

Commander, late Indian Navy.

HOW TO GET RID OF THE PERMANENT SETTLEMENT.

The Indian Daily News observes that the great blot of Lord Cornwallis's land revenue system, namely, the proprietary right in an estate, at a revenue fixed in perpetuity, is transferred at auction sales for arrears of revenue; and the question to be considered is, whether the State might not appropriately step in and purchase all such estates, and manage them under a board constituted on the model of the court of wards, until such time as it had acquired a sufficient number to admit of its re-leasing them on a new and improved settlement. It is notorious that, owing to a hundred circumstances of a more or less trivial character, amongst which the mere absence of a sufficient number of competitors not infrequently takes a place, estates are often sold for very much less than their real value. This is not only the case in Sylhet and Chittagong, where the country is subdivided into infinitesimal superior holdings, but in almost every district in Bengal; and there are few revenue officers who cannot recall instances in which large estates have been sold for very much less than their proper value. In all such cases the Government, if it became the purchaser, would not only become a clear gainer by the transaction, but would also pave the way to the solution of the one great economical difficulty which has hitherto baffled all our statesmen and financiers. Even where the bidding was high, and an estate fetched more than its real value, the calculation that a proprietor invariably receives from his estate very much more than he anywhere pays to the Government, shows that it would be easy for the Government to recoup itself in the amount which represented the difference between the sum actually paid and the market value of an estate from the profits accruing from the collection of the rents. In any case the Government would gradually become the landed proprietor of a large number of estates, in respect of which the obligations imposed by the Permanent Settlement would be incumbent only on itself as against itself. When matters came to this pass there could be no immorality in rescinding the Permanent Settlement. Of course it is only in respect of estates that were thus purchased by the Government that the Permanent Settlement could be set aside; and there can be no doubt that if the Government commenced to set aside that settlement while any large number of estates remained the property of private persons the value of the latter would be so inordinately raised as at once to put a stop to all further purchases on behalf of Government. But the obvious course for the Government to pursue would be to go on purchasing estates, without rescinding the settlement in any of them, until the proprietary right in all or nearly all the estates in the country gradually lapsed to the Government, and the State became as of yore the great landed proprietor of the country. Even if it took a century to accomplish this great work, it would nevertheless be worth undertaking—and undertaking at once. The estates that have not at one time or other been sold for arrears of revenue, or are not likely to be sold at some future period, are few in number, if great in extent; and if it should be found impossible to compensate their owners hereafter, they might well be left to themselves, while the rest of the country was emancipated from the "financial blunder" and the "sin against posterity" of which Lord Cornwallis and his councillors were guilty.

PENSION AND BONUS.

The Madras Times thinks that, for an increase of retiring pension, the memorial might perhaps have been clothed in more concise language; nevertheless, it contains the gist of a very reasonable military grievance: the disproportion, namely, between the pay and the pensions of Indian officers as well as other affairs of moment. Allowing for the high prices at present prevailing in India, military ranks below that of field officer are inadequately paid; but field officers, who are usually in receipt of some staff allowances also, are sufficiently well remunerated to live in ease and comfort. Their pay perhaps does not go much further than that of a Captain some twenty years ago; still, and upon paper, at least, it looks to be good pay, and pay such as the field officers of other armies have no opportunity of enjoying. This is well. A Major of one-and-twenty years' service we will suppose to be in receipt of, say, £900 per annum, his pay and his staff allowances lumped together; but let him, through ill-health or other causes, retire upon his pension, and he is at once cut down from £900 to £191 a-year! The difference is truly ridiculous, and as the memorial says, prohibitive of retirement altogether. As officers grow older, the proportion grows worse. Thus, a lieutenant-colonel in command of a regiment and in receipt say of £1,600 per annum, will receive about £300 a year as pension—an income utterly inadequate to support his position in society; in fact, we might say, inadequate almost to find in food and clothes the families by which officers of this rank are very commonly burthened. Of course the results are obvious. The pensions being so small, the officers cannot avail themselves of them; whence that flood of senility which bids fair to swamp all efficiency in the Indian Army before many years have passed, and to place the very Empire itself in peril. The fact is, that the pension regulations of 1766 and 1837 have been long out of date. The memorial affirms that the £191 of eighty years ago was equal to £400 at the present day; and we can quite believe it. With a most illogical parsimony, however, the State admits no difference between the prices of 1766 and 1871, although we might suppose that but very slight reflection was necessary to show that the latter have been trebled in that period, and are still increasing to an alarming extent. So much is this the case, that it is not only pensions that are now inadequate to their purposes. In India itself—in a country where officers are supposed to be treated with extraordinary liberality—hospitality has become almost a thing of the past; for this reason, that but few people can afford to entertain their friends. As we heard it funnily expressed the other day, the difference of places between the past and the present considered, field officers now receive captain's pay, captains subaltern's, and subalterns nothing! Under these circumstances, and as a matter of course, officers can no longer lay by money to eke out their income on retirement. The £191 per annum is a stern fact that there is no disguising. The pensioner must look forward to it as his all, and in looking forward to it he practically looks towards what the memorial defines as "a state of semi pauperism and penury incompatible with his social position as an officer and a gentleman." Another source of income on retirement—the bonus of from £2,000 to £3,000 which officers in former years received from their juniors—has been cut away from beneath their feet by the Government. Thus, in very many instances, we should say that Indian officers have a just claim upon the State for an increase of pension that would in some degree represent the money value of their pensions of former days. But to attain any success in this matter it is hardly necessary to say that the officers of the Indian army should work together, and as a body present such a memorial as might be expected to interest the House of Commons in their case. The memorial we have quoted very justly puts forward as one of its strongest arguments the advantage the State must reap from ameliorated pensions through the riddance of a host of senility luxuriating on good Indian pay; but this is to argue against the Duke, his council, and General Hannyngton, who have all agreed that it is greatly to the profit of the Empire to pay useless men £1,000 a-year out here rather than £500 at home. We fear the memorialists will not make much out of this argument at the India-office, but in the House it would doubtless have its due effect could honourable members be induced to consider the question with the attention it deserves at their hands. To judge from the recent telegram, hinting at the concession of a bonus to Indian officers, we should say that the time is a good one for the ventilation in the House of many matters connected with their own individual interests, the efficiency of the army to which they belong, and the general security of our position in India.

STATION TALK.

GHAZEEPORE, Oct. 18.—The Arabic Moulvi of the Victoria School has been arrested on suspicion of being implicated in the conspiracy with the Wahabees. He used to correspond with Liakut Ali, the Wahabee who was lately captured near Bombay. Liakut Ali resided sometimes at Mirzapore and sometimes at Allahabad, where the Moulvi had perhaps formed a friendship with him. Moreover, the Moulvi is an old acquaintance. I hear of some rigid Mahomedans who are supposed to be Wahabees. After the lamentable death of Mr. Justice Norman the local police pryed into every hole and corner of the Wahabees. Mirzapore is supposed to be the abode of the Wahabees in the N.W.P., and the police there have succeeded in gathering some information regarding Abdullah, the assassin, from the Mahomedans of the town. I hear some of them have declared that the dastard murderer was their class-mate in the Arabic school a few years ago. In the course of the investigation of the Wahabee conspiracy the Mirzapore police found that the Arabic Moulvi used to correspond with Liakut Ali, the above-mentioned Wahabee. The magistrate of Mirzapore informed the magistrate of this district, who, with the superintendent of police, went on Sunday night (15th) last to search the house of the Moulvi. A few notes from his friend Liakut Ali and other Mahomedans have been found; but these letters do not refer to Wahabeeism. The Moulvi will be sent to-morrow, with other Mahomedans, to Mirzapore, to give his deposition before the magistrate.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

MISS CARPENTER.—A private letter informs us that Miss Mary Carpenter has abandoned her intention of visiting India this year, in consequence of pressure of home work.—Indian Mirror.

WORTHY OF PRAISE.—During the late inundations near Putia, Rajah Parash Narayan, Rai Bahadur, daily supplied food to about 3,500 suffering people and fodder for about six thousand of their cattle, which would otherwise have perished.—Englishman, Oct. 28.

THE MACLEOD MEMORIAL.—The Committee for "The Sir Donald Macleod Memorial" inform the subscribers that Sir Donald has expressed a wish that the memorial should be in the form of a gold medal and purse, to the value of the yearly interest, to be given to the individual who passes the best examination in Oriental classics combined with a competent knowledge of English. The competition is to be open to scholars from any institution in the Punjab.—Ibid.

THE CROPS.—The official reports on the crops in Bengal, received by the Government up to the 21st October, are generally most encouraging. In those districts which suffered from the floods the crops that have escaped are described as good, whilst the prospects of the winter crops are most favourable. The floods were everywhere rapidly subsiding, but sickness amongst the people and cattle disease were beginning to appear.

CIVIL.—Mr. Inglis goes to the Council next month; Mr. Reid succeeds him; Mr. Mayne, the Commissioner of the Allahabad Division, succeeds Mr. Reid in the Board of Revenue; Mr. Court, from Meerut, will succeed Mr. Mayne; Mr. Lynd will get the Meerut Commissionership; Mr. Forbes succeeds Mr. Lind at Agra, Mr. Ricketts going to Allahabad as Judge.

THE ALLAHABAD BARRACKS.—The result of the examination of the new barracks at Allahabad is that more than half of them must really be uncovered and their roofs reconstructed. The necessity was not, we are told, equally urgent in the case of all the condemned roofs, but absolute and permanent security could not be insured by any more partial measure.

RELIEFS.—With the sanction of Government the following alterations are made in the movements of relief for 1871-72, as published in G.O.C.C. dated the 22nd May 1871:—British Infantry—1st Battalion 8th Foot, from Nusseerabad to Cawnpore instead of Allahabad. 2nd Battalion 19th Foot, from Fort William to Allahabad instead of Cawnpore.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—The Bishop of Calcutta objects to re-license clergymen of the Church of England, who have once professed the faith of the Church of Rome. He has given no reason for this decision, which is contrary to the rule with regard to such men in England. There, a priest of the Church of Rome on taking the orders of the Established Church can at once be licensed to a living.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS.—A striking illustration of the enforcement of woman's rights at a station about two hundred miles from Jubbalpur is recorded in the local Chronicle:—A married man was imprudent enough a few days ago to get intoxicated, whereupon his wife expelled him from her house, and placed a sentry on guard with instructions not to allow the husband to enter the premises. After a couple of nights of loneliness, the wife relented and desired her spouse to return, but our latest information is that he declined complying with the request.

THE NATIVE COMPETITIONS.—The three young natives who have won their way into the Civil Service had a hearty welcome home the other evening at the Seven Tanks Villa. The Indian Mirror says the reception, a soiree, was attended by upwards of three hundred persons. The evening was spent in a concert and chemical experiments. Certainly the event is not a small one to the Hindoo community, and we hope the young men will do honour to their country.

THE MAHOMED KHEYL WAZIRIS.—Some time ago we noticed the surrender of the Mahomed Kheyl Waziris, and the arrest of the ringleaders concerned in the raid last year. The culprits, we read, have been sentenced to the comparatively light sentence of imprisonment for from three to five years in the Lahore jail. A fine of Rs. 7,000 has been imposed on the tribe, who have been sent back to their old lands, where they are quietly settling.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—The Madras Times thinks that the Uncovenanted Civil Service Examination, announced to be held in February, should be put off for another ten years until the thousands who have already passed are provided for. It does not see the advantage of another thousand passing an examination which they all think entitles them to an appointment, and who are all, of course, dissatisfied at not obtaining it.

A HOAX.—The Pioneer had, what it now itself calls, "a decidedly sensational paragraph" in its issue of the 23rd October, about a native having been found in a carriage of the mail train on its arrival at Futtehpore with his throat cut. The following is the pedigree of the story. The guard (apparently the original culprit) hoaxed the driver with it. The driver reported it to the Locomotive Superintendent, who reported it to the Assistant Inspector-General of Railways. Police, who, on investigation, found there was nothing to be investigated.

DEATH OF COLONEL EVATT.—A correspondent of a contemporary, dating from Nynee Tal, on the 25th Oct., furnishes the following:—"I regret to have to announce the death of Colonel Evatt, Staff Corps, which took place at Buttress Castle on Sunday morning last. His remains were interred with military honours yesterday morning. The deceased came up here in April last in a very sickly state and recently appeared before a medical committee with a view to obtaining leave on sick certificate to England. He has left a very large family in very straitened circumstances.

KASHMIR.—Great preparations are said to be going on in Kashmir for the reception of the Hon. Mr. Bourke, M.P., the Viceroy's brother, who was, according to latest accounts, daily expected there on a visit. Dewan Budri Nath Pandit had been deputed to receive him at the borders of Kashmir, on the other side of the Peer, and Vizier Passad, the Governor of Kashmir, would receive him in state as soon as he crossed the mountain. The Maharajah was preparing a grand entertainment for him at Srinugar.

THE SAUGOR BARRACKS.—The Engineers still refuse to allow the Saugor barracks to be occupied. There is a report that a number of men of the 2-25 are to be sent to that place. If they do not occupy the barracks, there will be very little room for them, and if they do, they will stand a very good chance of being buried alive. There is a report to the effect that the Governor-general has appointed a committee to assemble and report upon these buildings. A professional report is now in course of preparation for Government. Photographs are also being taken of the points where danger is the most to be apprehended; so that it seems superfluous to call for any other report. Captain Faber, who superintended these buildings, has been ordered out from England to defend himself, and the executive engineers are also to be brought up to the scratch. It is to be hoped that the blame will be laid upon the right person.

THE LOSHAI EXPEDITION.—The steamer Sir William Peel, with flat Gogra in tow, left Calcutta on the morning of Oct. 28, taking the 2nd Goorkhas, under Colonel Macpherson, C.B., V.C., and one company Sappers and Miners under Lieut. Hyslop, and the guns of the Peshawur Mountain Battery, to Chittagong for the Loshai expedition. The regiment was expected to arrive at Chittagong on Nov. 7, the passage being made by the Sunderbund and the Sundeep Channel. Captain Birch, who left Calcutta in the Lucknow about a fortnight ago, is, we are informed, to take command of 300 police, who are waiting for him at Sylhet. It is believed that he will be well to the front with these men, who will act as pioneers to cut jungle, &c. It is expected that the auxiliaries of the Manipur Rajah will be useful as scouts and foragers, and from their knowledge of the country and language, they should be able to give some assistance in the way of intelligence, if not in actual fighting.—Englishman.

MILITARY.—The Commander-in-Chief in India has notified that general officers commanding divisions and districts will, in future, be held responsible for the due performance of running drill by the regiments serving under their command, and they will inspect the drill and report upon it in their annual confidential reports. Returns of running drill will be no longer required. Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. D. M. Fraser has been appointed to the command of the Brigade and the Royal Artillery, Peshawur district. Colonel H. Francis has been appointed to the command of the Royal Artillery, Saugor district, in the room of Colonel Young, resigned. Captain Sir W. Hamilton is detained at Simla on duty. It is said that he is engaged on the compilation of an important work on the artillery. Major-General Sir H. Tombs, K.C.B., V.C., has been gazetted "permanently to the divisional staff of the army, in room of Major-General W. F. Beatson, whose tour of service expired on the 25th ult.; and Major-General J. M. B. F. Tytler, C.B., "temporarily"—during the absence on leave to Europe on medical certificate of Major-General J. Fordyce, or until further orders. General Tytler has been appointed to the Sirhind division.

NATIVE STUDENTS IN ENGLAND.—The Punjabi Akhbar of the 9th September has a long article on the visits of the natives of India to England for the purpose of completing their education. The writer is glad to find that natives are becoming more and more enterprising, and that while formerly the mercantile class among them alone undertook voyages to England, numbers of young men now go there year by year to prosecute their studies, almost all of whom, whether they be candidates for the civil or medical service, or study for the bar, not only pass successful examinations and obtain high marks, but sometimes leave their European competitors behind. In the civil service examination held last year, all of the successful native competitors, according to this paper, passed in the higher grades, and obtained high marks, not only in English, but other languages as well. A Bengali Baboo of Christ College, for instance, stood first in Greek, Latin, and Mathematics among all the competitors, native as well as English. This Baboo, named Anund Mohan Bose, has already obtained the degree of M.A., and is now said to be trying for the LL.D. Again, Syad Mahmud, the second son of Syad Ahmad Khan, C.S.I., obtained the first place in English literature; while Pandit Suraj Mall, son of Pandit Man Phul, C.S.I., is also winning laurels in the field of learning.—Englishman.

THIEVES IN ALLAHABAD.—We fear the Allahabad thieves have almost got the upper hand of the police. Unless we are misinformed they go about at night committing thefts, almost amounting to acts of dacoity, without fear of capture. The system they commonly adopt is to approach the house they design to rob, and by throwing kunkur or small stones, ascertain if the inhabitants are on the alert, or if the chowkidar, as usual, is sleeping. If any disturbance is made, they immediately make off, but if no notice be taken of the stone-throwing, they at once enter on their purpose of robbery. So bold have these thieves now become that they actually entered the lines of the Royal Artillery, and took a blanket off a horse before the eyes of the sycee on sentry, who attempted to prevent them, but being opposed by three men armed with latees, could do nothing but call on the European sentry, on whose approach the thieves decamped, taking with them, however, the blanket marked D-16, Division No. 6. A still more daring robbery was committed on Saturday in the house of Dr. Walker, the deputy inspector-general of hospitals. It appears that Dr. Walker had gone out for his usual drive about 5.30 P.M., at which time the bearer arranged his bedroom. On Dr. Walker's return, his bedroom was found to have been literally cleaned out—the blankets and sheets stolen off the bed, a number of flannel shirts, a shawl, and other articles of clothing made away with, and as yet we believe no clue has been found to the robbers. At Benares also the robbers seem to be having it pretty much their own way, over twenty robberies having been reported there lately. In some stations, we believe, there is a rule that after a certain hour all natives are obliged to carry a lantern; this system, if carried into effect here, and if the police did their duty, would soon reduce the number of thieves.—Pioneer.

H.M.'s 104TH REGIMENT BENGAL FUSILIERS.—The Major-General commanding the division inspected H.M.'s 104th Regiment Bengal Fusiliers on Friday last, the 20th instant. The regiment was completely equipped in heavy marching order, and received the General in line with a "general salute." After marching past the regiment was formed in three sides of a square, and Major-General Sir H. Tombs, K.C.B., V.C., addressed the regiment as follows:—"Colonel Harris,—As the 104th Regiment is about to leave my command I wish to say a few words of farewell. I am happy to say this is not the first time that I have had the honour of having this regiment under my command, but in the ordinary course of events most likely it will be the last. I am not going to speak of the distinguished services of the regiment, as no doubt these will be noticed by the representative of her Majesty in India, prior to its embarkation for England, but I wish to say a few words on my own behalf. What I have seen on parade this morning was generally good, and the appearance of the men, considering the season of the year, is healthy, which shows the care taken of the men. I know the regiment and its drill some years ago, but since it has been under my command here I have not had an opportunity of seeing the regiment at drill, but I have heard from my predecessor that it was very good, and that he was well satisfied with what he saw. Further, in looking over the inspection reports of the regiment, I find that the conduct has been uniformly good, and especially I notice there have been very few cases of insubordination, which crime I consider the worst a soldier could be guilty of. Colonel Harris, I congratulate you personally on having command of this regiment, with which I believe you have been associated for the last thirty years; and as it is about to take its first tour of home service, I have no doubt from what I have seen—nay, I feel sure—that you will have the aid of all ranks to uphold that gallantry in the field and good conduct in quarters which has distinguished its service in India. Colonel Harris, officers, and men, I wish you a safe and pleasant journey to England in all sincerity."—Pioneer, Oct. 23.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Nov. 1.—The offices have only been opened for two days, and business can hardly be said to have recommenced, so that we give no detailed reports. The sales of Piece Goods made during the holidays were larger than has been the case for some seasons lately, and the demand continues to be steady. Prices generally seem to have an upward tendency.

STATION TALK.

COCHIN, Oct. 23.—The resignation of Sir T. Madava Row is the all-engrossing topic of conversation here at present. Those who take an interest in the affairs of Travancore and those who do not alike deplore the event. The Madras Mail has obviously taken a very correct view of the affair, notwithstanding all that interested partisans of a Sadr or a Zillah Judge may say to the contrary. Speculation, as may be naturally expected, is quite busy in appointing a successor to Sir T. Madava Row. One names the Dewan of Cochin, little aware that he would not exchange places for any consideration. Another makes mention of Mr. Juggonatha Row, a Deputy Collector in the British service. No doubt his Highness the Maharajah is favourably disposed to him, but it is not certain that the Madras Government will approve of the appointment. A third would have the Hon. V. Ramiengar of your city as the next Dewan of Travancore, but who knows whether he wants the appointment. Of one thing I feel sure, and that is, the selection will have to be made outside Travancore. I feel equally sure that be the successful man who he may, he will soon find that the office is not a very enviable one. When Sir T. Madava Row assumed the ministerial reins of Travancore everything was wrong and any little that he did was at once noticed as an improvement. Matters are, however, now different. The finances are in the very best condition. Justice is more speedily rendered and in a much purer form than before. The salaries of the sirkar servants have been raised as far as the circumstances of the country will permit. Public works are pushed on with a vigour and at an expenditure of money that will astonish a stranger. And as for the legislation, Travancore, not unlike British India, is suffering already from the effects of an over-dose. Such being the case Sir Madava Row's successor will have work enough to maintain things as they are, and if he has not genius enough to strike out now and then something new, something original, people will begin to think that he is but an ordinary man, and that the country has not benefited by the change. However, all can wait and see. Mr. Ballard, the British resident, is expected to arrive at Balghaty, native Cochin, about the middle of next month, and is to remain there for some four months or so. Next month, too, are to be celebrated the nuptials of one of the Princes of the Royal family of Cochin. It is to be rather a formidable affair. A state dinner is to be given on the occasion to the elite of Cochin, and preparations are already being made for the occasion. His royal highness the Cochin Rajah has left Cochin for Eranjalicoda, twenty miles from this. A religious ceremony has called him thither. The Dewan is also at Eranjalicoda now. His highness and the Dewan are both expected to be back at Cochin during the week.—Madras Athenæum Correspondent.

FOREST DEPARTMENT.—It is expected that, with the proposed reorganisation of the Madras P.W.D., the Forest Conservancy Department will also undergo some radical changes. The measure is now under the serious consideration of Government, and will probably be matured and carried out before Lord Napier lays down the reins of Government.

THE HON. MR. J. B. NORTON.—A meeting of the Hindu and Mohomedan community of Madras has been held for the purpose of considering and adopting measures to do honour to the Hon. J. B. Norton on his approaching departure from India. After several speeches had been delivered, it was proposed by Mr. Ranganada Sastri that a subscription list be opened, and that subscriptions be raised to establish a scholarship and award prizes in Mr. Norton's name. The proposition was carried.

THE VANINGEN AFFAIR.—The trial of Edwin VanIngen, junior, for attempt to commit culpable homicide not amounting to murder, and causing grievous hurt on provocation; and of Frederick Henry Richard Lambart, and Edward Bowater McInnes, for criminal trespass, insult, assault, and abetting, came on at the Madras Criminal Sessions on Wednesday, November 1. Ensign Frere was prohibited by Government from proceeding to England on sick leave till his evidence had been given. Mr. VanIngen was acquitted. The result as regards the others is not yet known.

MILITARY.—The local Herald says:—"Sir Frederick Haines is expected at Bangalore shortly to look at the 16th Lancers prior to their marching for Secunderabad. The regiment has taken kindly to outpost duties under the auspices of Major Wilkinson, the commanding officer, and both officers and men like their new work immensely. A correspondent thinks that to those partial to an early ride into the country there can be no prettier sight than to see the Lancers practising the new manœuvres, and he is of opinion that Sir Frederick Haines will be quite as much pleased as was General Burton the other day."

THE NEW CHIEF JUSTICE OF MADRAS.—A good lawyer, popular with the Bar of Calcutta and Allahabad, more especially with the native portion thereof,—a most painstaking Judge, who, in his judgments, has a list to the side of severity—a deadly foe to all touting and mal-practices on the part of the Bar—a man not greatly given to hospitality, and not always popular with his colleagues on the bench—a gentleman, courteous and affable to those who do not presume to encroach upon his dignity,—and a grass-widower,—is Sir Walter Morgan, who has been appointed to succeed Sir Colley Scotland as Chief Justice of the High Court of Madras.—Madras Mail.

MADRAS NATIVE FEMALE EDUCATION SOCIETY.—The honorary secretary of this society notifies that, "with a view of making deeper impressions on the minds of her countrymen, as to the utmost importance and manifold advantages of the rapid spread of practical education among her fellow-sisters, Sowphagiavathy Sree Rungamba Garu, who has lectured upon the "Principles and Precedents of Female Education," and on "Omnipresence" and "Omnipotence," will address the male and female audience in Telegu on "Omniscience," (these being the first three divisions of "Human Being," which is the subject of her lectures), at the premises of M.R.Ry. P. Veeraperumal Pillay, at Thondiarpett, Trivettoor High Road, Madras.—Madras Mail, Oct. 28.

A NEW STEAM LINE.—The S.S. Tenasserim, the first of a line of steamers that are to run regularly between Glasgow and Rangoon, arrived here on Friday. She is a large powerful vessel, 1,172 tons register, but is expected to carry about 3,000 tons of rice. The Tenasserim left Glasgow on the 16th August, and would have arrived here earlier than she has done had it not been for detention in the Suez Canal. She brought seven passengers, but has ample accommodation for a much larger number. Along with a valuable general cargo, she brought out, in pieces, a new steamer for the Irrawaddy Flotilla and Burmese Steam Navigation Company, which will be put up at Dallah, and it is expected will be ready for service by the close of the year. This new river boat is to be named the Alompra, and is guaranteed to go several knots an hour faster than the fastest boat now in India.—Rangoon Times, Oct. 9.

AN OUTRAGE AT BANGALORE.—An eye-witness informs the Herald that as three European soldiers were quietly walking through the streets of the Mahomedan quarter, near the New Market, they were followed by a large crowd of excited Mahomedans, who abused, hustled, jeered, and finally assaulted them. The men endeavoured to effect a peaceable and quiet retreat, in doing which one received a severe cut on the head, and was left on the ground. "The men," our correspondent, a native, assures us, "did nothing to provoke the cowardly assault, and the police peons were too frightened to interfere." We are aware that a most obnoxious feeling exists towards Europeans, and especially soldiers in the breasts of the lower classes of the Mahomedan community, but if such brutal attacks become common, and we are assured that the one we notice is not the first of its kind, we shall not be in the least surprised to hear of reprisals. The authorities should look to it, that nothing worse happens.

AN INDIAN ROMANCE.

The following story is extracted from the Indian papers :—

"Some days ago a Zoroastrian family, flying from the famine and pestilence in Yezd, travelled on foot to Bunder Abbas, in the hope of finding relief and being sent on to Bombay by Khosroo, the brother of Godrez Mehrwan, a Persian merchant of Bombay, who has the charge of a fund raised at Bombay. They had to endure the greatest hardships from a scarcity of food; and prostrated by fatigue and starvation, the husband unfortunately died before the party reached their destination. Having disposed of his last remains in the best way they could under the circumstances, the rest of the family—a middle-aged woman and her daughter, about sixteen years of age—continued their journey on foot to Bunder Abbas. At the latter place they were taken care of by Khosroo, and it was arranged to send them, along with other suffering Zoroastrians, by a buggalow bound for Bombay. They were about to proceed on board when the girl became very ill at the Bunder. Medical assistance was obtained without loss of time, but she got worse. Life was fast ebbing away; she became cold, and in a few minutes more was given up as dead. Her mother, though frantic with grief for the loss of her child, was prevailed upon to embark on board the buggalow that was ready to leave the port. Before doing so she performed a last duty to her child, and, giving some keronees (coin) to a Persian, begged of him to consign the dead body to a proper place. The buggalow started for Bombay. The Persian pocketed the money; but, leaving the girl's corpse to lie upon the beach, he went his way. The unfortunate mother, the only surviving member of the family that fled from Yezd, arrived in Bombay a few days ago by the buggalow, named, we believe, the Mouffer. She was housed at the Chowpatty Dhurrumsalla, and related the story of her misfortunes to sympathising hearts, some countrywomen who had preceded her to Bombay. One of her listeners knew the woman, as well as her girl, who was described as having died on the beach at Bunder Abbas. But she also knew that she had seen the girl in Bombay, and that she was engaged as a servant to a Parsee gentleman residing at Colaba. A consultation took place between some of the women living at the dhurmsalla, and the girl was brought there from her master's house. The mother was told that her daughter was not dead, and that she was in Bombay. The death scene at Bunder Abbas was fresh in her memory, and she wept piteously at the apparent mockery of her mental anguish, made by her own countrywomen. She could sooner believe that the sun had descended to earth than that her dead girl could be seen alive in Bombay. She talked of the keronees she had paid for the body being consigned to its last resting-place, and wept again for the dear one who had died before her eyes. Gentle persuasion at last soothed her feelings, and in a fitting moment, when the suddenness of the surprise might not operate injuriously, the mother and the lost child were clasped in each other's embrace. The violence of the excitement having abated, mutual explanations ensued. The heat of the sun, as the girl was left on the beach at Bunder Abbas, apparently dead, warmed into life again. She was removed by some passers-by to the house of Khosroo, where she was promptly taken care of, and soon became convalescent. A steamer was about to leave for Bombay with a number of famished Persians, and she was put on board of her with the others. The steamer arrived in Bombay several days before the buggalow by which the girl's mother was a passenger. On her arrival at the dhurmsalla at Chowpatty, a Parsee gentleman good naturedly took her into his service, and she was residing at his house in Colaba when her mother arrived in Bombay. And they met each other—the grieving mother and her lost child—under the judicious arrangement made by their kind friends."

COTTON REPORT OF THE MOFUSSIL COMPANY.

The following are the reports which have lately been received from the cotton districts regarding the prospects of the crop :—

DHOLLERA, Oct. 30.—I have little of fresh interest to add to my report of 24th inst. The weather during the week has been favourable, and the crops are doing well.

Our market during the early part of the week was very firm, but is at present a little easier. I attributed the high prices ruling to the reckless speculation carried on here, and, so long as this continues, our market will respond but slowly to Bombay. The rate this morning, with selection, is equivalent to Rs. 220 per Bombay candy.

WURDHA (HINGUNGHAT), Nov. 1.—The weather is all that can be desired. Picking is being pushed forward, and a few bojas have already come to market. We have every reason to expect this season a better selection than there has been offering many years past.

SHEAGAUM, 1st.—The weather for the past fortnight has been very hot and dry, with no signs of rain. The cotton crop still looks well, but would be much improved if we had some moisture in the shape of night dews or rain. Great anxiety prevails as to the supply of water in the wells. Should we not have some rain soon the wells in this neighbourhood will be almost dry.

KHAMGAUM, Nov. 1.—Since I last wrote you the weather has been very hot in the day, with cold nights and mornings. The crops are doing well, but there is no doubt that they will be short. I have just seen some new kuppas, it was very clean and white, and had a fair staple. There is still some old cotton offering, but at very high rates. Contracts for new cotton, January delivery, have been made at Rs. 238 to Rs. 240, with an advance of Rs. 60 per candy, and at Rs. 236 to Rs. 238 the whole amount paid now.

BROACH.—The weather since my last report was agreeable, and on the 27th instant there was a copious dew-fall, which appears to have been very beneficial to the cotton crop. On the succeeding morning there was a fog, which was not, however, of sufficient duration to produce any ill effects.

A few transactions for April delivery have transpired at about Rs. 250 to Rs. 255 per candy, but no great desire for business of this kind is evinced, in consequence of a want of confidence in the sellers.

From Surat there are complaints of drought.

BHOWNUGGUR.—The market, which was in a drooping state, was somewhat excited by considerable purchases by the agent of a Bombay firm at Rs. 230 to Rs. 232. Cotton is now, however, procurable at Rs. 226 to Rs. 228 per candy.

In consequence of a deficiency in the rainfall the crop is expected to be shorter than the average, to the extent, some affirm, of 25 per cent.; but the present condition of the plants appears to me satisfactory, and I see no reason to look for a falling.

OOMRAWUTTEE, Nov. 2.—The weather still continues fine; a little picking is going on, and we expect a few bales immediately.

STATION TALK.

UPPER SIND, Oct. 15.—The great embezzlement, or defalcation case, is still going on. Colonel Phayre is yet of opinion that the accounts are falsified, although he has been told by the Commissioner that they are correct, and no charge can be laid against the defendants. He has, therefore, I believe, informed Colonel Phayre, that should he hereafter fail to bring home guilt to the accused, he will have to pay the expenses incurred on account of litigation, or any claim that may be made by the defendants for damages. I forgot to mention that Wussunmul is at large on bail to the amount of Rs. 20,000, and his moonshee, Gadeemul, on one of Rs. 10,000. There is a report current, that should the prosecution fail on the present charges, it will bring forward some other serious charges. Colonel Phayre, in looking over the accounts of the Keolee District for 1865-66, has found Rs. 40,000 unaccounted for, making now a total of nearly a lakh of rupees. A responsible clerk from the Accountant General's office at Bombay has been called to verify the accounts. When one looks into these things, it becomes a question how these frauds (if they be such) have not been heretofore detected. This shows that there has been a very irregular supervision over the accounts of the district, the more so as these accounts necessarily pass through several hands to be checked and audited. It is apparent that the required check and supervision had not been exercised. Here is the hinge that the colonel cannot turn on. He is not to blame, as he was not the chief district officer during the time. Whoever he be, the parties to blame in the auditing, &c., should explain these matters. I suppose they will wash their hands of it, as was done in Barron's case. News was received here on the 11th that some of the principal Sirdars and Chiefs in the Khan of Khelat's territory have rebelled and joined the hill tribes. The Khan's subjects at Cutch have been seized with fear. They will most likely leave the country and come into British territory, or ask for protection. In addition to this, the startling news of an attempt to assassinate the Khan has been lately received; further, that disaffection has crept into the troops, who have apparently rebelled. The Commander-in-Chief here as thought it advisable to patrol our frontier, and has despatched the 2nd Sind Horse under the command of Captain Forbes to watch the frontier line as far as Bagh. This step will allay the fear of the Cutchee people, and assure them of no danger.—P.S.—I learn that the rebellious chiefs have seized Quettah.—Sindian Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MR. PARKES.—Mr. Parkes, C.E., Consulting Engineer for the Kurrachee Harbour Works, who arrived here not long ago, left Calcutta on the 20th October for Bussorah, for the purpose, we believe, of inspecting the harbour of that place. Mr. Parkes will return to Kurrachee shortly, en route to England.

ARRIVAL OF THE "MESOPOTAMIA."—The steamship Mesopotamia, 765 tons, George Phillips, commander, from London, via the Suez Canal, arrived here on the 11th October. She left London on the 6th September, and brought a general cargo. The passengers by her were Mr. Hart for Kurrachee, and Mr. Forbes for Bussorah. The Mesopotamia left for the Gulf on Saturday.—Scindian.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS.—H.M.'s Indian troop transport Malabar, Captain Sholto Douglas, arrived in Bombay harbour on the 1st Nov. from England, with H.M.'s 44th Regiment and details of the 65th Regiment. She left Suez on the 18th Oct. Her complement of passengers consisted of 64 officers, 17 ladies, and 7 children, 928 men, 125 women, and 127 children. During the voyage one birth and two deaths occurred. The 44th Regiment will proceed to Kamptee.

INDICATIONS OF FAMINE IN INDIA.—Present indications lead us to anticipate a period of distress in India from insufficiency of food. Our last monsoon has been distributed in a way fitted to make it nearly as unproductive as possible. In Western India the supply of rain has been from 25 to 50 per cent. below the average, and the excess has been given to the north of India and Bengal, causing destructive inundations. The area affected by this unequal distribution is immense, and anything like a general failure of the crops would involve wide-spread disaster surpassing any of the calamities of this kind that we have had for many years. We hope, however, that some compensatory elements may yet present themselves, and the final report be more favourable than the present outlook.—Bombay Guardian.

MORE DISTRESSED PERSIANS.—On Saturday last the buggla Mozuffa arrived in Bombay with sixty-seven distressed Persian Zorastrians from Bunder Abbas. Seventy-one embarked at that place, but four died on the voyage. They were sent on Sunday to the charitable dhurmsalla at Chowpatty, where clothes provided by some charatible Parsees were distributed amongst them. Messrs. Godrez Mehrwan apprehend considerable difficulty in bringing to Bombay the hundreds of famine-striken Zoroastrians who have fled to Bunder Abbas; and they think that more funds are required in addition to the Rs. 12,410 which have been already subscribed for the purpose.—Bombay Gazette, Nov. 4.

SANITARY.—Have we a Health Officer in Bombay? We ask the question, because one of the recent freaks of economy of the Municipality has been to stop pumping the sewage out of the main drain into the sea at Lovegrove. The consequences may be imagined. The foul stream has been overflowing the flats, and in this hot weather causing a malaria which poisons the whole neighbourhood. If this is one of the things which are to last till "next midsummer," because the town happens to have got into debt, the sooner the Municipality is swept away the better. It strikes us that Dr. Hewlett, who we always understood had not a minute of spare time, but who has nevertheless undertaken of late the working of the Contagious Diseases act in addition to his other duties, would be much more usefully occupied in keeping one of the most popular parts of Bombay sweet and wholesome than in writing elaborate reports on the pedigrees of all the prostitutes in the island.—Bombay Gazette.

ARAB DISTURBANCES AT ZANZIBAR.—DR. LIVINGSTONE.—THE IVORY TRADE.—Mr. John Kirk, acting political agent and H.M.'s Consul at Zanzibar, has forwarded the following items of intelligence to the Secretary to Government, dated Zanzibar, 22nd September, 1871:—

Sir,—Letters just received by special messengers who left Unyanyembe about a month ago inform us of a sad disaster that has befallen the Arab settlement there, and that will in all likelihood stop the road to Ujiji and Karague for some time to come. All accounts agree as to the main facts, but naturally the letters written us Mr. Stanley, an American gentleman who was on the spot, are the most circumstantial and reliable. I am indebted to Mr. Webb, the American Consul here, for some details related in those letters, which will no doubt be published in full elsewhere. Briefly, the position is this:—The Arab colony of the interior, whose centre is Unyanyembe, has for some time been led by a set of avaricious, unprincipled men, whose acts of extortion, both on native and the poorer Arabs, have for some time back been complained of to Syed Burgash, who is impotent to interfere at such a distance so long as things go well for the Arabs. A chief, whose village was one day's journey distant on the main road to Ujiji and Karague, fell under the displeasure of the Unyanyembe settlers, and his place was attacked in due course by a force of about fifteen hundred muskets. Seeing that he could not hold the stockaded village, he retired with his followers, and formed an ambush for the return of the attacking party when laden with ivory and other booty. The result was disastrous to the Arabs, and a great many were killed, including ten or twenty of the leader's men of good family here. The Arab retreat soon became a rout, and much property was lost. Fortunately, Mr. Stanley, who was weak and ill from fear, managed to return to Unyanyembe, but he was abandoned by the Arabs, whose conduct he speaks of as cowardly in the extreme. Such is the constant state of things in Central Africa. The road to Ujiji will now be shut for a time, and when we may again hear of Dr. Livingstone is most uncertain. One of the men who came down now says that there was a rumour that Mahomed bin Gharib and the white man (Dr. Livingstone) would come back from Mayema by way of Marunga and Wemba. The report is worth nothing, I consider, but I may as well mention it.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

THE CAMP OF EXERCISE.

Head Quarters, Simla, Oct. 26.—The following distribution of the force at the Camp of Exercise, near Delhi, has been approved of by H.E. the C. in C.

2. Each brigade will be under the command of the senior officer present with it, for all purposes of discipline and interior economy, during its stay in camp, except when an officer may be specially appointed to it

3. In view, however, to enlarging the field of instruction, general officers commanding divisions will be allowed occasionally to select any other field officers under their command, whom they may consider duly qualified to take charge of brigades, for drill purposes, the same being invariably notified in divisional orders.

4. In order that the short time allotted for the Camp of Exercise near Delhi should be utilised to the fullest extent possible, the C. in C. in India desires that every staff and regimental mounted officer, who is to be there on duty, shall make himself thoroughly acquainted, before the 15th December next, with all the instructions laid down in the field exercise book for the movements of divisions and brigades.

5. In the same manner, all the regiments composing the force should, as far as practicable, be exercised in brigade movements before their departure to join the camp, in order that all ranks may be accustomed to the ordinary manœuvres of a brigade, and be ready to take part in the more extended operations which the assembly of a considerable force will render practicable.

6. The course of instruction which the C. in C. is desirous of seeing carried out during the six weeks of the Camp of Exercise is as follows :—

7. The first week will be devoted entirely to brigade drill, carried out under the superintendence of divisional commanders, which should be confined entirely to the practice of the different brigade movements laid down in the field exercise book.

8. If the time allotted to these drills be employed with zeal and judgment, his Excellency feels convinced that the several brigades will be in such a state of efficiency as will enable them to take full advantage of the higher course of instruction which will follow it.

9. The next fortnight will be given up entirely to the instruction of the divisions as separate bodies under their own commanders. After a few preliminary drills, to accustom the different brigades to work together, and accustom the troops to manœuvre in two lines, the higher tactical instruction will commence, and generals of divisions will prepare their divisions for taking part in the larger movements which will be carried out when the whole force is brought together.

10. The Commander in Chief hopes then to find the divisions well acquainted with the whole duties of outposts and reconnaissances, as well as with the duties which the line, in conjunction with and under the guidance of the engineers, would have to perform during the preliminary operations of the attack of field positions or fortresses.

FAREWELL ORDER TO H.M.'s 104TH REGIMENT.

The following farewell order appears in the Gazette of India :—

H.M.'s 104th regiment (Bengal) fusiliers being about to quit India for the first time, being the last of the regiments left in the country which served at the siege of Delhi, the Governor General in Council desires, in bidding it farewell, to place on record an expression of the appreciation in which the services of the corps have been held by the Government of India.

Raised in 1839 as the 2nd regiment of European infantry of the Bengal army, it proceeded in 1842 to form a portion of the army of reserve which was assembled at Ferozepore.

At the close of 1843 the regiment marched to Scinde, where it was employed with a force under the personal command of General Sir C. J. Napier, G.C.B., in the coercion of some border tribes.

In the cold season of 1845-46 it formed part of the "Scinde Field Force," under the command of the same officer, which kept the field while the army of the Sutlej was engaged with the Sikh forces.

In 1848-49 the regiment was attached at first to the 4th, and subsequently to the 3rd, brigade of infantry of the army of the Punjab, and was engaged with the Sikh forces at the battle of Chillianwallah.

It was also very prominently engaged and suffered severely in the action of Goojerat, and formed a portion of the flying column, which, under command of Sir Walter Gilbert, followed the retiring Sikh army.

For its gallant, exemplary, and praiseworthy conduct in the operations of the army of the Punjab, it received the distinction of being made a "fusilier" regiment.

The corps was subsequently engaged in the second Burmese war of 1852-53, during which it maintained its high character for discipline and good conduct.

The Bengal fusiliers was one of the four regiments of British infantry present throughout the operations against Delhi in 1857, where it sustained 245 casualties in action. After the capture, it formed part of a column sent through the Meywattee country, under the command of Brigadier Showers.

Since its formation in 1839, the regiment has upheld, under all circumstances, a very high character, which the Governor-general in Council, in bidding it farewell, feels assured it will always maintain.

HALF STAFF SALARY.—The Government of India has decided that an officer transferred to another appointment while on furlough, ceases to draw the half staff salary of his former appointment from date of landing, when he draws full pay of his rank, provided of course that he does not draw less than his furlough pay till he joins his new appointment.

THE FOREST DEPARTMENT.

Bombay Castle, Oct. 17, 1871.

Letter from the Conservator of Forests, Northern Division, dated Aug. 28, 1871, submitting his Annual Administration Reports of the Forests of the Northern Division for the year 1870–71:—

RESOLUTION.

During the year under report the revised system of forest administration was inaugurated, and two separate reports from the Conservators of the Northern and Southern Divisions have now to be reviewed.

2. The gross revenue amounted to Rs. 9,62,476, and the expenditure to Rs. 4,45,131, leaving a sum of Rs. 5,17,345 to represent the net forest revenue of the entire Presidency, exclusive of Sind. The value of the stock in hand amounted to Rs. 3,46,589, and the amount of outstandings to Rs. 1,74,911.

In the preceding year the gross revenue amounted to Rs. 10,23,433, and the expenditure to Rs. 4,15,477, leaving Rs. 6,09,955 as the net proceeds. There is a falling off, therefore, this year in the net receipts of Rs. 92,610. On the other hand, the value of wood in stock at the close of 1869–70 was only Rs. 2,29,271, and the outstandings amounted to Rs. 2,15,005. The following contrasted statement shows the actual difference between the two years:—

Net revenue	Rs. 6,09,955 ...	Rs. 5,17,345
Value of stock in hand ...	2,29,271 ...	3,46,589
Outstanding	2,15,005 ...	1,74,911
	Rs. 10,54,231	Rs. 10,38,845

The actual decrease is, therefore, inconsiderable.

3. The financial results of the two years for each of the collectorates in the Presidency contrast as follows:—

	1869-70.			1870-71.

4. The chief falling off has been in Canara. Major Peyton attributes this partly to the general depressed state of trade, but principally to the destructive stamp fee system in the adjacent province of Mysore, where apparently anyone is allowed to fell, without restriction of any kind, a art-load of squared timber on payment of a fee varying from Rs. 7 to Rs. 9.

* Including Rs. 5,000 on account of Broach. † Deduct loss.

The falling off in the demand for timber is evidenced by the fact that the value of the quantity in stock at the end of the year is set down at Rs. 2,57,974, whereas at the end of the preceding year there was only Rs. 90,935 worth in hand. A communication on the subject of the fee system has been made to the Chief Commissioner, Mysore, who is fully alive to the evil, and is taking steps to put a stop to it.

The apparent decrease in Surat is owing to a sum of Rs. 67,000 not having been paid into the Treasury till after March 31, 1871, and the difference in Nassick is owing to the Akola talooka having been transferred to Nuggur.

5. On the whole, therefore, H.E. the Governor in Council has no reason to be otherwise than satisfied with the financial position of the department.

6. Working operations have been carried on and supervised with vigour and judgment. The only exception to the system of departmental cuttings seems to have been in the case of the Haveillee talooka of the Poona Collectorate, where the right to cut jungle rafters per hundred and common firewood per candy was sold by auction. Explanation as to why such a practice was allowed is to be submitted. H.E. in Council cannot but feel doubtful of the advisability of continuing the dead-wood contract system in Tanna. Unless the contractor's operations are most closely supervised, there is nothing to prevent his committing very serious depredations on the forests. If it pays the contractor to remove this wood, the department ought, under proper management, to be able to do so also at a profit. The Conservator of the Northern Division is requested to pay particular attention to this point. In Canara the establishment of a steam saw-mill will no doubt effect much economy; but until it is seen how the machinery recently ordered out from England answers, it will not be advisable to incur any further expenditure in this direction.

7. Much attention has been paid to plantations in most of the collectorates. The description of the teak plantations in Canara is particularly interesting, and the attention of all forest officers is to be directed to the plan of rearing teak seedlings described by Major Peyton in paragraphs 47 to 56 of his report. In the Nassick Collectorate little appears to have been done in the way of plantations; and in the Rutnagherry, Kulladghee, Sholapoor, and most of the Guzerat Collectorates, the work has yet to be commenced. H.E. the Governor in Council must again impress upon all collectors and forest officers the great necessity there is for establishing fuel plantations in the vicinity of large towns. It should be the object of the Forest Department to utilise in this way every available piece of ground, and they should consider it part of their duty to sow and plant with babool, bamboo, or other useful trees, the sides of all roads and cart tracks. The work of planting road-side trees of a kind which require fencing and watering can best be done by the Revenue Department, through the agency of the village officers; but it should be the special business of the Forest Department to look after other descriptions which do not require special tending.

8. The depot system has not worked satisfactorily, and it has been decided to abandon it in the Sattara Collectorate.

[Paragraph 9 omitted.]

10. In the Canara district there are special difficulties attending the work. There, instead of reserving forests from the area under cultivation, the reverse operation will probably have to be carried out, and it will most likely be necessary to consider the whole country as forest, except such portions as have been demarcated for cultivation. The Collector of Canara, Mr. Shaw Stewart, whose long experience and great interest in all forest matters entitle his opinion to much weight, will, in communication with the Survey Commissioner and Conservator, be able to advise Government as to the best course to be pursued.

11. Free grants of wood and bamboos to the value in all of Rs. 20,106 have been made. The Conservator of the Northern Division considers it mistaken liberality to make these grants; but he should bear in mind that the people to whom they have been made are entitled to much consideration at the hands of this department; and that it is the best policy to enlist their good offices and wishes as much as possible in favour of his department. He will be of course right to watch the exercise of the privilege, and bring to notice any instances of its abuse that may come to his knowledge.

In all 847 forest offences have been committed, 642 convictions obtained, fines to the amount of Rs. 5,610 inflicted, and wood to the value of Rs. 2,267 sold.

The Right Hon. the Governor in Council has much pleasure in recording his entire approbation of the zealous and successful manner in which the two conservators, Mr. Shuttleworth and Major Peyton, have conducted the duties of their respective divisions. Amongst the officers entitled to special commendation are Messrs. Barrett, Muller, and Wallinger.

OVERLAND AND INLAND POSTAL RATES,

From the Government of India to the Secretary of State for India.

May 16, 1871.

We have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Grace's public despatch No. 17, dated March 9, 1871, from which we regret to learn that the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury finally decline to accede certain claims which we have made for the relief of the taxpayers of British India.

2. We have urged in previous despatches that it is unjust to saddle this country with a charge of £12,269 in respect of the postal service between Galle and Calcutta, explaining that our postal interest in this branch of the lines served by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company is so insignificant that we could readily even dispense with it altogether.

3. The Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury point out finally that, for reasons given, this branch line has been rightly treated as an incident of the whole service undertaken by the contractors. To this we desire to reply that we have never for a moment disputed the correctness of this statement. Our claim has been throughout simply this, that, inasmuch as the branch line between Galle and Calcutta is necessary only "as an incident of the whole service," and would never have been sanctioned for the direct postal benefits obtained from it, its cost should have been, and should now be, distributed equitably among the several countries in whose interest the contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company was made.

4. We continue to consider this claim indisputably fair and equitable, and we cannot accept as in any respect a satisfactory and sufficient answer to it, the allegation that it would be inconvenient to "unsettle the whole arrangements in order to determine how the relief," to which this country is justly entitled, is "to be made good by the various other contributors."

5. Again, we have remonstrated against the injustice of the absorption by the British Post-office of the whole of the excess postage collected as well in British India as in Great Britain upon the mails despatched by the French packets, and have emphatically claimed for the revenues of British India the portion of that excess collected in India.

6. The only answer afforded to this claim is, that the Lords of the Treasury, "having given it their consideration, are not prepared to alter or disturb the present arrangement."

7. In this case, again, nothing is left for us but to express our regret that this country is thus deprived of revenue which may be of no considerable amount, but which, nevertheless, it ought not to lose.

RESOLUTION.

It appears from this correspondence that the average actual payment received by the Indian Post-office for carrying letters addressed to Great Britain does not, after deducting the discount paid on the sale of the postage labels, exceed three pies for a letter weighing half an ounce, and that in respect to letters addressed to other foreign countries via Great Britain there is a positive loss.

2. The charge for a letter weighing the equivalent of half an ounce carried from one place to another in India (deducting the average discount), is 22½ pie. Moreover, the Indian Post-office makes specially costly arrangements for expediting the mails received from and addressed to the United Kingdom. So that it has, on the whole, at present, to bear an annual loss on this account of about three lakhs of rupees (£30,000).

3. The Government of India has made earnest and repeated endeavours to induce the Imperial Government to consent to a distribution of the postal revenue derived from these letters more equitable to British India.

4. These endeavours have been unsuccessful; and it is evident that no relief can be expected in this way. On the contrary, the reduction of the fixed rate of exchange for adjusting transactions between the Imperial and Indian Governments from 2s. to 1s. 11d. the rupee has deprived the Indian revenues of an important compensation.

5. Eleven pence (the amount payable to the British Post-office on each half-ounce letter) cost, at 2s. the rupee, 7 annas 4 pie; at 1s. 11d. the rupee, it costs more than 7 annas 7 pie; so that the alteration of the fixed rate of exchange, however just in itself, has deprived the revenues of India of rather more than 3 pie on each half-ounce letter for the postage on which it has to account to the British Post-office.

6. It would be quite unjustifiable for the Government of India to continue to carry the correspondence of this country with the rest of the world at a heavy charge to the general revenues.

7. The Right Hon. the Governor General in Council, therefore, reluctantly resolves that the Director General of the Post-office shall be instructed to arrange for the levy, from the earliest convenient date, on behalf of the Indian revenues, of additional postage at the rate of 1d., or 8 pie on each half-ounce letter which passes to or from India through Great Britain, and in respect to which accounts have to be rendered to the British Post-office.

8. The Director General must further report whether the use of labels of specified denominations may not be rendered compulsory for the payment of the postage on letters despatched by the contract mail steamers to places out of British India, and, if so, whether the charge for discount on the sales of these labels may not be either stopped altogether or greatly reduced.

THE NEW LINE REGIMENTS.—Certain statements have appeared in various papers during the past week which are calculated to lead officers of the new line regiments to suppose that they will meet with but scant justice at the hands of the Army Purchase Commissioners should they seek to retire from the service. We have every reason to believe that the statements in question, if not absolutely false, are greatly exaggerated, and must be due to some misconception on the part of the writers. We can positively affirm that the commissioners fully intend to stick to the letter of the law, which, in case of officers of the non-purchase corps wishing to retire from the service, provides that they shall be granted "a compensation equal to the sums they would have received according to the custom of their regiments, from the junior officers of their regiments, had they retired therefrom prior to the said appointed day," viz., Nov. 1. In order to ascertain what may be the various bonuses made up to officers of the several ranks on retirement, the commissioners have not confined themselves to requiring declarations from individual officers, but have addressed inquiries to the officers commanding regiments on the subject. Of course sufficient time has not yet elapsed for the commissioners to receive replies from such regiments as may be on service in India.—Broad Arrow.

THE MAHOMEDANS IN INDIA.

A discussion arose after the reading of Syed Ameer Ali Khan's paper before the Association in Aid of Social Progress in India, which was only alluded to in our last. The following is the substance of the different native speakers' remarks :—

Dr. Jafar Hossein, in expressing his thanks to the lecturer for his public spirit in putting the Mahomedan question in the right light before the British public, said he agreed with the assumption that they were not unwise in keeping themselves aloof from a system of education which enforced the study of English in the native schools supported by the Government, at the cost, it might be, of Mahomedans forgetting their own language. It was the more difficult to attain knowledge or receive education through the means of a foreign tongue. The educational course intended for Mahomedan children should be translated into the Arabian language, or Oordu. The same remark applied to the Hindoos ; the school books should be in their common language.

Mr. R. C. Roy mentioned that in the native schools the Mahomedans were as one in fifty to the Hindoos. Speaking of the education of the poorer classes of Mahomedan girls, he testified that as they had not participated in the State education they grew up uneducated as women. Alluding to the absence of social intercourse between European and Mahomedan ladies he saw that while Hindoo ladies were always recognised Mahomedan ladies were little seen, in consequence of their society being unsought. Such an exclusive system was impolitic and opposed to social progress.

Mr. S. B. Thakur referred to that portion of the lecture which pointed out the prejudices of Europeans and English ladies, particularly against the Zenana and the practice of polygamy. But, as had been explained, polygamy was practised only by the few who could afford to maintain four wives (as allowed by the law of the Koran). The general classes of Mahomedans in India were, in fact, Monogamists. Noticing the neglect Mahomedans had experienced from the India Government and Anglo-Indians, while Hindoos had been always everywhere well received and advanced in status and position, the speaker observed that the cause was apparent. The Mahomedans had neglected from the first to ingratiate themselves as the Hindoos had done with their European conquerors. They would not bend to circumstances. Thus, they had declined to avail themselves of the civil rights and the education that had been offered them. They had deprived themselves of many social advantages that might have been obtained had they been sought without bigotry or pride.

After several other natives had spoken, and Mr. W. Taylor had attacked the polemical character of the discussion, the meeting terminated.

SEEING FRIENDS OFF TO INDIA.

A little drama is played out every Saturday afternoon at Southampton, which contains within itself several elements of human interest. The heavy mail leaves there for India, and the steamer of the Peninsular and Oriental Company bears away its cargo of men and women, whom necessity, or duty, or the pursuit of pleasure takes to the East. Modern travellers have told the story often, but the world marches so rapidly in these steam-going days that the best descriptions of the parting scenes have become obsolete. Let the time be last Saturday, the place Southampton Docks, and the steamer the Mooltan. The reader has come down in spirit by a train which left Waterloo at 11 A.M., and after a rapid run arrives at Southampton, where the P. and O. steamer, the Mooltan, lies within talking distance of the pier. It is only people who have sent their luggage down the day before, or by an earlier train this morning, who can venture to linger in London as long as we have done, but these conditions fulfilled there is ample time. The deck is in that strange state of organised confusion which precedes a start, and here at least we can compare notes with Eliot Warburton, and see how far our impressions of our fellow-passengers agree with his.

The author of "The Crescent and the Cross" writes of the people who were eastward-bound under the same circumstances as those on the Mooltan on Saturday :—"There were old men with complexions as yellow as the gold for which they had sold their youth, returning to India in search of the health which their native country, longed for through a life, denied them. There were young cadets, all eagerness and hope, though there their predecessors stood before them, mementoes—like the mummies at an Egyptian banquet—of the end of their young life's festival. There were missionary clergymen with Ruth-like wives : merchants with invoices apparently as fondly prized ; young widows with eyes black as their mourning, and sparkling as their useless marriage rings ; and one or two fair girls—Heaven knows what sorrow sent them there!—straying from their English homes of peace and purity, over the ocean and the desert, to encounter the worst dangers of Indian society." It is hard to say it, but the foregoing eloquent description only recalls Mr. Burchell's monosyllable—fudge. The railways and the telegraph have changed many things, and the passengers to India among the number, if they were ever like what we have quoted. Where are the yellow old men ? The average Anglo-Indian is a hearty-looking personage, who might have spent his life on the Yorkshire moors. He is well represented on board the Mooltan, but neither in him nor in the younger men is there aught to denote a life devoted or to be devoted to the East. There is plenty of apparent confusion, plenty of fuss and bustle, plenty of crowding. But the people chiefly interested take it all as calmly as if they were merely bound for Gravesend. Stay ! there is a lady weeping quietly but bitterly over the gunwale, and the soldierly-looking man by her side looks as if he were about to break down too, even while he pats her shoulder tenderly and entreats her to bear up. Their story is soon told. He is an official "high up" in the Civil Service of India, who wooed and won the lady when over here on furlough some years ago. They married and went out. The gentleman's up-country station had some drawbacks, and the absence of doors to, and the presence of black men about, bedrooms, were among the domestic desagremens to which the lady was long in becoming reconciled. But in the main all went well until the children were a few years old, and began to languish—as the children of English parents will in India, let them be cared for ever so tenderly. The doctor fenced with the subject at first and delivered himself of polite wishes respecting the healing effect of the approaching "cold weather," and of a meditated trip to the Hills. But the truth had to be told at last, and Europe and a separation from parents for years was pronounced absolutely necessary. The blow fell as heavily as if it had been unforeseen, and its first anguish was renewed on Saturday. The mother brought them over to the old country, and has watched over them till now, when the father's leave of absence has expired, and she returns with him to his up-country bungalow, leaving half her heart behind her. It is these separations which are the real blight upon Anglo-Indian life, and which embitter the most prosperous career. But this is almost the only tearful couple on the Mooltan. Cheery, merry faces are the rule. The dullest-looking men on board are two young fellows who, in Warburton's time, struck him as being full of eagerness and hope, but who have now-a-days tasted of the responsibilities and the trials of life as they are in examination-rooms, and who are not rendered more lively by the experience.—Daily News.

THE RAILWAY ROUTE TO INDIA.

On Wednesday evening last Mr. Hyde Clarke (late Cotton Commissioner in Turkey) read a paper "On the Progress of the Through Railway Route to India." Lord Henry G. Lennox, M.P., occupied the chair. The paper commenced with some preliminary notices of previous communications made by Mr. Clarke on the subject, viz. : to the Society of Arts and the United Service Institution in 1868. Since then important events have occurred which have a more or less direct influence on the route to India, China, Japan, and Australia. The present paper dealt with the progress made with the through route to India, which, the reader observed, was only a phrase for denoting communication with half the world. The opening of the Suez Canal must exercise a great influence in favour of the railway route, for obvious reasons, which were stated seriatim. Next to the Suez Canal must be placed the Brindisi route, and the opening of the Mont Cenis Tunnel. The establishment of the Russian telegraph route to China, and of our submarine lines by the Mediterranean and the Red Sea to the East, were links in the chain of progress. Lastly there was the Pacific Railway ; San Francisco is now carrying passengers and mails to New Zealand, Australia, Japan, and Northern China, and the traffic must increase. This review of what had taken place prepared the hearer for much valuable information contained in the paper, showing more fully the desirability of continuing the railway line, which is now in full operation from England and the countries of the west, to the Danube. The through route was a mere question of money ; and who should find the money. The Governments of England and India as yet, however, have shown no determination to provide the requisite funds. The burthen in this respect seemed to fall upon Turkey. Our dependence was upon Turkey, from whom the guarantee would have to be obtained. The continuous line of railway must pass through Turkey in Europe and Turkey in Asia, and consequently Turkey must be consulted. But because we want to go to India we set aside that the Turks want to connect Constantinople with the European system ; and because we want to reach Bagdad and Bussorah, we forget that the Turks have their own need for communicating with those cities from their metropolis, and that they have political objects to accomplish, and local requirement of traffic to satisfy. It was in view of this state of affairs that the paper ought to direct attention to the Turkish portion of the line. The Sultan had, in consequence of his visit to this country, become urgent for the extension of railways in his Empire, and had granted concessions for the European section and the Asiatic section. Unhappily, however, both the concessions granted in 1867 had fallen to the ground through the absence of capitalists, while Turkey itself could not do much in this direction. However, Turkey has continued to persevere in discovering means of carrying out her railway system. The Turkish [Minister of Public Works has recently succeeded in opening new negotiations with the authorities in Austro-Hungary and France, under which considerable sums have been raised, but on very burdensome conditions; and the works of the European section have been commenced at several points. These works are now in progress. The main feature of the line in progress is an artery from the Austro-Hungarian lines and the Danube to Constantinople. With this are combined certain cross lines.

Reviewing the condition of the railway system as it was now flowing towards the East, the paper showed that the lines through Austro-Hungary and Russia connected Western Europe with Southern Russia and the northern shores of the Black Sea; while the Varna and Ruschuk Railway offered an extension towards the east shores of the Black Sea. At the Constantinople terminus there has been opened this year the little section of fifteen miles through the suburbs of Constantinople to Kuchuk Chekmejeh (Little Drawbridge.) Another small portion towards Benyuk Chekmejeh (Great Drawbridge) is ready for opening. These are portions of the Constantinople and Adrianople lines. The Salonica line is proposed to be employed in connection with the Mediteranean terminus of any line which may be opened by the Euphrates or Tigres with Bagdad and Bussorah. Whatever might be its power of competing with Brindisi from this point, Salonica could certainly accommodate all Germany. The funds appear to be sufficient at present for the main artery proceeding from Adrianople. The works of the Roumelian and Salonica lines are under Austrian engineers and Austrian and Belgian contractors.

The Turkish Government having applied its energy to the Roumelian or European section of railway communication, and succeeded in opening up a portion of it, next turned its attention to the Asiatic or Anatolian section. The Roumelian section is, however, such a burthen on the Treasury that the Government is not yet disposed to encounter that of the Asiatic undertaking. It is, however, most anxious to promote it, and it has begun it in fact. But the prime object of the Turkish Government is not to pay for a line to India with which they have little to do, nor for one from the Mediterranean to Bagdad, but to provide for their own internal purposes only.

Discussing the proposed through route to India, the paper came to the Euphrates route, and where there was an alternative of a Euphrates and a Tigris route, but without advocating either the one or the other. With regard to the Euphrates route, which was first designed by General Chesney, it had been indefatigably advocated and promoted by Mr. W. P. Andrew, who was again making vigorous efforts to secure for it the aid of the English Government. If Mr. Andrew succeeded, this would be a most valuable encouragement to the undertaking. Either the Euphrates or Tigris line will reach Bagdad, where there is river steam navigation, but this will hardly be of much advantage except in construction, as the continuation line to Bussorah, the steam seaport on the Persian Gulf, can be worked at simultaneously. From Bussorah we have a regular steamboat service to India. The reader next noticed that in India itself we had now a connected railway system from the port of Bombay, and that there would be another port of junction at Kurrachee. This system was joined to Bussorah and Bagdad. At present this great section of the through line and this vast plant was only available for the local service of Bagdad. If the through line reach Bagdad, or if Mr. Andrew's instalment of it can be effected, then there is all the machinery for bringing passengers from further India to the Mediterranean shore, and within about two days of a station of the European railway system. It is this large traffic of all India which is waiting for us, and to be augmented. Such must, in the end, afford a remunerative return; and render possible many great subsidiary projects. By establishing main lines they would facilitate the lines with light rails and with light working stock, of which we hardly know the beginning, but of which the future extension must be so great. There would be likewise the means of establishing competing and alternative lines, such as some of those already spoken of, and that of Messrs. Low and Thomas. If the prospects of a through route to Persia are not immediate, yet any line through or partial to Bagdad would be a means of stimulating railway enterprise in South Persia. That tableland once touched, there would be a development of commerce, which, temporarily passing by the Euphrates route, would be the means of ultimately promoting a through route to Persia itself, by furnishing traffic for it. In our own particular interests it appeared very desirable to stimulate the development of South Persia, which lies nearest to our Indian possessions.

In conclusion the paper dwelt upon the political, social, and internal advantages of an accomplished through route of railway to India, and the progress in civilisation it would create. The reading of the valuable communication, of which the foregoing is but a brief review, was received with frequent applause from the commencement to the end. It was followed by a discussion in which Messrs. W. Pare, J. Jones, W. Austin, C.E., R. Rawlinson, C.B., J. Cheetham, A. Carnegie, G. Soares, and the hon. Chairman, who proposed a vote of thanks to the author of the paper, Mr. Hyde Clarke, which was unanimously voted. Mr. Hyde Clarke returned thanks, and Lord Henry Lennox having acknowledged with thanks the vote of thanks for presiding, the meeting terminated.

Miscellaneous.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The report of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company has been issued. The directors state that the works between Soonkasala and Cuddapah (with the exception of a portion of the irrigation channels, the construction of which was postponed by the mutual assent of the Government and the company) were completed by the 1st July, according to the terms of the supplementary contract, and within the estimated cost.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—The half-yearly meeting of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company is called for the 25th inst., when, in addition to the ordinary business, resolutions will be submitted for the consolidation into capital stock of all fully paid-up ordinary shares, and into extension stock of all fully paid-up extension shares. The transfer books will be closed from the 14th to the 27th of December, and the dividend warrants will be forwarded on the 4th of January for payment on the 5th.

BRINDISI VIA MONT CENIS.—In continuation of the information given in the Home News of the 10th inst. under this heading, we are happy to state that arrangements have now been made for a daily through train from Paris to Bologna, via Dijon, Macon, Modane, and Turin, without stopping at Susa. The hour of arrival at Modane is 3.18 P.M., and departure 4.45 P.M., arriving at Turin at 9.4 P.M. Baggage can be booked through from Paris to Turin; but if the passenger does not personally see it examined at Modane it will be left behind.—Home News.

THE MAHARAJAH DHULEEP SINGH.—The shooting party which has been assembled at Elvedon-hall, Thetford, Norfolk, the seat of the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, has comprised his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, the Duke of Manchester, the Marquis of Bristol, the Earl of Leicester, General Hall, &c. The Duke of Grafton also placed his coverts at the disposal of the party. Some 12,000 head of game are stated to be shot annually on the Maharajah's estate, besides thousands of rabbits. Elvedon-hall is an imposing structure. It has recently been rebuilt of red brick, with Ancaster stone dressings.

INDIAN FUNDS.—The following has been issued this day from the Bank of England:—"Notice to stockholders in the Public Funds, India £5 per Cent. Stock, India £4 per Cent. Stock, Metropolitan Consolidated Stock, and Bank Stock.—Transmission of Dividend Warrants by Post.—Any holder of the above stock residing within the United Kingdom may have his dividend warrant sent to his address by post, on filling up and sending to the chief accountant of the Bank of England a form of application, which may be obtained at the Bank of England, or at any of its branches; also, for the Public Funds, at any money-order office. Applications for the transmission of dividend warrants, payable in January, 1872, should be lodged at the Bank on or before the 1st December next.—JOHN FRANCES, Chief Accountant."

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.—The will of Sir Roderick Impey Murchison, Bart., K.C.B., F.R.S., was proved under £250,000 personalty. He has bequeathed to the Royal Geographical and the Geological Societies each £1,000; the Royal School of Mines, £500; £600 to found a chair of geology at the University of Edinburgh—all to bear his name, and each institution to give annually a bronze cast of the Murchison medal. Should a memoir of his life be published, it shall be entrusted to Archibald Geikie, director of the Geological Survey of Scotland. All presents from distinguished persons to be placed in the Jermyn-street or South Kensington Museums. He has bequeathed to his nephew, Roderick Maingy Murchison, £12,000, and appoints his eldest nephew, Kennett R. Murchison, residuary legatee, the surname and arms of "Murchison," always to be used by the inheritor of his estates.—The will of Sir John Fox Burgoyne, Bart., G.C.B., Constable of the Tower of London, Field-Marshall in her Majesty's army, who attained the age of eighty-nine, was proved under £4,000 personalty in England, by his relict, the sole executrix, to whom he leaves all his property, real and personal.

A NEW INDIGO COMPANY.—The prospectus of the Indigo Company of London, Cocanada, and Madras (Limited), points out that in Lancashire and other seats of the cotton and silk trades both an increased production and an improved quality of indigo are generally demanded. The cultivation of the indigo plant, from which is manufactured the valuable dye, is thus an increasing object of interest to the European manufacturer, and the design of this company is in some degree to meet an existing want by cultivating the plant in the districts near the Godavery River, in the Madras Presidency. The capital is £75,000, in 15,000 shares of £5 each, which will be called up in the course of two years. Arrangements have been made for the purchase of ten existing factories, the vendors taking the price in shares, and these will be adapted so as to form a nucleus for further operations. The co-operation of the natives and landed proprietors may, it is intimated, be relied upon; and, indeed, it is expected that many shares in the concern will be taken locally. With regard to the profit realised upon the cultivation of indigo, it is stated that at times as much as eighty per cent. on the capital invested is realised in a single year, and unproductive seasons are rare.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.—The appeal case of Ramamani Ammal v. Kulanthai Nauchear has been decided by their lordships. Lord Justice James gave a lengthened judgment. Their lordships did not consider that the mother of the appellant was a "dancing girl" or prostitute at a Hindoo temple, and reversed the decision of the High Court of Madras, with costs, and allowed the appeal. The next Indian appeal case which came before their lordships was that of Thomas Newton, which was an appeal from two orders and judgments of the Puisne Judges of the High Court, North-Western Provinces, dated the 13th and 27th of August, 1870, by the last of which Mr. Newton, a barrister and an advocate of the High Court of Allahabad, was declared to be guilty of gross professional misconduct, and suspended from practice for five years. Mr. Bramly, the judge of Allygurh, complained of his conduct, and the High Court suspended him. Mr. Newton now appealed to her Majesty in Council on the ground that the proceedings were illegal, and that the misconduct imputed at the utmost was an error of judgment or misconception, for which professional men were not subject to punishment. Sir Roundell Palmer addressed the Court at considerable length, in support of the appeal; ultimately Sir J. Colvile stated that judgment would be deferred.—WOMESCHUNDER ROY v. GOOROODOS ROY.—This was an appeal from Bengal from a judgment dated 1864, whereby a decree in the appellant's favour of the Principal Sudder Ameen of Jessore was reversed; Sir J. Colvile gave judgment. The decision of the High Court was reversed, and the appeal allowed with costs.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The report published is chiefly confined to financial arrangements with reference to the capital of the company. A sum of about £50,000, in excess of the capital already raised, is required for works, exclusive of the protective works. The directors propose at the meeting of this day, Tuesday, to take powers to increase the capital of the company to the extent of £250,000, by borrowing, or by creation of shares, with the view of raising, with the sanction of Government, such portion only of such further capital as may from time to time be actually required. It will be remembered that by a resolution of a meeting of the company held on the 21st March, 1861, the directors were empowered to issue debentures, guaranteed by the Secretary of State, to the extent of £400,000 and that this sum was raised accordingly. The sum of £51,300, part of this loan, was paid off by the company, with the sanction of the Secretary of State, in the year 1866. A further sum of £5,520 was paid off by the Secretary of State in April last; and as regards the balance of £343,180, the sum of £224,218. 1s. 4d., part thereof, has been converted into, or provided for by the sale of, four per cent. debenture stock, aggregating £246,411; and the remainder, viz., £118,961. 18s. 8d., has been paid off by means of money advanced to the Company, by the Secretary of State, as a temporary loan, bearing 5 per cent. interest. As regards the £5,520, the Secretary of State has claimed capital stock of the company to that amount, under the stipulation to that effect in an agreement of the 18th March, 1862, with the company. In order that the said agreement may be confirmed a resolution to that effect will be proposed at the meeting. The directors much regret their loss by death of the valuable assistance of their late colleague, Sir Henry Byng Harington, K.C.S.I. They have elected Sir William Grey, K.C.S.I., late Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, to be a director in his place. Mr. Miller and Sir Wm. Grey both retire in rotation from the direction, in compliance with the Act of Parliament, but, being eligible, they offer themselves for re-election. In compliance with the requirements of the same Act, Mr. Cheshire, one of the company's auditors, retires, but offers himself for re-election.

THE OPTOSCOPE.

The practical utility of the OPTOSCOPE is now fully determined. In numerous cases has its merits been displayed in a manner so satisfactory, that in no instance has it afforded less satisfaction to the intelligent inquirer than to the inventor himself. It has long been a matter of considerable importance to those suffering from defective vision to learn the exact state of the refractive humours of the eye, and the proper convexity or concavity of the glasses required to render the vision as perfect as the state of the organs will admit of.

Mr. BEAUMONT'S OPTOSCOPE

is all that can be desired for this purpose, and those desirous of benefiting by his discovery may be suited with the most perfect-fitting glasses at moderate cost.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.
INFLAMMATIONS CONTROLLED.—All persons should be forewarned by the present sudden atmospheric changes that their maintenance of health depends upon rectifying disorder in, and expelling impurities from, the system, without unnecessary delay. Cases of internal inflammation, in the throat, lungs, liver, and bowels, are perpetually happening during the winter, and loudly call for a certain curative, such as Holloway's Pills. They supersede blood letting, mercury, antimony, and similarly dangerous treatment. No invalid will be at a loss to treat his complaint on the surest and safest principles who carefully reads through the printed directions folded round every box of these Pills. No danger can result from using this medicine, which may be accounted "The Antidote for Inflammation."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood stated that Dr. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, being the Inventor was deliberately untrue, which he regretted had been sworn to. Eminent Hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 12, 1864.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

The object of this Company is to establish and carry on, in certain districts of Southern India which have been found to be specially suitable for the purpose, a lucrative business of Indigo manufacture.

The average of profits made by those already engaged in similar enterprise is very large; the net returns in a single year sometimes exceeding a hundred per cent. on the prime cost of building the factories required to work up the Indigo plant. As this plant is cultivated and supplied by the native peasantry, its failure in bad seasons only very partially affects the manufacturer.

The business may, therefore, be said to be unattended with any risk, provided the factories are erected in suitable localities, a point which, in the operations of this Company, will be carefully attended to.

Full Prospectuses, with Forms of Applications for Shares, may be obtained at the Offices of the Company, 16, Austinfriars, E.C.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Nov. 11; Agra and Madras, Nov. 9; Calcutta, Nov. 8.

THE Calcutta papers give full particulars concerning the last hours and execution of Mr. Norman's murderer, Abdullah. For several days before his death he had been ill with fever and diarrhœa. To the last however he maintained an air of calm indifference, eating and sleeping well and answering few questions of any sort. The last half-hour of his life he spent in prayer. Beyond a slight trembling when his wrists were handcuffed, he showed no signs of feeling, nor did even the announcement that his body would be burned after death draw from him anything but the word Achcha, "very well." His demeanour in fact was perfectly cool, without a touch of bravado. To the last he repeated his old story, that he was not in his senses when he stabbed the Chief Justice, that he was subject to epileptic fits, in one of which the murder must have been committed. He shuddered visibly when he saw the domes, or sweepers, waiting near the gallows, and is said to have fainted just as the bolt was shot. According to one paper some English ladies were among the few hundreds of people who saw him hanged. There appear to have been very few Mohammedans among the crowd.

ACCORDING to the Bombay papers Sir Seymour Fitzgerald has given up for the present his purposed tour through Sindh, and intends, if he can, to go to the opposite end of his Presidency. He is expected to leave Mahableshwar towards the close of the year on a journey through the South Mahratta country and on to Dharwar and Canara.

FROM the North West Provinces we learn that Sir William Muir held a durbar at Moradabad on the 1st November on his way down from Nynee Tal. In the evening Sir William and Lady Muir witnessed an illumination of the place, got up in their honour, before they started for Meerut. After spending a day and night at the latter station the Lieutenant-Governor and his party went on to Allahabad, which they reached on the night of the 3rd November. The main object of the Durbar was to distribute rewards to the native gentlemen and officials who had done good service in the cause of order during the riots which lately divided Hindoos and Mohammedans at Pillibheet and Bareilly. Chief among the natives present were the Nawabs of Rampoor and Moradabad, Sir Dinkur Rao, the Rajahs of Kashipore, Powain, Tajpore, Bareilly, Sheopore, and the son of the Kirwee Rajah, besides Rajah Jaikishen Dass and the Maulvie Sayad Ahmad Khan. The natives who received khillats, or rewards, in the shape of kinkhabs, dresses, swords, gold mohurs, or rupees, were eighteen in number, most of them magistrates or police-officers. After the distribution, Sir W. Muir gave his hearers an appropriate discourse on the beauty of religious toleration, and expressed an earnest hope that the disgraceful scenes enacted during the late festivals would never be repeated.

LATEST accounts from India describe General Bourchier as already taking the field against the Loshais. It was not likely however that either column would be quite ready to advance before the first days of December. Even if the troops were all ready, the jungles in their front would not be free enough from malaria to receive them before that time. Rumours unfavourable to the Commissariat have been flying about, but in view of its former history and of the counter-statements as to its late proceedings, we are not inclined to take those rumours too hastily for true. Mainadhar, a few hours' journey from Monierkall, will probably form the base of operations from Cachar. It has already been occupied by a detachment of the 44th Native Infantry; and there too Mr. Daly and his police were hard at work preparing storehouses and other conveniences. Some 650 coolies for the Cachar column reached Dacca on the 30th October. Captain Birch commands the Sylhet Contingent, which has been told off for duty along the frontier. Another contingent of hill-men from Sylhet was on its way to Chittagong to join the other column. At Chattak, on the road to Cachar, the bustle of preparation was at its height; the 42nd N.I., a wing of the 22nd N.I., and half a light field-battery being expected there about the 10th November. The other wing of the 22nd would not arrive there from Dacca before the 26th. The arrival of the 44th N.I. has probably been delayed for want of transport; the steamer destined for their use having been several days behind time. It is unpleasant to hear that cholera had already broken out among the coolies on board the Success, in charge of Major Moore. Five or six deaths had occurred when the steamer reached Naraingunj on the 22nd October. It was still uncertain whether the Cachar Column would take the Tipai Mukh road or follow that formerly taken by General Nuthall.

IF all we hear of them be true, the Loshais have rather vague ideas regarding the relations of the frontier officials with the Indian Government. According to one of the Calcutta papers it is a historical fact that Sukpilal or some other chief proposed to the Commissioner of Assam that they should join forces, and make a foray across the hills on the territories of the Commissioner of Chittagong. In that case it is not unlikely that Sukpilal himself regards Mr. Edgar and the Commissioners of Assam and Chittagong as rival adventurers seeking to found new kingdoms in the Loshai country.

The Punjabi police appear to have more success in tracking criminals than their comrades of Bengal. Two Kukas concerned in the butcher murders at Raikot have just been caught, tried, and sentenced to death, by the Sessions Judge of Ambala. One of them, Gyan Singh, is described as one of Ram Singh's trustiest lieutenants, and the other, Ruttan Singh, as Gyan Singh's confidential servant. The latter was caught in the Bikaneer State, after a hot chase of four hundred miles, by a party of Ludianah policemen, acting in concert with some officers from Patiala. The pair were tried at Ludiauah and convicted on the clearest evidence offered by men of their own sect. Of the only two men still at large out of the whole Raikot gang, one has already been marked down, and we may expect soon to hear of his capture.

The Pandits lately assembled in solemn conclave at Benares have, after a long discussion, decided against the lawfulness of Indian Brahmo marriages, so far as the Hindu Shasters, the great code of law and morals for all good Hindus, are concerned. Among the Pandits present at this meeting were those who had once formally pronounced in favour of these same marriages. Let us hope that these gentlemen at least remained true to their former votes, however strong the majority against them. In view of such a decision on the part of the orthodox Hindu Rabbis, the desire of the Progressive Brahmos for a special marriage law ought to be gratified without further delay by some such Bill as that of which Mr. Stephen took over the charge from Sir H. Maine.

Captain Skottowe's report of the circumstances connected with the loss of the Rangoon appears in the Indian papers. It seems that the Rangoon, after vainly waiting till dusk for the arrival of the China steamer, at length steamed out of Galle harbour at 6 P.M. of November 1. Stopping a minute to take in the local mails, she went on again at full speed towards a buoy on the port bow. When the pilot's notice was drawn to the buoy, he merely said, "All right, we will go inside." A moment afterwards the ship "struck heavily," seemed to glide forward, and then struck again, with two heavy blows which "shook the ship very much." In a very few minutes the water came fast into the stoke-holes from the forward bunker. Mr. Graham, the chief engineer, reported only fifteen minutes more steam, and advised the beaching of the ship. To this the pilot objected on account of the darkness and the almost certainty of the vessel's going to pieces. The captain then made up his mind to steam forward and anchor close to the ship Sydenham in the outer roads. Just after he had anchored, at 7 P.M., the engine room fires were washed out. The passengers, about fifty in all, were at once transferred to the Sydenham. With some help from the neighbouring vessels and the shore, nearly all the cabin baggage and thirteen bags of mails were saved, but the water was already three feet over the deck. At midnight all hands left the sinking ship, which went down, stern foremost, half an hour afterwards. A series of mischances followed the Rangoon to the last. Her signals of distress were mistaken by some of those on shore for an exchange of signals with the missing steamer from China, while others took them for signals to the mail-boat which was supposed to have got adrift. A good deal of precious time was therefore lost, which might else have been employed in saving cargo and baggage from the wreck. A four-knot current was running at the time against the Kadda Rock, according to one of the statements published. Fortunately the sea was calm. It is evident that but for the delay in starting from Galle the Rangoon would have escaped the danger which was brought to a head by the necessity for slackening speed while a strong current was sweeping her to destruction. It looks as if the pilot had been cutting off corners in the effort to make up for lost time. The inquiry at Galle has resulted in clearing the captain and officers, but not the pilot, from all blame.

The death from heat-apoplexy of Lieut. H. H. Veitch, first lieutenant of H.M.S. Magpie, is described by the Bombay journals as that of another victim to the madness of the Admiralty in sending into Indian and Arabian waters vessels wholly unsuited to the occasion. A small iron-clad gun-boat is certainly the worst possible sort of abode in the tremendous heats of the Arabian sea, especially if the thermometer at night-time on board such a vessel often stands at 110 degrees. If any cooler and roomier kind of vessel will answer the same purpose, it is sheer stupidity to torture English sailors without cause.

The VanIngen case has ended as it ought to have done, in the acquittal of young Mr. VanIngen on the charge of attempted manslaughter. The real aggressors and culprits in this affair, Ensign Lambert and Sergeant M'Innis were let off cheaply enough so far as the law was concerned, the one with a fine of 500, the other of fifty rupees. If officers choose to place themselves in the position of being taken for burglars they must not be surprised at receiving a charge of shot in their bodies and having afterwards to pay fifty pounds for the satisfaction of getting badly hurt.

General Daly, C.B., has been formally confirmed in the post of Governor General's Agent in Central India. If there had been any excuse for passing over Colonel Willoughby Osborn, we should not have much fault to find with the present selection. Mr. B. D. Colvin, of the firm of Colvin Cowie, and Co., succeeds Mr. T. H. Wordie in the Bengal Council. Ill health has compelled Mr. C. M. Stewart to resign his seat in the Bombay Council. The name of his successor is not yet known. It is supposed that Mr. A. Mackenzie will take the place vacated in the Madras Council by the departure home of Mr. P. Macfadyen. We are glad to hear that Mr. V. Ramiengar, a distinguished native member of the Madras Council, is about to succeed Sir T. Madhava Rao as Dewan or Prime Minister to the Rajah of Travancore. We also hope there is some truth in the rumour that Mr. Reilly, who has been so successful in hunting up Wahabis, is to become Commissioner of Police at Calcutta in the room of Mr. Hogg, who would still retain the post of chairman to the Calcutta Municipality. Mr. J. B. Norton, whose retirement promotes Mr. J. D. Mayne to be Advocate-General of Madras, has been presented with a farewell address by a large number of his native friends and admirers, in memory of his many services to the native community.

However anxious the Baboo Keshab Chandar Sen may be to borrow as few ideas as possible from the West in aid of the religious movement he is leading in India, it appears that he has not the same objection to learn something from us in the matter of musical instruments. We hear, at any rate, that his English friends have just presented him with a handsome organ for the use of his church in Calcutta. A great festival of the Brahmo Somaj is to be held there, it seems, in January next when members deputed from all the branch societies will meet; if this new monument of native daring should arrive in time, to hear—

> "The pealing organ blow
> To the full-voiced quire below,
> In service high and anthems clear."

We are not sure, by the way, as to the intended presence of a regular choir on this occasion, and even if the Brahmists should rejoice in such an accessory to their services, we might hesitate to speak of it as full-voiced. It would certainly be a new sensation in India to hear a number of native choristers singing together in the vigorous fashion suggested by Milton's epithet, so appropriate to the vocal efforts of his own country. But we will not despair even of Indian music, now that an organ is to set up in a native church, and that native worshippers are to be familiarised with the use of English hymns and hymn-tunes.

The surprise which many of our readers must have felt at the continued absence of Sir Barnes Peacock's name from the list of newly created Judges on the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council is shared, we are glad to see, by so weighty an authority as the Saturday Review. We cannot do better than quote its own words:—

> "Sir Barnes Peacock, as Chief of the High Court which superseded the Supreme Court, necessarily became familiar with Hindoo and Mahommedan law. As legal member of Council, before his accession to the office of Chief-Justice, Sir Barnes Peacock necessarily took an active part in Indian legislation, and it is well known that in judicial reputation he was surpassed by none of his predecessors. Thirty years ago he was known in Westminster-hall as one of the ablest among the younger lawyers of the time, and some surprise was felt when he abandoned his large practice even for the high appointment of legal member of Council. . . . Even in the disposal of an unpaid seat at the Privy Council it would have been worth while to make use of the learning and ability which have at present no official occupation. The selection of paid judges has not been so successful as to furnish an excuse for a culpable omission."

And yet, in the face of all these arguments in his favour, the unpaid judgeship of the Privy Council, vacated by the promotion of Sir J. Colvile, has been assigned, not to the late Chief-Justice of India, the fittest man perhaps in all England for such a post, but to Mr. Montagu Bernard, a scholar, no doubt, and an able jurist, but one whose practical training ceased some years ago, and whose reputation was always limited to a somewhat narrow circle. It is possible, of course, that Sir Barnes himself may have declined the invitation to put on his harness again; but in default of such an explanation the Government procedure in his case requires explaining.

Business people in India are not more favourable to a decimalised coinage than the bulk of them are at home. In reply to an inquiry from Government, the Secretary of the Calcutta Trades Association declared, in the name of the Committee, that "such a disturbance of the present monetary system would be in the highest degree impolitic."

The captain of the Glenartney steamer tells a curious tale of a boat containing 34 Indians, picked up by him a few miles from the mouth of the Mutlah river. The ship to which they belonged, the Jean Louis, had been wrecked ten days before on the voyage from Maulmain to Calcutta, and ever since then the rescued men, according to their own account, had tasted neither food nor water. Two of their number had died meanwhile from exhaustion and two more died soon after being taken on board the steamer. If the time the poor fellows were in the boat has been correctly given, the only wonder is that any of them should have survived. We have read stories of shipwrecked sailors being a week without food and all but dead then; but we should like to know what competent judges think of the possibillity of living ten days on nothing at all.

A Calcutta telegram of November 29 states that an application was made that morning by Mr. Anstey, in the High Court at Alipore, that the judgment at Patna in the case of Ameer Khan should be set aside. Mr. Anstey was still speaking before the Chief Justice. The Advocate-General was to oppose the application.

We are sorry to hear by telegram from Calcutta that a severe outbreak of cholera has occurred at Delhi. The movement of troops into camp has been temporarily countermanded. Latest telegrams received at Calcutta however stated that the cholera was abating. Lord Napier of Magdala is at Umballah. The coolies proceeding to join the Loshai expedition were attacked by cholera, but the disease is rapidly abating among them also.

More bad news came on Saturday from Calcutta, informing us that the laboratory at Agra has exploded. Conductor Wore, Sergeant Upham, and thirty-four natives are killed. The cause of the catastrophe is unknown. A court of inquiry is sitting.

The next Overland Mail from India is due at Brindisi tomorrow (Tusday), and should therefore arrive here on Saturday.

Unemployed Pay.—Under the authority of the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India, it is hereby notified that the provisions of G.G.O. No. 1,137 of Dec. 6, 1867, under which unemployed pay is admissible to inspectors and deputy inspectors general of hospitals, for six months, when proceeding to Europe on leave on medical certificate on vacating office after the expiration of five years' tour of duty, are applicable only to those medical officers who are under the furlough regulations of 1854.

Officers Retiring while on Leave.—We quote the following ruling by the Government of India in regard to retiring:—"When an officer of a British regiment applies to retire from the service whilst he is on general leave in India, Indian allowances can only be admitted to him from the date on which he ceased to do military duty by proceeding on that leave; unless he should rejoin his corps or appointment under proper authority and be performing military duty when his resignation or retirement is accepted, in which case the leave in question would not affect in any way the date from which he would be restricted to British pay."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, December 5, 1871.

THROUGH ROUTES TO INDIA.

The question of a line of railway right through from England to India has once more been ably argued by Mr. Hyde Clarke, in the paper he lately read before the Society of Arts. He cleared the way by showing that every advance in quickness of communication between the two countries involves a demand for collateral improvements to the same end. The Suez Canal, for instance, by increasing the trade of Bombay, enhances the need for quicker and more frequent intercourse with Bombay by postal and passenger lines. The new line by Mont Cenis and Brindisi, naturally begets a desire for a connecting line that shall link the Mediterranean with the Persian Gulf. Perhaps the strongest stimulus to a movement in favour of a shorter and quicker route for mails and passengers and light goods may be found in the new lines of telegraph which bring Bombay within a few minutes reach of London. As soon as correspondence by telegraph can be regularly achieved in two or three minutes, people are unwilling to rest satisfied with a mail journey of three weeks. The disparity in time between the two processes becomes more and more provoking, and the very costliness of the most meagre telegram quickens the desire to shorten the time spent in the transmission of a detailed letter. "Each costly telegram," as Mr. Clarke shortly puts it, "acts in promotion of more rapid mails."

Any real attempt then to bring London and Bombay much nearer to each other for postal purposes ought to be received with favour by all whom the issue would tend to benefit. Mr. Clarke needs no excuse for trying to impress on his countrymen the advantages flowing from such a movement. But he can hardly quarrel with them for taking that view of the matter which appeals most strongly to their own interests. And is it true that in our eagerness to get to India the shortest way, we are apt to forget that the Turks have good reasons of their own for wanting to connect Constantinople with the railways of Europe, and Bagdad and Basrah with Constantinople? Would it not be nearer the mark to say that in this matter our own advantage jumps with that of Turkey, and that the very knowledge of such a coincidence has much to do with the backwardness of English speculators and politicians to pledge themselves too deeply to an enterprise whose successful issue would depend mainly on Turkish aid? Grant for instance that England might have a special interest in connecting the Persian Gulf with the Mediterranean by the Euphrates Valley Line, it must be of even more importance for Turkey herself to use every possible means of developing the trade of Mesopotamia and other parts of Asiatic Turkey with the nations of Southern Europe, if not with Persia and India on the other side. In tracing the progress hitherto made towards connecting Turkey with the European lines, Mr. Clarke himself admits the prime necessity of carrying on the Asiatic section of those lines from Ismid to the Gulf of Skanderoon; the very point whence Mr. Andrew's line would take its departure for the Persian Gulf. Nor does he deny that this is the route which finds most favour with the Turkish Government; among other reasons because the line to Basrah would be the cheapest to build, and much time could be saved by working at it simultaneously from both ends. The rival scheme of an extension from Ismid eastward to Persia has evidently no chance of present support either from financiers or politicians. It would lead practically nowhere, would cost more to construct, and take more time in constructing, because the works could be carried on from one end only.

We may therefore assume that the Euphrates Valley Line, as projected by Mr. W. P. Andrew, would materially further the desired end of a through railway route to India by way of Constantinople. How long such a line would take to pay its own expenses must of course remain in some doubt; but the evidence hitherto offered before the Select Committee and elsewhere, tends to justify the conclusions suggested by analogy and the commercial past of Mesopotania in the palmy days of the Seleucidæ, when all the trade of Central Asia passed across it to Seleucia and the Mediterranean. It is only reasonable to suppose that new and improved means of carriage would not only revive the slumbering energies of the dwellers in the valley of the Euphrates, but would turn towards that valley such streams of foreign traffic from east and west as it had never witnessed in its most stirring days. The furnishing of such means resolves itself into a question of money and guarantees; but if Turkey will only grant the latter, there will not be much difficulty in raising the money. It is true that Turkey's resources are somewhat limited, and that nothing has hitherto come of the "concessions" offered by her in 1867, except demands for compensation on the part of those who undertook the European section of the line proposed. But the Turkish Government appears to have set its heart on railway extension. It has entered into fresh arrangements with Austro-Hungarian speculators for a system of lines connecting the Danube valley with Constantinople, and it has set to work on its own account at an experimental line on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus from Scutari to Ismid.

In his letter to Mr. Clarke Colonel O'Reilly, himself a most competent witness, maintains that "the shortest and easiest line for the England and India Railway is also that which would do more for the development of the Asiatic provinces of Turkey than any other single line can do." Such a line should go, he thinks, from Ismid through the Sakaria Valley and the Plain of Aksar to Konieh and the Gulf of Skanderoon. Here it should meet the Euphrates Valley Line not at Skanderoon itself, but rather at the "great natural harbour of Ayas, one of the best protected in the world," and in Colonel O'Reilly's opinion far superior as a port to Alexandretta, alias Skanderoon, on the opposite side of the Gulf. It is certainly strange, we agree with him, that no reference has ever been made to this port, if it has all the advantages he claims for it in respect of climate and situation. That however is a point on which evidence will no doubt be taken by the Select Committee next year. It is enough for present purposes to find in Colonel O'Reilly so decided an advocate of Mr. Andrew's general scheme. Whether his line should start from Ayas, Skanderoon, or Seleucia, whether its terminus should be at Basrah or Mohammarah, we are justified in regarding it as "now the best route from sea to sea, and the best section of a through line on that part of the Turkish terrtory." The advantages of a new outlet on the Mediterranean seaboard for the productive wealth of Anatolia, Northern Syria, Kurdistan, and the Tigris Valley, speak for themselves, and by reason of those advantages this section of the future through line from Istambol would always, as Colonel O'Reilly points out, command more traffic than any other.

THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS.

By a Visitor.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—Never mind the year in which I visited these Islands, suffice it to say it is not very long ago. They lie about 120 miles from Rangoon and 200 from Madras, and consist of a group of five; the largest is about 200 miles in length, and one is appropriated to the use of 5,000 convicts, all of whom, except one, are natives of India, and many of them mutineers. They are guarded by a company of British Infantry from the regiment quartered at Rangoon. The superintendent had better be nameless.

One fine morning I arrived in the Golden Fleece steamer, for change of air, and during the visit of three days we all lived on board. The convict island is about four miles square, and has a lovely land-locked harbour, with a good sandy beach. Landed and had a bathe, and a small Andaman boy came up and imitated me when drying myself with my towels. The island is about three miles from the grand one, and the cannibals paddle over in their own canoes, fish, and look on, but only some twenty or thirty have ever been persuaded to walk about in our island and feel comfortable in so doing; all, including the women, being perfectly nude, and their full dress is red ochre. The form of these people is strange; it consists of a long body with short legs, a pigmy in the aggregate; we became so accustomed to look at them as animals that our disgust diminished greatly. They live entirely on roots, fish, snails, and a curious pig they hunt. In fishing they profess to catch their prey with their hands.

The convicts are supposed to be self-supporting—living in long lines, which are kept clean—and those who cannot keep shops, or show signs of subsistence, work at public buildings. They have cut down every tree on the island, and now pause to ask themselves how they are to procure shade. The cocoa-nut grows better than any other tree there. Many of the rich convicts set up imaginary shops, and get regular remittances from their families in India—one adding that the Governor general, having sent him so far from his home, was desirous of making him as comfortable as possible. Those who have no private resources are obliged to work, and then are fed by Government, or they would starve.

The troops are fed by imported sheep and bullocks. They have supplies of vegetables from their gardens, and are healthy. The harbour is safe, and contains many ships; our draught of water was about twenty-two feet. The convicts do exactly as they like, and are neither locked up nor ironed.

In the lot is an Englishman—an incendiary—and because he is intelligent he has been promoted, and is carried about by the other convicts in a palkee. The climate is described as relaxing, but never very hot. Escape for the convicts is impossible; they have gone away once or twice, but have returned in a state bordering on starvation. One boat-load, I think, launched itself into the open ocean, but reaching land was out of the question in so frail a conveyance. Sharks eat everything except the Andamanese. It must be doubtful as to the inhabitants of the islands being cannibals, for, since these lines were penned, a ship's crew of eight men were discovered buried in a circle with their heads above ground.

From all I hear and see it appears high time that Lord Mayo, or some great swell, should pay a visit to this settlement, or we shall tide on from bad to worse. You have hundreds of officers now in India quite capable of managing the convicts, the troops, and the Andamanese, and it is an insult to our Government and to ourselves that proceedings which have been going on for years past in that quarter have not been put a stop to. We want periodical inspections.—Yours faithfully, Gwalior.

[We hope that General Stewart will take these hints.—Ed. A. I. M.]

FINANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—Can you inform your readers why the Indian Government has lately increased the pensions of its civil servants, and why it has granted the increase retrospectively from a particular date?

Some years ago the Indian Civil Service obtained fixed pensions from Government by paying into the Exchequer about thirty-eight lacks of rupees. Colonel Sykes effected a good bargain for the East India Company. Has any large sum been lately paid as an equivalent for the increased pensions?

It is in the Pension Department that the vigilance of taxpayers has to be exercised. Pensions cost comparatively little at first, but year by year the annual disbursements are prone to increase; and if pensions be given with reckless prodigality, the burden will in time bear with terrible weight on the finances of any nation. We have before our eyes the miseries caused to thousands by the insolvency of the Albert and European Insurance Societies; so it is with nations, which saddle their descendants with enormous pension-lists; they become at last insolvent, and by repudiation cause terrible misery to thousands of poor widows and orphans.

The English Government in former days was reckless in granting sinecure salaries and pensions. It has learnt by experience how great is the evil of burdening the Civil List with future liabilities. Has anyone ever calculated the cost to the nation of the sinecure salary of £9,000 a-year granted to a noble lord by his father, a Lord Chief Justice?

General Norman tries to defend himself from the criticisms of Sir G. Balfour by declaring that millions, which are expended every year on the Indian Army, are not susceptible of retrenchment. Financiers will scrutinise with particular jealousy items in the national expenditure which are declared by red-tape officials to be not susceptible of retrenchment. We are at present a very rich nation, but if poverty should overtake us, our only chance of escaping insolvency will be by preserving susceptibility of retrenchment in the constitution of our Budgets.

An Indian financier, with dark clouds on the political horizon, cannot afford to be benevolently extravagant. He cannot justly afford to increase the pensions of men who are already enjoying incomes of £2,000 or £3,000 a-year, so long as India is saddled with an odious Income tax, and the faces of the Indian poor are ground with a cruel Salt tax.

Pensions, once increased, cannot honourably be reduced without compensation. Not only the old members of the Civil Service, but all the young men just entering it, must receive compensation, which in the aggregate will be a very heavy sum, before their rates of pension can be lowered to rates less disproportioned to the pensions of their brethren in the Staff Corps.

In short, which is the better course for Indian statesmen; to imitate German economy combined with military efficiency, or Italian extravagance combined with the disaffection of the tax-paying community?—Your obedient servant, T.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

INDIA'S INFLUENCE IN ENGLAND.

The Friend of India observes that young men, well educated, and of high spirit, are thrown on the life of India, to—what? As a rule, to—what? To pass over a certain number of years, at hard, incessant, grinding work and then retire with a comfortable competence for life. The prizes are tempting, and the hard work is lightened by social intercourse, nowhere freer than in India. But the work, unaccompanied by other studies, merely sharpens, and does not broaden the mind. A young magistrate, sitting day after day, hearing cases, without the remotest interest to him, because he despairs of arriving at the truth with respect to them, grows up to be a quicksighted and imperious man; but what, in such a case—supposing the want of any deeper thought—does he carry back to England? Money, probably an impaired constitution, a good detailed knowledge of Eastern life, and a wish to finish up the chapter in peace and comfort. His children are separated from him. He loses the knowledge, ever precious to an Englishman, of English life, and cannot easily again make his sympathies to chord with those of "home." Before the mind can be attuned, as it was years before, the end comes, and then they put up a stone to his memory and tell of how he fought and where and how he ruled in India. This, however, is not a necessity of the position, and that it may not be so every one should hope in his own case. In many instances our Indian Administrators take the loftiest of all ground; enter into the feelings of the poor and needy; preserve pure lives, and know and show that wealth is not to them the end of all, but merely the means of present and future usefulness. Then there is something of high value added to England's wealth. Nationally, we say this is one of the most important subjects that can engage the attention of Englishmen. Conquering nations have generally received an adverse influence from their conquests. They conquer and they are conquered, even when their power is highest. Has the Anglo-Saxon race found out a new rule, or has it not? Of course the "proper" answer is, "Yes, it has Christianity at the basis of all." We would grant the argument if Christianity really was at the basis of all, but unfortunately it is not, though it is sufficiently so to have modified English life and saved India from many a woe. The worst passions of men are held in check wherever there is to speak only of dead men a soldier like Havelock or Durand, or a teacher like Bishop Heber. And here the influence of England on India has a direct and palpable reaction on England. In some respects then the influence of India certainly is injurious to England. The lives of our people have been spent in vast numbers in this land. But our work certainly is for civilisation. By the mighty grasping policy—very questionable at times—we certainly have given to India a peace she never before had since her history began. She is arriving at a state when all her best energies may have free scope. England has the high honour of working out this problem, and holding for herself an Empire so vast that an Englishman may go the world round and still be among people who speak his own language. Other nations would have taken a different course. The English nation has taken its course, and the mighty deeds done in taking it have built up a noble history. Politically and religiously India is attacking us in return. She challenges our creeds with the sharpest criticism. If we denounce her idols she denounces our faiths; and we have to learn to bear it and still work on. The sturdy lessons counterbalance the others. We are not decaying, as a nation, from contact with India. Individuals die off, or retire to Bath chairs at Brighton, or to golf, and valetudinarianism at St. Andrews. But we are broader as a nation from the contact. We see more of mankind as a whole, and if we can bind India to us by a cord of high and honourable loyalty the bond may endure and add to the imperial grandeur of England, and the well-being of India, when many other landmarks are gone.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE INCOME-TAX.

The Englishman, referring to Lord Mayo's comments on the allegations of Sir W. Muir, denies that it is possible that in any sense the reports of 1861, or any reports on the working of the tax, could "prove positively" that the working of the tax was satisfactory. The people of India are not in the habit of offering spontaneous testimony to the favourable working of a tax, and no machinery existed in 1861, or exists now, by which any trustworthy opinion to that effect could be elicited from them, which would be worthy of the slightest credit. The most that the reports of 1861 could furnish was negative testimony, and we shall probably be not very far wrong in concluding that it is negative testimony alone on which the opinion of the Government of India is based, and that it is merely by a figure of speech that it is described as positive evidence in the minute before us. The reports of 1861 furnished no evidence of anything approaching the popular discontent to which those of 1871 bear witness; and, upon this, the Governor General in Council first jumps at the conclusion that no such popular discontent existed, and then as precipitately infers that therefore the assessment and collection of the tax gave rise to no abuses. Had his Excellency reflected for a moment on the difference between the circumstances of 1860-61 and 1869-70, he might have found several very good reasons for distrusting the value of this line of argument. In 1860-61 every one in India knew that the Government had, at an enormous cost, just suppressed a formidable mutiny. That an extraordinary tax should at such a time be absolutely necessary was perfectly natural, and intelligible to high and low. There was, therefore, good reason for the tax, however unpalatable it may have been, and in whatever way it may have been administered, not producing so much popular discontent as in 1869-70, when high and low feel either that the Government has not the excuse of financial embarrassment, or that for that embarrassment it has its own carelessness and extravagance alone to blame. Then, again, in 1860-61 there prevailed throughout the country a mingled feeling of relief and of awe of British power, which could not be without its marked influence on the disposition of the people to express any annoyance they might feel at the operations of assessors and tax-gatherers; and it is perfectly intelligible that any discontent there may have been would be of much less demonstrative character then than in 1869-70. All these differences the Government of India ignorantly or wilfully ignores, and judges the feelings of its subjects and the work of its officers as if the intervening decade had never existed. It would be impossible to find terms too strong for the condemnation of this fatuous obstinacy; it is difficult to find terms which shall at the same time adequately describe it, and not exceed those bounds of courtesy within which we wish to confine our pen. So far from supposing that the income-tax produced less oppression in 1860-61 than in 1869-70, we happen to know from experience that it produced more. And there are good reasons why it should have been so. Suffice it to mention one, viz., that the people in 1860-61 were prepared to bear more, and that the underlings of the Revenue Department knew it, and how to profit by it.

THE LOSHAI EXPEDITION.

We take the following from the Englishman:—

The following are the probable dates of arrival at Chattak of the troops, coolies, &c., for the Looshai Expedition:—

Nov. 10.—42nd N.I., 22nd N.I. (wing from Barrackpore), half battery R.A., one company Sappers.

Nov. 15.—Six hundred coolies under Captain Hedayat Ali from Dobri.

Nov. 20.—Five hundred and seventy coolies under Captain Branson.

Nov. 26.—One hundred and fifty doolie-bearers, twenty-two native followers, 22nd N.I. (wing from Dacca).

But these dates will probably all be modified again, although they are supposed to hold good.

The 44th N.I. was not expected before the 1st of this month, but would probably arrive later than that, as the Success, with 730 coolies under command of Major Moore, had not arrived on the 27th ult., although they were due on the 24th. The departure of the 44th from Shillong had also been delayed, according to latest advices; and it was not supposed that they would get away before the 1st inst., although they were ordered to leave on the 27th ult.

Private letters from Sylhet and Cachar contain the following items of information:—

Mr. Daly has gone to Mainadhar with some police and an officer of the D.P.W., and they were, at the end of last month, hard at work in preparing godowns for stores, &c.

A correspondent, writing on the 27th ult., thinks "there is every probability of the Commissariat breaking down and not being able to get things up to the front in time."

The Government steamer Prince Albert, with 650 coolies on board, for the Cachar column of the Loshai force, reached Dacca on the afternoon of the 30th Oct.

Colonel Stafford, who has just returned from England to resume command of his regiment (22nd P. N. I.), was to have left Dacca with the headquarters last Sunday (the 5th instant), and Lieutenant-Colonel O'Brien will take up the remainder on the 20th.

The Success, with coolies from Calcutta, arrived at Naraingani on the 22nd October, with cholera on board, but went on immediately. Only five or six cases were fatal.

The 42nd did not get their rifles until quite the end of last month, and the 44th were still without theirs, according to the latest advices.

In one private letter the writer says:—"It is still rumoured here that the Tepai Mukh route has not yet been finally decided upon, and that the column may enter the Loshai country by the same route as that taken by General Nuthall." Another correspondent says it has been decided that the columns are to go from Tepai Mukh after all.

The 27th Punjab Native Infantry, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel J. Doran, arrived by special train at Calcutta on Monday, Nov. 6, and encamped outside Fort William. This regiment is en route for Chittagong, and will form a part of the Loshai expedition.

STATION TALK.

Srinuggar, Kashmir, Nov. —.—The Hon. Mr. Bourke spent some six days in seeing a large portion of Moraj. He arrived at Srinuggar on the 28th, and has taken up his quarters in the Residency with Mr. Girdleston. Every mark of respect and gratitude was shown on the part of the Maharajah's Government. The Governor of Kashmir was himself in attendance. Last evening the Shalamar Garden was illuminated in honour of Mr. Bourke's visit. In the daytime he visited Sheer Gadhi, the Kashmir Government house. In the evening, about seven o'clock, accompanied by Mr. Girdleston and the Maharajah's Wakil, he arrived at Shalamar Vizir Punnoo, an exemplary, energetic native statesman, was awaiting his arrival at about half-a-mile from the garden. Altogether there were only six gentlemen and one lady. At the entrance of the house were a few men in the disguise of beasts and wild animals, who were performing to the amusement of the crowd. Here the Oudh traveller, Pundit Shew Narayan, was introduced to Mr. Bourke and other gentlemen by the Resident. After this the party came into the Shalamar room, once so much enjoyed by the Mogul Emperors of India. In front of the hall there is a large fountain where a large number of fawaras (jets) were at work. Tea was supplied to the guests, and fireworks exhibited. After this Mr. Bourke left the garden, and, accompanied by the Resident and the Vizir, went to his quarters in the Residency.—Mofussilite Correspondent.

Morar.—The whole of the troops in the station assembled on the Brigade Parade-ground at an early hour on the morning of the 25th October, and when formed up, marched past in quick time, after which they formed three sides of a square, when Brigadier-General Olpherts, V.C., C.B., addressed them in a farewell speech, he being about to take over another command. Having expressed his regret at leaving (what he properly designated) one of the principal commands in India, he remarked on the unhealthy appearance of the men of the 11th Regiment, and expressed his sorrow that the removal of the regiment was hardly possible this year. General R. O. Bright, C.B., has arrived, and taken over command of the station. Lieutenant-Colonel Roe has returned from leave, and, on promotion, taken over command of the regiment on his first parade. On the 27th he made a lengthy and terse speech, in which he remarked the good behaviour and evident decline of drunkenness in the regiment, and stated his firm determination to weed the regiment of those characters who embellish that portion of its records, which, of late years, predominated in the army, viz., characters usually in the possession of gigantic defaulter's sheets. The state of the thermometer will not permit of the first company commencing its annual course of target practice as yet, which will necessitate more rapid firing in order to get the regiment through, unless the heat very shortly diminishes. The authorities have an incumbent duty to perform in removing the 11th, as the following statistics will testify:—Average daily sick for September, 84; percentage of sick to strength, 10·87; in addition there are some seventy almost certain invalids from this corps proceeding to England. By a removal to a more genial station the health of the men will be re-instated, the public benefited, and a piece of justice performed.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

Murder by a Sepoy at Peshawur.—From Peshawur we hear that a sepoy of the 21st P I. shot another sepoy of the same regiment on Tuesday with instant fatal result. He inflicted a severe bayonet wound on a comrade who assisted in securing him. The murdered sepoy owed his death to his having been instrumental in getting the man a few days' punishment drill.—Indian Public Opinion.

The New Railway Bridges.—Government has sanctioned the adoption of three wells and a cut-water to each sub-structure of the railway bridges over the Punjab rivers. This will add considerably to the estimates, but the money will not be thrown away. It is not commonly known, even in the profession, that we are indebted to the late Mr. Samuel Power for the thought that originated this safe medium between the costly group of twelve wells in country fashion, and the equally costly single well which has come to grief at the Beas and elsewhere.—Indian Public Opinion.

The Camp of Exercise.—It is with the utmost astonishment that we (Indian Public Opinion) hear that at least one General commanding a division in the field, at the camp of manœuvres, is also to command his own division at a distance of over 400 miles. Now we have been led to suppose that these Indian autumn (or rather cold weather) manœuvres are to be such as would actually occur in the presence of an enemy; and skilled and able as this general and his staff may be, it is, to say the least, unfair to hamper them at a time when all their faculties ought to be required to meet the skill and ability of the general opposed to them. We consider that if parsimony (and it can only be parsimony which decides on such an arrangement) resolves on this, pecuniarily, trivial point, we must naturally look to see its councils prevailing where much heavier sums are at stake.

The Volunteers.—The Calcutta Volunteer Rifle Regiment paraded on Friday morning, when the corps turned out for drill at the following strength:—Colonel, 1; majors, 2; adjutant, 1; captains, 4; lieutenants, 6; ensigns, 4; officers, 18; sergeants, 29; band, 25; drummers, 20; rank and file, 290; total, 383. After marching past in quick time, the battalion was put through several manœuvres by Colonel Walton, who, at the conclusion of the drill, addressed the men, expressing his gratification at their turning out in such good numbers, and hoping that their zeal would not flag, as he had received a letter from Simla, stating that it was the intention of their honorary colonel, Lord Mayo, to inspect the regiment personally on his return to the Presidency. His Excellency had received with much satisfaction the first general parade state of the corps for this season, which Colonel Walton had forwarded to him. The commanding officer's parades will be continued on Tuesdays and Fridays, the Friday drills being chiefly devoted to light infantry work.—Englishman, Nov. 8.

Tea and Roads in Assam.—A friend, writing from Assam, says:—"Beautiful weather for tea—the finest weather for October I have ever seen; so genial, with refreshing showers and temperature regulated to the exact standard. I have obtained more tea this month than up to the corresponding date in August and September. S— has got an iron horse in the shape of a rolling machine, and gets through his work very satisfactorily in less than no time—if it is possible to compute the reckoning. You should really agitate the question of roads in this province. Fancy my having to travel some twelve miles over a supposed road, eight or ten feet high, covered with jungle, ruts, and mud, simply indescribable. It is monstrous to expect us to pay heavy taxes for public works, and from year's end to year's end see no better prospect than this. I can account for it only on the supposition that Government is past blushing for the shortcomings of its highly-paid, but, I regret to add, callousminded, officials. I believe the Lieutenant-Governor means well, but he cannot be expected to look minutely into petty routinal details."—Bengal Times.

DEATH OF LIEUT. BEWSEY.—It is with regret we announce the death at Allahabad, on Saturday last, of Lieut. J. H Bewsey, late quartermaster 25th brigade R.A., as good and honest an old soldier as ever lived. The deceased commenced his military career in the late Bengal horse artillery in 1842, and passed with marked credit through all the non-commissioned grades, and again through the successive warrant grades of the Ordnance Department. In 1862 he was promoted to the rank of ensign, and subsequently to that of lieutenant. From that year to the date on which he was stricken with mortal sickness he performed his duties with zeal, cheerfulness, and great kindliness, gaining the approbation of his superiors, and the respect of all grades. He served in the Gwalior campaign, and was present at Puniar, in the first and second Sikh Wars, at Moodkee, Ferozshuhr and Subraon ; Sadoolapur, Chillianwallah, and Goozrat ; in the mutiny campaign at Chinhut, where he saved the life of his commanding officer, Major Bonham, whose gallant bearing at Secrora he has gallantly supported, on the native troops mutinying at that station ; he subsequently served throughout the defence of the Lucknow Residency, and then at the defence of the Alumbagh, and finally at the re-capture of Lucknow. He was decorated with the bronze star for Gwalior, and with three medals and six clasps for his other war services.—Pioneer.

THE RAILWAY TRAFFIC COMMISSION.—The Allahabad correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says :—' The commission appointed by Government to inquire into the causes which have led to the present extraordinary reduction in railway traffic is examining witnesses. I was speaking to one of them the other day, and he told me that the facts which I communicated to you, and which were published in a recent issue of the Delhi, were some of the principal ones. He also told me that there actually existed here and in other large stations, such as Benares, Cawnpore, Allyghur, &c., agents who earned a good deal of money by simply taking goods from the native dealers for despatch by railway, and charging a commission on the freight paid. What could more clearly indicate the disinclination of natives to deal directly with the Europeans employed on the railway than this ? And it does not require a very sharp eye to see the cause of the disinclination. The cold weather has brought a very slight increase in the goods traffic, and the movements of the troops have given the railway a little extra work. I hope the commission appointed by Government will do something to remedy the evil ; the railway officials will not, or cannot, help themselves out of the difficulty. Only the other day a loaded goods train had to wait at Mirzapore no less than four days before it was brought into Allahabad."

ARRIVAL OF GENERAL STEWART.—A correspondent of the Rangoon Gazette says :—" The newly-appointed Superintendent, Major-General D. M Stewart, C.B., has arrived at Port Blair and taken up his duties, and it is to be hoped that during his incumbency the great privileges allowed to convicts, both European and native, will be put a stop to. Prisoners, when released, are engaged in the different offices as clerks, overseers, &c., on the same salaries as those given to free residents, and are also entrusted with public moneys, which is contrary to all rule. The prices of all necessaries of life have been increased. The Commissariat Department formerly charged six annas for a pound of mutton, and have now raised the price to thirteen annas, while beef is charged at four annas, and the quantities brought daily into the market are so inadequate that clerks and others are deprived of the same for days together. The convict shopkeepers are allowed to sell their goods at whatever rates they choose, and no notice whatever is taken by the authorities. It is really difficult for a man on a small salary of Rs. 80 to Rs. 100 per mensem to live, when he cannot support himself comfortably in procuring the common necessaries of life. Those in the receipt of Rs. 300 to Rs. 400 find it hard ; much more so those on low salaries. I hope General Stewart will look into the matter and set everything to rights, or else recommend that clerks and others should receive the same boon as has been allowed to the Public Works Department, and apothecaries at Port Blair, fifty per cent. on their salaries for such time as they may remain in the settlement, on account of the dearness of the place. I may further mention that the apothecaries are all allowed to draw rations per the Commissariat by paying eight annas per diem."

THE EXECUTION OF ABDULLAH.—The murderer of the late Chief Justice paid the penalty of his crime on Saturday morning. For some days past he had been suffering from severe illness, and it is possible that his execution was carried out at once, lest he should by a natural death have escaped the disgrace and punishment awarded to him. It is probable that it was not generally known through the native quarters of the town that the day or hour had been fixed for his execution, or a larger concourse of spectators would have been present. As it was, some few hundred Hindoos, but hardly a dozen Mohammedans, were present. The number of Europeans on the ground was not large, but it contained some of the softer sex, if these could be so designated, whom nobody expected to see at such a scene. A large force of European and native constables kept the ground, but there was no disorder, nor indeed any excitement amongst the crowd. On the fog clearing away, a little before six, Dr. Mackenzie, the superintendent of the jail, accompanied by Dr. Lynch, inspector-general of prisons, Mr. S. C. Bayley, secretary to the Government of Bengal, Mr. Chauntrell, solicitor to Government, and the representatives of the press, proceeded to the condemned cell. The prisoner remained on his knees for some time in prayer. He was then brought out, and handcuffed and pinioned. He looked very ill, and as his wrists were being locked in the handcuffs behind his back, he began to display the first symptoms of nervousness which he had shown since his capture. His demeanour had never been defiant or bold, but always calm and self-possessed. Even when informed, which he had been previously, that his body was to be burned after death—punishment dreadful to the followers of the Prophet, as involving the loss of Paradise—he was most cool, and merely said "Atcha." Before ascending the steps which led up to the scaffold, Dr. Mackenzie asked him if he wished to say anything. He answered that he had nothing to say beyond what he had already said—that he was not in his senses when he stabbed the Chief Justice ; he was subject to fits (epilepsy), and he must have done the act when in such a fit. He had always kept to this statement, and though not a little trouble was taken during the time he was in prison to elicit something more from him, all attempts were ineffectual.—Englishman, Nov. 8.

IMPORTS.—Calcutta, Nov. 8.—The course of business during the past week has not been satisfactory, and with a limited demand and an increasing desire to sell, prices have ruled somewhat in favour of buyers. The large purchases made during the holidays prove to have been to some extent speculative, and in the absence of an up-country demand our dealers find themselves unable to take delivery of, or get rid of, these purchases.

EXPORTS.—Calcutta, Nov. 8.—Jute: The principal business has been done in inferior sorts, good and fine being very scarce and dear. Stocks are large. Fine Serajgunge, Rs. 5-10 to 5-12 per maund; good Serajgunge, Rs. 4-10 to 5-4 per maund. Saltpetre: The demand has been sufficient to establish a rise of fully six annas, especially as the supplies of refined and washed are still short. Linseed: The stocks are running short, and smaller descriptions have experienced a slight rise; there is hardly any bold in the market. Rapeseed: For fine yellow higher prices are demanded, and this description may be quoted at Rs. 5-6. Raw Silk: The stock consists of about 100 bales filatures and 150 bales native sorts, but not a single transaction has been reported during the week. Corahs: The stock amounts to about 10,000 pieces, but buyers and sellers cannot come to terms, the latter standing out for Rs. 155 for the best qualities, which the last sales in London do not warrant.

ADDRESS TO THE HON. J. B. NORTON.

The address of the native community of Madras to the Hon. John Bruce Norton, Advocate-General of Madras, was presented in a silver case with engraved work on the evening of November 6, at Patcheappah's Hall, with great ceremony. There was a large attendance of the European and native communities, notwithstanding the unfavourable state of the weather. The chair was taken by the Hon. V. Ramiengar. C.S.I. The proceedings began with the reading of the address by Mr. Runganadum Moodelly, M.A., from which we take the following extracts:—

"You arrived among us after a beginning had been made in State secular education and after the unwearied exertions of Mr. George Norton, whose memory will for ever be revered among us, had resulted under the auspices of that high-minded nobleman and statesman Lord Elphinstone, in the establishment of the high school as part of a general scheme of University education then in contemplation for the whole presidency; and from the time of your appointment as a governor of that Institution in 1844, down to the present moment, you have never ceased to fight and promote the cause of native education.

"Your fearless exposure of the defects in the administration of justice in Southern India, and your graphic picture of the condition, wants, and grievances of the ryots of our Presidency, contained in your famous letter to Mr. Lowe in 1854, have resulted in most important and numerous reforms both in the working of our courts and in the revenue administration of our country.

"It was one of your chief desires to promote the study of Law among the rising generation of native youth, and to see them placed on this new path of independence. So early as 1856, when the amalgamation of the two highest Courts at the Presidency was little thought of, you expressed your hope and wish of 'casting aside all petty feelings of class interests, to see the day when the natives shall be found on a level with yourself and your brethren of the robe, running on an equality with them an honourable emulous race, in which the very highest prizes shall be his who has proved himself most worthy of them.' Before many years rolled away these words proved prophetic; and, if we mistake not, the first native pleader was received into your chambers and presented to the Judges by yourself.

"Nor can we pass over in silence the important part which you played in the critical times of the mutiny. In 1857-58, while the less thoughtful of your countrymen were carried away by passion, and impugned in no measured terms the fidelity of the people, you remained a staunch advocate of the native cause, and, rightly judging the real state of native feeling, spared no efforts to disabuse the minds of Englishmen at home, and to draw attention to the real grievances of the country."

ECCLESIASTICAL.—The Right Rev. Dr. Gell, Bishop of Madras, after an absence from India of about eighteen months for the benefit of his health, returned to the scene of his labours on Nov. 2. His Lordship was met at the railway station by a number of the clergy who had assembled there for the purpose of welcoming him back to his diocese.

RUMOURED OFFICIAL CHANGES.—There is a rumour afloat that Colonel Denison, president of the Madras Municipal Commission, is about to return to Madras, to resume the duties of his office, and that Mr. Loch, the acting president, having of course to vacate his acting appointment on Colonel Denison's arrival, will have to be provided for elsewhere, the deputy collectorship at the Sea Customs office not being a sufficiently well paid appointment for him. Rumour also states that this latter feat has been most deftly accomplished. The Hon. V. Ramiengar, a member of council, and incumbent of that very nice, little, and well-paid sinecure appointment, the superintendent of stamps, is to be nominated dewan (i. e., chief ministerial officer) of the Travancore State, and Mr. Loch is to be appointed Mr. Ramiengar's successor.—Athenæum.

WRECK OF THE "BELVIDERA" AT PONDICHERRY.—A telegram from Madras, Nov. 8, received at Bombay, says that there has been tempestuous weather on the Madras Coast. The Belvidera has been wrecked at Pondicherry, but the crew were saved.

JUDGMENT IN THE VANINGEN AFFAIR.—The High Court Sessions were brought to a close on Friday last. The trial of Mr. Vaningen, junior (one of the accused in the Bangalore affray case) occupied the whole of Thursday. After a patient hearing and an able display of forensic learning by counsel on both sides, the jury returned a verdict of acquittal, without a moment's hesitation. Some indiscreet individuals in Court, forgetting the respect which is due to the Bench and the solemnity of the proceedings of a court of law, were foolish enough to applaud the jury on the pronouncing of the verdict of acquittal by the foreman; and one unlucky individual who was caught in the act of doing so was brought up before the Judge, who lectured him on the impropriety of his conduct, and let him off with a caution. On Friday Lieutenant Lambart and Sergeant McInnis were put upon their trial. They both, upon the recommendation of their legal advisers, pleaded guilty, and the Court, after short addresses from their counsel, in mitigation of the sentence it was in the power of the Judge to pronounce, sentenced Lieutenant Lambart to pay a fine of Rs. 500, and Sergeant McInnis a fine of Rs. 50. Thus ends for the present this painful affair.—Athenæum, Nov. 9.

THE 19TH NATIVE INFANTRY.—The affairs of the No. 1 Company 19th Regiment Native Infantry have not yet ceased to engage public attention. Apart from the matters which have resulted from the proceedings of the local and Home Governments with respect to this regiment, petitions from some of the discharged men have gone forward. We learn that five privates, one jemadar, and two musicians, have been reinstated and restored to the service. In reply to six other petitions sent to the Government, it is stated that the evidence given is inadmissible, inasmuch as it was distinctly stated at the Court of Enquiry held on the 16th February last, that the petitioners did not obey the orders of the commanding officer. Replies to the endorsement on the petitions have been forwarded by these six men, and it remains to be seen how the Government will decide the matter. The Government are disposed to give the petitioners a fair hearing, and call for the evidence of disinterested witnesses. But such witnesses it is impossible for the petitioners to produce, inasmuch as those present were men of their own corps, and when the company was ordered out to parade on the evening of the 11th February last, when the alleged mutiny took place, it was dark, and there were no disinterested persons on the spot. We hear that as the Government have admitted some of the petitioners into the service, all those who returned to their villages, after the disbandment took place, are coming back, in the hope that they will be reinstated if a proper representation is made on their behalf. It is, therefore, probable that the Military Department of the Government Secretariat will be inundated with petitions from the men.—Bangalore Herald.

THE LOSS OF THE "RANGOON."

A gentleman who has just returned from Galle supplies us with the following particulars regarding the destruction of the P. and O. Company's Rangoon:—

The Rangoon was timed to sail at six o'clock on Thursday night the 1st inst. The mail boat came alongside about that hour. Wishing to get away with daylight, the captain, to save time, went on ahead, intending to wait and pick the mail boat up on the way. About a mile, I think, from Galle Harbour, there is a well-known place called the Cadda Rock. The Rangoon got nearly abreast of this place, and then slowed to pick up the mails from the boat. The boat had gone to the wrong side of the steamer, and while it was coming round to the other side, the Rangoon was suddenly swept by a strong current against this Cadda Rock. It seemed to be her stern that struck severest. However, it did not appear to be thought on board that much damage had been done, and the mails were lifted in, and the steamer proceeded. The captain had, in case of any thing, ordered the boats to be got ready, little thinking, probably, that the emergency would arise that would call for their use; but the Rangoon had not proceeded over two miles when she began to sink. Canon were fired for assistance. These were at first thought by the Galle people to be merely the announcement of the arrival of the China mail, but they were disabused when they saw the rockets which were sent up at short intervals from the sinking ship. The boats were put down at half-past ten. There was no moon up, and much trouble was experienced in landing the passengers in the darkness. Some cabin baggage, all wet, and a few bags of mails—those, I think, which had just been taken on board from Galle—were all that could be saved. The regular baggage room could not be reached, and several passengers lost valuable kits. After pulling for a little the passengers were picked up by the British ship Sydenham, which had just arrived from London; and they were landed in Galle about four o'clock in the morning, where they much astonished those who had bid them goodbye, on their way to Australia, the night before. So thankful were the passengers for their escape that they collected a sum of money at once, and presented the captain of the Sydenham with a memento of the occurrence and their gratitude. Some time after the passengers had left, the P. and O. Company's steamer Baroda, which was on the way to Suez with the China mails, neared the Rangoon, but she did not seem to have been of much use, and the Rangoon sank at midnight, six hours after she struck. The sea was perfectly calm at the time of the accident, and the strong current seems the only reason that can be given for its occurrence. The Cadda Rock can be approached quite close upon the left side coming from Galle, and the pilot in charge must have thought the place was perfectly safe, or he would not have stopped at such a place to pick up the mails. It was said that the pilot was the same man who was in charge, some years ago, of the Malabar, which was lost near the same place, when Lord Elgin was on board. Passing the spot next morning, nothing could be seen of the Rangoon except the topmasts sticking above the water and some deck furniture floating about. She sank in fourteen fathoms. The P. and O. Company were very kind to the passengers, allowing them £1 for every day of their detention. Another steamer was at once telegraphed for to Bombay, and on the way up from Galle we passed the Behar, which had been despatched to take on to Australia the passengers and what mails could be recovered. I believe, on the authority of Mr. Stuart, postmaster in Bombay, that the Bombay mails have been saved, though more or less damaged by the water.—Bombay Gazette, Nov. 11.

CURIOUS ACCIDENT IN THE HARBOUR—LOSS OF A 12-TON GUN.

The Dhurrumtolla and Jumna recently arrived here from England with large guns for harbour defensive purposes, the former with fourteen and the latter with six guns—all, we believe, of 12 tons. Yesterday at one o'clock the Jumna began to unload her cargo. A large cotton boat was taken alongsiue of her, and it was intended to land one of the cannon in it. A gun, which happened to be the first attempted to be landed, was hoisted in a chain sling, and cautiously lowered into the boat. The sea was a little "jabbly," and as the lighter sank considerably with the great weight in her, it was supposed that it would be dangerous to trust her with the gun. Accordingly the gun was hoisted back again and the boat cleared off. Just as the gun was nearly on board, something interfered with its progress. While efforts were being made to get it clear, a stud of the chain started; the link broke with the strain; and the gun fell with a tremedous splash into the water. It was fortunate that the lighter had sheered off from the ship's side, or the gun would have gone through its bottom as if it had been matchwood, and carried it down with it, together, possibly, with those on board. A buoy was immediately moored over the place where the gun had disappeared. A native diver, belonging to the dockyard, was sent for. He dived under the buoy, but could find nothing of the gun, altough he saw two mud banks, which looked as if they had been just forced up by the plunge of some heavy substance into the soft mud bottom.

The assistance of divers from Mazagon and the troopships in the harbour is, we believe, to be procured, and efforts to discover the huge piece of ordnance will be resumed to-day. From the very slimy nature of the harbour bottom, it is supposed the gun, as it fell with its heavy breach downwards, would cleave a way for itself to a great depth; and as the mud closed over the hole at once, and the banks that were raised are not likely to last long, great doubts are held of its ever being found. If it be once got hold of, slings could be passed round it, and it would be recovered, though not any the better for its ducking; but the difficulty is to get at it, under its great supertratum of mud, and it is one that is nearer the impossible than the possible to overcome.

It is said the Jumna got hoisting gear from the dockyard, but preferred to use her own instead. Whatever slings were used, it is a pity that greater precautions had not been taken to ascertain their capabilities before they were put to the strain of hoisting such enormous weights. The loss of a 12-ton gun by such an accident must represent a good deal of money very unprofitably sunk for the taxpayer.

The Dhurrumtolla is to be brought into dock to discharge her share of the big guns, so that such another accident will be prevented with her, at all events. We believe the Jumna will do likewise now, but could she not have done so at first; or would it have been too expensive?—Bombay Gazette, Nov. 11.

"The Indian Antiquary."—It affords us considerable pleasure to announce to our readers that in the beginning of the new year a monthly journal will be published in Bombay, to be called The Indian Antiquary, to whose pages the "most eminent Orientalists in India, Europe, and America, it is expected, will become contributors." It will, we presume, be a success, or it ought at least to be, considering that the subjects it will discuss and afford information upon are now so generally sought after and made the forte of so many of our men of erudition. We are glad to observe that so worthy a gentleman as J. Burgess, Esq., M.R.A.S., F.R.G.S., is the editor; we do not know of any person more suitable and competent to the great task as he.—Poona Observer, Oct. 20.

Military.—Major Hill, H.M's 56th Regiment, left Poona for Bombay en route to Deesa on Friday last. Major Hill is to assume the command of Mount Aboo Sanitarium from Major Cochrane who rejoins his regiment on the expiry of his term of office. Brigadier-General P. W. Luard is spoken of as likely to succeed Brigadier-General Kaye, C.B, in the Mooltan command. General Luard was lately assistant adjutant-general at Meerut, and was much liked there. A correspondent, writing from Mhow, informs the Pioneer, Oct. 30:—The 14th Regiment Bombay N.I. left the station this morning, under the command of Colonel Wood, V.C., en route for Kolapur. The regriment has been stationed here for the past three years. The relieving corps, the 10th N.I., from Dhoolia, will not arrive until February, when the 3rd N.I. will march en route for Ahmedabad. There are rumours that the 59th Regiment are likely to stay here, and that the 83rd Regiment will go to Nussirabad, as it is said they served in that station some years ago, when in the country, and prefer it to Mhow, and have therefore volunteered to go to Nussirabad, but doubtless this is only a shave.

Public Statues.—Let Calcutta boast her palaces of stucco, Bombay will soon be famous for her statues in marble. To say nothing of those long established in the Town-hall, we have recently had Woolner's fine statue of Sassoon the patriarch; and Noble's statue of the Queen, presented by the late Guicowar, is soon to appear on the Esplanade under a canopy of exquisite sculpture. The Cowasjee Jehanghier statue is as good as secured, though the committee can scarcely yet have begun to think of choosing their sculptor. Now a correspondent brings forward the names of two departed worthies of this city, who, if we are to multiply our marble embellishments, have certainly very eminent claims. Or, rather, it is the city, which, for its own fame, is bound to secure some characteristic monumental effigy of them whilst their lineaments are yet remembered by a few. The two new-named—Framjee Cowasjee and Mulla Feroze—both belonged to the Zoroastrian community, though the literary qualities of the latter entitle him to wider fame. We leave what our correspondent says in behalf of both to have such weight as it is entitled to; and if it should be decided that the present is not a time to undertake two more statues, we trust the proposal will be borne in mind and carried out before very long.—Times of India.

The Famine in Persia.—We are glad to give announcement to an act of great munificence on the part of his Highness Agah Khan toward the unhappy people who are starving in Persia, the country of his Highness's birth. The sum of Rs. 20,000 has been forwarded by him to Nussur Ruttonsee, a Khojah merchant at Bunder Abbas, with a view to that amount being sent to the famine-stricken districts of Persia. The Agah has also despatched Rs. 10,000 to Sheik Rezzi, of Kerbela, for distribution among the starving people in that portion of Turkish Arabia. During the last four months large numbers of Persians arriving destitute from the Gulf have been sheltered and fed by the Agah at his residences in Love-lane and Nesbit-lane, and at the present time as many as two hundred of these unfortunate persons are thus maintained and clothed. These people are mostly men, but there are a few women and children with them. When they arrived in Bombay they were in a most wretched state, and one poor woman became insane from the privations she endured, and remained so until relieved from her sufferings by death. The good example set by the Agah will doubtless stimulate others who have the means to render aid in the good work of assisting the suffering people of Persia.—Bombay Gazette.

IMPORTS.—Bombay, Nov. 11.—The market for Manchester Goods has continued in a dull state, although more business has been done than in the previous week. Copper Braziers at Rs. 44-12.

EXPORTS.—Bombay, Nov. 11.—Cotton: The business done has been very small, and prices may be quoted Rs. 3 to 5 per candy lower. INDIAN FORESTS AND INDIAN RAILWAYS.

At a conference of the Society of Arts India Committee, held on Friday evening, Lieutenant Colonel A. Romaine Wragg read a paper on Indian Forests and Indian Railways; Mr. Hyde Clarke in the chair. The paper, consisting of a compilation of official papers relating to the Forest Conservancy, was an exhaustive one, showing the advisability of the department extending its action to the provision of wood fuel for Indian railways, and especially in the Madras Presidency, where there were no available collieries as in Bengal, for the supply of railways with coal. The paper also advocated a scheme for supplying peat fuel at Madras to railways as a cheaper means of propulsion than coal in Central India.

Mr. Horne, while expressing his approval of the general objects of the paper, said his experience of the North-West Provinces and Rohilcund had convinced him that there was to great a tendency to expect fuel production from the action of the Forest Conservancy alone; the peasantry themselves had in their hands the means of producing any amount of fuel. If Government would offer a trifling reward to village planters to grow wood for fuel, any quantity could soon be produced. But it was necessary to arrange with the zemindars, who held rights in the land, for the encouragement of planting. He had grown many millions of trees in India, but the danger he had always had to encounter was the destruction of the saplings.

Mr. Ulrich (engineer and inventor of the road-engine field-boiler) referred to the introduction of road engines in India, which were facilitating traffic. Field-boilers to road-engines had been found to answer better than any other kind of boiler, especially with the heavy goods trains. The road-engines used peat fuel exported from England, supplied by a company in Yorkshire. The Government would be following in the right track by utilising peat wherever they could get it for fuel for railway purposes in India.

Mr. Thomas Briggs had never been in India; still he thought his advice might be respected when he recomended the development of peat resources for fuel. But he must complain of the taxation of the peasantry, and especially of the obnoxious salt tax as interfering with production and agricultural operations.

Capt. A. Taylor, I.N., observed that peat fuel used in India might not lower the price of wood, but it might be destined to become as dear as coal for railway purposes. This was the way it would arise: contractors by buying up all the peat manufactured would ultimately bring it up to the price of coal. This would be the difficulty in the future. Referring to the Madras supply of cotton the speaker said he had recently returned from that presidency, and knew that the indigo cultivation was superseding cotton in the districts he was acquainted with.

Mr. Lloyd Wise thought the plans proposed of utilisation of peat important. He explained the mode of manufacture in this country, which, while it gave to the fuel its compactness and strength, was a manufacture carried on with great economy and cheapness.

Dr. Cleghorn stated that Lord Harris had strongly advocated the use of peat in his minute on the Neilgherry Hills. He remarked that this natural product existed in large quantity only on the higher ranges, and may be purchased at a reasonable rate. When used in houses along with wood the expenditure of the latter is much reduced, and the cost to the consumers considerably lessened. Turf fuel is now cut and stacked close to Ootacamund at the rate of Rs. 3½ per cartload. It burns well and maks a cheerful fire, especially when mixed with wood. It is most desirable to encourage the consumption of this material; it has been used for brick and lime burning, and I have urged its employment (in lieu of wood) to the utmost extent possible in public works. The chief impediment to the working of the bogs on the Western Hills is the small number of sunny days to dry the turf. This does not apply to the Eastern side of the hills. The objection to its use in houses is that the dust is injurious to curtains and carpets. Several Europeans work the bogs in a skilful manner. There is no tax or burden, but the profits being small, the trade is not briskly followed up. The general appearance of the bogs resembles those which occur in Scotland—the producing plants belong to the Lama (genera Sphagnum. Parnassia, Utricularia, Carex, &c.), but the species are different. Dr. Cleghorn alluded to the great importance of strictly conserving these bogs, which serve as large sponges for retaining the moisture, which slowly finds its way to the plains below. With regard to the great question of fuel supply to railways he could not enter upon it further than by stating that the Government of India had given it their most earnest attention. In Madras, a large extent of land had been taken up for fuel plantations, which were placed under special officers, and their progress reported to Government every month. In the Punjab also, numerous large plantations had been fenced in and demarcated along the line from Delhi to Lahore and Lahore to Mooltan, and satisfactory reports had been received. The work was new and difficult, and did not form part of the duties of the Forest Department as originally planned, though from the gravity of the emergency it had now in some parts devolved upon them. He had confined his remarks chiefly to the question of utilising peat fuel on railways, and if this should hereafter be found practicable, he was certain that it would be a matter of satisfaction to all connected with railways; at present turf was not carried ten miles from the peat-bogs, and unless subjected to some special process of compression he did not see how it could be turned to account.

The Chairman succinctly reviewed the opinions of the different speakers, noticing that the ventilation of ideas in respect to matters calculated to advantage India would have due effect in producing actual benefit to the country. He hoped that whenever the Congress for India connected with this Society came into operation it would take up the Forestry question, and that of developing the wood and timber resources of India for commercial objects. (Cheers.)

The Opener succinctly replied. In answer to Mr. Horne, who urged that the Forest Conservancy should provide the new description of fuel advocated for railways, he replied that at present nothing was being done of any consequence in opening up this source of commerce. It had been shown that Madras was the great centre of peat soil. Here then was the place to commence the production of the fuel. Who would come forward in the manufacture?

At the conclusion of the reply a vote of thanks was unanimously given to the lecturer for his valuable paper, and the conference terminated.

Miscellaneous.

British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company (Limited).—The ordinary general meeting of this company was held on Nov. 24, at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street; Mr. J. Pender in the chair. The report stated that since the last meeting the China Company had connected Saigon with their main line between Hong Kong and Singapore. The section of the Australian Company's line from Java to Australia would shortly be completed. The gross receipts of the company for the six months ending Sept. 30, less £2,572 loss on exchange from India, amounted to £61,803, and the expenses to £16,980, leaving a balance of £44,823. The directors recommend a dividend for the half-year of 6s. per share, free of income tax, leaving, with a balance of £1,578 from the preceding half-year, £10,777 to be carried to the reserve fund. The total expenditure on capital account amounted to £1,176,054.

Change in the Dates of Arrival of the Indian Mails.—In reference to the Indian Mail Service, the report of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company, which we have just received, communicates the following important information:—The approaching acceleration of the transit of the mails by the continental railways, coupled with the completion of the Mont Cenis Tunnel, has caused the Postmaster-General to call upon the Company to carry out a time table for 1872 on the following basis:—A departure from Brindisi every Monday at 5 A.M., and a departure from Bombay for Suez every Monday at 5.30 P.M., except during the south-west monsoon, when the departure is to be three days earlier. All other arrivals and departures to be governed by these. One result of these arrangements will be a change in the day of departure of the weekly steamers from Southampton from Saturday to Thursday, and the reverting to Monday as the ordinary day for the delivery of the mails in London; the time gained by the accelerations referred to above being distributed among the communities of India, China, and Australia, where it was in fact most wanted, as the intervals between the arrival and despatch of the mails were shorter than in England. The directors have taken this opportunity of notifying the approaching change, as it might otherwise be supposed that the delivery of the mails on Monday was due to some irregularity on the part of the Company.

P. and O. Steam Navigation Company.—The thirty-first annual report of this company has been issued preparatory to its being submitted to the meeting to be held on the 7th inst. In referring to the loss of the Rangoon the directors state that the result of the investigation into the cause of the accident is a verdict exonerating Captain Skottowe and all officers of the Rangoon of all blame, but blaming the pilot. The services are noticed of Captain J. Bernard, commander of the Malacca, who under extreme stress of weather succeeded in embarking the whole of the crew of H.M.S. Megæra, forty officers and 286 seamen, after the wreck on St. Paul's Island, and taking them on to St. George's Sound. The Lords of the Admiralty have thanked Captain Bernard through the P. and O. Company for his valuable and energetic services towards the Megæra. The new compact for the transmission of the Indian mail necessitates the delivery of it regularly every Monday in London. The directors refer to losses in 1870-71; a diminished receipt of £225 000 in a year is a feature that calls for some explanation, and this is furnished by the fact that competition has necessitated very large reductions in the rates of passage-money and freight. The directors recommend a dividend of 3 per cent. only for the six months ending Sept. 30 last, making, with 3 per cent. declared in June, and the payment of 1 per cent. from the underwriting account, a total of 7 per cent. for the year.

The Euphrates Valley Railway.—The following has appeared in the Times:—"Venice, Nov. 16, 1871. My dear Sir,—You know the importance I attach to railway communication with India, and you wish for an expression of my opinion as to the controversy now going on concerning it, and concerning the various lines which are being proposed. The French proverb says, 'Le mieux est l'ennemi de bien, and this proverb seems to me singularly applicable to the case before us. If we go on perplexing our minds with all the various lines that speculative ingenuity may present to us, I fear, without entering here into their several merits, that, instead of doing what is best to be done, we shall do nothing at all. I have thought it more practical, therefore, to fix my mind on a project for which the public attention has long been preparing itself, and which combines a number of well-known advantages which every one at once understands. I speak of a line between the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf to be united with Constantinople. I will not pretend to lay down this line precisely in all the points; some of these have still to be studied and determined; but I know we can have a line traversing the territory of only one Power, with which we are on terms of close amity; that it will be aided by two good ports and two great rivers, and that a great portion of it will pass over a perfectly level country, remarkable for its fertility and resources. I know, also, that this line produces a great saving of time on the one hand, and is not, on the other, of that gigantic kind which arrests enterprise or interferes with its being completed. These considerations suffice for me. I do not want to bring forward all the other arguments that may be urged in favour of my own conclusion, nor to pass years in hunting after some other project, which is certain to be exposed to more difficulty, and not certain to offer greater benefits than that which I support.—Yours truly, "Dalling."

Eastern Bengal Railway.—The ordinary general meeting of this company was held on the 28th Nov., at the Guildhall Tavern; Mr. J. F. Leith in the chair. Mr. J. T. Wood, the secretary, having read the notice convening the meeting, the report was taken as read. The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said the proprietors had no doubt heard or read of the great flood that had extended over a great part of Bengal, and that considerable damage had been done to some of the railways affected by the overflow of the great rivers, Ganges and Jumna. The inundations were felt on their line about the 1st of September last, and for eight weeks before they occurred the railway had met with considerable success in traffic. The receipts during the eight weeks amounted to £48,484, as against £23,641 in the corresponding period of last year, showing an increase of 105·8 per cent., and he thought it rather distressing to have so good a traffic interfered with. The Ganges rose ten inches higher than during any other flood that had occurred in the present century. The openings for floods made in the embankments were found not sufficient at two points on their line; at one of them, about sixty-one miles from Calcutta, it had to contend with a flood 400 feet wide and 60 feet deep in the centre, running at the rate of six or seven miles an hour across the line, but in the course of a few days the chasm in the line was covered by a bridge of boats for passenger traffic, and owing to the further great exertions of their agent and engineer, and in fact the whole of the company's staff, they were enabled to resume the goods traffic over the damaged portions of their line by the end of last month. It was very gratifying that neither of their great bridges had been damaged, and great credit was due to Mr. Leslie, the engineer, for the care he had bestowed on their construction. The result of the working of the traffic up to the time of the inundation had been very atisfactory.

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

The Shepherd, of Shields, for Galle, was towed into Yarmouth Roads on Nov. 22, after having been in collision, and it will be necessary for her to go to Harwich for repairs.

The Marmion, Burgess, from Liverpool for Calcutta with salt, put into Queenstown on Nov. 26 with bows torn away, fore compartment full of water, and loss of jibboom, having been in collision off the Tuskar at four A.M. on Nov. 25. She, however, makes no water; the salt drains a little. Both of her bows have entirely gone, but stern uninjured; the crew lost all their clothes, and a quantity of salt was jettisoned out of forehold.

The str. Ananda, Burns, from Greenock to Rangoon, with a general cargo, put into Queenstown on Nov. 27, with slight derangement to machinery.

The Cassandra, from Madras, which was ashore in Compton Bay, has been got off, not leaking much, and will be towed to Portsmouth.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

The Broad Arrow asserts that a fresh difficulty arising out of the Abolition of Purchase threatens the repose of the War Office and the Treasury. By some extraordinary oversight the corps formerly known as the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay Engineers—who now form part of the Royal Engineers—were omitted from the enumeration of non-purchase corps whose claims are to be fairly met by the Royal Commission appointed to carry out the new arrangements rendered necessary by the abolition of Purchase. In consequence of this omission, the Commissioners themselves are placed in a dilemma, and the officers of the abovenamed corps exposed to an injustice which, we have no hesitation in saying, was never contemplated when the Act was framed. To confine our remarks for the moment to the late Bombay Engineers. The Purchase system established in this corps has been in regular operation from its first establishment in 1853, and since that date hardly a year has passed in which some two or three steps have not been paid for—the total number being twenty-eight. The cost to the officers in less than twenty years covered by this period would amount to little less than £100,000. The omission of the corps from the Act of Parliament can only be accounted for by the ignorance of those who framed the clauses that such a regular system had been worked for years, and was still working, in a seniority corps. To illustrate the hardship of the case, it will be sufficient to mention the loss with which the first sufferer under the Act is threatened. Colonel Playfair, on the 15th December instant, had the system of Purchase not been abolished, would receive a sum of nearly £4,000 as an inducement to retire, of which amount he must certainly have subscribed in hard cash from £2,500 to £3,000. Officers of other ranks have of course subscribed in proportion during the last twenty years, and each in his turn will have to suffer in the same way a proportional loss, varying from £5,000 to £300, unless some means can be found by which the error in the Act of Parliament can be corrected. Of course the most direct way would be to submit a supplementary Act to Parliament, empowering the Commissioners to deal with all such cases on the same terms as the non-purchase regiments of the Line; and we see no reason why this should not be done. We understand that the matter is so far in train that the Bombay Government has recommended the claims of the corps to the consideration of the Home authorities.

OFFICIAL CHANGES IN MYSORE.—We are informed that it is not unlikely Colonel Meade, the Chief Commissioner of this Province, will succeed Mr Saunders, C.B., the Resident at Hyderabad, that gentleman proceeding on leave to England. In that case Mr. Ross Mangles, the Judicial Commissioner, will be Colonel Meade's locum tenens—Mr. Gordon, the Guardian to the Maharajah at Mysore, not caring to accept the office.—Bangalore Herald.

EXPERIMENTS WITH CAROLINA PADDY.—Carolina paddy did not have a fair trial in the N. W. P. in 1870; but, as a rule, no experiment does have a fair trial in India for a considerable time. We need not be disheartened. In Allahabad, one gentleman, to whom a supply of seed was entrusted, reports that his experiment was a failure, but he cannot account for it; another planted under the bund of a tank, the bund burst, and the whole was washed away; a third declined to send in any report at all, at least he has neglected to do so. In Cawnpore the seed sown was swamped by heavy rain. In the districts of Banda and Futtehpore also, heavy rain interfered. In Bijnour Mr. Tresham, a zemindar, reports favourably, but gives no figures; but the efforts of native cultivators failed. In Moradabad, notwithstanding drawbacks, the yield was, to say the least, encouraging; one farmer at least wishes to try again. In Bareilly the result was not so encouraging. In Shajehanpore, Mr. Powell, of the Rosa Factory, conducted the experiments; he tried on low land, on the side of a jheel, and in a garden plot; the low land was flooded and failed, by the jheel the outturn was not good, in the garden "the crop was beautiful, a picture to look at, the grain of a bright golden hue, every ear pendant, stalks high and strong." In Kumaon, "in consequence of the great sickness at the important time, the seed was neglected;" the commissioner undertook the care of a portion of the seed "with servants to look after it, but they fell sick, and the wild pigs destroyed it." In Allyghur the result was a total failure, and the collector discourages any further trials in that district. The superintendent of the Doon reports that though the weather was unfavourable, and the yield poor, he is convinced that thirty maunds per acre could be secured; but he "doubts if it would ever come into much favour, it is so coarse and utterly without flavour, none but the poorest of the poor would eat it." On the other hand, the collector of Saharunpore "is sure that if seed were obtainable it would be very extensively sown, and that in time it would, perhaps, entirely take the place of the native rice;" he says further, that though coarser than the indigenous rice, in flavour "it is only inferior to the best." In Mozufferuggur experiments were unsatisfactory. In the Benares division the trial was a failure.—Delhi Gazette.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

THE OPTOSCOPE.

The utility of the OPTOSCOPE is now fully determined. In numerous cases has its merits been displayed in a manner so satisfactory, that in no instance has it afforded less satisfaction to the intelligent inquirer than to the inventor himself. It has long been a matter of considerable importance to those suffering from defective vision to learn the exact state of the refractive humours of the eye, and the proper convexity or concavity of the glasses required to render the vision as perfect as the state of the organs will admit of.

is all that can be desired for this purpose, and those desirous of benefiting by his discovery may be suited with the most perfect-fitting glasses at moderate cost.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Nov. 18; Agra and Madras, Nov. 16; Calcutta, Nov. 15.

ALL the heads of governments and departments in India are on the move. Lord Mayo, starting from Simla at the beginning of November, stopped at Bilasur, Suchet, and Mandi, on his way to the Kangra Valley. At Palampur, which he reached on the 6th, he held a Durbar on the day following. On the 12th his lordship was at Dharmsala, which he left the next day for Chamba and Dalhousie. He was expected on the 16th at Madhaphur. After receiving a visit there from the Maharajah of Kashmere, he was to start for Lahore on the afternoon of the 17th, and there hold a Durbar on the morrow. At Sonepore, on his way to Calcutta, he was to be met by Sir Jung Bahadur of Nepal. His arrival at Calcutta was expected to take place on the 26th November. Lord Napier of Magdala went down from Simla on the 7th, after having made all due arrangements for the Loshai campaign and the camp of exercise near Delhi. On his way down country he was expected to look in at the new Hill Station of Pachmari in the Central Provinces. The other Lord Napier was last heard of at Trichinopoly, where among other things he and Lady Napier visited the great temple at Srirangam, renowned for its thousand pillars and its wealth of precious jewelry. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald had returned for a time to Mahableshwar, but was expected back at Bombay before the end of November, on his way to explore the Southern Mahratta Country.

SIR W. MUIR was to leave Allahabad on the 4th of this month on a tour which would probably last about three months, including a visit to Nowgong, where he would probably arrive on New Year's-day. Mr. G. Campbell, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, continues his tour of active inspection, now halting at Mozufferpore, anon hurrying off to Motiharrie or Bankipore, then starting off again for the first-named town, where he laid the first stone of a new school, the eighth or ninth built and endowed by the Bahar Scientific Society for promoting vernacular education in India. We are glad to see that Mr. Campbell impressed upon his hearers the advantage of combining the study of English with that of the vernaculars.

ON the 13th November General Bourchier, who commands the Cachar Column of the Bengal Field Force, was at Doombra, on the Soorma river, awaiting some of the supplies sent up by boat. One batch of elephants from Calcutta had arrived safely at Chittagong. Eight hundred coolies from Darjeeling reached Chattak, on the Soorma, about the 8th November. A body of sappers and miners, with thirteen officers, had arrived at Dacca on the 6th, whence the steamer that brought them was to convey the 22nd N.I. to Chattak. Another steamer was expected to reach Naraingunj on the 8th, with a wing of the 42nd N.I., on its way to Chattak also. The 4th N.I. will watch the frontier from the stockades of Monierkhall, Nowarband, and Jalnacherra, the head-quarters remaining at Cachar. The stockades at Mainadhar, Chargolah, and Alinaggar are garrisoned by the 44th N.I.; the 43rd remains at Shillong; and the smaller stockades of Langai and Adampore are garrisoned by the Police. Brigadier-General Brownlow has proposed to employ a body of Hill Tracts Police in guarding the outposts north of the Karnafalli, and in keeping open the road between Kassalong and Kharkariah, the nearest post to Hill Tipperah, as well as that between Kassalong and the base of operations. Mr. Burland, a well-known planter in Cachar, will accompany Mr. Edgar for the purpose of conferring at need with the Loshais.

MR. CRAWFORD, the late Commissioner of Bombay having suddenly disappeared from the scene of municipal strife, his post appears to have been offered, hitherto in vain, to Mr. Hope, the able Collector of Surat. There is some hitch about pay, the Bombay appointment being worth rather less than that which has been so long held by Mr. Hope. Meanwhile the Bombay Government have passed their own verdict on the case at issue between Mr. Crawford and the Ratepayers' Committee. The Governor in Council reads the retired Commissioner a sharp lecture on "the extreme improvidence and recklessness" of many of his proceedings, and on his "culpable disregard" of the checks under which he ought to have acted as the guardian and dispenser of a large public revenue. It is plainly hinted that Mr. Crawford's timely withdrawal alone saved him from the unpleasantness of a formal dismissal; and the Controller of Accounts, Mr. Maidment, would also have been relieved of his duties, if the need of the moment did not demand "the retention of his services, on public grounds, for a short time longer." At the same time Sir Seymour Fitzgerald gives Mr. Crawford full credit for "the ability, zeal, and energy" displayed by him during the last six years, and for the quantity of good and lasting work he has done towards improving the sanitary and general state of Bombay. But his manner of obtaining a municipal loan from the Bombay Bank is specially condemned as "a breach of faith with the public creditor." Constrained however as he is to express his "surprise and displeasure" at the facts revealed to him—an expression of feeling which sounds rather behind date,—Sir Seymour appears inclined to think better of the financial position than Mr. Hope's Committee do, although he deems it expedient to try and raise fifteen lakhs of rupees—£150,000—through the Indian Government or some other way, in order to place the Municipality of Bombay on a sound financial footing. He will also bring in a little Bill to effect such changes as may seem expedient in the Municipal constitution.

Bombay has been visited with an unusually heavy fall of rain for the time of year. Plenteous showers have fallen all over the Presidency, just in time, it is hoped, to make up for the previous drought and dispel the windespread forebodings of a bad harvest. A change for the better has already taken place not only in the grain crops, but in the cotton-fields also. At Oomrawattee, indeed, the rain appears to have been rather too abundant, but from Guzerat, Katiawar, Khangaum, and Sheagaum, come satisfactory reports which encourage the belief that the cotton yield of this season will be richer both in quantity and quality than could, until now, have been expected.

From other parts of India we have equally hopeful news. In some parts of the Central Provinces there are still complaints of deficient rainfall, and the same thing may be said of the Berars and the Punjab. But in Bengal, Madras, Oudh, British Burmah, Sindh, Mysore, and Coorg, there is every prospect of a fair harvest.

It is said that Mr. John Pitt Kennedy has been appointed a judge of the Bengal High Court in the room of the late Mr. Justice Norman. Mr. R. E. Egerton has resigned his seat in the Supreme Council.

The practice of employing English soldiers at roadmaking in the Hills appears to be successful in other than moral respects. The rank and file of the detachment at Ranikhet earned six annas, eight pie (about 10d.) a-day each, and the non-commissioned officers eight annas, or a shilling each. In the opinion of the executive engineer the work could not have been done cheaper by local labour, even if the latter could have been obtained without drawing it away from other works of equal importance. The sepoys of a native regiment, the 32nd Pioneers, have also been doing satisfactory work at the rate of four annas a-day each.

It appears that the Committee on the Sagar Barracks, which have been following the example of those at Allahabad, were to meet at the former station early in this month. It is to be composed of a general officer, a Royal engineer, Colonel O'Connell, and a civil engineer, Mr. H. LeMesurier, agent of the G.I.P. Railway. Colonel Pollard, R.E., late chief engineer in the Central Provinces, and Mr. Crawford Campbell, superintending engineer of the Indore Railway, both of whom were on duty at Sagar when the barracks were building, have been ordered to attend the Committee. Capt. Faber, R.E., the executive engineer, had just arrived at Sagar from England. There is a rumour, how true we cannot say, that Lord Napier of Magdala will look in at Sagar to inspect the barracks, and inquire into the amount of accommodation for troops at that station, before he opens the peace campaign at Delhi.

The papers report steady progress in railway matters. The surveys for the Southern Mahratta State Railway being at last completed, full reports have been forwarded to the Indian Government, whose answer is awaited with much impatience. It is said too, that the survey of the country below Sukkur for the extension of the line to Kotree will shortly be undertaken, some of the staff employed on the upper section of the Indus Valley line having been ordered to hold themselves ready to enter on the survey in question.

The question of a revised scale of retiring pensions for Indian officers appears to have been taken up at last in India with an energy that bids fair to carry its point. The mere statement of existing rates should be enough to condemn them as compared with the existing conditions of life in England. Since the pay and pensions of officers in the Indian army were last revised, those conditions have undergone a remarkable change both in England and India. No one would seriously argue that £191 a-year after twenty-two years' Indian service will go so far in this country now as it did fifty or sixty years ago; and in India the expense of living has doubled itself in the last twelve years. Nor is it possible now for an officer retiring to eke out his little pension with a bonus raised from among his juniors. Hence it happens that a good many officers who would otherwise retire betimes are compelled to hang on for colonel's allowances, or at any rate for some higher pension than £191 a-year. The mischief arising from such causes speaks for itself. How to remedy it without injustice to old officers is a question well worth considering on the part of the ruling powers. Among various suggestions already put forth in India we may note some lately published in a Bombay paper. The author of them proposes that Government should offer every field-officer who has served the proper time in India the next higher pension plus £221. 5s.—the third of the difference between colonel's pension and colonel's allowances. Thus an officer who had completed twenty-two years' Indian service, would receive a total pension of £586. 5s. instead of the mere pension of a major. In the same way officers who had served twenty-five or twenty-eight years in India would receive a pension in the one case of £677. 10s., and in the other of £881. 5s. The same writer proposes that the retiring officer should receive a free passage in a troopship, with a bonus of £500 to start him on his return home.

Our readers will do well to note that from next New Year's Day the Indian mails will be carried regularly through France and the Mont Cenis Tunnel to Brindisi. The saving of time by this route will go all to the benefit of correspondents at the other end of the line, no change being contemplated in the dates of arrival or departure from this side; except that the Southampton steamer will leave England on Thursdays instead of Saturdays for the future, so as to catch the steamer which will start from Brindisi every Monday evening for Alexandria. The outward mail to Brindisi will leave London as before on Friday night, and the homeward mail will be delivered here as a rule on Monday morning, leaving Bombay on Mondays instead of Saturdays. These arrangements, we suppose, are the best for all concerned, if it be true that business men in England would rather have several clear days for answering Indian letters, than the option of posting their own answers a few hours after the delivery of the Indian mails. We note also that the postage on newspapers is reduced from fourpence to threepence, a concession which ought to go yet further. How much longer are Indian letters to pay a tax of thirteenpence each for the benefit of the English Post-Office and the newspapers? If the Indian Government and people had their due weight in questions affecting both countries, this absurd injustice would never have been allowed for a moment. As things are however, we fear that India must still continue to wait upon the convenience of France and England. It is rather hard upon India; but what is the use of a large dependency thousands of miles away, if it cannot pay handsomely for the privilege of being governed by a superior race?

Rear-Admiral Sir William Mends, the first witness examined before the Royal Commission concerning the Megæra, proceeds at once to India to "arrange marine establishments," on a requisition from the Viceroy. We have reason to think that no better selection from the Royal navy could have been made, the Admiral having had much to do with Indian subjects as director of the large steam transports (and with him an Indian navy officer of known ability, Capt. Cruttenden) since the time those successful vessels commenced running. It is rumoured that his mission is to report on the harbours. This we believe to be incorrect; but the gallant admiral will doubtless keep his weather eye open, and point out to the Government of India the poverty of its harbour and dock accommodation for the largest of her Majesty's ships. The necessity of an efficient Indian marine, with pilot and surveying establishments, at the beck and call of the Viceroy—with vessels and crews suited to the tropics, and under exceptional discipline, such as a hot climate demands, but cannot be permitted in vessels of the British navy, where nought exists but martial law and partial comfort, except in Mediterranean waters where none but the favourites of fortune are sent—this is a topic which the admiral may have to discuss; but we are surprised to hear that none of the old Indian Navy officers have been officially asked what their experience could suggest. Surely there are several of them still to the fore, whose advice ought to be invaluable, even if their active services are not thought worth securing.

We understand that the question of the future nomination and appointment both of Queen's and Indian Cadets is at present under consideration at the War Office.

A Bombay telegram of 4th December states that Mr. Rodgie, liquidator of the Old Bank of Bombay, has begun a suit against the Government Commercial Director.

By telegraph we learn that the Eclipse Expedition landed at Mangalore all well on the 6th December.

The next overland mail by Brindisi is due here on Saturday.

Literary.—We have to acknowledge receipt of a very handsome Guzerati volume entitled "Travels in India," by Mr. Ardaseer Framjee Moos, a well-known Parsee citizen of Bombay. The travels described were undertaken eight or nine years ago; but when in 1864 the work was ready to go to press, the sun of Bombay prosperity was going behind the cloud. We do not gather that Mr. Framjee considers we have come into glorious summer again, but the visit of H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh last year, and the enthusiasm then aroused, encouraged the author to give the finishing touches to his work, and prepare to launch it before the public. It is dedicated to Prince Alfred. Though described as a Guzerati work, and intended mainly for the perusal of readers in that language, large portions of it are given also in English. Both its morocco covers are embellished with a handsome design in gilt, and the book contains nearly seventy coloured lithographs and other plates, also a fine steel engraved map of India. The author mentions that the more interesting part of the journey will be described in a future volume, therefore we trust this will have a rapid sale, so as to encourage him to complete the work. It should be remarked that this book is the narrative of a band of travellers, most of whom are superior men well known in Bombay.—Times of India.

Courts Martial on Soldiers.—At a General Court-martial, assembled at Lucknow, on the 18th Sept., 1871, Private John Brien, of the 17th regiment, was arraigned on the following charges:—1. Having, at Lucknow, on the 18th Aug., 1871, been drunk. 2. Insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having used violence against Lance corporal Henry Stowell, by striking him with his clenched fist, the said Lance corporal Stowell being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. 3. Insubordination, in having, when brought before the officers appointed to form a district court-martial for his trial, on being offered the option to challenge any of the officers so appointed, used insubordinate language towards them, his superior officers, in substance and to the effect following, that is to say,—"You are all a mean set, come here to swear my life away, and will not believe what I say;" and further,—"If that is not enough, I will give you plenty more." Finding: The Court finds that the prisoner is guilty of all the charges. Sentence: The Court sentences the prisoner to suffer penal servitude for the term of five years. R. MacLeod, Col. 21st hussars, President. Approved and confirmed. The penal servitude will be undergone in India. Napier of Magdala, Gen., C. in C. in India. Head Quarters, Simla, Oct. 6, 1871. The prisoner is to remain in military custody at Lucknow until further orders.—At a District Court-martial, assembled at Peshawur, on the 19th July, 1871, Private Benjamin Robertshaw, 60th regiment, was arraigned on the following charge:—With having, at Peshawur, on the 11th July, 1871, been drunk. Finding: The Court finds that the prisoner is guilty of the charge. Sentence: The Court sentences the prisoner to forfeit any annuity, gratuity, medals—viz., Mutiny Medal and China Medals with clasps for "Taku Fort" and "Pekin," or decoration which may have been granted him; to forfeit all advantages as to pension which he may have earned by past service; to forfeit all right to good-conduct pay and pension on discharge, in respect to past service; and further, the Court sentences the prisoner to be discharged the service with ignominy. J. Ruggles, Lieut. col. 19th Punjab N.I., President. Revised Sentence: The Court having attentively considered the observations of the revising officer, and the whole of the proceedings, do now revoke their former sentence, and do now sentence the prisoner to be imprisoned with hard labour for 336 days, and, in addition, to forfeit any annuity, gratuity, medals—viz., Mutiny Medal and China Medal with clasps for "Taku Fort" and "Pekin," or decoration which may have been granted him; to forfeit all advantages as to pension which he may have earned by past service; to forfeit all right to good-conduct pay and pension on discharge, in respect to past service; and, further, the Court sentences the prisoner to be discharged with ignominy from H.M.'s service. J. Ruggles, Lieut. col. 19th Punjab N.I., President. Approved and Confirmed. Private Benjamin Robertshaw fully deserves the sentence which has been passed on him; but I am unwilling to discharge with ignominy an old soldier who has served in the campaigns of the Mutiny and China, in which his regiment was distinguished. I therefore commute the sentence to 336 days imprisonment with hard labour, in hope that the prisoner may amend his habits, and not entirely lose the benefits due to fifteen years' service. Napier of Magdala, Gen., C. in C. in India. Simla, Oct. 9, 1871.

[COMMUNICATED.]

There can be no doubt that money in India went much further formerly than now. It may seem that the authorities in this matter have been either ignorant or unjust. Ignorant, if not well aware of the fact—unjust, if, knowing this, no real revision of pensioned rates has been sanctioned since 1837. But it is not probable that in such a matter the authorities have been either blind or disposed to be ungrateful to good servants. It may be presumed that the truth is they have become painfully sensible of all the bearings of this important question. The cause of the seeming ignorance or injustice is simply this, that of late years there has prevailed a serious, indeed a perilous, change of sentiment in the minds of their servants in India, in regard to the discharge of public duties. The change is not rare amongst military officers, but it may be said that almost the entire body of our civil administrators is saturated with it. Their minds are occupied in that frivolous process, "leave of absence." The anxious care now is to "get to the Hills," or "to get home."

This trifling with the important interests of a people, once so patient, is commonly regarded by them as contemptible and effeminate. These are qualities the very reverse of those calculated to give us a hold on the affections of the Asiatic, and which undeniably did at one time obtain for us security in India. But while the people in general regard this effeminacy in their rulers with silent disdain, it is by reflecting men among them deemed, and is indeed by them frankly denounced as imposing grievous charges on the tax-payers for a costly "covenanted" sham.

Hence the authorities have begun to comprehend the error of having yielded to the clamours of leave-seekers. But the folly has been consummated, and it is erroneously supposed that it cannot be rectified. However, it is evident that care is now taken not to render civil offices in India still more burdensome on the treasury by raising the salary of incumbents, after having conceded to their importunities, successive and absurd extensions of idling, and allowances to absentees. And so it is that, whilst to an active, hardworking, and thereby hardy, district officer, his salary at present prices barely suffices for modest comfort, and exercising the duties of fit hospitality, the numerous absentees are furnished with ample allowances. One of the consequences of this abuse is to plant the people gazing in wonderment at what they term "caravans of Feringee maliks," wending their way to ports of embarkation, or to Murree, Simla, Nynee Tal, and Darjeeling, in which picturesque retreats, for eight or nine months in every year, our modern civil administrators play with administration, and are earnest only in amusement. It may therefore be taken for granted that the authorities are seeking to make the best of a bad bargain, though assuredly that best will be bad indeed for the efficiency and popularity of our sway in India.

INCOME TAX IN THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.

The enquiry instituted by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, at the special request of Lord Mayo, has ended in the manner which most Anglo-Indians must have foreseen. Sir W. Muir and his officers did their duty in disclosing what they knew about the extortion involved in the assessment of an income-tax at 3⅛ per cent., and the Indian Government think they too have done their duty in pulling to pieces the statements recorded by Sir W. Muir. The result is highly satisfactory—on paper—to those who believe that an income-tax worked by native officials is the best possible mode of raising money from a large section of her Majesty's Indian subjects. If there has been any oppression it ought not to have taken place. The Government of the North-Western Provinces are much to blame for allowing the tax to be collected by a lot of underlings of the lowest class. Things are managed better in Bengal Proper, in Bombay, and the Punjab, where a higher class of officers collects the tax; and Sir W. Muir will be good enough in future to see that the business of collection is entrusted to no officers below the rank of Tahsildars and Mamlatdars, and to "take such measures as will, whatever be the fiscal consequences, prevent any oppression of the people."

Even as to the amount of oppression alleged by the North-Western Government the Viceroy in Council remains calmly sceptical. He complains of a general tendency, even among the highest officers, to exaggerate the evils connected with the levying of an income-tax. They speak of single tahsildars visiting hundreds of villages and testing the means of thousands of persons, whereas, in fact, "the average jurisdiction of tahsildars" is only 460 square miles, and the average number of persons assessed in each tahsil was only 465. And does not Sir. W. Muir bear conclusive witness against himself in the report he helped to draw up, as a member of the Revenue Board, on the working of the income-tax in 1861? At that time the tax reached down to incomes of Rs. 200 a-year, and the amount levied was 4 per cent. on all incomes above Rs. 1,000 a-year, with 2 per cent. on all below that level. And yet the tax was then levied by Sir William's own showing with remarkable ease and as marked an absence of popular discontent. Why then the curious discrepancy between what his Honour wrote then and what he has written now? If the heavier impost could then be successfully levied with no apparent pressure on the people by the district officers themselves and their next subordinates, how comes it that the same precautions against foul play were not adopted last year? Really it is much to be regretted that the Government of the North-West and its chief subordinates should have "failed to order or suggest such remedial measures as were formerly found so effective" against the evils of which they complain, with so complete a blindness to their own share in producing them.

Such is the apparent upshot of Lord Mayo's attempt to vindicate his government from the blame imputed to it last March by one of its own Councillors. Mr. J. D. Inglis, as our readers may remember, uttered some strong opinions touching the widespread mischief caused by the levying of a tax at once unpopular and badly worked. He pointed out that if only one in 300 of the people paid income-tax, half at least of the remainder were exposed to "the most vexatious oppression and extortion," and that very many of them had to bribe the assessors and their underlings in order to keep their names off the taxing-lists. He maintained in fact that for every rupee paid into the Treasury another rupee went in bribes to the native underlings. The extent to which these gentry had screwed their victims had so demoralised the people, that false returns, said Mr. Inglis, were being everywhere sent in, and the trading classes were beginning to keep two sets of books, one for the true accounts, and the other for the purpose of blinding the assessors. To these allegations Sir Richard Temple gave at the time what some good-natured people thought a sufficient answer; only thirteen cases of oppression were known to have happened in Bengal. In India however the answer was hailed with so loud a shout of scorn that Lord Mayo deemed it good policy to propose an enquiry into the working of the Income-tax in the North-West Provinces. Sir William Muir conducted the enquiry, and in due time forwarded the reports of his civil officers with remarks appended by himself. The result is a curious agreement between the opinions and experiences of nearly all who helped to furnish the reports. The Revenue Board confirm the general truth of Mr. Inglis's allegations, and their opinion is clearly re-echoed by the Lieutenant-Governor himself. Sir W. Muir in short holds that "the convictions to which Mr. Inglis gave expression in the Legislative Council are, to a very considerable extent, well founded." And this he is forced to own in spite of his expressed belief that the general administration was "never better officered, more zealous, or more effective," than it is now.

Mr. Reid, of the Revenue Board, sings quite as loudly to the same tune. Repeating in effect the opinions uttered months before by the Board of which he is acting Senior Member, he declares that Mr. Inglis was "quite within the mark" in saying that the people of India paid as much in bribes to the tax-gatherer as in money paid on account of income-tax into the Treasury. A younger member of the same Board, Mr. Mayne, declares that even if Mr. Inglis's "figures and percentages may be somewhat wild," nevertheless he spoke "what everyone who has ever had anything to do with working the income-tax, knows to be the truth." He holds it to be "the nature of things" in India, that the more power you give a native to fleece his countrymen, the more oppression there is likely to be, and the less chance of its reaching the ears of English officers. The few Europeans who have to assess the tax on millions of natives, are naturally forced to depend on their Tahsildars for information, and these again fall back on the agency of neighbours and subordinates. The result of course may be imagined by anyone who lives outside the charmed circle of Calcutta officialdom. "Anyone is ready to pay to get off a charge for income-tax, either to get their names put into a lower class, or to get their names erased altogether." The grammar by the way is a little out of joint; but that has nothing to do with the writer's meaning, which is clear enough. Some samples of extortion are brought forward by the Lieutenant-Governor, just to show what may happen "when the superior officers are corrupt or negligent." But the worst cases of all, those namely which spring from "collusion on both sides," can very rarely be dragged to light. And this it is which baffles all attempts of English officers to fight against the evils of which they are fully aware. This too it is which has emboldened some of Lord Mayo's colleagues to use him as a means of snubbing the Government of the North-Western Provinces for declining to understate or slur over the apparent truth. It is so easy in this case to defend oneself at other people's expense, and to prove that no harm could have happened from the levying of a tax worth only two millions a-year, if the proper kind of tax-gatherers and assessors had been employed. The Supreme Government may soothe its own conscience with a belief so cheerful from its own point of view; but we fear that the outside public, in India at least, will less readily acquiesce in a conclusion which shifts all the blame on to the shoulders of Sir W. Muir. E pur si muove was Galileo's muttered reply to the gentlemen who wanted him to recant his own theory about the solar system. Sceptical people will continue to believe that Sir W. Muir and his officers have equal reason for holding to their own opinions regarding the mischievous effects of a tax which produces so small an outcome to the Treasury from the richer classes, at the cost of a great and inevitable pressure on the poorer millions.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In your impression of the 7th ult. (which I have only just seen), I find a notice of my recent appointment to the Lord Almoner's Professorship of Arabic in this University. In this paragraph, otherwise most flattering to me, you remark that I am "almost entirely self-taught" in the Oriental languages. As this statement is not only incorrect but unfair to those from whom I have received instruction, I must beg that you will allow me to contradict it in your columns. I owe my first acquaintance with Oriental languages to my esteemed friend and tutor Syed Abdoollah, formerly Professor at University College, London; and whatever proficiency I may have attained is due to his masterly system of instruction, and zealous kindness. My thanks are also due, amongst others, to Professor Mír Aulád Alí, of Trinity College, Dublin, and to R. Hassoun Effendi (a well-known Arabic author) for much valuable assistance in the prosecution of my studies. I have before stated my conviction that a practical and colloquial knowledge of Oriental languages is unattainable without instruction from educated natives, and I am quite sure that, had I been deprived of such advantage, I should never have been able to write or speak Persian or Hindustani, or to have felt at home amongst the Bedauin of Idumœa and the Tih.—I am, Sir, yours, &c., E. H. Palmer.

BRAHMO HYMNS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—As you express some curiosity concerning the musical arrangements at Baboo Keshub Chandar Sen's church in Calcutta, perhaps you may like to know that, from the time that church was first opened in 1869, one of its galleries has always been allotted to a choir and harmonium, and that the singing of hymns is a favourite exercise among the Progressive Brahmos. The approaching festival of January next is simply the anniversary of the founding of the Brahmo Somaj by Ram Mohun Roy, which is always kept as the great day of the community. For each of the last three anniversary festivals a new hymn was composed, which was chanted in chorus (or rather in unison) by hundreds of Brahmos through the native streets of Calcutta, as a sort of missionary call to the unconverted. The poetry of Brahmo hymns is often very beautiful, and, although the singular recitative-like tunes to which they are sung are not effective to English ears, they produce much enthusiasm in India. What course the musical development of the Brahmos will take in future remains to be seen.

May I add the suggestion that it does not seem quite fair to Baboo Keshub Chandar Sen to say that he is "anxious to borrow as few ideas as possible from the West in aid of the religious movement he is leading in India," because there are some important doctrines of Western theology which he is unable to accept. His "Compilation of Theistic Texts" comprises ample selections from the Old and New Testaments, as well as from the Hindu, Mahometan, and Parsi Scriptures; and this lesson-book is read habitually in the services of his church. The religious-intelligence column of the Indian Mirror contains indiscriminately the latest news of Catholic, Protestant, and Theistic movements all over the world; and the theory of the Progressive Brahmos is avowedly to "take the bread of life wherever they find it." And that they really do this to a very remarkable extent is evident from their writings, in which the current religious thoughts and images of Western Christendom perpetually appear side by side with the Oriental treasures of their own hereditary literature.—Yours faithfully, C.

INCOME-TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In the Times of the 5th inst. the mode of assessing and collecting the Income-tax in India is ably discussed.

I rejoice that we are likely to hear in England some truths which may induce the British Parliament to modify or abolish a tax which has brought such discredit on the British Administration.

Up to the present time, whenever British officers have courageously given Government a true picture of the extortion and corruption which universally prevail, they have been taunted with ignorance and incapacity, and have been warned that it is their duty to find out the incomes of H.M.'s subjects in every part of extensive districts, each containing from one to two millions of souls.

A Government which asks its devoted officers to perform impossibilities is not a wise one. It tempts the good to silence. It tempts the timid to conceal the truth. It tempts the ambitious and unscrupulous to report what is not the truth.

If the district officers in the Punjab be really able to discover the incomes of natives, and to prevent bribery, extortion, and the practices by which Government is defrauded of larger sums than are put into its treasuries, why not publish the art of taxation for the edification and guidance of all India, and of other countries ruled over by foreigners? Why not publish the original reports of the district officers, instead of the remarks of Government on mutilated extracts? Has Lord Mayo ever seen one of the original reports?

As the Financial Department in India has chosen a retrospect of ten years for the purpose of accusing Sir W. Muir of inconsistency, it will be well to mention a few facts regarding the operation of the income-tax in a non-regulation province.

1st. How has the law been enforced which prohibits the taxation of those whose incomes are very small?

2nd. To what extent have the sums assessed been collected?

3rd. To what extent has Government been cheated with impunity?

4th. Have collections been made in an illegal and disgraceful manner?

The Government has been constant in declaring that it did not wish to impose the income-tax on the very poor, but what has been the practice?

Shortly after the introduction of the tax into Oudh, Government declared that all families, whose incomes were so small that the legal percentage on them would fall below two shillings a-year, were to be exempted.

The tehseelders or native assessors knew that they were expected to collect a roughly estimated sum, and as their subordinates had been induced to let off the rich easily, it was necessary to make up the sum by collecting from the poor. So, in more than one district some of the assessors made poor families pay eightpence a year each, and entered in the assessment-lists only one-third of the number at two shillings each family.

When Government heard of this convenient arrangement, it blamed the tehseeldars, and prohibited a repetition of the practice; but I never heard that anybody was punished for having disobeyed the law, nor that the eight pennies were refunded to their owners. T.

THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In the "correspondence" of your issue of yesterday, I observe a letter from a person who visited the Andaman Islands for three days, "not very long ago," the object of which is not very apparent, as it gives a poor idea of the place; most of the remarks, however, seem to be intended to point to mal-administration. To me, of course, not now being interested in the administration, this is a matter of little import, but still I think it right to point out that the writer's account is in many instances inaccurate, and may therefore be wholly so. I was there for six months, somewhere about the year 1865, and had every opportunity of picking up information, and some of the notes which I sent home were read before one of the scientific societies in London. At that time the administration of the settlement was under the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, and the Superintendent, an officer of the Indian Staff Corps, who had served in Burmah, but as this officer got into difficulties, the Government of India took the settlement under their special care; new officers were appointed, and it was supposed that all the former waste of money and labour would never occur again. The Nicobar Islands were also occupied, on account of the fearful outrages committed on shipwrecked people, and placed under the charge of the superintendent. It is impossible to say how many islands compose the Andaman group, but the most important are what are generally called the Great Andaman and the Little Andaman. This latter island, however, should in all probability be classed with the Nicobars. The inhabitants, as far as I know, have no communication with those of the Great Andaman, their language is apparently different, and it is known that they build huts of a bee-hive shape (also found in the Nicobars), whereas, the Andamanese of the southern part of the Great Andaman—which is really three long islands separated by narrow channels—build no huts at all, but simply put up a few cane-leaf sheds to protect them as they sleep round the fire; the few household goods they possess being carried with them from place to place and hid away in the jungles as soon as they camp for the night. Your correspondent states that the group consists of five, the largest of which is 200 miles in length; now it is only by counting the Great Andaman as three that any approach to a group of five can be made, and on the other hand taking the Great Andaman, as a whole, the extreme length would be only about 140 English statute miles. In the opinion of some persons the islands are sinking rapidly, but according to "Gwalior" they must be increasing at a fearful rate, and Ross Island must also be retiring from the main body, for he states that the convict island is about four miles square, and "is about three miles from the grand one." When I was there Ross Island was hardly a mile in length and a quarter of a mile in width at the widest part, and hardly a mile from the grand one. Ross Island, on which is situated the Superintendent's house, the European barracks, and other head-quarter buildings, lies right across the mouth of a large bay on the east side of the southern portion of the Great Andaman; this bay is called Port Blair, and runs in for four or five miles; in it are the small islands of Chatham and Viper, and on its shores are other cleared places were the convicts are located. When I was there very little was known of the natives, their language and customs, and the few facts that I then picked up are of little value as compared with the information regarding them that ought now to be obtainable from the resident officials. At the date of which I speak an officer was appointed whose special duty it was to look after the Andamanese. If the information which he has gained respecting them in the last six years were published, together with a vocabulary of their language, a boon would be conferred upon ethnologists.

Owing to the nature of the jungles great difficulty was found in clearing them, so as to leave any trees that might be useful by way of shade—but those planted since should by this time have grown sufficiently for that purpose.

Your correspondent says that escape for the convicts is impossible, but this is only true of natives of India unaccustomed to the sea. Burmese convicts constantly made their way back to Burmah, insomuch that I believe that those of long terms are now no longer sent there, but to India. If, however, officers who understood their language and wants had been placed over them, I do not think that this step would have been necessary. In my day sharks were unknown, except occasionally one that had followed in after some ship, and bathing in the water was at all times safe. In conclusion, I wish to correct two statements which I have seen made, and which are likely to mislead; first, that pineapples are indigenous to these islands; and, secondly, that the natives are unable to make pottery. As regards the first statement, I am unaware of any pineapples having been found, and I know personally that the natives when shown a pineapple called it by the same name which they gave to an edible kind of pandanus or screw pine, well known to and eaten by them, whereas had the pineapple been known to them previously they would have had a proper name for it, more especially as they use a different name for another species of screw pine, bearing a strong resemblance, but not edible.

As regards pottery, I have one of their own home-made pots in my possession, and shall be happy to show it to any one who likes to see it.—Yours faithfully, CIVILIAN.

TRAFFIC ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The Englishman notices certain points in which it thinks the Railway Company might, with no slight advantage to their own interests, do much to attract traffic to the line. By far the greater portion of the produce for which the railway could be made available comes from the country to the north of the Ganges. It consequently has to cross the river before it can reach the line. Much of it is brought down from the interior of the country by affluents of the Ganges, such as the Dewa, the Gandak, the Bagirnati, and the Kusi. Having once been put on board boats, it is scarcely to be wondered at that owners do not care to unload their produce again for transfer to the railway, after the most tedious and dangerous part of the journey has been passed, and when, should the Naddeah rivers be open, it will probabably reach Calcutta as soon by river as if it underwent this process and were carried by train. During the rains a boat will come down from Patna in seven or eight days; while, what with delays of unloading, detention at the railway station, and time occupied in transit, the produce will certainly take five or six days to reach Calcutta if transferred at that place to the railway; but there is no reason why the same produce, if put on board a railway steamer, in the Dewa, or the Gandak, in the first instance, and transferred promptly to a goods train at Patna, should not reach Calcutta in four days altogether; and the risks that would be thus avoided are so heavy that we have little doubt that merchants would gladly avail themselves of such a means of carriage. Similar remarks apply to the Bagmati and the Kusi. These rivers are all easily navigable by steamers in the rains; and it would be worth while for the Government to adopt measures for rendering them so throughout the year, if the railway company showed a readiness to use them. A still larger quantity of produce is brought in carts to the north bank of the Ganges, where the owner has his choice between crossing it over the river at a cost out of all proportion to the distance traversed, and at considerable risk, and breaking bulk to transfer it to the railway, or despatching by water the entire distance to Calcutta, with very little additional risk, and at a much smaller cost. Of course, he generally chooses the latter course. If the railway had depots at the busiest points on the north bank of the river, connected by ferry steamers with their stations, we have little doubt then would secure a large portion of this traffic. Then, it strikes us that after introducing the necessary reforms we have pointed out, the railway company might beneficially do much more than they have hitherto done to make known to native merchants in the interior of the country the benefits of transport by railway; advertise their rates and rules more freely, and publish the time at which goods received up to a certain hour would be despatched. The appointment of one or two officers of character, ability, and experience, whose special duty it should be to travel over the line and look after the traffic in the interests of the owners of goods, enquire into complaints of abuses, and ascertain the views of merchants, would be productive of great advantage. Indeed, we believe that had such officers existed and done their duty thoroughly, affairs would not now present the aspect they do.

IRRIGATION WORKS IN ORISSA.

The Madras Athenæum thinks it is a special virtue of Canal Irrigation Works that if judiciously laid out and commenced from the higher levels every section can be utilised as soon as it is completed. Thus in the Godavery channels; many of them are many miles long, and some of them took years before they were finished, but the portions that were done were turned immediately to irrigation account, and the upper levels of a channel had sometimes watered fields for several crops before the lower reaches were even begun. Now when works are carried on in this gradual manner, two advantages are gained which, with reference to the peculiar conditions of an Indian population, are important. In the first place there is no sudden and exorbitant demand for labour. The district itself can generally supply what is wanted, and there is little temptation to strike for what the Collector of Nellore calls factitious rates. The cost of execution is thus kept down, and the labouring population are not demoralised by abnormal wages, which, in the nature of things, cannot be kept up, but which, when the men have got used to them, are very difficult to lower without many unpleasant results. In the second place nunjah cultivation is not made a drug in the market. Opportunities of raising wet crops are given to the farmers by degrees, a little at a time, consequently there is more competition for them, they are better appreciated, and, instead of the ryots making it a favour to Government to adopt the new system, they come to regard every increased facility for it as a favour from Government to them. The work moreover partly pays for itself as it goes on, and relatively pays itself better than if a much larger surface could be made available at once. Moreover, funds are more easily found, when the State is the employer, for carrying on business in this gradual way, and the interest on a huge capital, as yet unproductive, is saved. The ryots also who have the luck to partake of the first fruits find themselves much better off than their neighbours as yet unprovided with irrigation, and that makes the said neighbours all the more eager to acquire similar advantages, and to that end they will often, as they did in the Godavery district, take up contracts for executing the further work that is to benefit themselves on terms very favourable to the State. There is something very captivating in theory in the notion of laying out a gigantic work, or series of works, and carrying it out in its entirety, but taking into consideration the semi-barbarous conditions of India, and the peculiarities of Indians, it is practically bad policy. When you have sunk your whole vast capital, and must get some return for it somehow, the parties who are to deal with you for your article will drive their own hard bargain with you, and your supply being far in excess of their immediate demand, and a sudden influx of outside customers being a very unusual thing in India, they will be able pretty nearly to make their own terms. By the gradually progressive system on the other hand, you make the demand precede the supply, and so can get a far better price for your article. The guaranteed companies went on the comprehensive and grand entirety plan, and so made their work enormously expensive, and their returns uncomfortably small. The Godavery works were carried out on the progressive system, and their cost has been marvellously cheap, and the returns have been very satisfactory and could have been marvellously so, but for the mismanagement of the Revenue department. We are glad to see that the Government of India are awake to the delusions of the "grand" scheme. We would suggest, however, that to make the progressive system as economical as we have shown it ought to be, the establishments must be arranged to match.

STATION TALK.

JODHPORE, Nov. 6.—A complete revolution in State affairs took place here on the night of the 2nd instant. The Dewan, Murdan Ally Khan, was removed suddenly from his office, which he was very reluctant to part with. The same night eight of his immediate subordinates were cast into prison, amongst whom was one Futteymall, a notorious common Bunna, who played first fiddle to Murdan Ally; the treasurer, Bundareemul, who also found himself on the night of the 2nd in very uncomfortable quarters; but the following day, being unwell, he was removed under escort to his own house, where he remains under a strong guard. On the night of the 3rd fifteen more of the Dewan's colleagues were carried off to prison; and the night of the 4th did not pass without supplying a further batch—altogether about thirty are incarcerated. As you may suppose, there is much uproar and confusion here, which is likely to continue for some time to come. Major E. C. Impey, Political Agent, left last night, and will be absent about fifteen days; as soon as he returns we may hope for some desirable change in affairs here. Yesterday morning an attempt at revolt was made in one of the smaller provinces close to Jodhpore. A couple of hundred troops and two guns were at once despatched to bring the rebels to a sense of their allegiance to their sovereign, Maharajah Tukt Singh, which object was secured.

ALLAHABAD, Nov. 7.—It is worth while to repair to the Allahabad Railway Station at midnight, when trains containing crowds of travellers of all castes, creeds and complexions (excuse the alliteration), arrive from the North-Western Provinces, Calcutta, and Bombay directions. The annual exodus to the Hills has now become so general, that a large proportion of the North-Western Provinces officials, including the burra sahebs of Bengal, consider a yearly residence in the sanataria of the snowy Himalayas a sine qua non of existence. Others, again, cherish the belief that going to the Hills every year is a prerogative of high official position. The inevitable consequence of such a state of things is that, about this period of the year, great numbers of travellers pass through Allahabad en route to places situated mostly between the City of Palaces and Lahore. What with the noise and confusion incidental to large railway platforms, the Allahabad station, owing to the simultaneous arrival of the North-Western Provinces, Calcutta, and Bombay mail trains, every night presents a most interesting and exciting scene. Elderly civil servants, young competition-wallas, conspicuous by vanity and an assumption of superiority, military officers, who generally grumbling at everything connected with railway management, young and old ladies returning from the Hills, tired of gaiety; these and many others are nocturnally to be met with at the station, and it is amusing to witness the mistakes occasionally made by people amidst the excitement. It is of common occurrence for overland passengers arriving from Bombay to find, to their mortification, that instead of being comfortably seated in the North-Western Provinces or Bengal train, they are in the one going back to Jubbulpore! The other day a certain member of Council, who was, I believe, proceeding with his family to Bombay, had his wife and children carried away towards the Agra side, while he himself was having dinner at Kellner's! People, somehow or other, will get into carriages specially reserved for ladies, and make a noise when they are called upon to vacate them. The last detachment of her Majesty's 104th Regiment left this for Bombay last evening at seven o'clock, and will arrive at Bombay the day after to-morrow. Many here regret the departure of the 104th, for the officers were indefatigable in their endeavours to encourage theatrical performances, balls, &c.; while the general conduct of the men constituting the regiment was excellent, as was testified to by the Major-General commanding the Allahabad division, on the occasion of his making a farewell address to the corps, which is now going to England for the first time. The 2-19th came into Allahabad yesterday, and will have to remain in tents for some time, the "palatial" barracks having been, as you know, pronounced by competent authority to be unsafe. When it is taken into consideration that part of this month and December are occasionally unpleasantly cold, nobody, I think, will relish the idea of passing nights under tents pitched on a maidan.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE MOOLTAN COMMAND.—The Mooltan command will, it is said, be conferred on Brigadier-General Luard.—Pioneer.

VICEREGAL COUNCIL.—The Hon. R. E. Egerton has resigned his seat as additional member of the Viceregal Council for Making Laws and Regulations.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES ACT.—The Act to regulate the weights and measures of capacity of British India was duly passed in Council, and received the assent of the Governor-general on Oct. 30.

LORD NAPIER.—The Commander-in-Chief left Simla on the 8th Nov., being the ultimus cœlestium to leave the sanitarium, which now has quite a deserted appearance.

MARRIAGE IN CABUL.—The Amir of Cabul is reported to have betrothed the elder sister of Sardar Abdullah Khan, the heir elect, to the son of Sardar Muhammad Umar Khan.

THE "EDWIN LEWIS."—We are sorry to hear that Captain Butler, first assistant master attendant, has returned from visiting the houses of refuge without hearing of or finding any trace whatever of the missing crew of the Edwin Lewis.

THE BOKHARESE ENVOYS.—The Envoys from Bokhara to Turkey have arrived at Rawul Pindi, and the general in command has ordered a parade of all the troops for their benefit, as they have been very loud in their praises of the Russian soldiers.

MILITARY.—The health of the 105th Regiment, at present stationed at Meerut, is said by the Agra paper to be so unsatisfactory that probably it will not be sent to the camp at Delhi. Nearly one hundred men out of a total of seven hundred are at present in hospital.

AJMIR.—Nawab Muhammad Mardan Ali Khan is amongst those whom the Government delighteth to honour. He has offered Rs. 3,500 for an English clock to be placed in the Mayo College at Ajmir. The Agra paper says he has received the thanks of Government for his handsome present.

A FREE GRANT OF LAND FOR GALLANTRY.—At the instance of the Government of Bengal, the Supreme Government, we hear, have sanctioned the grant of 1,000 acres of waste land free of rent to Mr. C. A. Eglinton, a tea planter of Cachar, as a reward for his gallant conduct during the Loshai raid at Monierkhal.—Daily Examiner.

DROUGHT IN TURKISTAN.—The drought and famine appear to extend to the Affghan territories in Turkistan, the inhabitants of which have petitioned the Amir for a remission of the revenue in consequence. The necessities of the Government are, however, so pressing that there is little probability of the request being complied with.

PROMOTION.—The death of Major-General Kinleside has given promotion to some most deserving officers. Colonel Knatchbull, 22nd Brigade, becomes a Major-General; Lieutenant-Colonel and Brevet-Colonel Bourchier, C.B., a Regimental Colonel; Captain and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Renny, V.C., becomes a Regimental Lieutenant-Colonel; and Second Captain and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Hills, V.C., also gets a step.—Pioneer.

CARBOLIC ACID AS A FEBRIFUGE.—The Delhi Gazette informs us that a French physician, M. Treulich, asserts that obstinate cases of intermittent fever, which cannot be got rid of by quinine, can be rapidly and permanently cured by carbolic acid. This doctor records some eight cases of obstinate fever and spleen which were speedily cured by this acid. The average dose is four grains given in an infusion of gentian.

ROBBERY BY SOLDIERS.—On Friday last twelve soldiers of the 41st Regiment were tried in the Assistant Commissioner's Court, Dalhousie, on a charge of robbing the treasury of the detachment of their regiment stationed there. They were all committed to be tried before the Chief Court, Lahore. Their conduct in court is reported to have been very aggravating. The money stolen has fortunately been recovered.—Indian Public Opinion.

THE BERARS.—Letters from Berar report that the scarcity of water and food in different parts of the province is engaging much attention. Some villages, we are told, have already been deserted for want of food and water sufficient for them and beast. Numbers of itinerant goulois are busy transferring their flocks of buffaloes to more favourable localities. Cows, buffaloes, and bullocks are offered for sale in certain places for almost nominal prices. Some persons possessing a large stock of cattle are willing to part with portions of them for the asking, provided the owner sees that there is some chance of the cattle being fed better. The result of the distress is that thefts of food with and without violence have commenced.

DISTRIBUTION OF APPOINTMENTS.—The Government of India is said to have approved of a certain proposed distribution of appointments in the Non-Regulation Provinces between Covenanted Civil Servants and Military and Uncovenanted Officers. The matter appears to have been discussed in Council, and instructions have been issued to the local Governments concerned.

NATIVE EDUCATION.—The schools in Jodhpore established by the Prime Minister of the State are said to impart instruction to upwards of 1,500 pupils. A college has been established in the city of Jodhpore, in which English, Sanskrit, Arabic, and Persian will be taught. The Maharajah of Cashmere also takes an active interest in the spread of Sanskrit in his State. Students to the number of three hundred at present receive instruction in Sanskrit in the city of Cashmere.

PRESIDENCY COLLEGE, CALCUTTA.—It is said that a proposition has lately been made to construct a new building for the Presidency College on the same plot of land on which the new University and the Hare School buildings are now being erected, at an estimated cost of about three lacs of rupees. The object is to obtain sufficient room for the different classes of the institution, an object which the building now occupied by the college, and which belongs to a private individual, does not satisfy.—Daily Examiner.

BRAHMO MARRIAGES.—The Ubulabandhub of the 16th October, in an article on the Brahmo Marriage Bill, gives it as his opinion that the marriageable age for girls should be fixed at eighteen years; or, if an earlier age is determined upon, the girl ought to be allowed to give her free consent before the engagement is entered upon. He also states that the disputes between the original Brahmo Somaj and the Indian Brahmo Somaj, especially on the subject of this Bill are widening the breach between them.

THE COMMITTEE ON INDIAN FINANCE.—We (Indian Daily News) learn from an official source that the parliamentary committee of inquiry into the state of the Indian finances have desired to be furnished with a return of all Imperial rates and taxes now levied in India, distinguishing the rates and taxes levied before from those levied since the transfer of the government of the Indian territories to the Crown, and giving the amount of the produce of each rate or tax.

THREATENED SCARCITY IN RAJPOOTANA.—It appears that there will probably be considerable distress in Southern Rajpootana, Ajmeer, and Mhairwara during the next few months. The supply of water has failed in the former, and the people were already leaving the country, though there was as yet no scarcity of grain. In Ajmeer and Mhairwara the distress is almost as great as at the close of 1868, and the authorities have recognised the necessity of commencing famine relief works immediately.

EMPLOYMENT OF TROOPS ON THE HILLS.—The financial appear to be as satisfactory as the moral and sanitary results of employing troops in road-making on the hills. At Ranikhet the detachment of European soldiers earned, rank and file six annas eight pie, and non-commissioned officers eight annas per diem; and the executive engineer is of opinion that the work could not have been done cheaper by local labour, which, moreover, there would have been great difficulty in procuring without withdrawing it from other important works. The 32nd Pioneer Regiment also earned four annas eight pie per sepoy per diem; and the work done is said to have been most satisfactory.

BRITISH-BORN SUBJECTS IN THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—The census of British-born subjects, taken on the 15th June, 1871, gives a total of 19,416 for the North-West Provinces, of whom 13,925 are male and 5,491 female. Of the various districts in the North-West Provinces Meerut contains the greatest number of Europeans—3,203, but of these all but 196 are military. Allahabad, with a total of only 2,251, has the largest civil European population (1,167), although, when the census was taken, so very large a proportion of the civil employés were in the hills. Next to Allahabad in civil population (British-born) come Dehra, including Mussoorie and Landour (1,107); Agra (916); and Kumaon, containing Nynee Tal (568). Cawnpore has 203 European civilians out of a total of 1,214, and Bareilly 129 out of 1,262. Lullutpore and Gurhwal boast three Europeans each, and the Briton of Humirpore may truly say as to his district—L'Europe, c'est moi."

DISPENSARIES.—A lengthy list of revised rules, in supersession of existing rules relating to charitable dispensaries, is published in the Government Gazette, from which we take the following:—"Government will aid in the establishment of charitable dispensaries only when the municipality of a town or local fund committee or any private individual agree to share the expenses, and thereby evince their sense of the value of such institutions. The Government grant-in-aid shall, as a rule, be regulated according to the population of the town in which the dispensary is to be established, and shall not exceed Rs. 2,000 a-year in towns with a population of 10,000 and upwards; Rs. 1,200 a-year in towns with a population of more than 5,000, but less than 10,000; Rs. 600 a-year in smaller towns; but in no case shall the Government contribution exceed one-half the total cost. Where dispensaries situated in small towns are of benefit to the surrounding district, the population test will not be strictly applied. Cases of this kind will be treated specially on a representation of the facts."

MARINE.—We (Englishman) hear that Captain Harris, commander of the Government steamer Celerity, is to be appointed Master Attendant of False Point. We believe that his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor had frequent opportunities of judging of Captain Harris's abilities during the late distress in Orissa, when the thanks of both the Governments of India and Bengal were awarded to Captain Harris.

PORT CANNING REPRIEVED.—We hear that the Bengal Government has decided not to remove the buoys and moorings from the Mutlah for the present. Like some others of Mr. Campbell's resolutions, the notice to close the port on the 15th October last was issued without due consideration. When the Government of India declared Port Canning a free port they stated that the port would not be closed as a free port without six months' notice; but Mr. Campbell, ignoring this agreement, virtually closes the port at a fortnight's notice, for the notice, dated the 30th September last, says, "From the 15th October, 1871, Port Canning will no longer be maintained as a British India port." More mature consideration, and perhaps the idea that shipowners in England who had despatched their vessels to the Mutlah, on the strength of the notice of the Government of India, might have a good claim for damages should their vessels arrive and find the port closed, may have had something to do with the change in the Lieutenant-Governor's opinion; but we believe that the real cause has been the presentation of a letter from the secretary of the Company, setting forth the injuries which the company would sustain by this arbitrary conduct on the part of the Local Government.—Englishman, Nov. 9.

IMPORTS.—Calcutta, Nov. 15.—The past week has been characterised by great quietness, and we have, therefore, little to add to our last advices. Prices of goods remain about same as we last quoted them, though the business doing is very limited. The Twist market has also been exceedingly quiet, and prices are a shade easier since last mail.

EXPORTS.—Calcutta, Nov. 15.—Jute: The rates for good quality are firm, but for inferior descriptions lower rates have been accepted, and these rule from Rs. 3-14 to 4-12. Saltpetre: Rates are well maintained, as the best refined is again scarce in the market. Linseed is still held for full prices, as the stock is small, but buyers are waiting for a decline, and but little business has been done. Rapeseed: Rates remain firm at former quotations. Raw Silk: Business has been at a standstill, and prices nominal, not a single shipment having taken place.

Departure of the Troopship "Malabar."—H.M.'s troopship Malabar, Captain Douglas, sailed on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 15, for Falmouth, with officers and troops, chiefly of the 104th Foot.

The Hyderabad Railway.—We learn that the works of the Hyderabad State Railway are being pushed on vigorously, as the rains have given over. The works have not been given into the hands of contractors, as was lately reported.—Madras Standard.

Burmese Tobacco.—We are glad to see that the Agri-Horticultural Society of Burmah have determined to induce native cultivators to pay more attention to the curing of their tobacco. Indeed, this is all that is required to make Burmah tobacco really first-rate. The leaf itself is all that an American planter would ask for, and by proper curing he would soon furnish commerce with a superb tobacco.—Pioneer.

Farewell Dinner to Mr. Norton.—The farewell dinner given to the Hon. J. B. Norton at the Madras Club on Wednesday evening, by about seventy of his friends, was a great success. It is not customary to report the proceedings at dinners given in the Club, else a record of this entertainment would have been a most gratifying memento for Mr. Norton to take home. Capital speeches were made by representatives of the Bench, the Bar, the Civil Service, and Commerce, and hearty goodwill and affection towards the guest of the evening pervaded all the proceedings.—Madras Times, Nov. 16.

Sir Colley Scotland.—The Senate of the University of Madras met on Saturday to consider what action should be taken on the approaching departure from India of Sir Colley Scotland, their Vice-Chancellor. A set of resolutions, setting forth the services rendered to the University by Sir Colley, and the regret of his colleagues at losing his co-operation, were agreed to; and it was resolved to present these resolutions, together with an address, to him on some day to be named by himself. Sir Colley Scotland has been Vice-Chancellor for nine years, and so has filled the chair for a longer period than any of his predecessors.—Madras Times, Nov. 16.

The Birthday Ball at Madras.—The ball at the Banqueting Hall, in honour of the Queen's birthday, came off with much success on Thursday night. There was a large and brilliant assemblage, and all seemed to enjoy themselves. Lord and Lady Napier and party arrived shortly after nine o'clock; but dancing did not begin till ten, at which hour the Prince of Arcot and suite arrived. The Prince was received as usual by Lord Napier at the door, and was conducted by his Lordship to the dais, where Lady Napier received him. The ball then began in earnest, and was kept up till two o'clock. The health of the Queen was proposed by Lord Napier, and it was drunk with the usual honours.—Madras Times, Nov. 16.

Explosion at the Madras Gunpowder Manufactory.—A terrible explosion occurred on Friday, last week, at a quarter to two o'clock in the afternoon, at the Madras Gunpowder Manufactory. The press-room of the manufactory was blown up with a loud report, which was distinctly heard on the Mount Road, and even at Royapettah. The fire having been properly extinguished, the store-rooms were drenched to prevent any further accident. The building of which the press-room that was blown up formed a part was entirely destroyed. There were some men in the room when the explosion happened, and on a search being made for dead bodies the pieces of the bodies of four men were found. Three other men had sustained injuries, but the wounds of only one of these men appeared to be of any consequence.—Madras Times, Nov. 16.

Completion of the Vellaur Bridge.—The bridge of eleven arches of forty-five feet span, across the River Vellaur, in the South Arcot district, which has been under construction for the last three years, under the supervision of Mr. Executive Engineer Norfor, has been successfully completed, and was opened to wheel traffic on the 1st inst. The convenience to the general public in having the bridge passable at this season of the year is incalculable, as the floods between October and January render the crossing by ferry at times impossible, and always dangerous. Very great difficulty was experienced in getting in the foundations of this work, as the river is tidal at this site, and subject to constant floods. Mr. Norfor has reason to rejoice at the successful completion of this important work, which is not by any means the first large one which has been carried out by him in the South Arcot district. Under his directions several large and important anicuts and channels have been carried out, and others are now in progress.—Madras Times.

The Wreck of the "Belvidera."—We have received some further particulars of the wreck of the Belvidera at Pondicherry. The ship broke from her moorings on the evening of the 6th instant, and came ashore a little south of the town. All the sailors on board were taken off the vessel at an early hour on the morning of the 7th. The French sepoys rendered valuable assistance; in fact, all who could render any assistance did so. We are happy to find that no lives were lost.—Madras Times, Nov. 16.

Railways in Madras.—In compliance with the wishes of the Government of India the Madras Government have recommended the following extensions, which, in their opinion, appear necessary to develop the railway system in this Presidency:—From Caroor, by Madura and Tinnevelly, to Tuticorin; from Bellary to Dharwar; from Conjeveram to Cuddalore; short branches from South-West Line to Arcot, Vellore, Salem, and Palghaut; from Beypore to Cannanore. The Neilgherry branch had previously been recommended by the Government of India to the Secretary of State, and, having subsequently been sanctioned, is now in progress of construction. Since the submission of the above scheme arrangements have been entered into by the Secretary of State with the Great Southern of India Railway Company and the Carnatic Railway Company for the extension of their lines to Tuticorin and Cuddalore respectively, and the question of the location and gauge of the two extensions on which the views of this Government are quite in accord with those of the Government of India has formed the subject of the correspondence. The lines are proposed to be constructed on the 3 ft. 3 in. gauge, and it has been determined to carry the extension of the Great Southern of India Railway from Trichinopoly via Dindigul to Madura and thence to Tuticorin, with a branch at Keel-Munnitchee to Tinnevelly. The Carnatic Railway will follow the general alignment of the Great Southern Trunk Road, starting from Madras, and running by or through Chingleput, Carangooly, Vicravandy, Villapooram, and Punrooty, whence it will be carried to Cuddalore. Working plans and estimates for the Tuticorin Extension are under preparation, and the trial survey of the Carnatic Extension is in progress. The short branches proposed in connection with the Madras main line have been sanctioned; but the opinions expressed by the Government of India as to the principles which should govern the selection of extensions of existing lines, or of altogether new lines, and the considerations which should determine the gauge of the railway and the agency to be employed, induced the consulting engineer (Major Shaw Stewart) to submit a modified and expanded scheme of railway extensions. Eliminating from the general scheme the Neilgherry branch, the extensions to Tuticorin and Cuddalore and the short branches to connect stations on the South-West Line with neighbouring large towns, the Governor in Council has resolved on recommending the following further extensions:—1. The continuation by the Carnatic Railway Company of their line from Cuddalore to some point on the Great Southern of India Railway, probably Tanjore. 2. The construction by the Great Southern of India Railway Company of a branch from Dindigul to Coimbatore. 3. The construction by the State of a line on the narrow gauge from Bellary to the Bombay frontier. 4. The construction by the State of a line on the narrow gauge from Cannanore to Beypore. 5. The construction by the State of a line on the narrow gauge between Puttamby and Cochin through the territories of Cochin and Travancore. His Excellency the Governor in Council trusts that the scheme presented will commend itself as meeting the requirements of trade and the convenience of the public, and as giving promise of leading to such a growth of traffic as will make the lines remunerative.—Madras Times.

STATION TALK.

Khandeish, Nov. 12.—The scarcity still continues, and prospects are far from bright. A slight drizzle fell the last two mornings, but it has in no way raised the hopes of the ryots. Owing to the approach of the Dewalee, prices have fallen slightly, but merely to rise again to-morrow. The price of wheat and bajree—the staple food of the country—have risen within the last few months from 11¼ and 13 seers respectively per rupee on 1st June, to 7 and 7½ per rupee on the 1st of November, and have been steadily rising ever since. The quotation on November 6th was 6½ and 6¾ seers respectively, and on the 18th, 6¼ and 6½. The present price of wheat and bajree is higher than it was during the famine in the North-West. This comparison of prices, even if other evidence were wanting, would go far to show that distress really prevails now in Khandeish. In many places barely a two-anna crop is expected. Very heavy remissions of land revenue will have to be made this year, as it is impossible for many to pay the first instalment now due. Roughly estimating the loss to Government, it will be over two lakhs. The sign of the Mamlutdar's appearance in a village for the purpose of collecting the land revenue is the signal for the inhabitants to desert en masse and abandon the village. I hear that sixteen villages in Dhoolia have been thus abandoned. What is to be done? The people have no money, and no food, and the scanty crops will not pay for the cutting and harvesting. Speaking to the mamlutdar of Bhosawul the other day (a very intelligent and courteous man), I learned that the prospects were equally as bad in his district, and that the inhabitants of four villages had given him distinctly to understand that if he pressed for the Government revenue, they would have no alternative but to desert their villages. In addition to all this, a scarcity of water is beginning to be apprehended, the wells and rivers, scantily fed with rain, are drying up fast, and, as if the famine were not enough, the people may have to abandon their villages for want of water. In the midst of all this distress, the 10th, 15th, 16th, 17th, and 25th Regiments N.I. pass through the country this season in course of relief. It is anticipated that it will be next to impossible to furnish the necessary carriage, forage, and food for the troops. The 10th, stationed at Malligaum and Tanna, pass through Khandeish, en route to Mhow, via Arvee, Lulling, Dhoolia, Saugher, Seerpoor, Palucnair, and Sindwa Ghaut, which is the frontier post of Khandeish on the north. The two wings of the 15th stationed at Mehidpoor and Augur pass similarly back through Khandeish to Malligaum and Tanna. The 15th go from Ahmednuggur to Mhow, through Khandeish; and the 25th, now stationed at Dhoolia, march one wing to Mehidpoor, and the other to Augur. The 17th from Kolapore come by railway to Challisgaum, and from there march to Dhoolia, thirty-four miles. A station committee convened at Dhoolia by order of Colonel Little last month decided that compensation should be given for dearness of provisions at the rates of Rs. 3-12-6 for fighting men, Rs. 2-2-6 for public followers, and Rs. 6-2-11 for horses. The Bunyas are combining to raise prices, and in places will not sell their grain. The consequence is, that Bheels and lower classes are getting exasperated, and if the collector does not shortly take some measures to make the Bunyas sell, the consequences will be very serious to the Bunyas at least. The men of the Bheel Corps stationed at Dhurrungaum have been petitioning Colonel Probyn for compensation, as they find it impossible to live on their pay when bajree is at 6½ and 6¾ seers to the rupee. The clerks and carkoons here, a long-suffering and patient lot, are also beginning to feel the rise in prices. This class in particular is most unfortunate, as not a pie extra could be given them without the sanction of the Government of India, which, if given at all, takes two years to come.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

Railways.—A new line of railway at Dabai is being made at the expense of the Gaekwar of Baroda. The work has already been commenced, and is being pushed on vigorously under the superintendence of Mr. Warrens. The line is expected to be opened for traffic in about six months.

Demand for Grain at Kurrachee.—Several grain-importing merchants in town received telegrams on the 4th instant from their Bombay houses, desiring them to purchase and immediately despatch large quantities of wheat and bajree. The prices of each in consequence have risen by Rs. 1.8 and Rs. 2 per candy.—Sind News.

Civil.—We understand that Mr. Izon, of the Bombay Civil Service, district judge of Rutnagherry, shortly proceeds to England, and Mr. H. Birdwood, who has acted for a long period as Registrar of the High Court, appellate side, will act for him during his absence. Mr. Birdwood has been displaced from the registrarship by the reversion of Mr. West from the Bench to that office.—Bombay Gazette.

Aga Khan.—His Highness Aga Khan, well known on the turf both in Bombay and Calcutta, has forwarded the sum of Rs. 20,000 to a merchant at Bunder Abbas for the relief of his famine-stricken countrymen in that district, and another sum of Rs. 10,000 to Kerbela for a similar purpose. For the last four months his Highness has been giving food and shelter to upwards of two hundred of his distressed countrymen who have taken refuge in Bombay.

Mail Robbery.—The British mail-cart running betweeen Nandgaum and Arungabad was attacked the other day by eight or ten highwaymen, with faces half masked. The place of attack was the upper bank of the Seo river. The driver and one passenger were wounded, the highwaymen having used swords. The contents of the mail-bags were rifled. The robbers had ample leisure to do this in, as the driver and one solitary native passenger were so frightened that the moment they could make good their escape they bolted, leaving tonga, ponies, and mail-bags in the possession of their assailants. After rifling the bags, the robbers made good their escape. Search is being made for them. Sowars of the Nizam's contingent have been scouring the country around for miles. The robbers had the audacity after this outrage to walk to the nearest village and forcibly take grain and stores from the Bunyas, giving themselves out to be servants of General Abbott.—Times of India Correspondent.

Failure of Water in Bombay.—Mr. Walton, acting executive engineer of the municipality, has thought it prudent, seeing the lowness of water in Vehar Lake, to limit the consumption of Vehar water throughout the town, and with this object he has been adopting measures to prevent waste as far as practicable, and to restrict the supply for domestic purposes only. Last week we noticed one or two measures adopted by Mr. Walton calculated to prevent a large waste of water in the outlying districts of Bombay. We are now glad to learn that he has sent round circulars to all the principal native gentlemen who use Vehar water for private flower and vegetable gardens and for the fountains in their compounds, requesting them to restrict the use of Vehar water to necessary domestic purposes. The privilege hitherto granted to these gentlemen to supply their fountains and to water their flower and vegetable gardens with Vehar water will now be withdrawn.

To England for £10.—A correspondent of the Times of India writes as follows regarding the £15 passage:—"Fifteen pounds for a passage to England in these days of violent competition may be easily understood; but there have been cases where travellers have reached England from Bombay for less than this sum. A passage in a buggalow to Jeddah in the Red Sea can always, at this season of the year, be obtained for Rs. 30 at the outside, plenty of curry and rice included. Turkish Government steamers are continually plying between ports in the Red Sea and Suez, and an Englishman, if he has any tact about him, can always obtain 'a lift' from the engineers, who are in most cases from the north of England. Should the traveller be too proud to ask or accept this favour, Rs. 10 is the outside of what will be demanded for a second class berth. Once at Suez, the means of getting to Liverpool or London can be adequately represented by an additional Rs. 50. According to this, then, Rs. 100 is more than ample to meet all charges; this sum, economically applied, ought not only to see our traveller safely landed in England, but ought to find him with still a couple of pounds in hand to take him to his friends." No doubt all this is perfectly practicable, but time in these days is valuable; and few, we think, would care to do the journey from Bombay to Jeddah in a buggalow for a saving of £5. Yet some might, and we give them the benefit of our correspondent's suggestions.

FISHERIES.—Dr. Day, the Inspector-General of Fisheries, paid a visit to Karachi last week, from which place he proceeded to inspect the irrigation works at the Hubb river, and from thence to Sakkar.

RAILWAYS.—The Pioneer says—"The Indian Public Opinion has, we believe, been misinformed with regard to Mr. Crawford Campbell. That gentleman goes to the Indus Valley Railway—if he goes at all—as superintending (not Chief) Engineer. We hear the Government has offered the Chief Engineership of that railway to Mr. Armstrong, now Chief Engineer, Central Provinces; but this officer, it appears, does not wish to give up his present post."

OLD BANK OF BOMBAY.—We learn that at the meeting of shareholders of the Old Bank of Bombay, held on Wednesday last, it was explained to them that they had been called to consider the advisability of taking proceedings against the directors for the losses sustained by their conduct in the management of the bank. In accordance with the wishes of the shareholders expressed at the meeting held in October last, counsel's opinion was obtained as to the propriety of taking proceedings against the directors. The solicitor of the bank gave a summary of these opinions. The opinion of one counsel was rather adverse to a prospect of success in any suit against the directors. The opinion of the other counsel gave some prospect of success, but raised the question whether or not any claims which might exist against the directors might not be barred by the statute of limitations. A long discussion then followed, when various opinions having been expressed by the shareholders present it was resolved to adjourn the meeting until yesterday (Friday.) The subject was resumed at the meeting held yesterday, when the whole bearings of the question were discussed. After about an hour's consideration, it was resolved by a majority of votes that the contemplated proceedings should for the present be deferred, and that the shareholders should be guided by the decision at which they might arrive at the meeting to be held on Jan. 29 next. We are told that the case of Turgund v. Marshall in re the Herefordshire Banking Company, which was stated in a previous issue of the Bombay Gazette to have been decided against the directors by the Master of the Rolls, was afterwards reversed on appeal. —Bombay Gazette, Nov. 18.

KATTIWAR AFFAIRS.—We are in a position to contradict the rumour that Colouel W. W. Anderson, the Political Agent in Kattiwar, is about to go on leave. It is probable that he will remain until the settlement of Girassia claims has been brought into operation. This is to be desired, as Colonel Anderson has warmly advocated the rights of the proprietary class affected. There is to be a durbar at Rajkote about the 21st December, at which the Nawab of Joonagurh will be invested with the insignia of the Star of India. Owing to the want of rain the crops have failed in many talookas, and there is apprehension of a scarcity of water in the hot weather. From want of rain the tanks in the hot district of Jhalawar are not nearly filled, and the cotton crop may be affected. The Wadwan extension line will be open for traffic as far as the large town of Veeramghaum by the end of this month. If the rates of carriage hire are lowered by the railway company, a great impetus to the cotton trade in those parts may be expected. It would be well if an assistant magistrate were permanently appointed to Veeramgaum. The engineers are finishing the survey of the branch line to the Governmeut salt depots at Patree. Col. Anderson and the political assistants are in their districts; the Wadwan agency is at present in charge of Mr. Aston, C.S., during the absence of Mr. Jardine, now engaged at Bombay in the settlement of the Girass disputes and the arrangements to be made in connection with the proposed appointment of a judicial assistant to the Agent. In some parts of the State of Bhownugger, and in the western districts ad joining the Gaekwar's possessions, there has been a failure of crops. The public are anxious to be informed as to the manner in which the services of the late Mr. Kursondass Mooljee are to be commemorated.—Bombay Gazette.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Nov. 18.—The market continues in the same dull state, and the business done in the week has been very limited. The hope entertained that on the termination of the Dewalee an active demand would set in has been disappointed, and the present circumstances of the market do not favour the prospect of an early improvement. In Yarns a small business has been done, and holders are anxious sellers. Metals are firm, except in Yellow Metal, which has declined about 4 annas.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Nov. 18.—Cotton: A very small business has again been done, though prices may be quoted at Rs. 3 to 5 per candy above last week's quotations. The business done for export amounts to about 3,300 candies, of which 1,800 candies were of Old Cotton, and 1,220 of New Cotton, deliverable in March and April next.

MONEY MARKET.—BOMBAY, Nov. 18.—EXCHANGE: The market opened firm, after the Dewalee holidays, on the basis of 2s. for six months' sight Bank Bills. Yesterday, however, the 6 months' sight rate fell one-sixteenth, but the market closes firm. Rates on Calcutta are unchanged, closing as per for sight Bank Bills, and at 99 for sixty days' sight. The rate on China for 60 days' sight House Bills is Rs. 217 for 100 dollars.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

THE MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES.

The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India has been published for general information:—

India Office, Aug. 10, 1871.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor general of India in Council.

My Lord,—In framing the Military Furlough Rules of 1868, it was understood to be the desire and intention of the Government of India that all distinction between furlough on private affairs and that on medical certificate should, as far as possible, cease, and amongst the introductory clauses to those rules is the following:—"I.—The distinction with respect to allowances hitherto drawn between furlough on private affairs and sick leave is abolished, both kinds of leave being included under the general term furlough, provision, however, being made for the obtainment of furlough under medical certificate, without all the restrictions applicable to furlough when taken without medical certificate."

2. It appears to me, therefore, that the only occasions upon which any officer should be granted furlough on medical certificate are—

1st, When (as in the case of subalterns) an officer entitled to furlough may, if compelled to take leave on account of ill-health, be entitled, under the regulations, to certain privileges—as free passage to England;

2nd, When an officer is not entitled to furlough, but is obliged to take leave on medical certificate—a case for which provision is made in the rules;

3rd, When, in the interests of the service, an officer, although entitled to furlough, would only be granted leave on the production of a medical certificate.

3. Very recently applications for extension of furlough on private affairs on the part of officers who have come home on medical certificate, have been submitted to me and have been granted, the applicants appearing to be entitled to furlough under the regulations; but it is obviously desirable that I should be informed of the actual circumstances under which every officer claiming furlough upon medical certificate has had furlough granted to him, and I consider all officers entitled to furlough, whose services can be spared, should have the leave gazetted as "furlough," whether they produce a medical certificate or not.

4. With respect to the above three classes, it might be well to gazette the first to furlough, with a note to the effect that, being recommended by a medical board, they are entitled to a free passage, &c. With regard to the second, it would be sufficient to note the clause under which they take leave, and, with regard to the third, it will be assumed in future, when an officer entitled to furlough is thus granted leave on medical certificate, that his services could not otherwise have been dispensed with, and no extension of his leave will be granted in this country except on medical certificate.

MORE ALTERATIONS IN THE LEAVE RULES.

The Governor general in Council is pleased to sanction the substitution of the following rule for Rule 3 in Chapter XI. of the Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code (see Notification No. 1,317, dated June 23):—

When an officer, after giving over charge of his office at one station on transfer or reversion to another, takes privilege or examination leave before joining the office to which he has been transferred, or to which he has reverted; or when an officer, while on privilege or examination leave, is transferred to an office at a station other than that from which he took leave, he is entitled to joining time, in addition to his privilege or examination leave. The joining time of an officer transferred during privilege or examination leave will count from his old station or from the place where he received the order of transfer, whichever is nearer to his new station.

The Governor general in Council is pleased to direct the substitution of the word "leave" for "furlough" in the last sentence of Rule 3 in Chapter XIII. of the Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code.

The Governor general in Council is pleased to sanction the insertion of the following rule as No. 5 in Chapter XIII. of the Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code:—

An officer, the head-quarters of whose office are not fixed at one station, must, on the expiry of leave, rejoin his office wherever either the head-quarters of the office or his locum tenens may actually be, provided that the Government or other authority by whom the leave was granted may, for any public reason, permit or require the officer to rejoin elsewhere.

This rule is of general application.

The Governor general in Council is pleased to direct the addition of the following rule as Rule 3*a*, under Section I., Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code:—

3*a*. There is no rule under which a covenanted civil servant resigning his office or, by his own choice, remaining out of employ, can obtain subsistence allowance. Time thus spent without allowances does not count as actual service.

PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES.

Read again—Resolution of the Government of India in this Department, No. 1,939, dated 31st March, 1871, intimating the orders of her Majesty's Government in regard to the annuities to be granted to civil servants, and directing the managers of the Bengal Civil Service Annuity Fund to ascertain and inform the Government whether the members of the Bengal Civil Service are willing to surrender the accumulated Annuity Fund to the Government upon the terms offered by the Secretary of State.

Read—A letter dated 25th September, 1871, from the Officiating Secretary to the Bengal Civil Service Annuity Fund, intimating the proceedings taken on the above resolution, and that the members of the Bengal Civil Service have consented by a decisive majority (346 against 16, about 220 having abstained or been prevented from voting) to surrender the accumulated capital of the Annuity Fund upon the terms offered in the said resolution.

Read—Despatch to Secretary of State, No. 205, dated 17th August last, regarding the method of crediting the capital of the Civil Service Annuity Funds. Telegram from Secretary of State, dated 12th October last, in reply thereto.

Resolution.—The proceedings of the subscribers to the Bengal Civil Service Annuity Fund will, in accordance with Rule 23 of the Fund, be forwarded to the Secretary of State for sanction and approval. Subject to such sanction and approval, his Excellency the Governor general in Council is pleased to declare the scale of annuities set forth in the resolution of this department above read, to be in force with effect from the 24th June, 1870, and to direct that the accumulated Bengal Covenanted Civil Service Annuity Funds be credited to the Government of India as an extraordinary asset in the account of 1871-72; annuities and gratuities whether already granted, or to be granted in future, being borne as a charge against the Government of India.

INDIAN FUNDS.

It having been found necessary to define the terms under which officers who received, under G.G.O. No. 899 of 1866, the option of withdrawing from Indian funds, but who elected to remain subscriber, forfeit the advantages of the funds by failure to make the regulated payments at the proper time, the Right Hon. the Governor general in Council is pleased to announce that monthly subscriptions or donations, or authorised instalments shall be paid within four months after they become due, in default of which eight per cent. per annum will be charged on all arrears after that period. Any such voluntary subscriber, on any of his payments to the fund, whether subscription, or donation, or interest, or arrears, remaining unpaid for one year, after, under the rules of his fund, it has become due, will be at once struck off and absolutely forfeit all advantages accruing to him, as well as all sums paid by him to the funds.

This Order will not invalidate any special privileges subscribers may possess under the rules of their respective funds.

Para. 2 of G.G.O. No. 899 of 1866. "Those officers who may elect to remain subscribers are hereby distinctly informed that the existing rules for their respective funds will remain in force, except as altered by the directions contained in this G.O.; and that the responsibility of paying their subscriptions will, for the future, rest entirely with themselves, and any neglect on their part to pay their subscriptions at the proper time will entail on them and on their families the forfeiture of all advantages accruing to them, as well as all sums paid by them to the funds; those who may elect to leave the funds are informed that they will in no case again be allowed to become subscribers, and that by ceasing to subscribe, they and their families will forfeit all claims whatsoever on the Military or Orphan Funds."

The Governor general in Council is pleased to direct the insertion of the following as a heading in Chap. The Governor general in Council is pleased to direct the insertion after word "class" in Sec. XXIX. of the Acting Allowance Code of the words "and is not such as is described in Sec. XXVII. a."

The Governor general in Council is pleased to direct the substitution of the following rule for Rule 3 under Sec. XIX. of the Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code, and the elimination of the word "but" from Rule 4 under that Section:—

"Time spent on subsidiary leave does not qualify for privilege leave. But if an officer returning from leave lasting more than three months be solely for the convenience of the Local Government, and not for any fault of his own or by his own choice, prevented from rejoining an appointment on which he has a lien, or be kept out of employ on subsistence allowance, then duty qualifying for privilege leave begins on the day on which he presents himself to the Local Government ready for duty."

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, DEC. 9.—IN RE THOMAS NEWTON.—This was an appeal by Mr. Newton, a barrister of the Court of Westminster, and advocate of the High Court of the North-Western Provinces of India, to reverse an order of suspension of five years for alleged professional misconduct in India. The case was heard a short time since, when Sir R. Palmer and Mr. Bush Cooper appeared for the appellant, and Mr. Shapter, Q.C., for the Judges of the High Court. Sir James Colvile read the judgment of their lordships. After relating the circumstances on which the suspension was founded, their lordships, although they thought Mr. Newton's conduct in respect of one charge was censurable, were yet of opinion that the heavy sentence of five years' suspension could not be supported. Their lordships wished it at the same time to be understood that they were reluctant to interfere with the High Court, or to weaken the rule that had been laid down to maintain its honour and dignity. They would humbly recommend to her Majesty that the suspension should be removed. No order would be made as to costs.

A NEW MILITARY SADDLE.—A new saddle has recently been approved by the War-office for the use of the cavalry and Royal Artillery. The high wooden peg has been done away with, and the rings in front have been removed to the left side. The advantages of the new saddle are, that it will be more easy for the men to mount and dismount, whilst the weight will be much less on the horse's back. —Army and Navy Gazette.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £500,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 6th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were — to Calcutta, £363,100; to Bombay, £131,000; and Madras, £5,900. The minimum price was fixed as before at 1s. 11d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 37 per cent., and on Bombay at that price in full. The average rate on Calcutta was 1.11.51d.; on Bombay, 1.11·5d.; and on Madras, 1.11·57d.

STATUE OF SIR G. POLLOCK.—An equestrian figure of Sir George Pollock is on view at the studio of Signor Valda, York-terrace, Regent's-park, previous to its removal to the head-quarters of the Royal Artillery, Woolwich, to whom it has been presented by Lady Pollock. The figure, which is life size, and is considered a striking likeness, represents Sir George in the full uniform of a field-marshal, fully decorated, and standing by the side of his favourite black charger, which is admirably modelled in every particular. The artist has painted the horse without its caparisons, by which means he has had the opportunity of showing his skill as an animal as well as a portrait painter.

MADRAS RAILWAY COMPANY.—The directors of the Madras Railway Company have issued their report for the six months ending the 30th June last. During that period forty-nine additional miles were completed and opened for the use of the public, and uninterrupted communication was kept up with Bombay by the north-west line, the passage across the Kistna having been provided for by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. The net receipts for the half-year amounted to £117,205, against £130,857 in the corresponding period of 1870. This falling off was caused partly by the diminution in the gross receipts, and an increase in the cost of maintenance, especially on the North-West line.

THE BRINDISI ROUTE.—In consequence of a misunderstanding between the Italian and French railway companies, the former has discontinued the 12.30 (midnight) train from Turin to Bologna, and have substituted one which is advertised to leave the former city daily at 4 P.M., and to arrive at Bologna at 10.20 P.M. Passengers cannot, therefore, postpone their departure from London until Saturdry morning, in the expectation of overtaking the mails leaving the previous evening, and they are advised to start not later than Friday morning, which will enable them to sleep at Turin and Bologna. Full information can be obtained on application to Messrs. Grindlay and Co., of 55, Parliament-street, who issue through tickets to Turin, with the option of staying at any of the principal towns en route.—Home News.

INTENDED TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &C., MAILS, via CALAIS AND MONT CENIS TO BRINDISI.—The Postmaster General has issued the following notice:—The time required for the journey from Calais to Brindisi having been much shortened by arrangements consequent on the opening of the tunnel under Mont Cenis, it is found that the India, China, and Australia mails may now be forwarded most expeditiously by way of France. Commencing, therefore, with the mails for Bombay, appointed to leave London on Friday, the 5th January next, the Brindisi portion of the Overland Mails will, in future, be forwarded via Calais and Mont Cenis. The postage of letters, book packets, and patterns will remain unaltered; but owing to an important reduction which the French Government have, with great liberality, conceded in the French transit rate on the Newspapers contained in these mails, the charge on a newspaper not exceeding four ounces in weight, addressed to the East Indies, Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, China, Japan, Australia, or New Zealand, forwarded via Brindisi, will be reduced from fourpence to threepence.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?"—SIR,—There are occasions when exceptions may be taken to that saying. For instance, a paragraph in your last number is calculated to mislead the general public who are not up in the mysteries of our artillery organisation. I refer to that in which you spoke of the Indian Artillery and the Royal Artillery proper. The names of the officers of the Royal Artillery are arranged in four lists for promotion (official army list). The commissions on one list are co-identical with those on any other. In fact, the Indian Artillery does not exist, and all four lists are combined in the Royal Artillery proper. There is no doubt that Parliament in recent legislation for improving promotion in the regiment was actuated by a desire to benefit the whole, not any individual portion of it. The appropriation of the grant for the benefit of one list to the exclusion of the others is a wrong done to the officers of the late Indian Regiments whose connection with the service has ceased, and whose interests are now one with those of their comrades in the general or imperial list.—Yours truly,—UBIQUE.—Broad Arrow.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY.—The report of this company has just been issued. The statements of account for the half-year to the 30th June, 1871, duly audited, are herewith submitted to the proprietors, preparatory to the meeting to be held on the 15th inst. The total number of miles open for traffic is 1,274. The portion between the Kistna river and Raichoor, the junction with the Madras Railway, was opened for passenger traffic on the 1st May, and for goods traffic on the 10th June last. There is thus now only the viaduct over the Kistna river remaining to be finished, to complete through railway communication with Madras. In the meantime the traffic across the Kistna is conducted by means of a small steamer and boats during the monsoon, and in the fine season, a temporary tramway, laid over the bed of the river, is used. The Khangaum State railway (8 miles), which is worked by this company, for the Government, has been open during the entire half-year under review. The Oomrawuttee State Railway (7½ miles) was opened on the 17th February for passenger and goods traffic, and is also worked by this company, on behalf of Government, on the same terms as the Khangaum line. The gross receipts amounted to £1,080,462. 15s. 7d.; and the expenditure to £602,589. 12s. 4d.; leaving as net profit £477,873. 3s. 3d.; applicable towards meeting the guaranteed interest of the half-year.

OVER-REGULATION PRICES.—In a daily contemporary last week there appeared a paragraph complaining that the Commissioners had evinced a small desire to meet the views of officers desirous of ascertaining their position with reference to over-regulation. The 80th Regiment was especially alluded to. We have reason to believe that, almost before the paragraph appeared, communication had been made by the secretary to the officers in question acquainting them with the views of the Commissioners. It is not so easy as may appear to adjust the prices, or, more properly speaking, the over-regulation sums to be paid to officers on retirement. In some corps the task, indeed, would be comparatively light. In the Guards, Household Cavalry, and most of what are called "crack" cavalry regiments, for instance, the prices have been uniform. But in some regiments the prices have been most capricious, and steps have gone sometimes at regulation, sometimes at sums varying from one to two or three hundred pounds or more. In such cases it would be quite impossible to strike an average, or, rather, the striking of an average would be productive of a very great injustice. The object the Commissioners have in view is, as we take it, to carry out the intentions of the Legislature, which was that a fair ascertained custom of paying a certain sum over and above regulation in regiments should so far not bring any penalties with its observance—that officers who had paid these sums in accordance with regimental custom should receive them on retiring from the service, in addition to the prices of their commissions.—Army and Navy Gazette.

MILITARY.—We understand that two new Royal Warrants wil shortly be promulgated—one regarding appointments and promotion in the Guards, and the other fixing new rates of pay for the subalterns in the army. Notwithstanding the abolition of the ranks of cornet and ensign by the recent Royal Warrant, they still appear in the December "Army List." We understand, however, that a large Gazette will shortly appear, making the necessary promotions and conversions, and that the new regime will commence with the new year. It is understood that the Purchase Commissioners have very few cases before them. At present their only business is tracing the service of every officer in the army, and as there seems to be very little reason to think that one in twenty will ever come before them for the sake of his commission, this enormous labour is only a waste of time and public money, resorted to apparently to hide the fact that there is nothing to do for the £3,000 granted by Parliament for the commission. Notwithstanding the statements industriously circulated to the contrary, we believe that officers on full-pay of regiments at home who may be desirous of retiring will meet with no difficulty in ascertaining at once from the Army Purchase Commissioners what amount will be paid to them on their retirement. The commissioners are not so well able to give information to officers in this country belonging to regiments abroad, because they are waiting to learn the over-regulation figures from the officers commanding. A committee is, we hear, sitting at the War Office to make final arrangements for the organisation of the Army, and to enable Mr. Cardwell to give some authoritative utterance on the subject soon after the opening of the Parliamentary campaign. We believe they are taking into consideration the formation of local depots on a plan similar to the old four-company system, and the linking together of existing Infantry battalions and Militia regiments, so as to form regiments of three battalions each.—Broad Arrow.

BRITISH INDIA.—The little annual Blue-book of statistics relating to India, issued from the India-office, shows that the imports into British India by sea in the financial year 1869-70 were of the value of £46,882,386—viz., £13,954,807 treasure, and £32,927,579 merchandise; and the exports were of the value of £53,513,727—viz., £1,042,352 treasure, and £52,471,375 merchandise. Going back to 1861, we find the imports, in round numbers, only £34,170,000, and the exports of rather less value, being £34,090,000. The exports, therefore, have increased much more than the imports. The tonnage of all vessels (including native craft) entered and cleared at ports in British India has increased from 5,101,974 tons, in 1861, to 6,274,550 tons in 1870. At the end of the year 1869-70 eighty-six millions sterling had been expended on railways in British India; considerably more than 4,000 miles of railroad were open for traffic, and more than seventeen millions of passengers were carried in the year. Exclusive of State outlay on guaranteed works, the Government expended £6,389,082 upon public works in the year 1869-70, namely, military buildings, civil buildings, and public improvements, the latter absorbing £2,649,277. 14,014 miles of Government telegraph lines were open at the commencement of the year 1869-70. 83,032,957 letters and newspapers were transmitted through the Post Office of India in the year 1869-70, and the mails were conveyed over 50,878 miles, by railways, boats, cars, camels, or runners. The troops employed in British India, officers and men, in 1869-70 were 180,820—62 939 Europeans and 117,881 natives. There were 24.274 schools and colleges belonging to, aided, or maintained by the Government in British India, with an average attendance of 789,125 pupils; the Government expended £637,463 upon these schools and colleges, and the total expenditure of the year from all sources was £1,070,685. The Vaccine Department reports 1,617,513 successful vaccinations in the year 1869, and 186,389 failures. 15,274 emigrants embarked from British India in the year 1869-70, the majority for British Guiana and the West Indies, 5,404 for Mauritius. The population of India under British administration (exclusive of native States) is reported at 151,146,516; the public debt in the year 1869-70, £108,186,338; the gross public revenue, £50,901,081. The area under British administration is stated at 963,929 square miles.

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

The Matador, of Bremen, Kimme, from Yloilo to London, with sugar and hemp, put into St. Helena on Nov. 5 leaky; she had encountered a gale on Oct. 12, during which the vessel made more water than usual, but after the gale subsided the leak diminished. On Nov. 3, in lat. 19 S., lon. 2 W., the leak increased to 3in. per hour, and continued to increase until her arrival at St. Helena. The vessel has been surveyed, and recommended to discharge until the leak takes up or its position is found, and then a further survey to be held.

The Defiance, Angel, from Bombay to Liverpool, went ashore between the Rivers Umzimkulu and Jutanga, about sixty miles down the coast, during a fog on Oct. 6, and was full of water when the crew left her. By last accounts the ship had not broken up, nor seemed likely to do so, though the sea broke completely over her. She was lying about 100 yards from the beach, with all her sails set; her hatches had burst, and twenty bales of cotton had washed ashore.

The Caliph, Bilson, sailed from London on May 29 last, with a general cargo for Shanghai, was spoken on August 19 in Gaspar Straits, and has not since been heard of.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

THE OPTOSCOPE.

The practical utility of the OPTOSCOPE is now fully determined. In numerous cases has its merits been displayed in a manner so satisfactory, that in no instance has it afforded less satisfaction to the intelligent patient than the inventor himself. It has long been a matter of considerable importance to those suffering from defective vision to learn the exact state of the refractive humours of the eye, and the proper convexity or concavity of the glasses required to render the vision as perfect as the state of the organs will admit of.

Mr. BEAUMONT'S OPTOSCOPE

is all that can be desired for this purpose, and those desirous of benefiting by his discovery may be suited with the most perfect-fitting glasses at moderate cost.

THE HISTORY

OF THE

BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. . . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshuhur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Nov. 25; Agra and Madras, Nov. 23; Calcutta, Nov. 22.

WE have a few fresh particulars regarding the progress of the Loshai Field Force. On the 6th November General Bourchier, who commands the Cachar Column, telegraphed the latest news from his camp. After visiting Chattak he had formed his camp half way thence on the road to Sylhet. All the Commissariat and Ordnance Stores which had arrived there were passed on at once to Cachar. Two months' supplies for the whole force were already stored up at Mainadhar. The Coolie Corps commanded by Majors Moore and Branson, with the 44th N.I., had been sent to the front. Seventy-six elephants had arrived at Chattak. All in short was going on satisfactorily. At the same date a telegram from General Brownlow, commanding the Chittagong Column, announces his intended start on the 7th for Kassalong, with the 2nd Gourkhas who had just arrived in camp. They were to be followed immediately by the Sappers. He himself expected to reach Burkull on the 13th and Damagree on the 17th November. A road for elephants between these places was to be begun at once; sixty-eight of those beasts having already reached his camp, and another shipload being expected on the 11th. Three months' supplies had already been pushed to the front. Up to date General Brownlow had heard nothing from Ruttan Poya, the hill chief, who might prove a help or a hindrance according to circumstances. The troops and coolies were reported to be all in good health.

THE cholera which had broken out among Major Moore's Coolies appears to have soon subsided, after attacking only six or seven people and killing two. The Cachar Column was after all to advance by the Tipai Mukh route, most of the Commissariat stores having already reached Cachar, and some having gone yet further. The expense and trouble of bringing them back again was deemed a good reason for not changing the route. Captain Birch, on his arrival at Sylhet, was ordered at once to the frontier north of that place, for the purpose of keeping watch there against any attempt of the Loshais to get round to the British rear. Captain Cookesly, R.A., has been attached to the Mountain Battery as photographer to the Cachar Column. The same office in the Chittagong Column has been assigned to Captain Tanner.

THE recent fall of rain in Western India appears to have caused a general improvement in the crops. In the districts however of Kandeish, Ahmednuggur, and a few other places there was not much abatement of the old distress. Advances of a few thousand rupees have been sanctioned by Government for the benefit of the distressed Bheels and other wild tribes in Khandeish and the Punch Mahals. At Bushire also much suffering still prevails; the effects of hunger and want being intensified by the cold nights in the case of those who had neither clothes nor shelter.

Mr. Hope, the able collector of Surat, has after all been elected by the Bombay Bench of Justices as Municipal Commissioner for Bombay on a salary of Rs. 3,500 a month. Messrs. Alex. Mackenzie and Vencata Sanjiva Rao have been appointed additional members of the Legislative Council at Madras. It is said that a seat in the Supreme Legislative Council has been offered to Sir Madhava Rao, the late Dewan of Travancore. More certain is the news from Calcutta regarding the suspension of its chief magistrate, Mr. Roberts, by the Government, on account, we presume, of his late quarrel with Mr. Hogg, the head of the Police Department. In the words of the Englishman, "we defer all comment thereon until we learn what action has been taken with respect to the conduct of Mr. Hogg."

A RECENT telegram from Calcutta states that a Medical Committee had reported that the Delhi Camp might safely be formed by the 15th December. No new cases of cholera had occurred, and orders for the formation of the Camp had been issued. It was added that Colonel Jervois had inspected the fortifications of the Hooghly, which are nearly completed below Diamond Harbour, but that he has not yet reported on any of the Indian fortifications.

THE Parsees of Western India have long been conspicuous for their loyalty to our rule, and for the lively interest they take in the politics as well as the arts and literature of the West. During the general anxiety of the past week in England, on account of the critical state of the Prince of Wales, it was pleasant to hear that some of her Majesty's Indian subjects had displayed a ready sympathy with the popular feeling in this country. From a Bombay telegram of the 12th current we learn that on that very day the Parsees of Bombay held a great prayer-meeting at their chief Fire Temple for the restoration to health of the Prince of Wales. Their high priest himself conducted the service in the midst of a large number of his fellow-clergymen.

A LATER telegram from Calcutta reports the closing of the opera house there on account of the Prince's illness and the strong sympathy felt by all classes with the Queen and Royal Family. The Roman Catholic Bishop of Calcutta had ordered prayers for the Prince's recovery.

IN republishing the Governor-General's farewell Order to the 104th Fusiliers Lord Napier issued the following preface:—"The 104th Regiment very early in its career established its character for gallantry in the field, and the Commander-in-Chief is confident that it will maintain in Europe, as it has well done in India, the high character of the Indian European regiments. Lord Napier of Magdala has known the regiment since its formation, and he witnessed its gallant storm of the strong village of Kalra at the battle of Goojrat." The 2nd Bengal Fusiliers, since transformed into the 104th Foot, was only raised in 1839; but it saw a good deal of rough work in the twenty-one years of its former existence. Under the active Sir Charles Napier it took a prominent part in the Trukkie campaign of 1845 against some robber tribes of Beluchis who had made continual raids into Sindh. Napier's swift movements among the rugged gorges of the Boogtie Hills tried the mettle of his troops to their utmost for more than two months; but the 2nd Europeans answered every call upon their best efforts in a way which won the admiration of all who saw them, Napier himself included. In the Punjab campaign of 1848-9 they gained fresh laurels at every turn. In the hard fight of Chilianwalla, when the Sikhs had nearly surrounded them after the rout of the British cavalry on the right, they got out of the danger by charging, rear rank in front, on the daring enemy. At Goojrat the 2nd Europeans, then about 500 strong, stormed the village of Kalra, the key of the Sikh position, which was held by two of Shere Singh's finest regiments. For this feat, which cost them 150 killed and wounded, Lord Gough warmly thanked them in person after the fight was over. On the morning after the battle the 2nd Europeans, taking the place of the 29th Foot, set off under "the flying General," Sir Walter Gilbert, in steady chase of the routed Sikhs and Afghans, marching often twenty miles a day through very rough country, and making one famous march of sixty miles into Attok in thirty-four hours, halts included. To them it was that 20,000 Sikhs laid down their arms on the road from Jhelum to Rawal Pindi, and the flying Afghans had hardly got away through the Khaiber when their pursuers after a march of thirty miles passed under the walls of Peshawar. For its services in this campaign the regiment was made a Fusilier regiment. In 1852 it was ordered from Agra to Calcutta with a view to the Burmese War, and one wing reached Maulmein in time to arrest a threatened movement of the enemy in that direction. In 1857 it shared with the 1st Fusiliers in all the hardships and dangers of the siege of Delhi; and for some time after the storming of that stronghold it helped under Colonel Showers to stamp out rebellion in the surrounding districts. But we have dwelt enough on its past services to show how the men of the old local European army could be trusted to do their duty under the most urgent trials. Let us add that in cantonments their discipline was always equal to their services in the field.

In his letter on Indian Lighthouses, which we commend to the notice of all concerned, Captain Taylor gives one or two striking examples of the blundering which seems to prevail in the Public Works Department of India. One would naturally think that master mariners were better judges than any military engineer of the right points for fixing lights and beacons for the benefit of ships at sea. But in India such things seem to be viewed from any standpoint but that of common sense. In Bombay, for instance, some £50,000 have already been spent in the building of a lighthouse on the spot where it is sure to be of the least possible use. A like blunder is said to have been perpetrated some years ago in Cochin; but happily the additional blunder of using soft stone for the lighthouse there led to its early collapse. Cape Comorin has just been saved by the good sense of Lord Napier's Government from the misfortune of having a costly lighthouse built in the wrong place. With regard to the Minikoy light, which ought long ago to have been placed on an island lying directly in the track of vessels passing from Aden to Bengal and China, we can only hold up our hands in surprise at our correspondent's assurance that no such light yet exists.

Is Captain Taylor quite correct in his reference to the Prongs Lighthouse? From the official correspondence published in the Times of India we gather that the site selected for the lighthouse was first pointed out in 1860 by Captain Barker, the Master Attendant, with the express approval of eleven officers of the Indian Navy, six of the P. and O. Company's service, twenty-eight merchant-skippers, and one harbour-master. Their choice was afterwards sanctioned by the Hydrographer of the Admiralty, by the Adviser of the Board of Trade, by the Elder Brethren of the Trinity House, and at one time even by the Harbour and Pilotage Board. The late Master Attendant, Captain Pryce, also appears to be on the same side. But a closer study of Colonel Kennedy's letter shows that this agreement is rather delusive, and that in point of fact Captain Barker and his first supporters are at one with the large number of merchant-captains who have lately petitioned against the site selected by the Government Engineers. Even the Elder Brethren of the Trinity House are found to be really speaking against the Government scheme, although Colonel Kennedy quotes their words for the very opposite purpose. In short the official answer, however carefully misleading at first glance, tends to justify Captain Taylor's own statements as well as the petition which called it forth.

The late Captain John Wood, of the Indian Navy, whose death was recorded in our last issue, deserved some little notice on account of his former labours in the once distinguished service from which he had long retired. For a fair idea of what he did as an officer of the Indian Navy we must go back to the year 1835, when Lieutenant Wood commanded the first steamer that ever made a voyage up the Indus. At that time the Ameers of Sindh were still masters of their own country, and the notion of replacing Shah Soojah on the throne of Kabul had not entered into the minds of English statesmen. A desire however to explore the Indus, and to make friendly arrangements with Dost Mohammed at Kabul, had already begun to influence the Indian Government. As a preliminary step in that direction, Lieut. Wood started on his voyage of exploration up the Indus. By the end of 1836 he had completed a careful survey of the river from its mouth up to Attok. Having been baffled at Kalabagh by the strength of the current, he pushed on by land to Attok, and thence made his way downwards through the rocks and rapids which imperil the voyager's progress in that part of the stream. In 1837 Alexander Burnes set forth on his mission to Kabul, and Lieutenant Wood accompanied him from Attok. From Kabul they crossed the Hindu Khoosh to Koondooz, and thence the latter set out by himself to discover the source of the Oxus amidst the lofty wilds of the Pamir Plain. He was the first European since the days of Marco Polo, his predecessor by five centuries, who ever stood on the top of the Bam-i-dunya, or "Roof of the World." After finding the source of the Oxus in a lake some 15,600 feet above the sea, with high hills almost surrounding it, he next examined the fords of the same river as far as the limits of Morad Bey's dominions. Again in company with Burnes he proceeded by way of Bokhara to Bushire on the Persian Gulf. Wherever he went he made careful surveys, whose accuracy has been tested by later travellers. For his excellent services he received the warm thanks of the Indian Government, and the no less flattering tribute of a gold medal from the Royal Geographical Society. Not long afterwards Captain Wood retired from active service; but his career of usefulness did not end there. Of late years he was frequently employed by other masters in connection with the Sindh Railway; and Mr. W. P. Andrew, of old Indian celebrity, made large use, we believe, of his experience as a skilled surveyor in the work of exploring the Valley of the Euphrates with an eye to his projected railway.

We are glad to learn from the Home News that the Army Purchase Commissioners have decided to interpret Clause IV of the Army Regulation Act in the only sense of which it was capable. "In the interests of truth and justice," we are content to hear, what indeed we never doubted, that they have no idea of evading either the letter or the spirit of the clause in question. In strict accordance therewith, the officers of the new line regiments are to receive, it seems, "a compensation equal to the sums they would have received, according to the custom of their regiment, from the junior officers of their regiments, had they retired therefrom prior to" the 1st of January, 1871. Why this date should have been selected rather than the 1st November, the date indicated by the Act, we cannot tell; but the difference of a few months will hardly affect, we hope, the substantial issue; the granting namely of a full bonus to all who claim it under the provisions of the Act. The Commissioners, being all honourable men, could do no less than they have now done. What then will be done with the case of those officers of the old Indian Army who are still claiming compensation for the sums they would have received from their juniors had they retired before 1858? To such a question we can imagine but one answer. The same measure which is being meted out to the officers of her Majesty's army must in common fairness be meted out to the officers of the Company's service also, whose case, as every one knows, is infinitely the stronger of the two. Their bonus system was not worked under the rose in direct breach of a particular law; it had been set on foot with the formal sanction of the Crown, as conveyed through its appointed ministers and agents in the Board of Control, the Court of Directors, and the Indian Government. The justice so long besought in vain by the old Company's officers can no longer be withheld from them by the representatives of their old masters. We cannot believe that the India Office will let it go forth to the world that in their opinion might alone makes right, and that no concession, however just, shall be made to those who cannot muster a powerful array of friends in Parliament and the country.

Complaints have lately appeared in the papers touching the neglected condition of Brindisi harbour. One of the complainants, an Italian, declared that his Government had done hardly anything in eleven years for the improvement of a port where large vessels are still obliged to land cargoes and passengers from small boats. As usual however, to the statements thus made a contradiction was presently offered. We are now assured by an Italian Deputy, Prince Frasso Dentice, in a letter to the Times, that his fellow-countryman is altogether wrong. Only the other day he went down to Brindisi, and there saw with his own eyes "the large steamer of the Peninsular and Oriental Company enter the harbour with perfect ease, take up its berth alongside the quay, and place itself" by means of a wooden bridge "in immediate communication" with the hotel. In 1860 on the other hand the harbour was inaccessible, he tells us, to the smallest vessels; there was no protected anchorage, nor such a thing as a railway, hotel or quays. Since then the depth of water in the port has been increased by dredging to twenty-seven or twenty-eight feet. As for new works, there are 960 metres of quay already finished, besides two breakwaters 640 metres long, and 1,200 metres of retaining wall. The Government has helped to build a large railway-hotel for travellers, and a special service has been organised for the carriage of the Indian mails. A graving-dock is now on the point of being constructed at the Government's own expense. As we have Prince Frasso's assurance for all this, we are bound of course to believe him, until some other correspondent writes to contradict the Prince's contradictions. For the present however we pin our faith upon the Prince.

A telegram of December 12 from Mangalore reports very successful observations of the Solar Eclipse at Bekul:—

The extension of the corona above hydrogen is apparently small. The structure is nebulous air. Polarisation during and after totality. We have taken five admirable photographs.

The death of Lieutenant General W. M. Ramsay, on the 13th current, removes the name of another old Indian officer from the Bengal Army List. The deceased general was a Cadet of 1820, and a Captain of 1836 in the 62nd N.I., with which he served during the first Burmese War. Captain Ramsay served for some years in the Thuggee Department under Colonel Sleeman. In 1844 he obtained his Majority. He was a Lieutenant-colonel of 1850, a full Colonel in 1859, and a Major-general in 1862.

General Patrick Cameron, whose death is also announced, must have been one of the oldest surviving officers of the Indian Army, for he entered the 2nd Madras Light Cavalry in 1802, and was a Major-general in 1838. A Lieutenant of 1804, he gained his company in 1816, thirteen months after his Brevet-captaincy. In 1824 he was already a Lieutenant-colonel commanding the 4th Light Cavalry, and he became a General in 1858. No part however of his long service appears to have been spent in the field.

The next mail viâ Brindisi will not be due here till Sunday or Monday next.

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX.

Now that the Indian Government has exonerated itself at the expense of other people from all blame consequent on the levying of an unpopular income-tax, we venture to hope that the more important bearings of the question thus boldly settled will not be entirely overlooked. It was no doubt a safe and clever proceeding to make Sir William Muir and his officers the scapegoats for the shortcomings of Sir Richard Temple. If Lord Mayo is satisfied with the scolding he has administered to the Government of the North-Western Provinces, no one can accuse him of being hard to please. It is possible that he himself may see no flaw in the logical process of twitting Sir W. Muir with inconsistency by a reference to his report on the Income-tax of 1861. Ill-natured people however will persist, we fear, in making merry with a retort which simply begs the whole question, by assuming that what may have been done successfully in 1861 was quite proper to do in 1870. At the former epoch we had to deal with a people fresh from the experience of an unsuccessful rising against our rule. They knew that the cost of suppressing so formidable an outbreak as that of 1857 would have to be paid out of their own pockets, and most of them were doubtless ready to meet any reasonable call in aid of the peaceful issue they had come to desire. The relief they would feel at getting out of a dangerous scrape, and the fear inspired by the success of their masters in trampling out the ashes of a wide-spread conflagration, must have combined to render them unusually tractable under the tax-gatherer's screw. As a revenue officer of that time, Sir W. Muir may have testified in perfect good faith to the absence of any outward discontent among the people; but it is not very likely that his native underlings were less prone to abuse their opportunities in 1861 than in 1870. From other sources at any rate we gather that the oppression was just as great in the one case as in the other, if the outcry in the former happened to be small. Be that as it may however, we know how widely the circumstances of the latter differed from those of the earlier period. The people who in 1861 may have submitted with a good face to the payment of an odious tax might be excused for murmuring against the recurrence of an old affliction under a new and needlessly annoying form, at a time when no special claim on their endurance could fairly be preferred.

If the Indian Government is wise, it will abstain from following up the victory it pretends to have won in this paper warfare. All the sophistries and subterfuges in the world will fail to put out of sight the simple fact that a great deal of foul play went on in most parts of India during the recent collection of the double income-tax, and that such foul play is inseparable from the usual conditions under which alone in India such a tax has hitherto been collected. Even such a reduction in the rate of assessment and such a rise in the level of assessable incomes as we have lately seen must go but a very short way towards lessening the mischief caused by an impost which cannot be levied as it is now without shocking some of the deepest-rooted principles of native habit, and opening wider the door to untold exactions on the part of native officials. It is all very well to say that such exactions could not occur to any appreciable extent if the higher district officers did their duty; but this sort of argument really conveys a cruel libel against a small body of English gentlemen, each of whom has to overlook the affairs of a district as large as a good-sized English county. To scold them for not doing what no one in their position could with reason be expected to do, is a mere piece of ill-timed trifling with a serious danger. In the words of our correspondent "T.," "a Government which asks its devoted officers to perform impossibilities is not a wise one. It tempts the good to silence. It tempts the timid to conceal the truth. It tempts the ambitious and unscrupulous to report what is not the truth." And the unwisdom of such a policy becomes sheer madness in the case of a vast empire governed, as India is, by a mere handful of foreigners from a distant land. We are ready enough in theory to own the danger of disregarding or misinterpreting the wants, of ignorantly defying the prejudices of our Indian subjects. But how much too often has our practice flown in the face of our theory! Had both gone always hand in hand, there would probably have been no Indian Mutiny, and certainly the Income-tax would never have been tried a second year.

It has long been the pet dream of some Anglo-Indian financiers to find out some sure way of reaching the pockets of wealthy native merchants, bankers, and other men who trade in goods or money. But hitherto the attempt to realise that dream has issued only in signal failure. The richer and more influential classes bribe their official countrymen to take from them a mere fraction of the sums they ought to pay. The Government is cheated of several millions a year, part of which has to be made good with the money squeezed by extortionate underlings out of the poorer millions, who pay already in salt-tax and local cesses more than their proper share of the common liability. For every rupee which goes into the Treasury the corrupt native officials pocket another, and the Government is probably defrauded of one or two more. By means of an impost thus levied, with the largest possible amount of corruption on the one side and oppression on the other, a sum of about two millions sterling found its way last year into the hands of the Finance-Minister; and of this perhaps one fourth was obtained by deductions from the pay of public servants, rich and poor, white and black. How much of the remainder was unfairly extorted from natives who ought not to have been assessed at all, or whose assessment exceeded their real incomes, we cannot confidently say; but of the tax as now levied these things may be assumed with perfect safety. It fails on the whole to reach the wealthier mercantile classes; it falls most heavily on the poor and weak; it offends at every turn against the social, if not the religious usages of native life; it gives free play to the worst impulses of corrupt because underpaid officials; and it yields after all nothing like a fair offset for the trouble, distress, and demoralisation involved in its collection.

Such being the case, what ought the Indian Government to do? If it can shift without the income-tax or any equivalent for it, the shortest way would be to get rid of the nuisance altogether. Why not make it over to the local governments, to use or discard at their own discretion? Sir W. Muir for one might well be trusted to raise the money needed for public purposes in the way least likely to oppress his native subjects. In any case however, whether the tax were levied by the Supreme or the local governments, whether it took the form of an income-tax, a license-tax, or a poll-tax, a thorough change in the mode of assessing and collecting it would be imperatively needed. The way to that change has already been pointed out by Sir Bartle Frere in his scheme for establishing local native councils to aid the Government with their advice on all questions of local importance; a scheme which virtually proposes to develop the old machinery of the native Panchayat. When money is needed for the State exchequer, it is surely best to obtain it through some other channel than the Government itself. Let the ratepayers in short be permitted to tax themselves through their own panchayats, who would fix the scale of assessment for each class in accordance with the sums required from their respective districts. In this way at any rate the blame for unfair assessments would be shifted from the shoulders of the Government to those of the local bodies entrusted with the work of collection, and these latter would take good care to discharge their duties with some decent regard for the interests and feelings of their own countrymen.

INCOME-TAX.—II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—The second question which I would put is—To what extent have the sums originally assessed been collected?

In a former letter I pointed out that in the Mohumdie district the collections for one year were less than one-tenth of the assessments. It took two years to collect that one-tenth, and when the tehseldars were imperatively ordered to give reasons for each individual default, the excuses and explanations of one of them were ridiculous. His object had been gained. He had been greatly praised for his excellent assessments, and held up as a model to be imitated, and he knew that his European superior, the district officer, was greatly overworked, and bothered by Government, and had no leisure to prove that he had been deluded. Government plays into the hands of corrupt native officials by overworking the Deputy Commissioners.

The third question is—Do the taxpayers delude the Government officers?

At one time the tax was called a licence tax. If a £2 licence was considered inadequate, the assessing officer was obliged to issue a £10 licence; the law did not allow any intermediate sum to be paid. It was, of course, the interest of all who were assessed at £10 to obtain a remission, under any pretence, of four-fifths of the tax on them.

A banker and merchant, who had four branches besides his head-office, petitioned to have the tax on him reduced from £10 to £2. He convinced the district officer that the reduction ought to be made, and an application was consequently sent to the superior officer, the Commissioner, who objected; and, after having taken great trouble, proved conclusively that the man was under assessed. The petitioner then urged that a reduction ought to be made, on the ground that a quantity of salt, which he had imported, had been liquefied by the heavy rains. No doubt there had been heavy rains, but how to disprove the liquefaction, after six or eight months had elapsed, was no easy matter. A European must be very clever to be able thoroughly to audit a native merchant's accounts, especially when it is the interest of all of the native officials around him to keep him in the dark; and native merchants and bankers are not themselves able to state their recent profits and losses. I, many years ago, was for days employed in examining some of the accounts of the great bankers, the Seths of Muttra, who had agencies in various parts of India, and carried on very extensive exchange operations. Their agent at Benares had been swindling them for years before they discovered the embezzlement. Had there been an income-tax in those days, their returns would not have been correct, because they would not have shown their losses. Many of the false returns for income-tax have probably been sent in by really respectable men, who could not calculate their losses, and therefore have made a haphazard guess, knowing how little chance there is in India of ever obtaining a refund.

The fourth question is, has the Income-tax been collected in an improper manner?

Shortly after its introduction, some native gentlemen at Benares expressed to me their astonishment that under British rule the zenanas or private chambers of native ladies at Lucknow should be rudely invaded by the tax gatherers, and their ornaments torn from their persons under the plea of realising the tax. Poor Charles Chamberlain, the Superintendent of Police, well known as a gallant and honourable officer, protested warmly against the perpetration of such irregularities. He was dismissed from his appointment, but recovered from the shock when Lord Napier selected him for the Abyssinian campaign. His fate was a warning to other British officers to be discreet in avoiding to make remarks on the conduct of native officers of Government.

If any district officer in the Punjab or elsewhere should report that he can assess and realise a just and equitable Income-tax, let him record in detail the means by which he would ascertain each man's income, and let his statement be published in order that any errors may be corrected by those who have studied the native character.

The lump assessment advocated in a letter in the Times of the 8th inst. has been tried, and has been found to fail, for very obvious reasons. When village communities were united, and like one family, it was easy for the heads of the villages to distribute the burden of taxation; but now that the British policy of free trade in land has broken up these formerly united communities, lump assessments have been found in practice to cause the rich to cast the burden of taxation on the poor, and the influential to cast it on those of opposite village politics, with whom they have had quarrels, rivalries, and law suits.—Your obedient servant, T.

INDIAN LIGHTHOUSES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—I now come to the third subject needing ventilation—Lights. In the Parliamentary Paper on Marine Surveys you will find it touched upon as "demanding careful consideration." The opinions of master mariners, who are accustomed to making ports in all weathers, should have great weight. They don't want to show the engineer how to build a lighthouse, but their experience of harbour approaches makes them good judges of proper sites for lights and beacons.

But the arrangement of lights, and, indeed, all questions affecting harbours in British India, have been generally left to landsmen. Bombay is the first case in point, where the local press is in a ferment just now, because the wishes of the entire maritime community, as to the site for the Prongs' lighthouse, have been ridden over by a military engineer; who, in spite of timely remonstrance, was permitted to begin the new light-house in the wrong place, and has already spent £50,000 on the foundation. Now the Government are in this fix—they must either confess the error, write off that little sum as a bad debt, and begin de novo an erection at the very tip of the Prongs; or they must continue the blunder to its completion, leaving to the rising generation the task of doing the right thing some fine day, when Bombay is out of debt.

Cochin is my second mute witness. I was told that about fifteen years ago the Cochin community wanted a better light for their port. A military engineer planned, obtained sanction for, and built a lighthouse, not by the river-side, where the shipping could steer straight for its light, but some two hundred yards away, on a ruined bastion of the old fort, perhaps the highest piece of ground in flat Cochin, but certainly not where pilots or navigators wanted one. Built of soft laterite, it faded away before attaining full height. One day, in the S.W. monsoon, the stones of the column having become softened by the rain, it commenced crushing just above the plinth under the superimposed weight, and in less than a minute was a dusty heap of debris. The natives said "it sat down." Fortunate, too, was the catastrophe. Its self-destruction saved a deal of correspondence, for the Cochin merchants had already commenced—what those of Bombay are now at—a protest against their little job.

Cape Comorin, awhile ago, was about to be treated to a lighthouse, and the Mail said that the erection had been determined upon, when somebody of maritime experience in those seas suggested that a light, to be of practical benefit, should be near the "Crocodile Rock," which is eighteen statute miles due west of the Cape—the quarter from which all vessels from Bombay, Persian Gulf, or Red Sea, would approach Cape Comorin. Madras papers of October last inform us that their Government are now adopting the suggestion.

After the wreck of the P. and O. steamer Colombo, several years ago, on the island of Minikoy, it was proposed to place a light-house there; but to this day no light is exhibited. Since the opening of the Suez Canal the Minikoy light becomes an absolute international necessity, as that island is directly in the track of the rapidly-increasing steamer traffic between Aden and the Bay of Bengal and China.

I write to you, Mr. Editor, because it seems as if everybody's business were indeed nobody's business in India. To the mercantile communities of the great Indian trade-ports, the subject of good harbour approaches and lighted ocean highways should be of deepest moment. Their remonstrance might induce the Indian Government not to place the consideration of such questions in the hands of landsmen alone, for landsmen are not likely to be best judges of what the sailor wants. —Yours faithfully, A. D. Taylor, F.R.G.S.,

"TEMPORA MUTANTUR."

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In addition to the attractions of "the Hills," and "getting away home," alluded to in your last number, there is another cause which during the last twenty years has necessitated the frequent relief of Indian civil servants from public duty. There is no doubt but that of late years they have sought to improve their opportunities by recourse to those speculations that are allowed to our colonial servants. Frequent leave of absence in order to watch over and pursue such speculations has been the inevitable result. In the case of our colonial servants, it should be remembered that the salaries assigned to them from the Treasury, and the rates of pension, are extremely moderate. But in the case of our Indian civil servants, such a mode of improving their opportunities argues either much short-sightedness or remarkable indifference to the fate of their successors and the people. For they are vainly imagining that they can combine the advantages of the high salaries of their own service with the loose sort of compensation and privileges permitted to the colonial service. There can be no doubt that the success in obtaining "the great boon" of tacit permission to speculate in trade and financing (vide Bombay Bank, &c.), and to indulge in idle absence, almost unrestricted to the Hills and to Europe, is now directing the attention of Indian economists to saving, by the adoption of the colonial system, two thirds of the charges hitherto disbursed to maintain a costly service. But costly as that service was, its cost was justified by the continuous attention, now obsolete, devoted to the vast public interests entrusted to it.

A considerable pecuniary saving will no doubt be apparent, but it will give further sanction to the abandonment of those qualifications which formerly secured for us in India a position well deserved in return for zeal, integrity, and good faith. It tolls the knell of the sterling "covenanted servants," and they, themselves, as well as the people, will infallibly rue the day. —Yours obediently, Try-Back.

THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS AND PORT BLAIR.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—"Civilian" is correct in his guess that the principal object of my letter was to get at the root of the shameful mismanagement which has been the rule in the convict settlement.

It is admitted that Government has been obliged to take away the control of the islands from the Burmese Commissioner —why? Only because the then Governor was in difficulties. The excuse given for such an agrarian change seems insufficient.

Port Blair has had many Governors in its day, and I hope "Civilian" was not one of them, for I never heard that any particular one reflected much credit on himself or on the State. Perhaps I am wrong. The fact of Government deeming it necessary to send General Stewart—one of our most distinguished officers—to occupy the post, ought to convince us that something has hitherto been radically wrong in the administration, for it ought only to require men of ordinary ability, tact, and good conduct to be the governors of such a place. But really, if we are to return to the days in which the head of the penal settlement allowed his Burmese woman to command the convicts, the sooner we take the bull by the horns the better.

Within the last six months a rumour has gone abroad that the officer commanding the company of British infantry at Port Blair has been ordered to Rangoon in arrest. If this be true, who ordered the arrest, and for what crime?

Lord Mayo is reported to be going to visit the settlement, and, as some of your readers will continue to keep secret the causes which have led to curious dealings in those parts, perhaps the Governor general will shame them by adopting a contrary procedure.—Yours faithfully, GWALIOR.

THE MAHOMEDANS AND THE ASSASSINATION OF MR. JUSTICE NORMAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Allow me as a Mahomedan of India, on behalf of my numerous co-religionists, and at their earnest solicitation, to express their deep grief through your columns at the foul assassination of Mr. Justice Norman. It is a sad misfortune, full of the greatest gloom for the Government and the country. The lamented Justice Norman had long since earned for himself a name which gives him high rank amongst the most distinguished judges in Bengal. Conspicuous ability, devotion to his legal profession, and a conscientious discharge of his duties as a judge have marked each step of his honourable course; his clear judgment, his benevolence of character, and suavity of demeanour, have adorned and exalted the high position which he was wisely selected to fill. India deplores his loss with a sorrow deep and unfeigned, greatly aggravated by the poignant regret that his brilliant career should have been thus brought to an untimely close by the hand of a base assassin, when all had hoped that opportunities for extended usefulness were still before him, and that fresh honour might be added to his name. All hope of detecting the instigators of this most cruel and diabolical murder has been abandoned. If there be any such, the chance of their detection expired with the execution of the actual assassin.

It is most unreasonable and impolitic to make a sweeping condemnation against the Mussulmans at large, because a fanatic sanguinary savage to his back-bone has chosen to make himself notorious and disgrace his fellow-countrymen.

No one blamed all Englishmen when Mr. Percival was assassinated in the House of Commons. It must be remembered that to a great extent British power in India is indebted to the Mahomedans for their timely aid in men and money rendered on different occasions. In the words of the late Governor-General of India, Lord Dalhousie, a statesman of great eminence and of very great impartiality—"The Mussulman Sovereigns of Oude have been a royal race, who, whatever their faults towards their own subjects, have ever been faithful and true to their friendship with the English nation."

When, on the 20th April, 1848, Mr. Vans-Agnew and Lieutenant Anderson were treacherously murdered at Multan, their Sikh regiment joined the enemy. The intense heat of Multan, the rise of the rivers, the inundations extending for several miles on all sides, it was almost impossible to move British troops for another six months. In this emergency who came to the aid of the English but the Nawab of Bawalpore with his 10,000 Mahomedans? who by their constant devotion and valour prevented the enemy from recruiting his army or raising any money. During the mutiny of 1857, in many places where the British power was in the air with no visible support on any side, some thousands of Mussulmans rendered signal service. The space of my letter and your valuable columns would not permit me to mention them; but the Blue-books of the Indian Mutiny and the officers of that time are witnesses to the fidelity and staunch adherence of her Majesty's Mahomedan subjects in India. It must be admitted that many uneducated Mahomedans, urged by the love of loot, or by fanaticism, joined the rebels, but it is well known to every educated Mahomedan, that it is quite contrary to the laws of Al-Koran to be hostile to the Christians. The Koran in various chapters and verses enjoins the followers of Mahomed to be friendly with the Christians. Those who have gratuitously spread the report that Mahomedans are by their religion the enemies of Christians, have simply betrayed their profound ignorance. There is also an accusation against the Wahabis, that they are fanatics and blood-thirsty. This reformed religion only deprecates the supplication of saints, worship of graves, and all similar superstitions. Captain Cunningham, in the "History of the Sikhs," pp. 190 to 193, upholds the Wahabis for cogent reasons. Those who attempt to conspire against the British rule are perfect maniacs. No one can deny that the British rule has been marked by the tenderest dealing with all races. In order to form an idea of these base assassins, it will not be out of the way to give a few extracts from the late General Sir Herbert Edwardes' Diary, "A Year in the Punjab," he says :—

A well-educated man will, in all probability, be religious, but an ignorant one is certain to be superstitious. Blood to them is simply a red fluid; and to remove a neighbour's head at the shoulders as easy as cutting cucumbers.

Several days ago the assassin came into camp, and saw me sitting out under an awning, surrounded by petitions. The thought occurred to him that it would be easy to kill me, so he went home and propounded the question to his religious adviser (a consummate blockhead and ignoramus), whether any man killing a Firingee would be a blessed martyr? The Mullah replied, "Decidedly;" but the Sahib had a nasty habit of hanging criminals and exposing their bodies on the gallows—a custom which disgusted and terrified respectable Mahomedans, and prevented them from becoming martyrs. It is not strange, therefore, that an ignorant youth, full of pride and strength, should have brooded over these matters till, as he says himself, the fixed determination came into his heart, immediately after saying his noontide prayers, to go and kill the Sahib. He then made up his mind to force his way in by cutting down the sentry. The assassin, when about to be hanged, asked if any harm was to be done to his father and mother, and, when assured to the contrary, seemed quite content, but begged that he might be put out of pain as quickly as possible.

Upon another occasion Sir Herbert writes :—

The assassin forced his way through the sentries, and entered my tent at the door; he glanced round for his victim like a tiger, then his eyes met mine, and, seeing no resource, I fired one barrel into his breast. He lingered, however, till night, and then died in spite of the remedies which the native doctor by my orders applied to him.

On the 9th of August, 1847, at mid-day in the Shalamar Gardens, Lahore, an attempt was made to assassinate the lamented Sir Henry Lawrence, of imperishable memory, together with all his staff and other British officers, on the occasion of a grand fete given to the officers of the garrison and their families, but fortunately Sir Henry was duly forewarned, and hence forearmed, by a Mahomedan nobleman, Fakir Sayid Nooroddeen Bookhari. The conspirators were apprehended and punished, when Mr. Lawrence, now Lord Lawrence, in his minute on this diabolical machination, observes as follows :—

The conspirators appear generally to be needy, discontented adventurers, without money or connection.

On the 14th September, 1853, at Peshawar, Colonel Mackeson was assassinated by an Affghan. The assassin was observed, before entering upon his diabolical task, to spread his cloth outside the verandah and pray. On the 1st October he was hanged. The only objection he made to his sentence was, to that part directing his body to be burnt, which was strictly carried out.

A few days before the assassination of Mr. Justice Norman a Hindoo judge was assassinated by his own fellow countryman and co-religionist, and the murderer coolly and resignedly paid the extreme penalty of the law.

The above facts of assassinations will prove that there existed no preconcerted plans by any sect or tribe, but only the suicidal whims of truculent fanatics, who want to be put out of the world with some notoriety. Such assassinations, I am afraid, may be continued from time to time. The only most effectual preventive is to promulgate throughout India that if any Hindu or Mussulman shall be found guilty of assassinating a European or Indian official, before execution he will receive shoe and broom beating publicly at the hands of Mehtars and Domeras. If a Mussulman he will have administered to him pig's blood, and will be hanged with a pig round his neck, his corpse subjected to cremation, the ashes to be thrown in the gutters of the gaol. If a Hindu he shall undergo the same punishment, except that he will be compelled to eat beef, and his body to be buried within the precincts of the gaol. No civilised nation or any one who has a grain of mercy would for a moment even think of torture, but "prevention is better than cure." Since flogging has become law for assaulting Royalty we never hear of a single instance, and hope never to hear of one. The punishment which I have suggested for assassins may appear strange and disagreeable to some, but, Sir, I speak from my long experience of those desperate blood-thirsty fanatics—how they dread to forfeit their caste during their life-time, and what scruples they wish to be observed in the disposal of their corpses. If they are warned of such punishment awaiting them, I assure you there will be an end to these assassinations. No less stringent measures than I propose will ever stop assassination in India.—

Your most obedient servant,
Dec. 14. SYED ABDOOLLAH.

THE LOSHAI EXPEDITION.

The Times of India holds that either "the passion for big expeditions" (and promotion), the demands of the tea planting interest, or pity for poor Winchester's unfortunate child, or all three combined, were influences so strong that the Government of India succumbed at once, in February last, to the demand for a campaign. The Viceroy was disposed to have a force sent at once, but the barbaric warriors had wit enough to time their raid so that they could not then be followed by any military array. But it has yet to be shown that a carefully picked, well equipped rescue party, could not then have penetrated the Loshai haunts, recovered the child, and brought away hostages, or, in some way well understood by border officers with brains, have taken securities for submission and future good behaviour. Such a party would no doubt have been exposed to serious risks; but, if carefully picked from amongst volunteers, and then accompanied by an experienced borderer like Mr. Edgar, there would have been far fewer casualties in number, if not in percentage, than must be incurred in the present expedition. Then, too, the advantages of prompt success, and the bold defiance by a few men of the worst perils of the wilderness, would have had a far greater moral effect in those regions where such effect would be a real force, and not a mere sentiment. Subject to correction from geographers and medical officers who have experience of the north-eastern frontier, we venture to think that such a rescue party starting from Sylhet and Muniapoor within two or three weeks of the attack on the tea gardens could have reached the raiders in the midst of the orgies with which they would celebrate their success. It would then not have been too late in the season for a small company to return with safety; but, if "rained up" in one direction, a good jungle leader would have found his way in another, and might have brought his party out at Chittagong, thus achieving a great triumph alike over wild nature and savage men. But the time for prompt action went by, and we have long been committed to the pomp, circumstance, and cost of an elaborately-planned military campaign. Better, certainly, since a campaign was determined upon, that it should be planned with all care. In the completeness of the design, the evident determination to leave nothing to chance, the disregard of cost, so that the safety of the force as well as the object in hand may be secured, we have plain marks of Napier of Magdala's hand. And, though we think all excuse for this great enterprise might have been obviated by humbler methods, we are now "in for" the more showy and expensive style of doing things. The Loshai campaign must be regarded from the military point of view as a severe mountain parade. It will keep the Bengal troops "in wind," as Sir Henry Rawlinson said when proposing that India should pull the Foreign Office chesnuts out of the fire at Magdala. As the Camp of Exercise at Delhi is considered worth the expenditure in order to familiarise our Commandant, and Brigadiers with military evolutions on a large scale, so the march through jungle and morass of Bengal Infantry, Punjab Mountain Artillery, Goorkha regiments, and Cachar police, must be regarded as an invaluable test of what, if it were needful, we could do in border warfare. The expense may, indeed, be equivalent to one per cent. of the income-tax; but why should this grand empire hesitate, because of such a trifling outlay, to show what it could do if it would? If this expedition succeeds, there are enterprising merchants in Calcutta who will use it as a step towards "opening out," for their own trade, Major Sladen's routes through Eastern Burmah; and, that in turn, would suggest a mountain march into Yunan and Western China generally. It has been fully understood at home and also by common-place politicians in India, that all erratic policy of this kind was definitively abandoned; but the Loshai expedition may give it a fresh start. Lord Mayo may have wished to show that he can rise above the mere prosaic stand-fast doctrine of Sir John Lawrence. Then, again, the advantages to science that may be expected to accrue from our raid on the Loshais are very considerable. Instead of the paltry annual outlay of ten to twenty lakhs on behalf of "science and art," which is disguised under the head "Education," the Viceroy may intend to have a separate budget item for those philanthropic and intellectual pursuits to which fully half of the Loshai expedition expenditure will, of course, be debited.

SIR G. BALFOUR AND HIS CALCUTTA CRITIC.

The Times of India thinks it possible that General Balfour is somewhat rash in his detailed assertions, that he was blundering when he said that India since 1862-3 has been relieved of the cost and has dispensed with the services of 15,000 European troops. But his critic admits that there has been a reduction of 10,000 of all ranks, and that admission in itself makes a strong case for the advocates of retrenchment. In that period our costly railways, planned with considerable regard to military exigencies, have been much extended, and an average of about one million per annum has been devoted to the huge barracks which have diminished rather than improved the sanitary condition of our British forces. We pay the same money, yet have one-seventh less of our most effective defence, and there has been also a diminution of native rank and file. The "Field Officer," and other official apologists for the present costly scale of army expenditure, tell us that this huge gap in our defences made by the withdrawal of 10,000 European soldiers, into which has been flung an extra expenditure of between two and three millions per annum, is to be considered as bridged over by increased efficiency. Well, it cannot be denied that much has been done towards that end during the last few years; and we expect the now gathering Army of Exercise will afford evidence that all the pains taken and the many lakhs spent on musketry instruction, sanitation, improved barrack accommodation, better ordnance appliances, and numberless other schemes for improving the condition and increasing the efficiency, both of the European and native soldiery, have not been in vain. Yet it is difficult to estimate the money value of this increased efficiency, and when the tax-payer is asked to accept it at the moderate rate of two and a-half millions per annum, he can only grin and bear it. It may be admitted that the test of comparative numerical strength is not necessarily more accurate than the Finance Minister's indiscriminate pairing off of the figures of 1871-2 against those of 1862-3; but it is the one broad ground of comparison which the civilian public both here and at home can readily understand. If we have ten or twelve thousand fewer of all arms than we had ten years since, that is in public estimation a certain extra cost of so much more per head. We have a large relative increase in army expenditure, though our military requirements ought to decrease with every year of improved administration and increased communication. The rates of pay of the rank and file have, indeed, been increased, and the figure of that item was duly entered in the Government of India's preliminary reply. But that is a mere bagatelle in the vast excess—with a diminished force native and European, of 17,000 men—of two and a half millions, an excess which, if we go back to 1856, becomes four millions, with a total decrease in numbers of 80,000 men. The root of the controversy lies far deeper than questions of relative numbers and rates per head. It is one of policy and organisation; though stern financial control in detail can never be safely intermitted. The "Field Officer" himself, having, as he thinks, demolished General Balfour, is content to advocate retrenchment in his own way; and in the following passage, which we extract from his former letter, there is, with one exception, sufficient to account for Sir George Balfour's grave complaint:—

> In writing as I have, I would not be supposed for an instant to say that no reduction is possible. On the contrary, I believe it is not only possible, but very desirable. The enormous transport charges, the stud, the double medical service, the excessive and expensive Madras army, the monstrous system of three army administrations for one army, the excess of unemployed officers on half-pay, the inscrutable home charges, the India Office itself, all offer a rich field for financial gleanings. But unless I am grievously misinformed, the objection to reduction in these quarters is raised in the War-office, the Admiralty, the India-office—the pressure for reform coming, whence wisdom came, from the East. I honestly believe that the Government in India is actuated by a single desire to administer the army economically and efficiently.

The omission to which we referred is the big one of the Staff Corps and Horse Guards domination; and whilst we give the Simla military bureau credit for its desire to "administer the army economically and efficiently," we assert that such an attempt is hopeless under the present exotic and costly organisation.

SIR WALTER MORGAN.—Sir Robert Stuart, our new Chief Justice, reached Allahabad yesterday morning. He will doubtless at once assume charge of his office. Sir Robert Stuart will not find it an easy task to fill the place vacated by Sir Walter Morgan. We trust that we shall not be thought to infringe on the domain of private life when we record the fact of the general regret and feeling, almost as of a personal loss, with which Sir Walter Morgan's departure from us is regarded. To dwell on the important services to the judicial administration of the country which it has been Sir Walter Morgan's good fortune to render, would be superfluous; our readers know them as well as we do. Suffice it to say that the difficult and delicate task of creating a new High Court was achieved with a rare tact and success; that the tone of the whole judicial service was raised; the bar, native and European, was strengthened and purified; seemliness and regularity were insisted on in our courts. But it is in a quasi private capacity that we shall chiefly miss our late Chief-Justice, whose graceful hospitality was the more welcome, as it was exercised chiefly in that time of the year when our jaded spirits most needed it, and when as a rule the temptation to shirk social duties is most powerful. Allahabad society has good reason to regret the loss of one who has for the last few years been one of its most valued and efficient heads.—Pioneer, Nov. 20.

THE VICEROY'S SPEECH.

The following is the speech of his Excellency the Viceroy at the durbar at Palumpore, 7th November :—

"Rajahs, Chiefs, and Zemindars—I thank you for the expressions of loyalty towards her Majesty the Queen and of kindness towards myself which are contained in the address which has been read by Mean Perthu Sing. I wish to express the gratification it gives me thus to meet in this beautiful valley so many of the chiefs and gentlemen connected with the district. My whole desire and that of those with whom I am associated in the rule of this great empire is to make its Government suitable to the wants of, and production of advantage to, its many millions of inhabitants. This fair was established mainly by the influence of Mr. Forsyth, whose exertions towards the development of distant trade with Hindostan has entitled him to the gratitude of the public. It was established principally for the purpose of offering inducements to those who were engaged in the trans-Himalayan trade, and if it also has the effect of promoting the commerce and ministering to the requirements of the district it has also performed a useful purpose and supplied a want that has been long felt.

"The development of commerce with countries lying at so great a distance as those beyond the snows, and separated by physical obstacles of so formidable a character must be a work of considerable time. All that the Government can do is to secure peace to the wayfarer, to relieve commerce of unnecessary burdens, and to create such convenience and comforts on the road as are possible. The rest must be left to the industry and energy of the traders themselves, and I have little doubt that as the advantages offered and the profits to be gained by commerce with those many nations who live far away to the north of the great mountains which we see from here become known, that the numbers of those already engaged in this trade will be considerably augmented.

"The culture of tea, which is a branch of agriculture till lately unknown in this district, appears now to be beginning to flourish. I deeply regret the disappointments which have been met with by some of those who first embarked in this pursuit. They were the pioneers, who had much to contend with and much to learn. I trust, now that the worst is over, that a good time is coming, and that the production of a commodity which is now become almost a necessary of life throughout the length and breadth of the civilised world will bring wealth and plenty to this and many other communities in India who are engaged in its cultivation.

"I am pleased to hear that so good a feeling prevails between the European owners of the tea plantations and the native labourers, and that there is every reason to believe there is no possibility that the differences which have arisen between the European employer and the native labourer in other parts of India in somewhat similar pursuits are likely here to occur. It also augurs well for the future development of this industry to find that some chiefs, rajahs, and zemindars are embarking in the culture of tea. There is plenty of room for all, for the demand is now practically unlimited. To all engaged in this industry I heartily wish success—large profits and quick and certain returns.

"It is with satisfaction I have heard so strong an opinion expressed against the horrible and cruel practices of infanticide, which I regret to learn is still prevalent in this district among certain classes.

"An Act was passed in the Legislative Council of the Governor general in the early part of this year for the suppression of this crime. We anticipate good results from the passing of that measure, but we feel that it is the enlightenment of the people themselves, and in the influence exercised by the better educated and higher classes that we must mainly look for the suppression and ultimately the complete extinction of a custom at once so unnatural and debasing.

"The handsome school-house, which stands close by, built by the Raja of Mundi, shows how warm a friend of the cause of education his Highness is. This was further evinced the other day when I had the pleasure of giving away the prizes at the school in his own city, when a number of boys of various ages displayed every symptom of industry, intelligence and progress in the acquirement of the Sanscrit, Hindee, and Persian languages.

"I rejoice to hear that the foundation of a school or college for the education and instruction of the sons of native gentlemen of this district is engaging your attention. In another part of India —namely, in Rajpootana—a similar institution is being established under the auspices of the principal chiefs, rulers, and thakoors of those great States.

"The association of boys of equal rank for the purposes of education has always had the most excellent effect, not only in the mere acquirement of knowledge, but also in the formation of early friendships—in the promotion of kindly feelings, which often last through life, and in the acquirement of a taste for those manly sports and exercises without which our chiefs and gentlemen cannot thoroughly enjoy the health and power that God has given them.

"Any plan which may be elaborated for this district will receive the warmest support of the Government, and at my approaching visit to Lahore I will take care to confer with the Lieutenant-Governor upon the subject.

"The remarks made by Doonee Chund are deserving of every consideration. The Government have every desire to enlist in the administration of justice, in small matters as well as in great, the assistance and co-operation of the best among the natives of the country.

Proposals similar to those suggested to-day have been made before—notably by Sir R. Montgomery and others. Much difficulty however lies in the way.

"The Government cannot establish any new form of procedure and mode of decision unless they are satisfied that perfect purity and complete justice can be secured ; but if it can be shown that in small cases of dispute arbitration councils would promote their easy settlement, save expense, and create peace among neighbours, then I have little doubt that the experiment ought to be tried.

"I must however remark that in the code of civil procedure provision is made for decision by arbitration in cases where the parties agree thereto."

STATION TALK

Lahore, Nov. 12.—The past week has been illustrated by the following events :—On Tuesday evening Mrs. Davies arrived, and for the first time for years Government-house has had the Lieutenant-Governor's wife to preside over its entertainments and hospitalities. Mrs. Davies was accompanied by her sister, Miss Cautley, who is staying at Government-house. We have also been honoured by the presence of two members of Council, the Hon. F. R. Cockerel and B. Ellis ; the latter is also a guest of the Lieutenant-Governor. There has not been any definite programme yet fixed as regards the doings which are to take place on the arrival of the Governor-general. He is to hold a levée and a durbar, and be entertained at Government-house, where a ball will also be given ; after these he will go back to Calcutta. With his party will be the Marquis and Marchioness of Blandford, and the Marquis of Drogheda, and his Marchioness. Lord Wicklow is here already ; he is the guest of R. Taylor, the Accountant-General of the Punjab. So that you see there will be during the week no lack of what is called on the western side of St. George's Channel, the quality in Lahore. The volunteers are coming out in great strength during the Viceregal stay, and they are to furnish the guard-of-honour for his Excellency ; and, moreover, volunteers are being called for to furnish a permanent guard at Government house during Lord Mayo's stay, the duty of furnishing sentries, &c., being undertaken by our citizen soldiers. You will perceive, therefore, that the Lahore volunteer is determined to do all the soldiering he can, even at the expense of his own comfort. The difference which occurred on the arrival of the Lieutenant-Governor, which led to general resignation of the mounted volunteers who received orders to "hide their diminished heads," has been made up ; the officer commanding the troop having tendered an apology in the regimental Order Book, and the aggrieved having expressed themselves satisfied. Colonel Elliot, the Commissioner, who is out on tour, has been recalled to Lahore to be present when the Viceroy and his staff come in. Native dignitaries are beginning to come in to be present at the Viceroy's durbar, and for the next few days the Artillery at the fort will be kept pretty busy at the saluting battery, while our streets will be filled with the gallopping tag-rag and bob-tail who generally are attached to each Rajah's suites. The Rajah of Kuppurthulla has been the first to arrive ; he came in this morning under a salute of eleven guns, and, I suppose, will now soon be followed by his regiment of cavalry, whose get-up is most remarkable, as "tawdry yellow vies with dirty red" in its combination of colours. Each Rajah who visits Lahore on these grand occasions that can muster a piece of ordnance brings it with him, and the result is that there is continual booming of guns all day long. Should their Highnesses leave their camps they must salute themselves, and when they return the same form has to be gone through—so that the air almost gets impregnated with the sulphureous fumes of burnt powder. There seems to be some little doubt as to the exact date of the Viceroy's arrival at Lahore. The morning of the 17th is however pretty definitely talked of as the proper date, and the Lieutenant-Governor's ball comes off on the same night. The Bachelors' Ball has been postponed to the 24th instant, for which date invitations have now been issued. As a place for commercial enterprise, Lahore seems to be improving; two new houses have just opened out places of busines—Messsrs. Francis, Ramsay and Co., of Calcutta, and W. S. Smith and Co., of Mussoorie. The last-named firm was here last cold weather, and evidently the business must have paid, as they have re-opened again this season. Anarkulli is getting quite civilised in consequence, and can hold her head over the other civil stations of the province, as she now boasts four Belatee shops, besides seven or eight "millinery institutions," as our Yankee cousins would call them. The railway have now the advantage of having a chaplain of their own—the Rev. E. G. Davis having volunteered his services. Mr. Davis is a clergyman unconnected with any missionary society, but simply takes up this work as a labour of love, living upon his private means. He was last year a sort of volunteer curate to the chaplain of Anarkulli ; but this year he has made up his mind to devote himself to the railway community, who are indeed fortunate in obtaining his services, as he is a very fair preacher and socially a thoroughly good fellow, as can easily be imagined when a man of independent means takes up the duty as he has done, without any prospect of gain or employment, but simply from a sense of duty and the desire of making himself useful. I have just heard that the Viceroy only purposes staying two days at Lahore; should this be the case, he will have his time pretty well occupied during his stay amongst us.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MARWAR.—Nawab Mahomed Murdan Ali Khan, minister of Marwar, has offered Rs. 3,500 for a clock for the Mayo College, Ajmere. The clock is to be made in England, and placed in the college as a memento of the Nawab. The Nawab has received the thanks of Government for his handsome present.

CHUMBA.—The Superintendency of the Chumba State, which will shortly be vacated by the present incumbent, Colonel Reid, who is going home on leave, is to be conferred upon Colonel McAndrew, at present officiating as Inspector-General of Police, vice Colonel Hutchinson, absent on sick leave.

CURIOUS FATALITY.—We are sorry to hear of the death of Captain Smart, of the Government steamer Koel, under somewhat strange circumstances. Captain Smart had occasion to strike a lascar over the face on his trip to Chittagong, and in so doing had his fist cut by the man's teeth. His whole arm became much swollen, and Captain Smart eventually died from the effects.

ARCHITECTURAL REMAINS.—General Cunningham proposes to add to the work on the ruins of Gour, which the Government of India has requested him to edit, a notice of the architectural remains at Sonargaon, near Dacca, so as to give a more complete account of the Muhammadan architecture of Bengal. There seems, however, to be some difficulty in finding any one able and willing to take photographs of the ruins for which General Cunningham has asked.—Englishman.

MEDICAL.—Dr. Ewart, who has been permanently appointed surgeon to the Calcutta General Hospital, vice Dr. Brougham, resigned, has been allowed also to retain the Chair of Physiology ology in the Medical College on Rs. 400 per mensem, the residue of his former allowance at the college—viz., Rs. 800, to be applied to the payment of the resident Physician and Professor of Pathology. Government has desired the head of the medical department to nominate a qualified officer for the last mentioned post.

BANK OF BENGAL.—We are sorry to hear that the Bank of Bengal has departed from that liberal policy to its officers which has secured for it such able managers. It is said that the Bank has called on all its agents and European assistants to give guarantees not only for their own behaviour but each one for all the others. The effect will thus be to put it in the power of one dishonest man to ruin any or all his fellow servants. We have never heard of anything more absurd than to compel a man in this way to be responsible for a number of others, a system which should involve the election by ballot of all bank agents and clerks.—Punjab Times.

LUCKNOW.—We are very sorry to read that several cases of cholera have been reported in Lucknow. A death from this fell disease occurred in the most sudden manner at Lawrence-terrace last week. Another, says the local Times, has taken place at the house of the Wesleyan minister (Rev. J. Broadbent), the victim being, we understand, a young lady who was on a visit to the reverend gentleman and his wife. There is also much sickness of a dangerous type all round the station and suburbs; whilst the illness in the city is a cause of serious apprehension to the authorities.—Calcutta Daily Examiner, Nov. 18.

COLONEL LOWE AND THE COMMISSARIAT DEPARTMENT.—A report is current that Colonel Lowe has been acquitted. We shall not be surprised should it prove correct. There has been prevalent an idea in military circles that the trial was intended to show up the absence of all system and check on the part of Commissariat Executive officers, rather than to convict Colonel Lowe. And certainly the recent revelations will justify the action of the military authorities. No department has been more impatient of criticism, or assumed a more impertinent attitude of self-sufficiency than this, not only towards military reformers and outsiders, but to its own heads, whenever those heads, as in the case of Colonel Willes, have sought to set matters to rights. The present trial breaks down the defence for the Executive, and it now rests with Government, in full possession of the weakness and fraud of a Commissariat office, to deal with the department for the public good. The office of Examiner, sorely tried by laches for which it was not answerable, will also be placed in accord with the new organisation.—Indian Daily News, Nov. 17.

AN IMPROVED DOOLIE.—Sub-Conductor R. J. Dennett, of the Army Commissariat Department, has been successful in the construction of a new description of army doolie, we learn. We have not seen it, but judges pronounce it a great improvement upon the rickety cumbersome litter now in use, upon which no improvement has been attempted, at any rate not effected, since it originally became an adjunct to our army hospitals some hundred odd years ago. Conductor Dennett's invention has, it appears, met the approval of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, by whose command four have been constructed for trial in the forthcoming camp of exercise. The new doolie combines the advantages of cheapness, simplicity, durability, and portability, without any sacrifice of comfort on the part of those who have the misfortune to require them. It could be made for something like six rupees less than the description now in use, and is about thirty-five pounds lighter. It may be conveniently packed or doubled up, and carried by rail or on camels. The ends or carrying poles are movable, and their removal converts the doolie into a camp cot.—Delhi Gazette.

MOHAMMEDAN COLLEGES.—In March last a committee, appointed by the Government of Bengal, made certain proposals for the reorganisation of the Calcutta and Hooghly Madrassahs; and a memorial has just been presented to Mr. Campbell respecting those proposals, representing that on certain important points the committee's recommendations are likely to frustrate the very object contemplated. The memorialists regret that the committee has recommended, and that his Honour has sanctioned, the abolition of the office of Principal; and say that they would much prefer to see the reorganisation of the Calcutta Madrassah carried out with the views of its ultimately becoming a great Anglo-Arabic College (teaching a less extended course in Arabic, but a much higher one in English than proposed by the committee, and having a competent head to superintend its affairs), and of the Hooghly Madrassah with that of its becoming a college for instruction in Arabic and the vernaculars. Such a course, they consider, would put an end to all the other objections to which the committee's proposals are open. Mr. Campbell, in a formal resolution, says he thinks the suggestions of the memorialists well worthy of consideration, and has promised that they will be carefully considered.

IMPORTS.—Calcutta, Nov. 22.—Native holidays during the week have further interfered with business, and the aggregate of transactions since last mail is extremely limited. Prices have been fairly maintained.

EXPORTS.—Calcutta, Nov. 22.—Jute: The market has continued inactive, but prices continue firm, for the producers will not give way. Saltpetre: The supply in the market is small, and prices continue firm at previous rates. Linseed shows symptoms of a fall, but the stocks are nearly exhausted. Rapeseed: In inferior qualities there has been a fair demand for local purposes at former prices. Raw Silk: There has been a little more business done during the last week, owing principally to the growers of filatures clearing out their stocks. The sales consisted of about 100 bales at a reduction of nearly three rupees on previous quotations.

STATION TALK.

Bangalore, Nov. 14.—The weather during the past few days has been extremely stormy and windy, violent high winds prevailing day and night. You are not unaware that towards the close of the year and its beginning we enjoy beautifully cold weather; our gardens are full of blossoms, the fields are ripe for gathering, the trees are full of foliage, and the whole country is rapturously charming. Since Mr. Mangles took charge of the Judicial Commissioner's post the public have been struck with the marked reversal of most of the sentences of death passed by the Sessions Judge of the division. Sentences of death must be confirmed by the Judicial Commissioner of Mysore. Mr. Mangles has reversed within the past couple of months not less than four death sentences. The public naturally ask how this is. I do not profess to know the reason, except what the pleaders say, namely, that the Judicial Commissioner finds, after a perusal of the records, the judgment of the Sessions Judge to be untenable. In the Madras High Court few or none of the sentences of death are reversed on appeal, though sentences of rigorous imprisonment or transportation, on a charge of culpable homicide amounting or not amounting to murder, are modified occasionally. I wish in no way to speak disparagingly of the Mysore Commission, but I may point out one feature which characterises it—I mean the preponderance of, the military element in its constitution. The judicial and magisterial departments are filled by military officers of all ranks, from a lieutenant to a colonel, who is the highest officer of the State. Except Mr. Mangles, who is the Judicial Commissioner, Mr. Rickets, at present Deputy Superintendent of the Nundidroog Division, and Mr. Lacey, Judicial Assistant at Mysore town, I do not remember any other civilian in the ranks of the favoured. Civilians in the judicial department receive a certain amount of training in judicial duties which the military officer does not. The latter gives up his duty with his corps, enters the commission, and forthwith is made a magistrate, adequate experience connected with which he can gain only after many years of service.—Times of India Correspondent.

Transport Service.—The troopship Euphrates arrived from England on Nov. 23 with the 54th Regiment and details. The 54th proceeds to Jullundhur. The troopship Crocodile sailed from Bombay on Nov. 24 for England with the 1st Battalion 19th Foot and details on board.

Miscellaneous.

Forest Department.—At present many of the forest officers in British Burmah have no knowledge whatever of the Burmese language, and it has been notified to them that in future they are not to hope for promotion till they pass in the vernacular.

Sir Colley Scotland.—A meeting of the Hindoo and Mahomedan community of Madras was held at Patcheappah's Hall, on Monday last, for the purpose of adopting measures to testify the esteem of the community towards the Hon. the Chief Justice Sir Colley Scotland on his Lordship's departure from India.

Marine.—Mr. H. D. Dalrymple, Master Attendant of Madras, is expected to retire in March next, under the operation of the fifty-five years' rule. Mr. Dalrymple has held the office upwards of seventeen years. It is said that Captain Taylor, late of the Renown, and now in command of Green's new steamer, the Viceroy, will succeed Mr. Dalrymple.

Farewell to the 16th Lancers.—To-morrow will be an event in the records of Bangalore, by the departure of this corps to Secunderabad, after a residence of upwards of six years, during which time nothing has occurred to mar the cordial feeling that existed between them and the civil residents of the town. A fact so creditable to a body of men, whom it is the mistaken fashion with many to consider as of lax morals and unsteady habits, deserves something more than a mere prosaic record of their departure, and we beg to offer hearty good wishes for their health, and for an ultimate happy sojourn in their native land.—Bangalore Spectator.

The Last of the VanIngen Melodrama.—The chief actors in the VanIngen melodrama have at last shuffled off the sock and buskin that did them no honour. On Friday, Brigadier-General Shakespear, commanding the Centre District, gave Ensign Frere a severe reprimand, and on the following day that young officer embarked for England in the Golconda, being unfit to do duty with the troops; and on Saturday, Major-General Borton, C.B., commanding the Mysore Division, administered a severe reprimand to Lieutenant Lambart, and then released that young gentleman from arrest, and permitted him to return to duty. It has fared better with the hero! of the piece than was at one time expected; but the clemency that has been shown him, at the instance doubtless of the Duke of Cambridge, rather than of Lord Napier of Magdala, should not encourage any other young officer to put the forbearance of the Horse Guards to a similar test. Had the late affray occurred in England, Mr. Lambart would in all probability have been sacrificed to the exigencies of military discipline. And it would have gone worse with him had his assailants been more free from blame. Let us hope that for many a long day we shall hear of no more scandals of this sort.—Madras Mail, Nov. 16.

Native Gentlemen and English Officials.—A Madras contemporary states that Government have called the attention of heads of departments to the fact that information has reached them that certain native gentlemen in Madras are in the habit of cultivating their acquaintance for the purpose of creating an impression amonst their countrymen of possessing undue influence with them. The Government desire to see such intercourse become common, but they wish that more discrimination be used than at present seems customary as to the character and antecedents of natives who are received as private visitors. English officials should be satisfied that persons with whom they are dealing are of respectable character. Natives of position and respectability are alive to the abuses that exist in this matter, and sometimes abstain from paying visits to English gentlemen, in consequence of their knowing that natives of objectionable character are received, and these take advantage of the courtesy with which they are received to impose on the credulity of their countrymen. But, asks our contemporary, are unscrupulous and intrusive natives alone to blame? Are there no Europeans of the same type who loudly boast of their intimacy with "big-wigs" for very simister purposes?

The late Storm at Karikal.—From official accounts it appears that Karikal has suffered more severely from the hurricane that prevailed on the south coast during the evening of the 6th and the morning of the 7th instant than any of the neighbouring towns. Up to date forty-two corpses of natives have been found on the roads, buried in debris of every description; while to this number have to be added five individuals who have disappeared, and are believed to have been carried away by the flood. The house of the Chef de Service and all the other buildings have sustained considerable damage. The waters of the Arzelar overflowed, carrying away trees and destroying the roads. The native quarter was completely gutted, and nearly all the cattle have perished. The neighbouring villages were not spared, Acaravattam and Nerevy having lost nearly all their plantations and huts. Five musulah boats have been lost, but fortunately the native craft in the anchorage had time to put to sea. In Karikal, 1,200 native huts are destroyed, and in the surrounding country the figure is given as 1,895. A part of the population is at this moment without shelter or means of subsistence. The Government of Pondicherry immediately sent 10,000 francs to the relief of the sufferers, and promised further assistance.—Madras Mail, Nov. 21.

LITERARY.—Within the three months ending 30th September last, 141 English, Guserati, and Marathi books were published in the Bombay Presidency. During the same period, 22 pamplets and 13 periodicals were also published.

A CLEVER DODGE.—We see from the native papers that a shrewd method has been hit upon to send Persian opium to China without paying duty. The drug is sent from Bussorah direct to Suez, whence it is forwarded to China in P. and O. Company's steamers.

SUICIDE.—At Ahmedabad, on the 11th inst., a woman of the Srawuk caste committed suicide. The cause is said to be that her daughter, who had become a widow in her childhood, and re-marriage not being allowed, the girl took to an abandoned life. The mother, not liking to face popular scorn, put an end to her existence.

WASTE OF PUBLIC MONEY.—The Bombay Municipality rent for their own use twenty-five buildings in the city, at a monthly rent of Rs. 6,080, or Rs. 72,960 per annum. The Municipal offices in Rampart-row were rented in April last for ten years certain on Rs. 2,825 a month. The Corporation pays as much as one hundred and fifty rupees as house rent for one of their police inspectors. Could the waste of public money go further? It can, and it has gone further in Bombay.—Madras Standard, Nov. 10.

BASSORAH HARBOUR.—Mr. W. Parkes, C.E., the consulting engineer for the Kurrachee Harbour Works, who had been to Bussorah to inspect the harbour there, leaves for Bombay to-day en route to England. Although Mr. Parkes has not submitted his report in connection with our harbour works, we are assured that he is in favour of their being carried on. We are told that, owing to the construction of the breakwater, a channel sufficiently wide and deep to admit the entrance and exit of large square-rigged vessels has formed itself. Such being the case, we do not see the necessity for Government throwing away more money in improving the harbour. —Sindian, Nov. 15.

THE PEASANT'S SAVINGS BANK WITHOUT INTEREST.—It is a sure sign of the extremity of distress to which the population in Khandeish and other famine-stricken districts have been reduced, that large quantities of silver ornaments, worth, it is said, several lacs of rupees in all, have lately been brought down to Bombay to be sold in the bazaar or melted into coin at the Mint. These ornaments, rings, anklets, bracelets, waistbelts, have in most cases evidently been worn by women and children; and they have been bought up by Mofussil bankers from people who had no money to buy food, and were, therefore, compelled to part with household ornaments which a native never sells, unless there is nothing left to him besides but the house his family lives in.—Bombay Gazette.

AFFRAY AT PARBUTTY.—We have heard the following account of the affray between the soldiers of the 56th Regiment and the natives at a village a little beyond Parbutty. It seems that six soldiers of H.M.'s 59th Regiment, when out shooting, shot a deer, not knowing it to belong to the Inamdar of a village near Parbutty. The natives on seeing the deer shot attacked one of the soldiers, who used his rifle in self-defence. The report of the shot attracted a crowd of natives even from the top of Parbutty Hill, who came out with short knives and guns, and flew upon the soldiers with such fury that, but for the arrival of some policemen, they would all have been killed. One soldier is nearly hacked in two, and another is much wounded about the face and eyes, and it is feared that he will never recover his sight. One of the soldiers, we hear, had his regimental rifle with him, which was broken in the melee. One thing is certain—that it is dangerous for soldiers to go into the villages; the feeling of animosity between them and the natives seems to increase instead of diminish.—Deccan Herald, Nov. 20.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Nov. 25.—The market continues dull, and a very small business has been done. The demand from up-country is of a most limited character, yet first holders are pressing their goods upon the market. Prices generally are unaltered, but 7 and 8¼ lbs. may be quoted ½ anna per piece lower. In Yarns there is a better feeling, and, although the business done is comparatively small, holders are firm, and prices are very steady. In Metals an improvement has taken place in Copper since the advices of the 20th instant, reporting an excited market at home. In other kinds of imports no material change has occurred.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Nov. 25.—Cotton: A very small business has been done here, though prices are again quoted Rs. 3 to 5 per candy higher. New Cotton will, it is expected, be arriving in quantity from Hingunghat and other districts within the next fortnight. The total purchases in the week for export amount to about 3,900 candies, of which 2,400 candies were of Old Cotton and 1,500 candies of New Cotton, deliverable at various dates between this time and May 10 next.

MONEY MARKET.—BOMBAY, Nov. 25.—EXCHANGE: A very limited business has been done this week. The transactions have again been principally in Bank Paper, at a decline of one-sixteenth, and a further decline would have taken place but for the advance in Calcutta. Furloughs to Bombay Officers.

Fort William, Oct. 14.—From Colonel H. K. Burne, Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, to the Secretary to Government, Bombay Military Department.

Simla, Sept. 29.

I am directed to acknowledge your letter, dated Sept. 6, 1871, inquiring as to the interval at which a grant of furlough under Rule XI. of the Furlough Rules of 1868 may be repeated.

2. In reply I am to observe that leave under Rule XI. can only be given when the officer is not entitled to ordinary furlough, or is, owing to the number of absentees, unable to take it. Apart from this condition, there is no prescribed limit within which such leave may not be repeated, nor was it intended to fix any.

3. Leave under Rule XI. is of so exceptional a nature, and can only be given in such cases of extreme and proved urgency, that it must be of the rarest occurrence for any one officer to come under its operation a second time within any reasonable period.

4. Provided, therefore, that such leave is only granted in perfectly good faith, and is not allowed to become a form of privilege leave with a pro forma certificate attached, the Governor general in Council is of opinion that no limitation in respect to periods need be laid down.

5. I am to point out that the Financial Department Notification of May 10, 1870, was superseded by Notification in the same department, dated Aug. 18, 1871.

Telegraph Revision of Inland Tariff.

Simla, Nov 10.—The Governor general in Council having had under consideration the necessity for a revision of the tariff relating to the despatch of telegraph messages, it is hereby notified that the following revised rates will come into force on Jan. 1, 1872:—

Between any two stations in India, or between any two stations in British Burmah:—

1. The charge for a message in ordinary English language is one rupee for every six words or less, exclusive of the address.

2. The charge for a message in cipher, in words of concealed meaning or in a foreign language, is two rupees for every six words or less, exclusive of the address.

Between any station in India and any station in British Burmah:—

3. The charge for a message in ordinary English language is one rupee eight annas for every six words or less, exclusive of the address.

4. The charge for a message in cipher, in words of concealed meaning or in a foreign language, is three rupees for every six words or less, exclusive of the address.

5. The address of a message, including the names of the stations from and to which the message is to be despatched, the name of the sender and the addressee, and the latter's address is transmitted free of charge.

6. The above charges will be reduced in favour of bona fide press messages.

7. Detailed rules will be published hereafter.

Rivers Thompson, Offic. Sec. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Reduction of the Benares Division.—It is hereby notified, for general information, that the Benares division will be reduced to a sub-division, and attached to the 2nd Allahabad division, P.W., with effect from Nov. 15.

Passages.—Under instructions from Government, it is notified for general information and guidance, with reference to G.O. Nos. 174 and 175 of 1871, that an officer, being a widower and having a child with him, shall be treated as a married officer in regard to his claim, if of the prescribed rank, to a passage for a female servant.

Regimental Staff.—The Government of India has decided that an officer performing the duties of two other regimental staff situations in addition to his own, would draw the full salary of his permanent appointment, half the staff salary of the higher of the officiating appointments, and the office and contingent allowances (if any are allowed) of all three appointments, but such an arrangement is considered objectionable, and should not be adopted when it can possibly be avoided.

Troops on Escort Duty.—The Government of India has ruled with respect to the return journey of troops sent on escort duty, that they should march if it is cheaper to do this than to pay railway fares, except when they are needed for duty quickly; and that cases where there is any difficulty in ascertaining whether this principle can be correctly applied, should be decided on the judgment of the commanding officer who issues the order directing the return of the party.

Home Orders—Returns.—The following Horse-guards' G.O., No. 67 of 1871, is, with the sanction of Government, republished for general information:—"Sept. 1, 1871. The copy of the Monthly Return which, under paragraph 1,484 of 'The Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Army,' has hitherto been furnished to the Secretary of State for War by regiments and depots of cavalry and infantry at home and abroad, is to be discontinued from the 1st proximo."

RESOLUTION.

The position of the Government of India, and the difficulty experienced by Native States and public bodies in obtaining competent officers without its assistance, frequently render it necessary for the Government, for political and for public reasons, to transfer its officers to service paid for from sources other than its own revenues. Such transfers would, as a general rule, be impossible if the condition were insisted on that the officer transferred should give up his privileges as an officer in the service of the Government of India; and in the papers above read, the question is discussed what financial arrangements are proper to be made in the case of officers of Government lent to, or transferred to service paid by, Native States, municipalities, and other bodies financially independent of the Government of India, such as Courts of Wards, Port Trusts, &c., and permitted at the same time to retain their privileges as servants of the Government of India.

2. The remuneration of officers of Government may be thus classified—and such officers, when lent to Native States, &c., though they obtain their "immediate" remuneration from the State or fund at the charge of which they are employed, look, for the most part, to the Government of India for their "contingent" and "deferred" remuneration.

Contingent—their absentee allowances,

Deferred—their pensionary allowances;

3. It may sometimes be expedient, for special reasons, that the Government of India should bear such charges; but, as a rule, it is not so; and it is necessary to prescribe the conditions which should be imposed, so that such charges may be avoided, unless the Government, for special reasons, accepts them.

4. The Government of India have accordingly resolved to require, on account of every officer lent or transferred to a Native State, or a municipality, or other financially independent body, who is permitted to retain his position in relation to the service of Government, and his claims to absentee and pensionary allowances under the rules of the service to which he belongs, and with regard to whom the exemption contemplated in paragraph 3 is not declared, a contribution proportional to the salary which he receives, and regulated on the following principles.

5. In the first place, it is to the officers themselves and not to their employers that the Government will look for the contribution required; any other course would be productive of difficulty and inconvenience.

6. In the second place, a calculation founded upon such data as are available shows that the cost to Government of the charges above classed as contingent and deferred (excluding, however, privilege leave allowances), is about one-quarter of the amount actually disbursed in the form of "immediate" remuneration.

7. The Government of India will, therefore, require from officers whose services are lent or transferred as contemplated in paragraph 4, a contribution of one-fifth of their pay and acting allowance, that is, they will receive from their employers pay and acting allowance fixed, in accordance with the rules of the Government service, with relation to the appointments which they hold, or in which they officiate, and retaining four-fifths, will transfer one-fifth to Government. In return for this contribution, the Government will undertake to pay their absentee allowances (except in the case of privilege leave), and their pensionary allowances, in the same manner, and to the same extent, as if they were in the service of Government, save only that the calculation of such allowances will be based only upon the four-fifths which they retain, instead of upon the full amount which they receive of pay and acting allowance.

8. A native officer will be permitted, if he prefers it, to resign all claim to allowances during leave (except privilege leave), and in such case the contribution required of him will be only 12 per cent. The contribution required in respect of inferior servants is one anna in the rupee.

9. And with the special permission of the Government of India in the Financial Department, officers may make the contribution provided for in paragraph 7 in respect of a less sum (not being less than two-thirds) of their actual allowances, in which case their absentee and pensionary allowances will be calculated as if their actual salary were four-fifths of the amount in respect of which they make their contribution.

10. As to privilege leave to all officers in the position referred to in this resolution, the Government of India cannot make arrangements. Privilege leave is at all times specially subject to the discretion of the Government or body which employs the officer; and though an officer lent to Native States, &c., will retain his general claim to privilege leave in the manner provided by the rules of the Government service, he must be left to arrange the times of taking it, and the amount to be taken, with his employer, in the same way as in the Government service he has to arrange them with the Government. An officer must continue during privilege leave to pay the contribution required by paragraphs 7 and 8.

11. As regards officers transferred to local funds, the resolution of this department, No. 2,197, dated April 24, 1868, empowered the Local Governments, in certain cases, to admit pensions chargeable to such funds, and they have power also to grant absentee allowances from them. In the case of an officer permanently transferred to service paid from a fund to which these conditions are declared by the Local Government to be applicable, no contribution will be required, as his claims to pension and absentee allowance for that part of his service which is under the local fund will be provided for by it; but, in all cases of mere temporary transfer to such funds, the required contribution must be paid. So, in all cases of transfer, whether temporary or permanent, to a local fund under which service does not reckon for pension, the required contribution must be paid.

12. An officer whose services are lent or transferred, is not permitted to withhold the contribution by entering into an understanding that the time of his service so lent or transferred will not count for pension or for leave. He must either entirely resign the service of Government, or, unless he is specially exempted, make the contribution required by these rules.

13. In the case of Covenanted Civil Servants, the contribution of one-fifth required by this resolution, includes the 4 per cent. deduction to the annuity funds which will not be separately levied. The amount of the contribution to be credited to the annuity fund is $3\frac{1}{3}$ per cent. of the full nominal pay and acting allowance, being one-twenty-fourth part of the amount retained by the officer after deduction—i.e., the same as 4 per cent. retained out of 100. This proportion, being one-sixth of the entire contribution, will be credited to the annuity funds, so long as they are maintained.

14. If the salary of the officers is disbursed at a Government Treasury, the required contribution will be deducted at time of payment, otherwise the officers themselves must pay the amount directly to the Government of India in such manner as may be arranged.

15. Nothing in this resolution is to be held to apply to officers accepting service under Native States, &c., for their own purposes; it applies solely to officers transferred from the service of Government under the general or special sanction of the Government of India, and for political or public reasons; nor shall anything in this resolution be held to authorise the formation of funds by the accumulation of the contributions or deductions required.

16. The above rules will apply to all officers in the service of Government transferred after the date of this resolution, under the sanction, general or special, of the Government of India, to service under Native States, Local Funds, Municipalities, or other bodies financially independent of the Government of India, unless they resign all claim to absentee or pensionary allowance from the Government of India. They will not apply, however, to service in the Hyderabad Assigned Districts or Mysore, the revenues of which States are under the financial control of Government, and can be used to meet charges for absentee and pensionary allowances when they arise. Also, they will not apply to the following cases where other arrangements have been made:—(1) teachers transferred to service in the Chumba State, or in the Kolapur School; (2) Government servants transferred to the Municipality of Malcolm Peith.

17. The rules will not apply to officers lent or transferred to the British or to any Colonial Government. Such cases are rare, and will be left for special arrangement as they arise, due regard being had to the principles laid down in this resolution. The Government of India will not, unless there are special reasons to the contrary, accept, without reimbursement, any charge for absentee allowances or for pension for service rendered by its officers to other Governments.

18. Nothing in this resolution shall be held to affect the position of officers who have, before the date of its promulgation, accepted service under Native States, Municipalities, or other bodies financially independent of Government. Unless they belong to the army, or to the Covenanted Civil Service, or unless their case is met by some special rule, such officers have ordinarily no claim for pension from the Government of India, their pay not being a charge against the general revenues. This resolution is intended to provide for future transfers, and not to create any claims on the part of officers already transferred under other conditions.

ORDER.—Ordered, that the foregoing resolution be communicated to the several departments of the Government of India, the several Local Governments and Administrations, the Director general of the Post-office of India, the Mint Master of Calcutta, the Comptroller general, the several Accountants general, and the several Deputy Accountants general in independent charge.

THE ARMY REGULATION ACT AND NON-PURCHASE REGIMENTS.

Considerable anxiety has been experienced in consequence of a rumour that it was intended to apply the provisions of Lord Cranborne's celebrated bonus compensation despatch to officers in non-purchase regiments desiring to retire under the provisions of the Army Regulation Act. We however never participated in this feeling, as we were confident that Paragraph 4 of the Act was so framed that it secured the amount which has been usually paid by the juniors to a senior officer retiring, and we are now in a position to state that this has been recognised by the Army Purchase Commissioners. An officer in a non-purchase regiment recently applied to the Horse Guards for permission to retire upon the pay to which his service entitles him, and the amount which has been customarily paid to an officer of his rank by his regiment. His request was acceded to, but he was told his retirement would not be gazetted until he had arranged his claim with the commissioners; meantime, the latter had called upon him for a statutory declaration of the sums he had actually paid for steps since he had joined the regiment. In reply, he quoted the letter from the Horse Guards, and claimed an amount which he stated he was prepared to prove his juniors would have given him, and he intimated he considered, as he was prepared to retire, that he was entitled to be held harmless against any possible loss by reason of delay from causes beyond his control. He has now been called upon by the commissioners for such proofs in the shape of a statutory declaration, or otherwise, as he may be able to offer, respecting the sum which he would have received by way of bonus if he had retired from the regiment before the 1st of January, 1871; but it is added the commissioners will probably not be in a position to deal with the case until information which has been called for from India has been received. Fortunately the officer in question has anticipated the latter objection by having procured a certificate, signed by his juniors, attesting the amount. And we would suggest to all officers to do likewise, as it is hardly likely, when this is verified, as it can easily be, and a statutory declaration is furnished, that any claim can be resisted, and we may, therefore, congratulate non-purchase officers and express their thanks to Sir Charles Wingfield, M.P., for securing their rights by insisting upon the alteration of paragraph 4 of the Bill, which, as originally framed by the War Office, did not even attempt to do justice to Indian officers. Why, however, the 1st of January last is fixed by the commissioners, it is difficult to say, seeing that the 1st of November is the date named in the Act. It is, however, not likely that the custom in any regiment was altered between these dates, and officers will not therefore be prejudiced. Another question, however, naturally arises, viz., if officers in the old Indian army are to be secured their full bonus simply because they joined the Line, how are those officers who remained local or joined the Staff Corps to be confined to the provisions of Lord Cranborne's despatch? Surely the India Office will not venture to compel the latter officers to appeal to the House of Commons to insist upon equal justice being done to all?—Home News.

Miscellaneous.

Ceylon Company.—The half-yearly report of the Ceylon Company (Limited), to be presented to the meeting on the 19th inst. (this day), recommends an interim dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum.

The Bankruptcy of Messrs. Beattie and Co.—On Wednesday the Court of Bankruptcy confirmed the compromise of 10s. in the pound (4s. in cash and 6s. in instalments extending over two years) accepted by the trustee (Mr. Waddell), in the bankruptcy of Messrs. Beattie and Co., East India merchants.

Oudh and Rohilkund Railway.—The report of the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway Company for the half-year ending the 30th June last has been issued. The net profits of the Cawnpore Branch were £5,142, against £5,044 in the corresponding period of 1870. The capital account shows a total receipt of £3,525,048. 2s. 7d., and an expenditure of £1,689,354. 18s. 11d.

Half-Pay Officers.—The legal difficulty which arose with reference to the Army Purchase Commissioners dealing with the claims of half-pay officers to retirement under the "The Army Regulation Act," has been arranged to the satisfaction of the War Office authorities and the Treasury, though not perhaps to the satisfaction of the officers likely to be concerned, as only a limited number of each rank, as we before stated, will be allowed to withdraw in any one year. We would suggest that when the number of officers applying is in excess of the number allowed for one year the Commissioners should issue money certificates in favour of the parties, which they would be able to get discounted in the ordinary way, and so one element of dissatisfaction would be got rid of.—Broad Arrow.

Lieut.-Gen. W. M. Ramsay.—We have to announce the death of this general officer on December 13, at his residence in St. James's-street. He was the eldest son of the late Lieut.-Gen. Hon. J. Ramsay, uncle of the Earl of Dalhousie. He was a bachelor, and brother of Vice-Admiral George Ramsay. The late gallant gentleman was heir-presumptive to the earldom.

The Indian Mails.—In consequence of the great acceleration of the mails for India, China, and Australia, by the adoption of the route of Brindisi, those mails will, from the commencement of next year, arrive at Alexandria about two days earlier than they arrived when sent by Marseilles; and, in order to prevent their suffering any detention in Egypt, it will be necessary to despatch the Packet from Southampton two days earlier than at present. Commencing, therefore, with Thursday, the 28th instant, the mails for India, &c., intended to be forwarded via Southampton will, in future, be made up in London on Thursday mornings, instead of on Saturday mornings as under the existing arrangement.—General Post-office, Dec. 11, 1871.

The Passage of the Suez Canal.—The following information respecting the passage of her Majesty's ships through the Suez Canal may be interesting to our readers, and it certainly reflects much credit upon the efficiency of M. Lesseps' staff employed in navigating such colossal vessels through that artificial channel, which by his genius has now become one of the great high roads of the world. Her Majesty's troopship Malabar went through in 26 hours, the Jumna in 17 hours, the Crocodile in 17 hours, and the Euphrates in 17½ hours; the armour-plated ship Iron Duke also passed successfully through to the Red Sea. It should be remembered that the troopships are upwards of 4,000 tons each, more than 300 feet long, and draw over 22 feet water. It is affirmed that the least depth to be met with in the Canal is 24 feet, which will shortly be increased to 26 feet from end to end.

Export of Bullion.—The following is the last fortnightly return of bullion exports, as per De Quetteville's Indian Circular of the 7th inst.:—By the Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. From Southampton, per Mooltan, Nov. 18: Gold—Bombay, £800: silver—£197,800. Per Pera, Nov. 25: Gold—Bombay, £40,000; Ceylon, £3,690; Madras, £7,019; Calcutta, £20,000; Penang, £1,000; Singapore, £5,000: silver—Bombay, £31,750; Calcutta, £35,000; Singapore, £20,500; Hong Kong, £77,419 (£9,979 shipped by H.M.'s Government; Shanghai, £9,270. Per Poonah, Dec. 2: Gold—Alexandria, £2,000; Bombay, £19,300: silver—Bombay, £305,100. By the steamers of the Messageries Imperiales. From Marseilles, per Menzaleh and Cambodge, Nov. 12: Gold—Egypt, £110,648; Aden, £32; Pondicherry, £100; Calcutta, £2,500: silver—Pondicherry, £224; Madras, £1,640; Calcutta, £31,240. Per —, Nov. 25: Gold—Egypt, £21,880. The price of silver is quoted as bar, 60 15-16d. per oz. standard; dollars, 4s. 1¼d. per oz.; 5 francs, 4s. 11½d. per oz. nominal.

Military.—The arrangements for the garrison of Hong Kong and the Straits Settlements have been revised as follows:—The two native Indian regiments now forming part of these garrisons will be withdrawn, and they will be replaced by European infantry. The garrisons in future will be as follows:—Hong Kong: 1 battery garrison artillery, 1 battalion European infantry, 2 companies Gun Lascars. Straits Settlements: 1 battery garrison artillery, 1 battalion European infantry. To carry out these arrangements the head-quarters and wing of the 1st battalion 10th Foot will proceed to Singapore to relieve the battalion of native Indian infantry. The 80th Foot will proceed from England to Hong Kong to relieve the wing of the 1st battalion 10th Foot and the battalion of native Indian infantry, which is to be withdrawn. One battery of garrison artillery will also be withdrawn from the Straits Settlements and brought home. The Straits Settlements will in future form part of the China command. These arrangements will relieve the Imperial Exchequer of the charge for the two native Indian regiments above mentioned.

The New Twenty-five Pounder Field Gun.—On Tuesday week a new field gun, namely, a 25-pounder, weighing 21 cwt., was sent from the Royal Arsenal to Shoeburyness, for the purpose of its powers of range and other capabilities being ascertained. It is a muzzle-loading steel and wrought-iron gun, of four inches calibre, rifled in three grooves, having a uniform twist of one turn in thirty-five calibres. In shape it approximates to that of the 16-pounder, a battery of which has recently been constructed, there being no swell at the muzzle, as in the 9-pounder. It is anticipated that the velocity which will be obtained by the new weapon will be far in excess of that registered during the trials of the two former descriptions of similarly constructed field guns; hence, with a projectile so vastly superior in weight, it is probable that the effect upon the targets will be correspondingly great, as such effect is directly proportionate to the weight and velocity of the projectile. A carriage, limber, and ammunition of all descriptions, to suit the calibre of the new weapon, were despatched with it to Shoeburyness, consequently there will be nothing to delay the immediate trial of this fresh development of field ordnance.

Retirement from New Line Regiments.—"A Subaltern's Friend" writes thus to the Broad Arrow:—"Sir,—Will you kindly, through the medium of your valuable paper, allow me to bring before the public a case which I think deserves attention, as it is one more instance of the extreme liberality of our present Government in carrying out the provisions of Parliament, and will be an encouragement to rapid retirement from its service? A friend of mine, a young officer in one of the nine new Line Regiments, wishing to retire from a service in which he could not live and keep up appearances, as obliged to, on the small allowance which Government makes for this purpose, sent in his papers, claiming under Warrant of 1870, £500—viz., £100 for each of the four years' service abroad, and £50 for each of the two years' service at home; and after a short time he is informed that his claim cannot be entertained, as his case did not come under the conditions of the Warrant quoted, and could receive no money on retirement except such sum as might be granted him by the Purchase Commission, under conditions of the Army Bill of 1871, as over-regulation money. Now, what I want to know is this: Why should my friend A be worth only about £350 at the outside on his retirement from a late old non-purchase corps, and B, who is exactly situated as he is in every respect, but belongs to a late purchase regiment—though he never has purchased a step—is valued at about £800? It is an anomaly which, to a civilian mind, seems monstrous and incomprehensible, and which I should very much like to have explained by some one versed in the intricacies of Army Regulation."

THE FAMINE IN PERSIA.—A second subscription list has been opened in Bombay for the relief of the famishing Persians. A deputation, consisting of Messrs. Godrez Mehrban, Ardeshir, Moonshee, Jehangier Pleader, and Ardeshir Iranee, waited on Mr. Cowasjee Jehangir Readymoney, who headed the list with a sum of Rs. 500.

THE NAWAB OF JOONAGHUR.—The East India Association bids fair to become a power in the land, and one which men of the world, including finance ministers, may feel bound to respect. We learn that his Highness the Nawab of Joonaghur has given Rs. 15,000 as a donation towards the permanent fund of the association. Moreover, his Highness is already an annual subscriber of Rs. 1,000. This handsome donation shows that the Nawab and his advisers have some sense of political patriotism as regards matters beyond their own province. We understand that thirty "life members" of the association have been secured in that single State of Kattywar. This result is no doubt due in great measure to the exertions of Mr. Dadabhoy Nowrojee, who, it seems, is still in the Mofussil, where, we doubt not, he will collect a store of important information as to the condition of the people and state of the country—both in native and British territory.—Times of India.

OPPRESSION IN THE GAIKWAR'S TERRITORY.—All the farmers and agriculturists in Variav, a village in Gaikwaree territory, being continually oppressed by their ijaredar, have fled into British territory. It is said that they have even abandoned all their goods. Rates to the extent of Rs. 9 per beega of land were levied from them in the year 1867, when the price of cotton was Rs. 200 per candy; but subsequently, when prices fell, the farmers were compelled to leave their holdings, through inability to pay the heavy assessment. Thereupon the late Sooba of Nowsaree, coming to know of these men's distress, reduced the rate from Rs. 9 to 7, and promised a further reduction; and the cultivators returned, continuing to pay Rs. 7 per beega till the year 1870. Then the present Sooba, on taking charge of his office, served notices on the luckless wights, informing them that he would levy Rs. 15 per beega this year, that is, Rs. 9 for the current year and six rupees for the past three years. Moreover, he threatened to attach the properties and goods of those who failed to make good the stated payment within five days. The crops this year being very scanty, the dumb-founded people saw no way out of the difficulty except the shortest road out of the Gaikwar's territory, and that road they traversed without delay.

THE OPTOSCOPE.

The practical utility of the OPTOSCOPE is now fully determined. In numerous cases has its merits been displayed in a manner so satisfactory, that in no instance has it afforded less satisfaction to the intelligent inquirer than to the inventor himself. It has long been a matter of considerable importance to those suffering from defective vision to learn the exact state of the refractive humours of the eye, and the proper convexity or concavity of the glasses required to render the vision as perfect as the state of the organs will admit of.

Mr. BEAUMONT'S OPTOSCOPE

is all that can be desired for this purpose, and those desirous of benefiting by his discovery may be suited with the most perfect-fitting glasses at moderate cost.

PROFESSIONAL OPINIONS

Supporting and Recommending this System.

March, 1871.

I have much pleasure in bearing my unqualified testimony to the admirable system of military exercises as given in Sergeant-major B. Browne's book. I can speak confidently of it, having had personal experience of its value. I am in the habit of recommending it to all those under my care, who require this additional mode of treatment for developing their frame.

C. M. Miller, M.D.,
Assistant-surgeon, London Rifle Brigade.

Mr. Browne,—Nothing can be more true, in my opinion, than all you say in favour of training all our boys to military exercises. Its usefulness cannot be overrated, either to the boys themselves or to the nation, which would thus find, in a short time, and without any inconvenience or effort, the best part of its educated population prepared to take part in the defence of the country, almost without training, and should their services in this way happily never be required, the country would still have the satisfaction of seeing its young male population immensely benefited in health, strength, appearance, and general manliness. If carried out at all schools, it would become the favourite pastime of the boys.

H. Eyre, Lieutenant-general.

Birkbeck Schools, Kingsland, N., March 7, 1871.

For some years past all the boys and girls of these schools have been put through a course of systematic drill, such as that laid down in Sergeant-major Browne's book. The results have been in the highest degree satisfactory. Not only is the physical condition of the children greatly improved, but the discipline of the drill-ground produces habits of obedience and attention, which, carried into the school-room, conduce greatly to the mental progress of the children, as well as materially aid in maintaining order. Until the time shall come when the Government shall wisely insist upon every child being efficiently drilled, schoolmasters who have not yet tried the experiment will do well to do so without delay.

Of course it is of the utmost importance that the drill-instructor should not be a mere martinet. He must be able to convey his instructions clearly and pleasantly; have an unlimited supply of patience, and show that he really takes an interest in his work.

It has been our good fortune for some years to have secured the services of Sergeant-major Browne, the author of this little book ("Setting-up Drill," &c.), who is not only assiduous in performing his duties, but who is fond of his work, and shows it, and, therefore, succeeds admirably.

James Runtz, Head Master.

Kingsland Middle Class Schools, Sandringham-road, March 7, 1871.

Physical exercise is undoubtedly one of the requisites of youth, and if such exercise be conducted with a purpose, it is not only productive of health to the body, but also induces habits of order and energy. In our schools the system of drill instruction has been adopted with the best results, and I am quite convinced that any school would be better for its introduction. Of course a great deal depends upon the drill-instructor; but if such an one as ours (Sergeant-major Browne, who is thoroughly fond of the work, and at the same time a strict disciplinarian and a perfect gentleman), be obtained, the result will be all that can be desired.

Robert Lane, Head Master.

Southgate-road Middle Class School, De Beauvoir-town, N., March 6, 1871.

It is fortunate in the present day there is but little need for insisting upon this physical training of youth, as its importance is so generally recognised. To insure success, however, it is indispensable that it should be conducted by well-qualified instructors, such as are apt to teach, of gentlemanly manners and good disciplinarians. From my observations of Sergeant-major Browne, I am able to testify to his possession of these qualifications, and have very great pleasure in recommending his system of drill to those who may be desirous of introducing physical exercises into their schools.

Thomas Wilson, F.R.G.S., Head Master.

Finishing Establishment for Young Ladies, Benyon-house, 32, Culford-road, De Beauvoir-town, N., March 6, 1871.

Mrs. Aldam has great pleasure in bearing testimony to the efficiency of Sergeant-major Browne's method of drilling, and as possessing not only great patience, but also consideration for the strength of the pupils, that no undue fatigue is occasioned, no too sudden a strain upon the muscles of growing children, eager, perhaps, to outdo their schoolfellows, a point too frequently overlooked, when a large number are being drilled.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Dec. 2; Agra and Madras, Nov. 30; Calcutta, Nov. 29.

LORD MAYO'S trip down country ended with his arrival at Calcutta on the morning of Monday, November 27. At the Armenian Ghat a guard of honour from the 14th Foot presented arms to his Lordship, and a goodly crowd of natives and Europeans welcomed his return to the Capital. A large muster of Volunteers, the largest ever known, it is said, in Calcutta, saluted the Viceroy on his arrival at Government House. Both the Earl and his Countess are described as looking remarkably well and evidently pleased with their warm reception. The Viceroy was to hold a levée on the 7th of this month and Lady Mayo a Drawing-room on the 12th.

WE may here glance briefly back at the previous stages of Lord Mayo's journey from Simlah. His party reached the Kangra Valley on the 11th November. After a day or two spent in shooting, Lord Mayo went on to Kangra, paid the Court a visit, and looked in upon Mr. Montgomery's tea-plantation. On his way to Dharmsala his Lordship went over another fine estate, managed by Major Strutt, and sang the praises of tea to the Kangra zemindars. At Dharmsala he saw the lonely tomb of Lord Elgin, whose almost sudden death occurred there in 1862. On the 13th his Excellency was welcomed at Chumba by its Rajah with fireworks and illuminations. The next day he inspected the barracks at Dalhousie, the site and cost of which appear to have met with grave objections from those who prefer its rival Dharmsala as a hill-station. On the 15th his party crossed the Ravee at Madhopore on rafts upheld by "massaks," or inflated skins. From this spot, surrounded with woody or snow-crowned ranges of hills, starts the Bari Doab Canal, begun of old by Lord Napier, which Lord Mayo duly visited. Here, too, he received a visit of state from the Maharajah of Kashmere, his son, and a choice array of his nobles and Ministers. After giving a dinner to all the English officers and gentlemen he recrossed the Ravee for Umritsar on the 17th. His stay at Lahore was marked by a brilliant series of entertainments; beginning with a ball given by Mr. Davies the Lieutenant Governor. Next day there was a splendid Durbar at the Montgomery Hall, in which the young Rajah of Kapurthala shone conspicuous amidst the jewels and brocades of his brother chiefs. A hurried visit to the pretty Shalimar Gardens followed by a splendid illumination of Lahore ended a long day's pleasuring, and just before midnight of the 18th the quicksilver Viceroy set off by train towards Calcutta, under a parting salute from the Lahore Volunteers.

AT Sonepore Lord Mayo took his pleasure first in attending the races, and afterwards answered the call of duty by holding a Durbar in honour of Sir Jung Bahadur of Nepal, whose arrival at Sonepore had been delayed by causes unforeseen until the 22nd. The Durbar came off on the 23rd. That same afternoon Lord Mayo returned the Rajah's visit and saw his troops put through their manœuvres by his Highness's son. Next day Sir Jung was astonished by the excellent practice of a half-battery of artillery under Captain Warren, who put in eleven shots out of eighteen at distances ranging from 1,200 yards to a mile and a quarter. Sir Jung was so pleased with what he saw that he asked leave to send one of his sons to the Camp of Exercise at Delhi. The request of course was granted.

LORD NAPIER was expected to reach the Delhi camp on the afternoon of November 30, by which time nearly all the troops told off for the Camp of Exercise had reached their destination. It was just then that people in India were beginning to fear a sudden collapse of the whole undertaking, on account of the cholera which had found its way from Lucknow to Delhi. On the 30th November, the day after its appearance in the latter place, the dreaded disease had attacked fifty-five persons, and slain a third of their number. It naturally became a question whether the spread of the disease would not break up the Camp. On this point however all anxiety must have long since been allayed by the favourable news reported home in recent telegrams.

THERE is little new to tell of the Loshai expedition. General Bourchier with his Staff had reached Cachar on the morning of the 16th, and was expected to start for Mainadhar about the 21st. The 44th N.I. was to march with him. The distance between these two points is only thirty-five miles, an easy three marches. The appointed route for all regiments advancing from Cachar leads past the stockaded position of Monierkhall. The Artillery and Sappers were to arrive at Cachar on the 18th November. At Mainadhar two months' provisions were already stored up by the Commissariat, and a large number of boats were ready to convey troops thence to Tipai Mukh. Mr. Knyvvet had arrived at Dacca with 200 extra police raised in Cachar. This raised the total of the hill police to 650, more than 500 of whom are to serve as frontier guards, the rest being reserved for civil duties. General Brownlow, commanding the right or Chittagong Column, was due at Demagiri Falls on the 15th November. With him remained one wing of the 2nd Ghoorkas, the other being employed at Burkal in making roads. The Sappers arrived at the latter place on the 14th. The officers were already on rations, and some of them were gently grumbling at the reduction of their baggage to forty pounds each. So far however the arrangements for the campaign were allowed to have been ably carried out; but we hear something of the coolie corps being under officered. The coolies themselves, those at least with the Cachar Column, are described as being mostly powerful fellows, well set up, and all the more active for having light loads to carry. Each soldier has been furnished with a large waterproof sheet, two of which joined together by their eyelet holes can be made into a small tent for three, with the third man's sheet for a waterproof cover. Similar sheets have been furnished to the coolies.

A destructive fire broke out in Calcutta on the evening of November 27 in some jute screw-houses in Clive-street. In spite of the efforts made to check it with the aid of a great many sailors working some powerful jets from the river, seven or eight "pucka" houses were completely destroyed and a large quantity of jute burnt up. Between the buildings and their contents the whole loss is reckoned at nearly £40,000.

The rumoured retirement of Mr. F. Stephen from his present post has nearly ceased to be a matter of speculation. It has now been publicly given out that the able Law Member of the Viceroy's Councils is about to return to England; whether for good or only for a brief period is still unknown to the outside world. If he is coming home for good, the Indian Government will lose the services of a colleague by no means easy to replace.

The truth has at length come out regarding the mysterious outbreak at the Alipore Jail. Dr. Lynch, the present Governor, had all the prisoners, 2,000 in number, paraded before him on the 13th November. Three-fourths, according to the Examiner, "had passed, when one prisoner, without saying a word, advanced, made Dr. Lynch a salam, and fetched him a slap on the face, knocking his hat off. Instantly there was a cry of 'mar mar,' confusion, and a few bricks or stones came from the prisoners who had passed by. One of the bricks and stones thrown struck Mr. Dobson (the head jailer) on the head, and drew blood profusely. Mr. Dobson seized the prisoner, and one or two others immediately surrounded him." Happily no serious consequences took place, and the outbreak was soon quelled. Dr. Lynch has since been reproved for not reporting it, but it is admitted that he showed great presence of mind. Order was restored, it seems, mainly through the personal influence of Mr. Dobson himself; and the two chief offenders have been severely flogged.

In a letter to the Pioneer a Mohammedan gentleman of high repute both in the North-Western Provinces and even in England, Sayad Ahmad, complains of the disappointment he felt on reading Dr. Hunter's volume about the Indian Mohammedans. To the literary merits of the writer, with "his Macaulay-like talent of vivifying everything that his pen treats of," Sayad Ahmad does full and willing justice. But literary skill, he adds, "is not everything, and an author writing for the Indian as well as the English public should be careful not so to colour the subject he treats of as to make it mischievous and of small value as an historical work." Books of this sort, which are more widely read in India than people here might suppose, are too readily taken by the natives as reflections of the general feeling in England, especially when they are the product of official pens. Any misrepresentations contained or implied in such books "sink deep into their souls and work much harm." It is true that Dr. Hunter calls himself a friend to the Mohammedans, but this latest proof of friendship has done its objects anything but good. "God save me from my friends" was the exclamation which rose to Sayad Ahmad's lips as he read on. He regrets deeply that Dr. Hunter "has used his 'power of the pen' in a way calculated still more to embitter the minds of Englishmen against the already little loved Moslems." Dr. Hunter's book abounds in passages which refer not merely to the Mohammedans of Bengal, of whom alone he professes to treat, but to the Mohammedans all over India, and this construction of it is further strengthened by the very title of the book. After quoting some passages to the point, Sayad Ahmad goes on to say—"As a cosmopolitan Mohammedan of India I must raise my voice in opposition to Dr. Hunter in defence of my fellow-countrymen. I know full well the arduousness of the task which I have undertaken—the difficulty which encompasses every advocate of a cause which has been pre-and misjudged by men of a different race." If the learned Sayad should chance to read the Times of Christmas-day, it will comfort him to find one at least of our leading journals dissenting by implication from the alarmist views expressed by Dr. Hunter. There is another point too in the discussion on which some stress might fairly be laid. As the Times says, "there are Mohammedans and Mohammedans," meaning those who are loyal and those who are not. We would carry that argument a step further. If a common religion tends to draw men together, differences of race tend as much the other way. The Mohammedans of India belong, not to one race, but to several, as distinct from each other as the Englishman from the Arab, or the Arab from the Chinaman. During the Mutinies Mussulmans of different races from different parts of India fought on different sides. Would not the same disunion occur again, however strong the counterworkings of a common faith; and is not the Wahabi movement itself a new element of discord rather than union among Moslems of different sects?

Lord Ellenborough's amusing Pæan over the capture of the sandal-wood gates of Somnath was peculiarly unfortunate in view of the facts then known or since discovered regarding the true history and character of those gates, and of the temple whence they were said to have been taken. At the time he wrote the old temple which Mahmood of Ghazni pillaged was an empty ruin, and the gates he is said to have taken thence to his own capital had probably disappeared thence some centuries ago. It is certain at any rate that the gates which Nott's troops carried off from Ghazni are not those which Mahmood found at Somnath. They are not made of sandal-wood, but of Deodar pine. They bear on them no traces of Hindu workmanship, but many traces of Mohammedan. As Mr. Simpson, who saw them in 1860, observes in a letter to the Daily News, "out of the thirty million Hindu gods, there was not one visible" upon them. What art they revealed, in short, was "purely Mohammedan." In all likelihood the old gates were destroyed by fire, and the present ones, which bear many marks of age, with their broken panels, defaced ornaments, and rude patches of wood and iron, were afterwards set up in their place. Somnath town, or Somnath Pattan, lies on the south-western shore of Kattiwar. Its massive old walls of uncemented stone are covered with richly carved illustrations of old Hindu mythology, much defaced of course by time and Mohammedan bigotry. The town stands high, and the ruins of the great temple overlook the Arabian Sea and the neighbouring seaport of Billawal. The treasures it contained at the time of Mahmood's invasion were ample enough to account for the obstinacy of its defenders and the pertinacity of their barbarous assailants.

The French of Pondicherry appear to have among them a true master of the "grand style," in the person of the gentleman who wrote the following passage in the Courrier de l'Inde Française. It is really a sweet thing in the way of tall talk.

> Hosanna! Our Governor, the Commissary General Faron, is here. O New Messiah, what do you bring us? Whatever is the message of which you are the depositary, you are welcome. We salute you. Sound bells, tabours, and trumpets! Roar ye cannon! Let incense smoke on the altars and mount to Heaven with our prayers. Blessed be the name of the Eternal, of that God all powerful, whom all men, the most ignorant and the wisest adore, each for himself, whom all nations venerate, who loves us all without distinction, and whom we, the inhabitants of French India, invoke especially to-day, in order to thank Him for the favour which he has shown us, M. le Gouverneur, in having conducted you as well as your dear family safe and sound to our midst.

The first blood drawn in the Loshai campaign seems to have been shed by General Nuthall's troops, who are acting in concert with the Cachar column. According to a Calcutta telegram one of his working-parties in Manipore was attacked on the 1st December by thirty-five Loshais, twelve of whom were killed, with a loss on our side of one Subadar slain. Another telegram of December 19 from Calcutta shows that General Brownlow's column has already made good use of its time. On the 14th of this month it surprised a village held by Vanoonah, a Syloo chief who appears to have rejected an offer of peace from the English. He and his band however seem to have made good their retreat, leaving seven or eight bodies and a burning village in our hands.

Whenever some Friend of India gets up to enlighten an English audience on the wrongs which the natives of India suffer at our hands, he is almost sure to balance the wise sayings of Malcolm or Elphinstone against the misdeeds of Lord Dalhousie. The great Viceroy's ghost must have an uneasy time of it, if he gives any heed to the stereotyped abuse which a certain class of speakers and writers keep pouring out on the memory of his earthly self. In his recent lecture on the Rights of Native Princes Mr. Chesson once more brought out the exploded story of Lord Dalhousie's share in the annexation of Oudh, just as if the alleged author of the alleged crime had recommended or approved the measure he carried out to order, or as if the measure itself had directly provoked the subsequent mutinies. With regard however to the main purpose of his remarks, Mr. Chesson hit upon something like a real blot in our Indian administration, a blot indeed which others have pointed out before him, notably Mr. Prichard in one of his lectures read before the East India Association. There is much to say, we think, in favour of some open and independent Court which might settle questions in dispute between the native princes and the Paramount Power, questions which the latter has been wont to decide summarily for itself. At present, observes Mr. Chesson, "the only Court of Appeal open to the princes of India is the High Court of Parliament," whose decisions are liable to be determined by party considerations. Take the case for example of the dethroned Nawab of Tonk. If his conduct towards the Thakoor of Lawa called for his condign punishment, would it not have been better to arraign him openly before his peers, than to dethrone him by order of the Viceroy after a hole and corner inquiry by a Political Officer? The former process would not have detracted from the real authority of the Supreme Government, while the result would anyhow have precluded all subsequent charges of unfair play on its part. Mr. Chesson's proposal to represent the natives of India "either in the House of Commons, or in some great representative Council of the Empire," is also worthy of consideration. Among the speakers who took up Mr. Chesson's parable was a Mr. E. Jenkins who described our Indian policy as "in many respects infernal," and ascribed its redeeming features to missionary influence; a double assumption which less onesided thinkers will be inclined to dispute. "Infernal" at any rate is rather a strong term for errors of judgment or mistakes arising from ignorance.

The 104th Fusiliers arrived in England on Monday, the 18th December, under the command of Lieutenant-colonel W. D. Harris, one of the few remaining officers who served with the old 2nd Bengal Fusiliers ever since they were first raised in 1839. Under his command we may feel sure that the 104th will keep up the high character bequeathed to it by the old regiment whose colours it now bears under a new name.

We understand that in future the furlough pay of officers who left India on or after the 1st of July last is to be issued at the rate of exchange yearly settled between the India Office and the Lords of the Treasury. For the present official year the rate is fixed at 1s. 11d. the rupee.

In referring last week to the death of General Patric Cameron, we omitted to give him credit for his real services in the field. It appears, after all, that he had his full share of them to show. He served from 1805 to 1808 in the campaigns in Berar and Khandeish, and was present in the cavalry affair of Peepulgaum against Tookeeram in 1805. In 1809-10 he served on the Nerbudda and in Seronj. In 1816-17 he went through the campaign in the Northern Circars and Goomsoor, and helped to hunt down the Peshwah in the Mahratta campaign of 1817-18, being engaged in the latter year in the battle of Ashti. As lieutenant colonel he commanded the 1st Light Cavalry in the Burmese War of 1825-26.

Friday night's Gazette, from which we have quoted elsewhere, carries out the important step indicated in the Royal Warrant of last December. It amounts in fact to the final transfer of the Indian Staff Corps, the great bulk in short of the Indian Army, to the War Office Establishment. When the few score local officers have died off or retired, and the separate lists of artillery and engineer officers have been done away, the last traces of a separate Indian service will have disappeared. We should have thought that all recent experience pointed to a different solution of the problem so hastily attacked in 1860; but, if the War Office is satisfied, why should we complain? Is not everything for the best under the best of possible Governments?

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, December 26, 1871.

THE LATE LORD ELLENBOROUGH.

The name of the Earl of Ellenborough, whose death took place last Friday at the ripe age of eighty-two, will long be remembered in connection with one of the most critical periods of English rule in India. When, in the winter of 1841, he gave up his lately won seat in the Board of Control, to replace Lord Auckland at the head of the Indian Government India was already reaping the fatal fruits of Lord Broughton's stupidly aggressive policy in Afghanistan. Before he landed in Calcutta the whole country had heard of the slaughter of a British-Indian army amidst the snows of the Koord Kabul, with the exception of a few prisoners who with their wives remained in the treacherous Afghan clutches. A bewildered Governor-General and a despondent Commander-in-Chief were hampering the efforts of men like Clerk and Robertson to hasten the despatch of timely succours to the beleaguered garrisons of Kandahar and Jellalabad. Happily the command of a relieving force was entrusted to the able soldiership of General Pollock; but the timid councils which then reigned in Calcutta guided the first movements of the new Viceroy. Lord Ellenborough's one desire was to withdraw the brigades of Sale and Nott from Afghanistan, without any attempt to wreak signal vengeance for the disasters of Kabul. He spoke at first indeed of inflicting "some signal and decisive blow upon the Afghans," but a nearer approach to the Sutlej soon cooled the warmth of his language, and on the 19th April he issued the memorable order for the early retirement of Nott and Pollock from Afghanistan. To the lasting honour of those officers, their persistent efforts to point out the ruinous folly of such a course, which included the abandonment of English prisoners to their fate, were at length rewarded by a carefully hedged permission to retire by way of Kabul and Ghazni. How brilliantly they and their few thousand soldiers carried out the permission, Sir John Kaye's graphic pages have long since shown. From Kandahar and Jellalabad the rival columns pushed their way to the common goal at Kabul, leaving at Kandahar, Ghazni, Tazeen, Jugdulluk, Istaliff, Charikar, plain marks of English prowess and English revenge for past insults. In good time the rescue of Lady Sale and her fellow-prisoners was duly accomplished; and at length the two armies set out from Kabul on their triumphant march back to Peshawar, by the light of the flames that destroyed the great Bazaar where an Afghan mob had once gloated over the mangled corpse of Sir W. Macnaghten.

It was not in Lord Ellenborough's nature to refrain from loud crowing over successes won in the teeth almost of his own injunctions. In swelling language worthy of an Eastern scribe he proclaimed the new era of peace assured by the reascendency of British arms, exulted in the vengeance taken in one short campaign for disasters "unparalleled in their extent except by the errors in which they originated," and announced the triumphant return to India of the Gates of Somnath from Afghanistan. "The insult of eight hundred years is avenged," he wrote: "the despoiled tomb of Mahmood looks on the ruins of Ghazni." The princes and chiefs of Sirhind, Rajwarra, Malwa, and Guzerat, were bidden to forward "the gates of sandal-wood to the restored temple of Somnath," as if such a temple or such gates still existed, and as if a Mohammedan prince would be eager to restore a trophy of Mohammedan conquest to a Hindu shrine. After all this bombast the gates, which were to be conveyed in all pomp to Somnath in charge of an officer specially paid for the occasion, never got beyond a lumber-room in the fort of Agra. In the splendid pageant devised by Lord Ellenborough at Ferozepore, in honour of the victorious troops returning home from Afghanistan, the much wronged Dost Mohammed and his fellow-prisoners were intended to figure somewhat in the fashion of captives in a Roman triumph; but this part of the performance had to be waived in deference to the general outcry.

In less than six months after ordering a medal to be struck in memory of "Pax Asiæ restituta," as if Asia and India were synonymous, Lord Ellenborough had proclaimed the absorption of all Sindh into British India. The brilliant victories of Meeance and Hydrabad lent a fleeting lustre to perhaps the worst piece of injustice ever perpetrated by English rulers in India. Lord Ellenborough must share with Sir Charles Napier the glory of having bullied a few helpless, despairing princes into acts which offered the faintest shadow of an excuse for the robbery and insults they underwent at their neighbour's hands. If Napier himself sinned with his eyes open, the Governor-General cannot be acquitted of readiness to profit by the wrong he saw done. A few months later his quarrel with the rulers of Gwalior had to be settled by the hard-fought battle of Maharajpore. This time at any rate Lord Ellenborough had a greater show of justice on his side, and the minute which recorded his reasons for an appeal to arms may be ranked among the ablest of Indian State papers. But for the steps he then took to break up the growing military strength of Gwalior, British India might have had to deal with two enemies instead of one when the Sikhs two years later crossed the Sutlej to begin the fierce struggle which ended only at Goojrat.

By this time however the Court of Directors thought they had had enough of a fighting Viceroy, who found little time to spare for peaceful legislation, who favoured the army at the expense of the Civil Service, and wrote home insolent despatches to his lawful masters. The one great measure of his reign, the extinction of slavery, was carried through mainly by the Vice-President of his Council, Mr. Wilberforce Bird. His recall by the Directors, in defiance of Sir R. Peel's Government, deprived India of an able, upright, hardworking, but wayward, hotheaded, and rather dangerous ruler, who had much more in him of the soldier than the statesman, who had made himself a terror to the native princes, and whose rashness might any moment have entangled him in some new war.

For nearly the whole remainder of his life Lord Ellenborough's relation to India was that of an independent critic who spoke, if not always wisely, yet with all the point and passion of an orator unmatched in a House containing the late Lord Derby. Once only, in 1858, he took his old seat on the Board of Control, the seat he first filled under Wellington in 1828, and again for a few weeks under Peel in 1834. Once more however his want of discretion soon cut short his official career. The stinging despatch in which he censured Lord Canning for disinheriting, with a stroke of his pen, the rebellious Talookdars of Oudh was still on its way to Allahabad, when its contents were published in this country. For this act of spiteful indiscretion Lord Derby's Government was assailed with so much fury by its political opponents, that Lord Ellenborough had to save his colleagues by sacrificing himself. Thenceforth his lordship, already verging on seventy, took no official part in Indian affairs. His own India Bill came to naught; but his scornful eloquence helped to modify more than one clause in the Bill which, under Lord Stanley's guidance, swept away the rule of the East India Company, and secured the virtual triumph of the competitive principle throughout every branch of the old Indian services.

Correspondence.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—The Delhi Female Medical Mission was set on foot some four or five years ago by some ladies and gentlemen at Brighton, for the purpose of providing a dispensary and female medical attendance for the native women and children in Delhi, in connection with the mission of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in that city. Funds were collected by ladies' associations at Brighton, Tunbridge Wells, Oxford, Maidenhead, and East Teignmouth, and the committee commenced operations by sending out a lady duly qualified to Delhi. From failure of health and other causes this lady resigned her office, and was succeeded by Mrs. Littler, the widow of an engineer who had formerly spent several years in India, and who offered herself for the post. After studying midwifery at the British Lying-in-Hospital in Endell-street, and receiving further training at a general hospital and also at one for sick children, Mrs. Littler left for Delhi on the 1st of October, 1870.

The accounts which the trustees have received of Mrs. Littler have been very encouraging. She commenced work on the 20th of December, and on the 13th of March she reported that she had made 313 professional visits to zenanas, and had treated 158 cases at the dispensary. In a subsequent letter written in September of this year, she states that she had since the date of her last letter paid on the average seventeen visits a day to zenanas to treat severe cases in which the patients were unable to come to the dispensary, besides treating on the average thirty patients per day at the dispensary. Her work and consequently her sphere of usefulness was increasing daily.

Mrs. Littler clearly possesses one great qualification for her work—viz., enthusiasm, and from the little details she gives descriptive of her daily life, and her frequent visits on errands of mercy and compassion to the bed-ridden and afflicted in the zenanas of Delhi, in addition to the number of cases treated at the dispensary, she has clearly gained the confidence and attachment of the people among whom she labours.

The Delhi Female Medical Mission has been supported latterly by funds collected by the exertions of the committee and their friends. It is much in need of further aid, and I venture to solicit the favour of a place in your columns for this appeal, in the hope that those who are interested in India will now come forward and aid in a work so eminently calculated to do real good. Their aid is not asked in support of an untried institution, whose success is problematical, for the Delhi Female Medical Mission has passed from the reign of experiments to the condition of ensured success. But it much wants funds to extend its sphere of usefulness.

Further information may be obtained from T. B. Winter, Esq., 28, Montpelier-road, Brighton, Treasurer, or from either of the trustees, the Rev. G. H. Hodson, the Vicarage, Enfield, N.; W. Fairlie Clarke, Esq., F.R.C.S., 1, Curzon-street, Mayfair, or from myself. Subscriptions will be received by the Manager of the Delhi and London Bank, 76, King William-street, E.C.—

Yours faithfully,

I. T. Prichard.

INDIAN APPEALS, DECEMBER 22.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In one of the articles in the Times of to-day, remarks are made on two judgments; one by Lord Chancellor O'Hagan, and the other by the Privy Council on an Indian appeal case.

I venture to urge that a law should be enacted, to be in force both in Ireland and in India, defining the ages on reaching which boys and girls may choose a religion for themselves.

In India all sorts of extraordinary decrees have been passed for want of a precise law. On one occasion a Supreme Court refused to interfere to restore a young child to his Hindoo legal guardians; but the usual ground of judgment has been the supposed intelligence of the child.

1st. With reference to refusals to interfere, I hold that such timid judgments are in fact invitations to have recourse to brute force. But the first principle of our government in India is, never to permit religious riots of any kind.

2nd. With reference to the fancied intelligence of children on religious subjects, no Judge should ever be allowed to enforce his individual opinion on such points. Judges should be bound by law to issue their decrees founded on the child's age, and not on his supposed intelligence. Fourteen appears to be the age in India when boys and girls may be allowed to choose their own religion. Previous to that age they are under the care of their natural guardians.

It is easy to argue, Why should not an intelligent young Hindoo of thirteen be allowed to embrace Christianity? What would we say if young Christians of twelve or thirteen years were to be enticed away from their homes and converted to Mohamedanism?

No judge can be depended on to be impartial on questions of religion. If he be a religious man, his ideas of intelligent children will be those who admire his religion. If he be irreligious he will be swayed by the popular cries.

Lord O'Hagan should not have decided on the question of the intelligence of the boy of thirteen, but should have declared who were his natural and legal guardians; the Privy Council should have decided the same question regarding the girl in India. The question to be answered in the Meerut case was, Had the deceased father appointed the girl's mother to be her guardian? If so, had the mother forfeited the guardianship by her bigamous marriage?

A magistrate's judgment in Goureeshunker's case in 1851, ruling that a child must be considered to be under the guardianship of his parents or their representatives till he reaches the age of fourteen, greatly strengthened that magistrate's hands during the Mutiny.—Your obedient servant, T.

YARKAND.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—There appeared in the Times of the 5th September last a letter headed "Yarkand," and signed "Henry Torrens, Colonel 23rd Welsh Fusiliers," in which the writer said he had read, with much interest and also with much disappointment, in the same paper of the 31st August, an article headed "Forsyth's Mission to Yarkund," gathering from its tenor that "the Government of India is content that our communications, both political and commercial, with Yarkand and China should still filter through Kashmere by a round-about route; in other words, that our commerce should be subject to the exaction of perhaps the most grasping and obstructive government in the world," and our policy to the good pleasure of a narrow-minded Maharaja.

Further on, Colonel Torrens write that it is, of course, possible much may have been done since 1862, when he travelled in that part of the world, but that the impression left on his mind, by the notice of Mr. Forsyth's Mission, was, amongst others, "that the Maharajah of Kashmere still enjoyed the monopoly of the China overland trade, and that nothing had been done by the Government of India to facilitate the transit of merchandise from Yarkand and the wool-producing countries of China, by routes not subject to the enormous way-duties levied by the Government of Kashmere."

I am certain your sense of justice and impartiality will permit my refuting these sweeping and unfounded accusations in your columns, especially devoted as they are to Indian matters, and only regret that, not having seen Colonel Torrens's letter till very lately, I was not sooner in a position to remark on it.

It is both the fashion in England and in India to impute all sorts of crimes and misdemeanours to the Maharajah of Kashmere. The range is extensive, and embraces the murder of Mr. Hayward and Mr. Thorpe, oppression in its most revolting forms, and extortions of all kinds, of which that dwelt on by Colonel Torrens is but a small part; and although all the accusations brought against the Maharajah have been disproved over and over again, they are repeated and reproduced under various guises in the apparent hope that they may ultimately secure belief by those not acquainted with the facts of the several cases brought forward from time to time to blacken the Maharaja's character.

When an officer of Colonel Torrens's rank and standing ventures into print, especially in the columns of an influential journal, he should take some trouble to make himself acquainted with the accuracy of his alleged facts, and it is not because he travelled in Kashmere and Ladakh in 1862, and published a sketchy narrative of his journey, that he is, in 1871, in a position to pronounce on the present state of our relations with that country.

I also read, with much attention, the abstract of Mr. Forsyth's narrative of his journey to Yarkand. I read, with similar care, the original document in extenso, and I was not a little surprised to find, on reperusal, and after what Colonel Torrens writes, that these papers do not contain one word that can warrant his assertion that our relations with Yarkand and China do still filter through Kashmere, "in other words, that our commerce should be subject to the extortions of perhaps the most grasping and obstructive Government in the world."

Laying aside the fact that Mr. Forsyth and his numerous party were aided and assisted in his arduous undertaking by "the good pleasure of a narrow-minded Maharajah," that, in fact, Mr. Forsyth could not have proceeded on his journey at all without his Highness's aid and assistance, I think it will rather surprise you and all whom it may concern, to learn that it is more than two years since the Maharajah of Kashmere, at the suggestion of the British Government, totally abolished ALL transit duties on goods passing from Leh to the plains of the Punjab through Kashmere; while it is notorious to all those acquainted with that part of the country that Kashmere offers, at present, a much better and more direct route for the transit of goods, once arrived at Leh, than any other; while it is equally well known that there is, geographically, though at present not politically, a still better and more direct line of communication between Yarkand and the Punjab than via Leh, which has been explored more than once, and latterly with much success by one of Mr. Forsyth's own attendants, whose "highly interesting" narrative that gentleman promised to communicate to his Government as soon as it might be translated. But the promise appears still unfulfilled.

Might I suggest to the distinguished President of the Royal Geographical Society, Sir Henry Rawlinson, the advisability of obtaining this paper for publication in the Transactions of his Society. The line I allude to is far superior to any of those spoken of by Colonel Torrens, who will, I trust, acknowledge the error he has fallen into, and not again hastily make assertions and draw inferences which a moment's consideration and careful inquiry would have shown him to be groundless.

London, Dec. 15, 1871. * * * * *

P.S.—Since writing the above I have seen an Indian letter, in which the writer gives an abstract of the narrative of the travels, along the very line of country by which Yarkand and Eastern Turkestan can be most easily reached, of one of Major Montgomerie's native agents in search of geographical information in Central Asia. It is by the Chitral Valley that trade between Yarkand and the Punjab will find its natural way when our relations with Afghanistan become sufficiently intimate to admit of its being used. Till then the Kashmere is the proper route, especially since its ruler has so liberally conceded absolute remission of all transit duties on merchandise; while all attempts to force trade through Lahoul and Kooloo, to bolster up the establishment of a mart in a remote corner of the Kangra Valley, viceregal visits and countenance notwithstanding, will be simply thrown away. Trade, like water, will find its own course and its own level. Not a single Yarkandee had arrived at Palampore this year when the Viceroy was there, though it was said some Kafilas were on the way!

CHRISTMAS IN INDIA.

Now let the song of joy arise, for once again is here
The festival of festivals—the jocund time of year!
The time when friends are flocking from every side to share
The cordial Christmas greeting, and the dainty Christmas fare;
When grave old folks grow young again, in honour of the day,
And join the gleesome children in their artless merry play;
When the matron looks around her, with a deeper-soul'd delight,
And maids find lovers' smiles more sweet, and lovers' eyes more bright!
When, though the wind be keen without, and fast the snow may fall,
The crackling log and roaring blaze give warmth within the hall.
And, if the shivering mendicant should seek the friendly door,
He'll find the heartier welcome because he's old and poor;

Hail to the song, the game, the dance! hail to the happy jest,
That sets the jovial joker a-laughing with the rest!
Now, under holly branches, and boughs of mistletoe,
Our romping band of boys and girls in guileless mirth shall go;
Now frowns shall be all banished, and cares shall pass away—
For what have cares and what have frowns to do with Christmas-day?
And as the cold long nights draw on, a circle round the fire
Shall list to fine old stories from some beloved grandsire—
Stories of bold adventure in lands beyond the sea—
Of perils strange and wild, which all but heroes wish to flee—
Of chase, and fight, and rescue—of voyage, and storm, and wreck—
Of life on desert island, in ocean like a speck!
And awful tales shall, too, be told of goblin and of ghost,
That scare the midnight watcher upon his lonely post.
And when faint hearts grow frightened, and manifest their dread,
The signal straightway shall be given—to bed! good folks, to bed!

* * * * * *

Alas! 'tis but a pleasant dream—this glimpse of Christmas joys;
We look in vain for Wintry skies, and ice, and sleet, and snow—
We seek in vain the huge log fire, with bright and genial glow;
Here fervent is the noon-tide heat, the hills and trees are green,
And nature wears the same bright smile that decks a summer scene.
Through sunny streets, in various dress, the dusky thousands crowd,
Some hurrying silent onward, some talking fast and loud—
The Moslem sleek, the stout Parsee, the shrewd Hindoo, are there—
The squalid son of Portugal, and Jew with children fair!
There walks a keen Mahratta; there stands an Affghan tall;
And there a wild-eyed Faqueer is crouching 'gainst a wall;
By yonder well a laughing group of Eastern women stand,
The new-filled chatty on the ground, the lotah in the hand,
Admire you not the symmetry their graceful forms display,
Draped in those silks of fabric thin, and colours bright and gay?

* * * * * *

At eve, full soon the darkness comes (for twilight never reigns,
For longing lovers' fond behoof, o'er India's arid plains);
And, for an hour or more, ere yet the moon's bright face appears,
The bats fly forth, the fire-flies shine, the crickets stun the ears,
The chumpa and the mogree perfume the grateful air
That cools the languid lady's cheek and fans her bosom fair.
The story-teller chaunts his tale—it is no legend rare
Of bold Crusader, frightsome ghost, or maid with golden hair.
The sound of voices swell the breeze—some girls are blithely singing,
But 'tis no joyful carol, now that in the car is ringing.
And, lo! a marriage gathering, with music's deafening sound,
And horses decked with silver, and people dancing round;
The bride and bridegroom, children both, sit quietly as they go,
And stare with large blue eyes upon the merriment below.

* * * * * * *

Friends cluster not around us, as in that cheerful time
When we spent our Christmas holiday in our own native clime.
Where are the snow-white locks of age, where is the reverend brow?
Where are the dim, yet loving eyes?—they are not with us now!
Where are the rosy cheeks of youth—the happy, laughing faces?
So guileless in their mirthfulness—so artless in their graces!
Alas! 'tis seldom old or young may share our Indian lot,
For frames grow weak, and faces pale, e'en in the fairest spot;
And, if we'd see dear lives prolonged, and youth gain strength and bloom,
We must not make them exiles, too, from England and from home.

* * * * * *

There's nothing to remind us of the season or the day,
But memory faintly may restore what Time hath torn away;
Can we not speak, and think, and dream of joys that once we knew,
When life was in its morning, and every friend seemed true—
When Age seemed always reverend, and Youth seemed always pure,
And happiness, once grasped, appeared as 'twould for aye endure;
When Hope spread out bright pinions, and bore the soul aloft,
Or nestled it, in sweeter bliss, upon some bosom soft;
When we could welcome Christmas without a sigh or tear—
The Festival of Festivals—the jocund time of year.

ENGLISH COLONIES IN THE HILLS.

The Pioneer holds that colonisation in the hills will require for its due development a liberal expenditure on the part of the Government in the construction of roads from point to point, and in some instances, where the water supply is deficient, likewise of conduits. In addition to the slopes and terraces of the Himalaya, there exist here and there flat-topped ridges heavily clothed with timber, possessed of a fertile soil; these, though of no great breadth, sometimes extend in length for miles, and from their elevation afford most healthy sites for settlement; but devoid, as they commonly are, of water, the aid of expensive machinery would be necessary to render them tenable. The lower slopes and terraces are generally better provided with this necessary of life, which is often conducted to the required spot in channels from the fountain-head of some mountain rivulet issuing at a higher level. The natives are very expert in the construction of these aqueducts, and aided in their levels by the natural flow of water, will carry them, if need be, for miles along the mountain-side at an almost imperceptible gradient; a little periodical repair suffices to maintain them in a constant state of efficiency, and as the discharge in this class of conduits scarcely exceeds a cubic foot a second, no damage ensues from scour. Another and larger class of channels occur only at the lower levels in the warm valleys; they run along the course of mountain streams; from which they take their rise, and serve to irrigate the ricefields which stretch along the margin, or to supply a motive power to the mills of simple construction in use throughout the hills. Pecuniary assistance would, moreover, in some cases be needed for the proper establishment of colonists from the mountains of Wales and Scotland (these being the classes best fitted for such occupation), who would doubtless, with judicious aid, thrive on the hills, and obtain for their surplus produce an adequate market. The Highlander would find in the ranges of our North-western barrier much to recall the memory of his native wilds and make him take root more kindly in his adopted home. It would decidedly be considered a preferable measure to supply such colonisation from the class of small farmers in the Highlands of Britain as just stated rather than to take our material from the English army in India, for soldiers, it must be admitted, are not, as a rule, calculated to pursue successfully a persevering course of frugal industry, nor would it be possible to find in the ranks an adequate number of men possessed of a competent knowledge of agriculture; while to such a course, were it practicable, would attach the serious objection that the strength of our Indian forces would thereby be most unduly drawn upon. This point being settled, it would, in the first place, be necessary to ascertain the exact degree of inducement to be held out to intending immigrants, by which their influx in due numbers might be secured. These terms should include the offer to each of a sufficiency of culturable land, with water supply, ready cleared for tillage. On each holding thus prepared a suitable dwelling should be raised, stocked with all those household goods and implements which surrounded the colonist at home, and supplied additionally with stores of food of that kind and quality, with live stock, to which the intended incumbent was accustomed, in quantity sufficient to subsist him and his family until the land should begin to yield a return for his labours. These homesteads should be offered publicly on a lease of such duration as might be considered most suitable, at the lowest rates which Government could afford. But to enable the authorities clearly and confidently to set forth the various advantages to be secured by an emigration to the Himalayas, it would be advisable in the first instance to establish, as an experimental measure, a model colony, of limited numbers, entirely sustained by the Government, under the supervision of a duly qualified inspector drawn from the district which supplied the colonists. These communities should from the very outset be self-supporting. Matters in general being brought to the state to which the emigrant had hitherto been accustomed, he would, after his short sea-voyage and rapid journey up-country, be enabled, in all its main features, to resume the daily tenor of a life to which he had been trained from his youth up. As these colonies grew in numbers, and the lapse of time brought with it an extension of our railway system to the foot of the hills at numerous points, and good roads thence to the various sites of settlement, an outlet would be afforded for surplus produce, of which no small part might be composed of the various English fruits brought to a higher degree of culture than has yet been generally attained in India, and in the cultivation of which natives could scarcely be expected to compete. As their numbers increased, a steady expanding muster-roll of able-bodied males would be afforded for the defence of their own house and the surrounding district, and in case of extremity or foreign invasion, a numerous and reliable reserve for purposes of general defence. To reduce these colonies to a state of military discipline would obviously be injudicious; any attempt in that direction should rather be confined to the fostering of a martial spirit, and the general use of, and skill in, the rifle, with which latter object prizes might be offered for annual competition. All encouragement and assistance might likewise be afforded in the formation of volunteer corps on such a basis as might meet with general approval.

LEGISLATING IN THE DARK AT SIMLA.

The Bombay Gazette observes that people whose unhappy lot it is to pay taxes in India owe a debt of gratitude to Lord Napier of Magdala for supporting Mr. Cockerell's protest against the objectionable clauses of that Punjab Canal and Drainage Bill which has been pushed with most unseemly haste through all its stages in the Legislative Council at Simla, and is now part of the law of the land. The new Act gives power to officials in the Punjab, first to employ forced labour in constructing canals, and then to levy a special water rate on all lands, which in their opinion might be irrigated to advantage by means of these canals, whether the owners and occupiers of the lands use the water or not. The principal champion of the Bill in the Legislative Council was of course Mr. John Strachey, a civil servant who seems to have been created for the purpose of illustrating the saying that a first-class revenue officer is the curse of the country; for this zealous official is himself equal to a whole army of Wahabi missionaries in the power of exciting popular disaffection to the British rule. If any province deserves well of the English Government of India it is the Punjab, which was "among the faithless faithful only found" in 1857, and which enabled John Lawrence to send down to Delhi the troops without whose aid we should never have conquered Hindostan. If, too, we are above being moved by a sense of gratitude, there have been of late ominous rumours of growing discontent among the Sikhs which would have made statesmen, conscious how precarious our tenure of power always is in this country, pause before carrying out hated improvements at the cost of increasing the number of malcontents in the Punjab. What addition to the land revenue can possibly compensate for the popular irritation sure to be caused by the impressment of labour and the levying of a water rate on any lands which in the opinion of an official ought to be irrigated with canal water? The Governor-General, while defending the principle of a compulsory water rate, owned that the Punjab Bill was one which he would not care to see made applicable to all India, but contended that it should be passed because the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab and other "officials of experience and authority" approved of it. Unfortunately, there are a great many very foolish officials in high places in India at this moment; and, if the Legislative Council is to travel about the country to sanction in each province what the officials approve of, we shall soon have an unrivalled crop of Legislative absurdities. But the important speech of the Commander-in-Chief proves that there is still one eminent official who has a grain or two of statesmanship in his composition. Lord Napier knows the Punjab well, and he announced in the most emphatic language his dislike to the policy of the Bill. "I wish to state at once," he said, "since his Excellency the President has expressed his approval of the sections relating to the compulsory rate on irrigable lands, that I am forced to regard them with the utmost regret, and that I sympathise with the opinions expressed by the Hon. Mr. Cockerell." In face of this solemn warning, Lord Mayo, Mr. Strachey, and Mr. Ellis insisted on gratifying the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab's wish for a new law, which, under the pretence of permanently enriching the country, will add fresh burdens to the load of the already over-taxed agricultural population.

The Brahmo Marriage Bill.—At the meeting of the Brahmo Somaj, held on Nov. 18, nearly two hundred gentlemen were present, and a committee was appointed, consisting of the following gentlemen, to take into consideration the various objections which have been advanced against the present Marriage Bill, and to suggest such amendments as may be needed:—Baboos Shib Chunder Deb, Keshub Chunder Sen, Durga Mohun Dass, Canny Lall Pyne, Protap Chunder Mozoomder, and Bijai Krishna Goswami. Mr. Vaman Abaji Modak supported the Bill on behalf of the Prarthana Somaj at Bombay. He also urged on the meeting the necessity of sending Brahmo missionaries to the Western Presidency.

Snake-Bites and their Cure.—We take the following from the Englishman:—"Sir,—I read this morning with great interest your quotation from the Indian Medical Gazette. The result of the admirable experiments of Doctors Fayrer and Ewart (for which they deserve the gratitude not only of the people of India, but of all the peoples in the world) is not a cheerful one, and will make us all very much on the qui vive in the propinquity of snakes. But I wish to suggest that we ought not to despair of a remedy, because, though we are all very clever in India, yet there are a few clever people in other parts of the world, where snakes do congregate, equally fatal, as the cobra or the krait. I allude to the rattlesnake of America. Well, one day, when I was going up the Mississipi from New Orleans in one of the floating hotels of that wonderful stream, we stopped to get wood for the engine-fires close to a plantation in the State of Indiana, and, as it fortunately happened that we were delayed some hours, I had time to pay a planter a visit. He was living in a large log hut, comfortably furnished with the London and New York magazines, journals, &c. He welcomed me with that easy gentle kindness natural to the Southerner, and I asked him if his plantation was well-off for snakes. 'I guess we are,' said he; 'I've had two of my niggers this morning bitten by rattlesnakes, and they are progressing favourably.' I asked, 'What do you do?' He said, 'I give the men half a tumbler of Monongehela whisky with a teaspoonful of Cayenne pepper every five minutes or oftener until they rain perspiration like a winning horse.' 'What do you do to the wound?' said I. 'I just scoop out the bitten part with a razor or the blade of a sharp knife; then I wash the wound with tincture of arnica, clap on a piece of lint saturated with it over the wound, and bind it up with a plaintain-leaf. This is the first part of the unpleasant arrangement. We keep on trotting him about after a nip or two of the Cayenne mixture; and sometimes I have given negroes as much as a gallon of whisky in twenty-four hours, and they survived both the effects of the bite and the whisky as a rule, and when better, I feed them on milk fresh from the buffalo.' I believe this plan is the best, because I afterwards read a work by the celebrated Dr. Rush of Philadelphia, that this was the only treatment to be relied on in cases of poisoning by snakes.—William Durrant, M.D., &c., 72, Dhurrumtollah."

Bengal.

THE MOHAMMEDANS OF EASTERN BENGAL.

It can hardly be said that the Mohammedans of Eastern Bengal have gained either intellectually or morally by their conversion. Fanaticism is here united with violence, litigiousness, and vice. The Spectator seemed, the other day, to contemplate with much equanimity the spread of Islam throughout India, and Eastern Asia. But it seems to us that the type of men which the Kuran develops, in Lower Bengal at any rate, is not such as any one who wishes well to humanity could wish to see extended. Some time ago we came across an admirable report on the district of Backarganj, drawn up by the then magistrate, which gives a picture of Mussulman life in Eastern Bengal very different from that which the writer of the Spectator's article shadows forth. The report was printed in 1868 and describes the state of affairs in that year. We extract from it a couple of paragraphs:—

"The Mussulmans are almost the worst type of their creed, steeped in ignorance and prejudices, very litigious, grossly immoral, and most easily excited. There is scarcely a district in Bengal where life is held so cheap; murders are committed on the least provocation. The Farazis, the Puritans of Mohammedanism, abound in great numbers, especially in the south of the district. They are, as a rule, very troublesome and litigious. A Farazi may be distinguished from any other Mussulman by two characteristics,—one external and the other moral. He dresses differently from other Mussulmans and wraps his dhoti or chadar round his body without crossing it between his legs, from his aversion to anything approaching to the Firinghi's trousers. He may also be easily distinguished by his love of litigation, and by his uncompromising love of falsehood. The hardest swearers in our courts are Farazis. There is nothing remarkable or strikingly attractive in the features of the Mussulman population; their dress approximates more nearly to the Hindu style than that of the Mohammedans of other districts. In the chapkans or outer dress, the cutting on the left side to distinguish it from the Hindu chapkan, which is cut on the right side, is uniformly observed here as elsewhere in Bengal.

"One striking fact may be noticed with regard to the Mussulmans to show the effects of local prejudice. In Tipperah, a Mussulman bearer is not to be had for love or money. To dress a Sahib, or to pull his punkah, is looked upon as deadly sin. Not so, however, in Backarganj. The punkah pullers in the courts or in private houses are almost entirely Mussulmans, and they are not above doing bearers' work. Owing to the infinitesimal subdivision of landed tenures, almost every ryot here is a peasant proprietor. With scarcely a single exception, every peon in the court, every servant in private houses, who is a resident of the district, is a small landholder. It is for this reason, among others, that labour is very scarce in Barisal; a professional cooly is unknown; a stranger arriving at Barisal by the steamer would be in a sad plight for landing his traps but for the assistance of the steamer's lascars. During the harvest season, when the few available labouring men in the station are snapped up by the small landholders in the neighbourhood, the price of labour rises to eight annas per diem. This happens, unfortunately, during the cold season, when the district officers are anxious to be out in camp, and when Mussulman boatmen sometimes cannot be had at any price. It has been said before that every ryot in Backarganj paddles his own canoe. This will explain why, in some respects, the Backarganj men are not equal to the same amount of physical exertion of a particular kind as the natives of dryer districts. Here the ryots are quite unused to walking; they could never take the long marches of which a native of Behar would think nothing; but then, for physical exertions of another kind, the Backarganj ryot has scarcely an equal. No Behar ryot, for instance, could hold out for one rainy season if he had to sow and reap his crop himself up to his waist in water. No men again are so good, after the Mughs, as the Backarganj ryots for clearing and settling in Sundarban tracts. This fact is so well-known that Backarganj settlers for the Sundarbans are at a high premium. Boat loads of Backarganj men may be seen in the cold season going south towards the Sundarbans. There are generally men who, from a love of adventure, or suffering from a res angusta domi, go down south for a few seasons to better their condition; if they get sufficiently favourable terms, they not unfrequently settle down for good in the Sundarbans, and develop into petty proprietors or tenure holders."

We commend these sentences to those who look for the regeneration of India by means of the spread of Islam.—Englishman.

INDIAN TEA.

It is a curious fact that if tea is sent home privately from this country to England it is greatly appreciated, and the people who taste it are all ready to become purchasers of "Indian tea," but when they go into the market they cannot obtain anything like what has been sent home, and after a few vain efforts return to the old mixture. If you ask the grocers they condemn Indian teas; at the best, they say, it is only fit to be mixed with the other sorts to give a flavour, being of itself too strong. In the interest of the tea planters out here, we have done our best to ascertain the cause of so much of their tea remaining a drug in the market, and have come to the conclusion that they require a representative in the London market. There are vested interests in the China tea trade which form a very serious obstacle to the sufficient sale of Indian tea, and a raid on the London tea brokers and grocers must be made to give Indian tea a fair chance. It is impossible that with fair dealing India can remain behind China, which is now sending far more rubbish than good tea to England, and it is this rubbish, which is flavoured with Indian tea, that prevents Indian tea being sold in its place.

But we are sorry to say that a great deal of indifferent Indian tea also finds its way into the English market and injures the whole trade to an extent that may well be considered. Until the trade is set on a substantial footing, none but bona fide teas should be sent to England, and the market less forced than it is at present. In this way, with a few years judicious management, there would be an ample reward for the temporary self-denial. The planters must join hands and set to work with a will to obtain a fair market for their productions in London itself, and take the pains to show the English public that for the same price they are paying for China rubbish flavoured with Indian tea, they may obtain wholesome tea altogether Indian. But at the same time we think that the Duke of Argyll may well lend a helping hand with the Board of Trade and induce them to put a stop to the importation of the Chinese rubbish which has been proved to be coming every year more abundantly to London. The India-office might in many ways encourage the sale of Indian tea, and probably the most practical way of bringing it before his Grace would be to send a waggon load of samples to Inverary and Argyll Lodge, so that the Duke may realise how much capital is waiting a return, and of what vast importance the tea interests are, and also how much they are left in the cold by the Indian Government. But in Calcutta and Bombay more could be done, for it seems absurd that a single pound of Chinese tea should be consumed in either of the local capitals. Surely the whole of India should at least drink one or other kind of Indian tea, and are only prevented from doing so by prejudice which can and ought to be overcome. The price has, perhaps, something to do with it.

A great deal more tea would be consumed in India itself if the tea was sold cheaper, and surely it could be so, looking at the price for which it sells in London. Many more boxes would find their way to England from friends in India if the price were reduced. It seems absurd to pay three and four shillings a pound for tea, which is grown by your next-door neighbour, when that is the price you could buy it at in England. And talking about boxes to England, why do not those enterprising firms in Calcutta and Bombay who make up boxes of hot pickles and curry powder to send home add to their selection a tin of Indian tea. It would be quite as much appreciated by people at home as tamarinds or mango fish roes, and probably serve a better purpose. Let the tea planters induce them to make the alteration and encourage the taste for Indian tea throughout England, for it only wants to be known to be thoroughly appreciated.—Delhi Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

Colonel Dickens.—It is said that Colonel A. D. Dickens, C.B., Deputy Commissary General, Bengal, intends to proceed to England on leave by the beginning of February next.

News from the Front.—A telegram, dated Mynadhur, Nov. 30, 5.20 P.M., states:—"The camp office with Loshai field force opens here to-day; distance from Cachar, forty miles."

Commissariat.—A Circular has been issued by the Commissary General, Bengal, to the effect that all officers of the Commissariat Department who may return from England by the Bombay route are to await the orders of the Department at Allahabad.

Mr. Anstey at Calcutta.—We understand that Mr. Chisholm Anstey has arrived in this city to conduct the appeal case of Ameer Khan, which will be heard on Wednesday next before the Chief Justice, the Hon. Mr. Louis Jackson, and another judge, not yet named, at the Appellate High Court.—Indian Mirror, Nov. 27.

Accident to the Earl of Selkirk.—The Earl of Selkirk met with a rather ugly accident at Allahabad on the morning of the 27th November. He was riding with Sir W. Muir and the Misses Muir when his horse stumbled and fell, throwing the Earl heavily on his face and arm. The blow was a severe, but not a serious one. He was bruised about the forehead and the eye.

The Russians in Bokhara.—A letter from Peshawur says that the Russians have imposed four conditions on the Bokharians, namely—that cantonments for Russian troops be established at Chargo on the Oxus, a Russian and Bokharian officer having conjoint command; that Abdool Rahmon Khan be sent to the Khirghis country and pensioned by Bokhara; that a Russian Political Agent must be resident in Bokhara; and that the King of Bokhara must make firm allegiance with Russia and have no more dealings with the Ameer of Cabul.

Civil.—The Hon. Mr. Ashley Eden left Rangoon for Calcutta on Monday, Nov. 27.

The Distress at Jounpore.—A correspondent of the Pioneer, writing from Jounpore, says:—"I regret to say aid to relieve the poor sufferers is coming in very slow. If people only knew the disaster the flood has caused to the poor—thousands of them still exposed to sleep out in the heavy dew without a common straw shed over their heads, and no means left—they would willingly send their mite."

A Novel Marriage.—A remarkable marriage, according to the rites of the Brahmo Somaj, took place at Barahnagore, in the suburbs of Calcutta, on Nov. 11. The marriage was a widow marriage, an inter-marriage, and a Brahmo marriage at the same time. The bride-groom, Baboo Hera Lal Laha, is about thirty-five years of age, and the bride, Soudaminy, a widow lady of the Brahmin caste, is nearly thirty. They married by mutual consent. Such a marriage as this is a significant sign of the progress that the Brahmo Somaj is making every day.

Soldiers' Recreations.—Card-playing was during the past year permitted to be introduced into the various regimental recreation-rooms of the army. Some reports of the results of such introduction have been submitted to the Home authorities, but they seem to have been insufficient, and his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has requested the Commander-in-Chief in India to have further reports sent home. An order therefore appears calling upon commanding officers of every arm of the service to furnish such reports without delay.

Establishment of a Silk Factory.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says:—Messrs. Campbell and Co., the owners of the Sona Khan estate, intend establishing a silk factory at Seoreenarain in the Bilaspore district; Mr. W. Campbell has gone down for the purpose of starting the business. It is not, I think, generally known that silk in large quantities is procurable in that locality, where, I believe, there are about 1,500 houses of weavers and growers alone. There is no doubt but the establishment of a European agency will greatly tend to encourage the growers, through whom the Calcutta markets may now expect to be largely supplied with raw silk.

An Unexpected Illumination in Honour of the Viceroy.—At Lahore, while fire balloons were scudding about by the hundred on Saturday evening, one of them it is supposed dropped on a store of charcoal at the railway station. From whatever cause, several thousand maunds of that fuel took fire, and in spite of all efforts for extinction, the fire raged without intermission until Monday afternoon, entirely destroying at least two locomotives and tenders. Surely it was thoughtless to store charcoal in the open, so close to the line, where a spark from a passing engine might at any time have led to the destruction of property which the company has now to bewail. The loss cannot be far short of £10,000.—Indian Public Opinion.

Judicial Dignity.—The Englishman asks:—Have the sheristadars waxed fat and haughty, that the High Court has been obliged to publish a circular, directing that they should be kept in their proper places? Some judges, says the circular, sit in Court with their sheristadars in attendance, which "tends to give an erroneous impression of the position and influence of the sheristadar." By his attendance in Court "the office, the subordinate amlah, and the details of business lose almost entirely the benefit of his presumably superior capacity and experience." The "employment of the sheristadar on the bench" is accordingly forbidden, and he is relegated to his proper place, the sheristah, for the management of which he is more immediately responsible.

Medical.—Dr. F. W. Innes, C.B., will shortly be promoted to the rank of Inspector-General of Hospitals. Under instructions from her Majesty's Government it has been notified that an officer of the British Medical Service in India, who may be holding an administrative office tenable for five years, if compelled by ill health to return to England, can only receive from the Indian Government under which he is serving permission to return home for the purpose of appearing before a Medical Board in London. The leave which will be there granted to him on recommendation of such Medical Board will not exceed six months from the date of his departure from India, and if, on arrival in England, the state of his health is such as to render it unlikely that he will be fit to return to his duties within the above-mentioned period, he will be replaced by an efficient officer.

The Loshai Campaign.—The following is the liberal scale of rations allowed to the officers of the Loshai Expedition:—Daily ration of one officer—1 lb. of biscuit, 1 lb. of meat, 1 lb. of potatoes or carrots, 4 oz. of rice, 2½ oz. of sugar, 3-7th oz. of tea or 1 3-7 oz. of coffee, 1 oz. of salt only with fresh meat, 1 oz. of butter, 6 oz. of flour; 1 bottle of mustard per mess of 12 officers per week, 2 oz. of pepper do. do., 2 pints of vinegar do. do., 4½ lbs. of pickles do. do., 7 oz. of curry-powder do. do., 7 oz. of spice-powder do. do. Rum, low proof, 2 drams per diem, to be paid for at Rs. 2-8 per gallon. The same scale applies to Commissariat and Ordnance conductors, Telegraph signallers, &c., and the payment made by each officer is only eight annas per diem. The scale of rations for natives is per diem:—1 seer atta or rice, 1 chitacks dhal or ghee, ¼ do. salt.

THE CHOLERA AT LUCKNOW.—A portion of the garrison of Fort Muchechawun is now encamped on the opposite side of the river to the Chutter Munzil. The hospital tents adjoining, we believe, have some inmates, but the sickness is not of a dangerous type. The 1-17th Regiment, Cantonments, has a camp pitched near their own lines; the general health of the troops, however, may be pronounced satisfactory. No further European deaths are reported to us in the station, and we believe a decided change for the better has occurred in the public health. We hope that the cholera epidemic will shortly be entirely removed from both city and station, and that the remainder of the winter may be all we can desire. Cholera is abating in the city, and it is believed the average death-rate of the season will ere long not be exceeded very materially.—Lucknow Times.

THE CALCUTTA POLICE.—We sincerely hope that the rumoured reorganisation of the Calcutta police is true. Things cannot go on as they have of late, without causing chronic discontent to the public and grave disquiet to Government. The city has been disgraced by the incapacity and absolute imbecility which the police have displayed in their dealing with the case of Abdullah. At this moment there seems to be an almost certain clue to the assassin's connections, if Mr. Hogg could only follow it up. A student of the Madrassah College, Aman Shah by name, was known as an intimate friend and companion of Abdullah. He enjoyed a jagir, or maintenance, from a Muhammadan employé in the Home-office, and some time ago suddenly disappeared, it was supposed in company with Abdullah. Of course we raise not the faintest imputation against the assassin's friend; but it is of importance that if alive he should be traced, and if dead, that the fact of his so opportune decease should be placed beyond doubt.—Englishman.

THE ARRIVAL OF THE VICEROY.—His Excellency the Governor-General and suite arrived at the Presidency yesterday morning. He was received at the grand staircase by the civil and military officers in Calcutta and by a number of European and native gentlemen. A guard of honour, consisting of the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles, under Lieutenant-Colonel Walton, was drawn up in front of Government House, and gave his Excellency the customary Royal salute. From the parade state below:—Calcutta Volunteer Rifles, Parade State, Nov. 27, 1871. Present on parade: field officers, 3; captains, 6; lieutenants, 6; ensigns, 4; staff, 2; staff sergeants, 3; sergeants, 29; band, 20; drummers, 20; rank and file, 355; total strength, 418. Unavoidably absent: ensign, 1; staff, 1; sergeant, 1; rank and file, 134; total, 137; grand total, 585—it will be seen that this was the largest muster under arms which has yet taken place in the corps. Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Mayo went down the ranks, and afterwards expressed to Colonel Walton how gratified they were at witnessing such a turn out of the soldier-citizens of Calcutta. Indeed, the appearance of the men, their marching, and their steady front, would have borne comparison with any regular regiment. Colonel Walton and his company officers have certainly succeeded in creating an esprit de corps in the regiment which augurs well for its continued efficency. The appearance put in by our City Rifles yesterday morning ought to do much towards increasing the strength of the battalion, which now numbers nearly 600 in its ranks.—Englishman, Nov. 29.

A NATIVE PAPER ON MR. ROBERTS'S SUSPENSION.—"Mr. Roberts has been suspended." This news ran like wildfire through the length and breadth of the town, and there was not a citizen but regretted the circumstance. We were astounded at the announcement. In the absence of any explanation of the cause or causes which influenced his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor in taking this extreme step against a public servant of such tried ability and long standing as Mr. Roberts, the public have been indulging in curious surmises more or less in accord with the real state of facts. . . . . He has been upwards of, we believe, fourteen years in his judicial office, and in not a single instance has been found otherwise than a most conscientious and upright magistrate. Certainly he had his crotchets, but these were never allowed to seriously interfere with the due discharges of his duty to the satisfaction of all parties concerned. He is decidedly the most popular magistrate that ever sat in the Calcutta Police-court. We are really sorry that after faithfully serving Government for nearly a quarter of a century, he should be thus summarily dealt with and quietly shelved. Whatever may have weighed with his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor in this affair, we are certain that, considering the long and meritorious services which Mr. Roberts has rendered to the State, his Honour will not "give him over in his grey hairs." We have already known his Honour to be above cliquism or the factious spirit of a partizan, and, therefore, can confidently hope that when the question which has led to Mr. Roberts's suspension will have been sifted to the bottom, and considered in all its bearings with special reference to that gentleman's antecedents, his Honour will at once see the propriety of rendering to him such amende honourable as may appear to his Honour to be meet and proper. . . . . We think that we echo but the feeling of the public at large when we say that Mr. Roberts's suspension is looked upon as a general calamity, in which all classes of the community of Calcutta, both native and European, participate in an equal degree. It has cast the whole city in a gloom. This certainly is a significant fact, and we trust that his Honour will not overlook it in the final disposal of the case.—Indian Post.

MILITARY.—Colonel Lowe, C.B., 86th Regiment, is, it is said, about to retire from the service.—H.M.'s 55th have descended from Chukrata, leaving a few men to look after the place until H.M.'s 92nd from Jullundur go up. The 5th Bengal Cavalry were to march from Nowshera on 24th November, to be at Rawul Pindee on the 29th, and Jhelum on 6th Dec.—We (Indian Daily News) hear that Colonel Dickens, the Deputy Commissary General, having proceeded to join the camp of exercise, Colonel Sibley has been appointed to act temporarily in his place until the arrival from Bombay of Colonel Macbean, who is shortly expected at the Presidency.—We (Pioneer) regret to learn that cholera had appeared in the 96th Regiment, on escort duty with the Viceroy at Sonepur. Unless, however, we are misinformed, there had been some cases in the corps previously at Dinapur, so that the re-appearance of the disease at Sonepur cannot be charged against that locality, nor is there any reason for attributing it to communication from Sir Jung Bahadoor's followers.—In order to prevent any doubt on the point, it has been notified for general information that the provisions of the 3rd clause of paragraph 61 of the despatch of the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, published in G. G. O. No. 808, of the 26th September, 1866, which extended the Military retiring regulations by the addition of two rates of pension, viz., £600 after 35 years', and £750 after 38 years' service, are applicable to all officers now in, or who may hereafter enter, the Indian Staff Corps.—The 2nd Light infantry, Lieutenant-Colonel E. Oakes Commanding, left Julpigoree en route to Dhoobree via Cooch Behar on the morning of the 22nd November.—Major-General Sir H. Tombs, K.C.B., left Allahabad on Monday, Nov. 27, for the Camp of Exercise. Colonel Reid, R.A., has assumed the command of the station.—The head-quarters of the 22nd N.I., under Colonel Stafford, reached Rameda on the 16th November. and were to arrive at Cachar on the 20th. The men were in capital health and spirits.—The head-quarters and No. 5 Battery 22nd Brigade, Royal Artillery, Major Harward in command, arrived at Umballa on the 22nd November, on their way to Allahabad, en route for Bombay and England.

Indeed, prices are in some instances weaker, if anything, and sales of Grey Shirtings, 39-inch, are reported slightly under the current rates of last mail. Grey Twist: There has been little business done, as importers are holding for higher prices. Coloured Twist continues very depressed.

THE KING OF AVA'S PRESENT.—The Indian Daily News says that the Government of India has authorised the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah to disburse Rs. 5,000 in entertaining the Burmese officials deputed by the King of Ava to convey the Htee, or golden umbrella, to the Shwe Dagon Pagoda at Rangoon.

THE NEW CHIEF JUSTICE OF MADRAS.—Sir Walter Morgan arrived by train at one o'clock yesterday afternoon, and was received on the platform of the Royapooram station by Sir Colley Scotland and Mr. T. G. Clarke. The New Chief Justice proceeded to the High Court and took the oaths of office on the Original Side of the Court, Sir Colley Scotland, the Hon. Mr. Justice Kernan, and the Hon. Mr. Holloway, being present. Mr. Walter Morgan is putting up at the Branch Elphinstone Hotel.—Madras Times, Nov. 28.

CAMP OF EXERCISE.—After all five officers are to be sent from the Madras Presidency to attend the Camp of Exercise at Delhi, the Supreme Government having, on remonstrance from Madras, allowed Rs. 5,000 for the purpose. The officers to attend are Colonel Boyle, C.B., 89th Regiment, Colonel Travers, Major Douglas Scott, Captain Stewart, Assistant Adjutant-General, Mysore Division, and Lieutenant Hamilton, of the Madras Sappers. Is Bombay to be the only Presidency unrepresented?

Light House at Point Divi.—The Governor in Council has sanctioned an outlay of Rs. 3,010, to be met from savings under the general assignment for "Civil Buildings—Provincial Services," for the carrying on of certain works in connection with the lighthouse at Point Divi. The supply of a pair of additional iron tanks from the Marine Stores at Madras has also been sanctioned.

Departure from Madras of Sir Colley Scotland.—Sir Colley Scotland left Madras on Tuesday, Nov. 28, by the 10.50 train for Bombay. Among those who were present to take leave of Sir Colley Scotland were his Excellency the Governor, the Hon. A. J. Arbuthnot, the Hon. J. D. Sim, Sir Walter Morgan, the Hon. Mr. Kernan, the Hon. Mr. Holloway, the Hon. Mr. Kindersley, the Hon. Mr. Innes, the Hon. R. S. Ellis, Mr. Dalrymple, Mr. Wigram, Dr. Hunter, Colonel Fordyce, Captain the Hon. J. S. Napier, Mr. Raganada Shastri, Mr. Muthusawmy Iyer, Mr. Sanjiva Row, Mr. Srenevasa Iyer, Mr. Lutchmapathi Naidu, Mr. S. Parthasardy Iyengar, &c. There was no representative of European or East Indian barristers on the platform.

Lord Napier's alleged Successor.—A cousin of the Earl of Kimberley, the present Secretary of State for the Colonies, arrived in Bombay per the last P. and O. steamer from Suez. This gentleman, says the Madras Mail, has more than once been mentioned as a possible successor to Lord Napier in Madras, or to Sir Hercules Robinson in Ceylon. But Ceylon has been favoured with Mr. Gregory, M.P., while Sir Hercules relieves Earl Belmore at Sydney. The gentleman to whom we refer is Sir Philip E. Wodehouse, K.C.B. He is a Norfolk man, was born in 1810, entered the Ceylon Civil Service in 1828, married Miss Templar, of Ceylon, in 1833, was appointed Superintendent of Honduras in 1851, Governor of British Guiana in 1854, and Governor of the Cape of Good Hope in 1861, a position which he resigned some two years ago. Gentlemen of sixty-one years of age, who have spent most of their lives in exile, do not often visit the gorgeous East for mere pleasure.

News from Bhamo.—Bhamo news to August 31st states that the trade with the Kakhyens and Shans is re-opening; and if nothing unforeseen occurs, merchants will soon be coming in again to barter as formerly. A petty Panthay officer had arrived from Changsee by the Tahpen road. He found no difficulty of any kind in passing the posts. He states that the Panthys have had some decided successes. Changsee is now permanently occupied, and Tahsakon, the Governor of Momein, has succeeded in making himself master of Yeelaw—the mountain retreat of the Chinese leader Leesecetahi, who has escaped, but in what direction is not known. He may possibly go down to Mandalay, where he has been several times before, and may endeavour to obtain aid from the King of Burma; Leoquangfang is still in his stronghold. The Panthays advance but slowly, and till they, or the Chinese, are complete masters of the country, there is but little chance of much trade. The pacification of Yunan is the only thing that will re-establish the trade, and it is thought that the conquest of Yeelaw and the complete defeat of Leesecetahi are steps in this direction. The Panthay officer has brought the political agent at Bhamo a letter in Chinese from the officer commanding in Changsee. The contents of the letter do not seem to confirm his accounts of the strong power of his people. In this letter the agent is asked to send three or four hundred men, a thousand flint muskets, a piece of white cloth, a piece of yellow cloth, two cases of red thick woollen cloth, and fifty edible birds' nests. Nothing has yet been heard of the Shans who came up a short time ago from Rangoon, and went into the hills to collect immigrants in British Burma.

INDIAN WINES.

We have had occasion lately to draw attention to the wines which the Rev. J. J. Varnier has introduced into the country, as manufactured here and distinguished from imported wines, and we are glad to be able to furnish the following notes regarding them. We look upon any one who introduces a new manufacture or industry into a land in the light of one of its best benefactors, and our readers will have no doubt, after they have perused the following, that Mr. Varnier is such to India. Indeed, were the full importance of the subject grasped, how many thousands might find employment in the manufacture of the wines, how many fortunes may be made, and how pure wine by driving out the very inferior and adulterated stuff which is so generally used (unless where the very highest prices are paid) will benefit the health and stamina of the country at large, there would be no want of persons coming forward, either to purchase the patent, or even to vote a statue to the rev. gentleman, and if India is beginning to supply her own tea, we see no reason why she should not also have her own wines. It is an utter mistake to think that, because these wines are made from the Jamoon, that therefore they are not wine. Practical vine-growers and wine-makers of Italy and Sicily have found the fruit to possess all the bases of the best grape in Europe, and to be infinitely superior in the component parts of the grape to the Indian grape itself. This is a fact, but can only be demonstrated chemically.

"1. Brandy.—This is quite equal to Exshaw No. 1, and no better recommendation can be given to it than by saying that it is as good as the very best brandy in the world. The cost at the same time is probably (we cannot state this positively) only half the Exshaw price. Whether this is an exaggerated estimate of Mr. Varnier's brandy can only be decided by actual consumers of Exshaw No. 1, and to them we may safely leave the question. This brandy ought to supplant at once two-thirds of the higher brands at present sold in the country. Its use, instead of rum, for soldiers will also be apparent.

"2. Port—red seal.—This is quite equal to the port usually sold at Rs. 36 per dozen, though there appears to be a woody flavour which may be the result of the casking, and is far from unpleasant. At least only a connoisseur can perceive this flavour, which does not in the least detract from its value.

"3. Claret—yellow seal.—This is a good strong dinner claret, usually bringing in the market Rs. 40 a dozen. For cup it would be excellent.

"4. Ambreschino.—A liquor cordial, and quite as good as any that comes from Italy, and which is so highly priced.

"5. Vino Bianca.—This is a white wine resembling Moselle in all its qualities."

Besides the above enumerated, we believe there are one or two other kinds of wines.

The above opinion from a practical and experienced taster ought to tell its own tale. The tale briefly read is this: a new industry for India, and a gigantic one; collossal fortunes to those who will venture on the enterprise; great good to the drinkers of wine and brandy, as well as lessening the expenses of their pocket; good for the health of our British army; addition even to the revenues of the country. Hence Government no doubt will look with peculiarly favourable eyes on this at present young manufacture, and assist it to expand to its full dimensions. We repeat that Mr. Varnier is a public benefactor to India, and we trust the reverend gentleman will meet with the due reward of his knowledge and enterprise in some wealthy speculator.—Bombay Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

Brahmo Marriage Bill.—At a public meeting, convened on Friday, November 24, the Southern India Brahmo Somaj adopted a memorial praying the Legislature to pass the Brahmo Marriage Bill.

The Ranee of the late Gaekwar.—We stated some time ago that the Ranee of the late Gaekwar had petitioned for permission to leave Baroda and to reside at Poona. H.H. Mulharao, who was against this proposal of the Ranee, forwarded a petition to H.E. the Governor in Council in which he prayed that the Ranee should not be allowed to leave the Gaekwar's territory. We now learn that Government have resolved that the Ranee has no reason to leave the Gaekwar's territory, and that she should remain where she is at present.—Bombay Gazette.

Attempted Sale of the Bombay Port Trust Land.—On Nov. 27, under Government orders, Messrs. Crawford and Co. put up for sale that part of the Elphinstone Land Estate lying to the south of the Musjid Bridge. There was a very large attendance of native and other dealers. The land was offered in lots, and purchasers were to receive 999 years' lease. Several lots were put up. The highest price offered was Rs. 18½ per square yard, but as this did not nearly reach the Government reserved figure—Rs. 45 the square yard—the bid was not accepted, and the sale was abandoned for the time.

A Parsee Convert to Christianity.—Last Thursday morning the Rev. Father Pagani, senior Roman Catholic chaplain, Kurrachee, performed a very interesting and agreeable ceremony, by baptising a Parsee young man, named Ardasseer Cursetjee. The name given him is John Clement Mackey, Mr. and Mrs. William Noonan having stood sponsors on the occasion. We believe that this is the first Parsee who has embraced the Roman Catholic faith.—Sindian.

Canara.—An important question has been brought on in the High Court of Bombay arising from the transfer of Canara from the Madras to the Bombay Presidency. The Bombay Government has attempted to increase the assessment of the land revenue in the province, and the ryots claim that they are protected from this by the ryotwari settlement introduced in Madras by Sir Thomas Munro, and have now combined to have the case tried.

Civil.—The Sindian says :—It is stated that Mr. J. W. Walker, c.s., has been appointed Assistant Judge of Ahmednuggur. Lieutenant Mayhew, Assistant Political Superintendent Thurr and Parkur, is said to have succeeded Mr. Walker as Deputy Collector and Magistrate of Shahbunder. Mr. Spencer Tyndall, who returned the other day from a furlough to Europe, takes charge, we believe, of the office of Deputy Collector and Magistrate of Nowshera.

Too Fat.—A very distinguished and very fat Sikh officer of a cavalry regiment has been removed from the service on the ground of undue obesity. So, remarks the Indian Daily News, it was in olden days. Spartans who presumed to get fat were soundly whipped. One Nauclis, an extremely stout individual, was publicly exposed, and threatened with perpetual banishment if he did not quickly regain a proper and Spartan figure. More lenient, we pension Nauclis. It is not many months since a medical board sat in Calcutta upon an officer and companion of the Order of the Bath for this same fleshy failing. The Government desired to know if Colonel —— could possibly discharge the duties of a field officer. The reply was "Certainly, if a horse strong enough to carry him can be found."—Times of India.

Farewell Address to Mrs. Hope.—On Saturday, the 25th November, Mrs. Jugjeewandas Khooshaldas, wife of the full power magistrate of Surat, invited to her residence a number of European and native ladies to bid farewell to Mrs. Hope. The girls of the Parsee and Hindu schools were also invited to meet their kind-hearted patron and well-wisher. The girls were examined in reading and general knowledge, and their answers were considered satisfactory. The songs they sung were very delightful, and elicited well-merited applause from the audience. An address in Guzerati was then read by a Parsee girl named Jajjie Bai, a translation of which was read by Mrs. Newnham at the request of Mrs. Jugjeewandas. Mrs. Hope then thanked Mrs. Jugjeewandas in a few suitable words for the honour which she and her other friends had done her, and expressed her hope that her European and native sisters would continue to interest themselves in social gatherings and "Evenings at Home," more frequently than hitherto. Books and sweetmeats were then distributed to the girls, after which the assembly broke up.

EXPORTS.—Bombay, Dec. 2.—Cotton: The market shows hardly any change in prices, but more business has again been done, more particularly in Old Cotton. The purchases for export aggregate about 4,500 candies, of which 3,800 were of Old Cotton, and 700 candies of New Cotton. The market closes weaker.

MONEY MARKET.—Bombay, Dec. 2.—Exchange: The business done, though larger than in the previous week, has again been limited; but rates throughout have been very steady. NATIVE RULE IN INDIA.

On Tuesday evening Mr. F. W. Chesson delivered in the rooms of the Social Science Association, Adam-street, Adelphi, a lecture on "The Princes of India; Their Rights and our Duties." The chair was taken by Mr. John Dickinson, the chairman of the India Reform Society, and among the audience, which included several natives of India, were Miss Carpenter, Mr. W. M. Torrens, M.P., Mr. M'Arthur, and Mr. R. N. Fowler, M.P. At the outset of his remarks the lecturer reflected severely upon the conduct of Clive and Hastings, and contrasted with it the policy pursued by such men as Lord W. Bentinck and Mountstuart Elphinstone—a policy which was abandoned at the time of the conquest of Scinde, and utterly negatived by Lord Dalhousie, whose successive acts of spoliation, from the annexation of Sattara to that of Oude, he denounced as most infamous, and declared to be most fatal to our rule in India. Fortunately there had of late years arisen in this country a feeling in favour of the maintenance of good faith with the princes and people of India. But at the same time the unequal operation of the income-tax, and the machinations of the Wahabee conspiracy, as to whose ramifications we were almost entirely in ignorance, constituted dangers to which we ought not to be insensible. The special grievance however against which Mr. Chesson protested was the constant disposition of the Indian Government to ignore the Queen's Proclamation, in which her Majesty solemnly promised to recognise the rights, dignities, and powers of the sovereign princes "like her own." As a special example of this disposition he dwelt at length upon the annexation of Oude, maintaining that the reasons which had been advanced for that measure were entirely insufficient for its justification, and that even if all that had been alleged against the Kings of Oude were true, the reform of a single native state was not worth the injury which the annexation caused to our position in India. In favour of the maintenance of the native states he quoted the authority of Sir J. Malcolm and Mountstuart Elphinstone, and at the same time pointed out how much some of these princes had assisted us at the time of the Mutiny, and how naturally alarmed the strongest of them must be at any injustice which the British authorities committed against the weakest of them. From this point of view he laid special stress upon the proposal to annex Dahr, and warmly applauded the action of Lord Stanley, who refused to consent to the measure. A still stronger, and a worse case, was that of the proposal to annex Mysore, which was in great part defeated by the exertions of Mr. Bright and the Indian reform party. These two instances he cited to prove that unless the English public insisted upon greater security for its fulfilment, the Queen's Proclamation might become a stupendous delusion in India; and supplemented them by a detail of the cases of the Nawab of Tonk and the Nawab Nazim of Bengal, which were brought before Parliament during the last session by Mr. R. N. Fowler and Mr. H. Burke. He did not pretend to discuss the rights or wrongs of these cases, but he protested against the manner in which the Indian Government had dealt with independent princes, whose rights did not depend upon their good conduct, but rested upon treaties and solemn national obligations which we were bound in honour and justice to observe. At present there was no open tribunal to decide upon the rights of these princes, and the establishment of such a tribunal in England was, Mr. Chesson maintained, the first duty of the Indian Minister. At present the only court of appeal open to the princes of India was the High Court of Parliament, and there a conscientious minority who had studied the question was often outvoted by a majority which took its cue from Taper or Tadpole, or followed the lead of a ministerial fugleman. The natives of India ought, in his opinion, to be represented either in the House of Commons or in some great representative council of the Empire.—Mr. R. N. Fowler in great part attributed our large military expenditure in India to our unjust treatment of the native princes. Mr. Edward Jenkins, as himself a native of India, described our policy in that country as in many respects infernal, and attributed to the religious bodies who have sent missionaries thither a most important influence in its modification. Mr. Jones, a well-known member of the late Court of Proprietors of the East India Company, attributed to the abolition of that body all the mischief which had since fallen upon India. He excited a good deal of laughter by referring to his own services in the cause of a certain rajah of "Chokum-Putty," for whom he affirmed he obtained justice from the directors of the East India Company. Mr. George Thompson admitted the value of the Court of Proprietors as an arena of debate, but denied that it ever secured justice to any native prince. In point of fact, within his experience no native prince ever obtained the reversal of an unjust decision, except a high caste rajhpoot, who threatened, if he did not obtain justice, to leave his body at the door of the India House. Upon the motion of Mr. W. Taylor, seconded by Mr. W. M. Torrens, M.P., the debate was adjourned; but, in the mean time, thanks were, at the instance of the latter gentleman and Mr. M'Arthur, M.P., voted to Mr. Chesson for his paper. Mr. Torrens especially urged the necessity of the establishment of an independent tribunal to decide upon the claims of Indian princes; and Mr. M'Arthur referred to the slight interest in Indian affairs which was exhibited by the majority of the members of the House of Commons.

OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.

The half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on Dec. 20th, at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street; Mr. W. Dent in the chair, when the following report was read;—

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report and statement of accounts, said he would not trouble them with many remarks, as the report referred to nearly all the necessary points. Thr agent of the company, General Beadle, R.E., was present at the last general meeting, but had since returned to India, and resumed office on the 16th Oct. last. Immediately afterwards he visited the works along the Valley of the Goomtee, from Lucknow to Shahjehanpore, and found that they were well constructed, and that the locomotive passed over a portion of the new line as smoothly as he could wish. It was believed that the form of the rail could not be improved, and that the oval cast-iron sleepers which were laid on a large portion of the completed line would suite the purpose for which they were intended. The iron pot sleepers had been laid on the line from Cawnpore to Lucknow, and as General Beadle passed over the line at great speed he found the line as smooth as possible and in excellent order. After the inspection of the line between Lucknow and other places, he found that the progress of the works on the line from Oude to Benares was very satisfactory. There had been during the wet season most extraordinary and unlooked-for floods, which had shown in most places what openings were likely to be required in future. The extension from Lucknow to Byramghat, along the Goomtee, passed close to Shahjehanpore. The line of from Oude to Benares had suffered very little from the floods, which had been very considerable in that part of India, but only two culverts of nine feet span had been swept away. The earthworks had been constructed exceedingly well, and the brickwork was good and sound. The contractor for providing bricks having failed, the company's officers took the work in hand, the contract was cancelled, and their own men now manufactured the bricks for the works. It was a matter for much congratulation that their works had suffered so little from the excessive rains and floods, while other companies' lines had suffered much damage from that cause. A great part of the city of Shahjehanpore had been destroyed, many of the houses having been built of mud. He did not know that he had much to say of the Nulhattee line, as he presumed it would be the last time it would claim their attention, as negotiations were pending for the sale of it to the Government. It was proposed to pay a dividend on the capital of the Nulhattee line at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum for the current half-year. The Secretary to the Government of India had recently visited Lucknow, and had directed that certain portions of the company's railway that had been completed should be open for traffic, consisting of thirty miles from Lucknow to Sundeele, nineteen miles from Lucknow to Nawabgunge, and thirty miles from Allyghur to the Ganges at Rajghat. Those lines were to be opened for traffic as soon as possible.

Mr. M. Gladstone, a director, seconded the resolution for the adoption of the report.

Mr. H. R. Williams said he thought it very satisfactory to open so many miles at so early a period. He wished to know whether the 129 miles of new line mentioned in the report would be opened for traffic by June next.

The Chairman said the opening of the line to Benares would depend on the completion of a large bridge, of eleven openings of 132 feet span each. The flood had compelled them to alter the plan of the bridge, and until that bridge was completed it would be impossible to open the line to Benares. The company's agent expected to be able to open the line by means of an old bridge similar in construction to what old London-bridge was; it formed a kind of dam across the river, allowing a limited waterway for the passage of vessels.

The report was then agreed to unanimously, and a dividend was declared on the Nulhattee stock for the half year ending the 31st inst., at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

The half-yearly general meeting of this Company was held on December 15, at the London Tavern; Lieut.-Col. P. T. French, the chairman, presided.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said they had met in that room for sixteen years, and upon each occasion he had to tell them that they had borne with a great deal of patience the shortcomings of the Government in not giving them the support he thought they had in justice a right to expect. The Churchgate-street Station, opposite the fort of Bombay, since it was opened had given great satisfaction, and they were now sending out by the Suez Canal a large number of season tickets, principally for the suburban traffic. The terminal accommodation on the harbour side of Bombay had not yet been carried out, but he hoped they would soon get over that difficulty. They expected to have a large amount of cotton traffic from the districts served by the Great India Peninsula Railway over the company's line from the Dadaur Junction to the Colaba Cotton

Green. The floods in India during the month of August last had prevailed less on this company's side of India than in the North-Western Provinces. The force of the floods in some places had deepened the beds of the river as much as sixty feet. In one place when the water subsided, the bridge was found not to span the river, for the flood had cut a new bed for it in another place. The traffic had not suffered much obstruction, because, owing to the great energy of their engineer and staff, the damage was partially made good, so that the through traffic was resumed in a very short time after the disaster. The Watruck bridge was swept away bodily, but being an iron bridge nearly all the materials were available. No time was lost in restoring the bridge as soon as possible, and the line was again opened for through trains by the 1st of September. The traffic returns showed that the third-class passengers had been patronising the company as usual. They had carried 1,245,000 third-class passengers during the half-year, against 1,217,189 in the corresponding half of 1870. As compared with 1870 there was a decrease in the number of the first and second class passengers of 1,210 and 9,947 respectively, but an increase in the third class of 28,451. The falling off in the merchandise traffic arose in one respect from the cessation of the famine in Marwar that existed in the corresponding period. The working expenses had been reduced to some extent in several items, while the item for maintenance of way and works had been increased from £112 to £118 per mile compared with the corresponding half-year. The net earnings of the line for the half-year had been at the rate of £4. 7s. per cent. on the capital expended, which he thought was hopeful, though it was less than the 5 per cent. guaranteed by the Government. The £4. 7s. would have been more if the Indian income-tax, the fire insurance fund, and other items, had not been charged against net revenue; probably it would have been £4. 11s. or £4. 12s. per cent. The board had been striving for years to get something more than 5 per cent., and he hoped they would succeed. They had opened thirty-seven miles of the Neerumgaum-Wudwan extension on the 30th November. The contractor was a Parsee, and had done the work admirably. The traffic returns on it showed already that it would be a most profitable undertaking. The remaining portion of the extension would be completed early next year, when they would have a line of seventy miles into a cotton country. As to the Patree salt works, which extended over miles, the Government were about to construct a railway to those works from Veerumgaum. It was estimated by their agent, Mr. Currey, that the company would have to carry 80,000 tons of that salt upon an average over 150 miles of their line, and then would come their profit from that traffic, because the company would work the traffic at cost price over the Government line, and bring it on to their extension and main line to its destination.

Mr. Hartridge, deputy-chairman, seconded the resolution for the adoption of the report. He thought the shareholders had a right to expect from the board that they would not engage in mere speculative extensions, and he was of opinion that if anything in that way were done, it should be by a separate capital. Nothing, however, would be done in that respect without the sanction of the shareholders.

After a few observations the resolution was agreed to unanimously.

MADRAS RAILWAY.

The half-yearly general meeting of this Company was held on Dec. 15 at the London Tavern; Col. J. T. Smith, R.E., the chairman, presided.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said that the works had been rapidly advanced during the past half-year, with a view to the completion of this system up to the Bombay line. The works were also continued during the current half-year, and so were those by the officers of the Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company to complete the railway communication up to the junction of both lines at Raichoor, thus completing a main line of railway from Bombay to Madras. Besides the Neilgherry branch, the company had to complete the viaduct on the line to Raichmoor: and also the central station at Madras, which was in the centre of the town, and when finished would be a handsome building. The Neilgherry branch was now in course of construction. He then alluded to the branch lines proposed to be constructed by Government and to the Madras Irrigation Canal, which latter was opened on July 1 last, and navigated by a steamer. So far as the canal was available, it would act as a feeder to the company's railway, especially at Cuddapah. The board had not been informed of what was to be done in Mysore, but several undertakings had been proposed. One project was for forming a network of narrow gauge lines to converge on the company's lines at Bangalore. They would be State lines, having the disadvantage of a break of gauge. He believed it was a very doubtful policy to establish narrow gauge lines in India; they might in some cases be useful in traversing hilly districts, but he very much doubted the capacity of narrow gauge lines for traversing the plains of India. The company's consulting engineer had estimated that the differences in cost between laying the Indian narrow-gauge and broad-gauge lines would be about £700 per mile, an amount not worth consideration in so important a matter. The real advantage was in the adoption of the double bogie engine, which spread its weight over double the length of line occupied by an ordinary locomotive, at the same time having double its power. The Government proposed to make four separate branches from the company's railway—one from Arcot to Vellore, another to Salem, and also branches to two other places. The four lines would cost £140.000. The main line had cost £12,000 per mile, and the branch to Bangalore £8,000 per mile, both on the broad-gauge, making the average about £10,000; and he might mention that Lord Napier had stated in his minute respecting the Madras line, that the works had been constructed with honesty, ability, and economy. The new contract with the Government had been signed, sealed, and delivered, so that whatever might happen they would have a 5 per cent. guaranteed stock till the year 1906, when the Government might purchase the railway if they pleased.

Mr. Arbuthnot, deputy chairman, seconded the resolution, which, after some discussion, was agreed to unanimously; and a vote of thanks to the chairman and directors concluded the proceedings.

Miscellaneous.

East Indian Railway Company.—It is announced that the directors of the East Indian Railway Company will recommend at the ensuing half yearly meeting the payment of a dividend at the rate of 4s. 4d. per cent., in addition to the usual guarantee interest.

Bills on India.—Tenders for £500,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 20th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £440,000; and to Bombay, £60,000. The minimum price was fixed as before at 1s. 11d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11⅜d. will receive about 85 per cent., and on Bombay at that price in full. The average rate on Calcutta was 1s. 11·42d.; and on Bombay, 1s. 11·44d.

Calcutta Fire Brigade.—Messrs. Merryweather and Sons have just completed the first steam fire-engine for this brigade. The machine is fitted with a pair of steam cylinders, each 6¾ in. diameter, and pumps, each 5½ in. diameter. Its weight is about 35 cwt., with gear. At the trials the following results were obtained:—100 lbs. steam in eight and a quarter minutes; a jet of water was then maintained, 1⅜ in. diameter, with steam at 130 lbs., and water pressure 100 lbs., equalling a distance discharged from the nozzle of 260 feet. The quantity discharged per minute through an ordinary hose was 578 gallons.

The Privy Council Committee.—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council concluded their sittings on Thursday. The committee opened with a list of seventy-three appeals, and have made considerable progress and given judgment in the cases heard. Judgments have lately been given in two appeals which had been pending some years. "In Mussumat Bebee Bachun v. Shiekh Hamid Hossein and others," in which a question as to dower was raised, their lordships allowed the appeal; and in the second case "Letraj Roy v. Mahbad Chund and others," as to a compromise, the committee allowed the appeal with costs.

Skinner v. Ordes.—On Wednesday the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council gave judgment in the case of "Skinner v. Ordes," which was an appeal from a decision of the High Court of Allahabad. That Court made an order that Miss Victoria Skinner, a minor, who was entitled to about £1,500 a-year, should be removed from her mother's care, and that the charge of her property should be given to a guardian. Miss Skinner was about sixteen years of age, and had been at a Christian school, but her mother alleged that she had embraced the Mahomedan religion, and the young lady herself confirmed this statement. Their Lordships considered that the time which had elapsed since the young lady left the Christian school was not sufficient to enable her to form opinions on religious subjects. They thought that the order made by the High Court was a proper one, and dismissed the appeal with costs.

A Farewell to an Indian Reformer.—Miss Carpenter made a becoming little speech the other evening at a meeting held in the Stamford-street Chapel, in honour of Mr. Banerjee, a Hindu friend of hers, who is about to return to his own country, after laying in a stock of more or less useful experiences in England. Mr. Banerjee, it appears, had the courage to break away from all the ties of his Brahman caste, and the good fortune to make his wife the willing partner of his new career. He was the first, says Miss Carpenter, to attempt to educate the lowest class of his countrymen, a statement which seems slightly to conflict with our previous knowledge of the work done by Government in the vernacular and indigenous schools. It appears that he has also been devoting himself to the cause of temperance and female education. Is it true, then, that the natives of India have included drinking among the new arts borrowed from Europe? Miss Carpenter announces with friendly, if rather vague pride, that "his little son was the first Brahman born in this country." Her anxiety as to what he will have to encounter on his return to India is more to the point, and will doubtless be shared by many friends in Calcutta. Mr. Banerjee in his turn edified the meeting with an account of his past life as a reformer, from the day when he gave up his Brahmanical thread in spite of the prayers and persecutions of his own kinsfolk, to the moment when his English friends were bidding him go back "armed with knowledge and English sympathy to carry on his work with greater success." We trust that this "slight and young-looking man, with an exceedingly prepossessing expression and mild intellectual countenance," will not be too heavily burdened with boxes of old books, toys, and gimcracks, collected by the National Indian Association for the benefit of those benighted young savages who play about the zenanas of British India.—Home News.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.—The will of the Hon. John Paxton Norman, Judge and late officiating Chief Justice of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William, in Bengal, was proved in that Court on the 30th of September last, and in London on the 5th inst., by his relict, Margaret Norman, power being reserved to his brother, the Rev. Alfred Merle Norman. The personalty in England was sworn under £6,000. The will bears date the 25th of July, 1870, and the learned Judge died on the 21st of September last at Calcutta. He bequeaths to his wife an immediate legacy of £1,000, a life interest arising from the income derived from the residue of his property, and such furniture and other effects as she may select for her own use, and after her decease the residue then remaining is to be divided into four equal parts—one to his brother Charles Blake Norman, one to his brother George Lewis Norman, and the remaining two parts to his brother the Rev. Alfred Merle Norman.

SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY.—The report of the directors of this company states that the gross traffic receipts for the half-year ending 30th of June last on the whole of the company's system amounted to £233,525, of which £102,325 was derived from passengers, and £131,200 from goods. The average weekly receipts were £8,982. The working expenses during the half-year amounted to £208,953, or 89·48 per cent. of the gross receipts, and the net revenue to £24,571, or 10·52 per cent. of the receipts. The gross receipts in the corresponding half of 1870 amounted to £285,880, and the working expenses to £197,731, or 69·17 per cent., leaving the net revenue of £88,149, or 30·83 per cent of the gross receipts. The receipts from passenger traffic during the past half-year were in excess of those realised in any former half-year, notwithstanding a reduction in the amount received for the conveyance of troops. The receipts for goods traffic showed a falling off of £54,477. The railway receipts for the six months ending the 30th of June last (exclusive of the flotilla traffic) averaged £11. 12s. 6d. per mile of line per week, as compared with an average of £13. 18s. 1d. per mile per week in the corresponding half of 1870. The gross receipts per train mile amounted to 7s. 3¾d., and the working expenses per train mile to 6s. 6¾d. The number of passengers conveyed during the six months was 1,042,098, as compared with 1,074,605 in the corresponding half of last year, showing a decrease of 32,507. The goods carried by the company during the past half-year amounted to 118,420 tons, as against 182,602 tons in the corresponding half of 1870. The high rate of working expenses was attributable chiefly to the depression in the goods traffic, and to the fact that the cost of maintenance of the whole line, with two slight exceptions, had become chargeable to revenue. The working expenditure included cer ain exceptional items, as, for instance, the restoration of the Mulleer Viaduct and the repair of the Gugger bridge, on the Scinde section, £5,975; cost of plantations on the Punjab and Delhi sections, £1,278; compensation claims, £578; and contributions to certain special funds, £5,225. Towards the end of June the Gugger and Sirhind bridges of the Delhi section sustained considerable damage from floods, by which the traffic was interrupted for a few days; and shortly after the close of the half-year the Beas, Jumna, and certain of the minor bridges sustained serious damage, one of the piers of the Beas bridge being carried away by the floods, which also damaged the railway embankment in several places. Every possible means was immediately used to repair the bridges and restore through communication, and with such success that by the 6th of October the only break remaining was that at the river Beas. The great bridge over the Sutlej withstood the inundation uninjured.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

The Times, noticing the revival of the report that M. de Lesseps is engaged on a scheme for procuring the purchase of the Suez Canal by foreign Powers, remarks:—We can well imagine such an ultimate transfer of the Canal to have been present from the first to the minds of its promoters. Indeed, there can be little doubt about it, for the argument has always been that, when once made, Europe must perforce maintain the undertaking. We are perfectly willing to admit that under certain circumstances the European Powers might be justified in acquiring a joint ownership in the Canal, and placing it under a common protection. But we cannot think that the English public will view the scheme with much favour. A company, whatever the place of its nativity, may be considered as neutral; its shareholders may be in the four quarters of the earth, and it must always be amenable to the authority of the ruler in the place where it carries on business. How different would be the position of the Egyptian State if lands were held and works carried on within its limits by the Governments of England, France, Germany, and Russia directly! No moment could be more inopportune than the present for bringing the various European States face to face in an attitude which could not but have something of rivalry. It would be to create gratuitously another Eastern Question—a thing which British statesmen will instinctively avoid. It will be well for the Suez Canal promoters, or any others, to understand once for all that England will not be easily brought to take upon herself responsibilities, pecuniary and political, through fear of other Powers acquiring further influence in the East. We should never allow any European State to possess Egypt, or to assume in it an interest detrimental to our interests, the chief of which is the right of transit. Any schemes in this direction would be opposed by all the strength we possess. But, on the other hand, nothing would be more distasteful to the nation than to acquire new responsibilities in a distant country.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

THE HISTORY

OF THE

BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. . . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshuhur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.
